The seal is open, the deed is done,
The earth may tremble, her race is run.

The beast in the lake of fire has gone,
Her lovers are left to wail and moan;
They've eaten her flesh who held her high,
With none to help, she is left to die.

The marriage supper is now at hand,
We hear the sound of the music grand;
The groaning earth casts forth her slain,
And the dead in Christ are alive again.

David awakes in his likeness now,
The seal of God on his royal brow;
Safe in his lot good Daniel stands,
A living host as our God commands.

The pure and good of every clime,
Join with the heavenly choir sublime;
Immortal voices swell the strain
That echoes on fair Eden's plain.

The curse removed, forevermore
God's glory beams from shore to shore;
Old ocean at her God's command,
Yield's back the long imprisoned land.

Safe in God's city, safe at last,
Where comes no storm or wintry blast;
Safe in the mansions built on high,
Who enter never more can die.

This is the consummation blest,
Of all the hopes the saints possest;
They'll shout His praise from pole to pole,
While the eternal ages roll.

No. 2.

F. H. BURBANK.

The next proof given concerning the fact "that manifestation of the faculties of the mind depend, in this life, on organization, is the "Influence of physical conditions." He writes:

"All that disorders, weakens, or excites the organization of the nervous system, influences especially the manifestation of the mental faculties also. It is generally observed that organs are enfeebled if their growth be very rapid; their functions, too, are, in consequence less energetic. This is chiefly remarkable in the climacteric years, or periods of increase; a knowledge of which is so very important in practical medicine. Vegetables are known to increase particularly at two periods; in the spring and in the middle of summer. The growth of the human body is also more rapid at certain times than at others. Now rapid growth weakens the organs, both of vegetative and animal life, and consequently the functions they perform respectively. Girls who grow too suddenly turn pale, chlorotic, and consumptive, etc. Individuals, therefore, during the periods of growth, are not fit for active business, and ought not to exercise their intellectual faculties much. Rest is necessary till the organs acquire maturity, when all the faculties of the mind and body will resume their energy. Organs of particular faculties are occasionally too soon developed, and are then apt to be exercised overmuch. Incurable exhaustion often results from this, and early genius is nipped in the bud.

"Adult men and animals are still subjected to variable degrees of excitement from seasons, temperature, food, and especially from particular laws to which the organization is subjected. We see animals resume and abandon at different periods their instinct to sing, to build, to gather provisions, to live solitary or in society, to migrate, etc., and the faculties of man do not always act with the same degree of energy. Who can overlook the influence of such evacuations as the catameni, hemorrhoids, etc., or of pregnancy, digestion, fasting, and whatever exhausts the corporeal powers? Who can deny the effects of disease upon the manifestation of our faculties; or of external and internal exitements, as of agreeable impressions, fine weather, music, dancing, etc? Now all these act upon the organization only; manifestation of the mental faculties consequently depends on the organization.

"Exceedingly defective mental powers have been known to grow very active when excited by external or internal causes. Haller relates the case of an idiot, who, happening to be wounded on the head, manifested great understanding so long as the wound remained open, but who, as soon as this healed up, fell into his former stupidity. He speaks of another patient whose eye being inflamed, saw perfectly during the night while the inflammation lasted. Father Mabillan, in his infancy, gave little promise of superior abilities; but having received a blow on his head, he, from that moment, displayed talents. I have heard of a boy, who, at the age of fourteen, seemed incapable of improvement; having fallen down stairs one day, however, and got several wounds on his head, he afterward began to excel in his studies. I have seen a girl, nine years old, whose right arm grew gradually weak and paralytic, in consequence of a blow on the same side of the head; her lower jaw trembled incessantly, and she was often convulsed; but her intellectual faculties had acquired great energy and perfection; her whole deportment indeed, was exceedingly imposing.

"I shall mention only one other case of this kind from the Edinburg Review, in an article upon the Retreat, an institution near York for insane persons of the Society of Friends: 'A young woman, who was employed as a domestic servant by the father of the relator when he was a boy, became insane, and, at length, sunk into a state of perfect idiocy. In this condition she remained for many years, when she was attacked by a typhus fever; and my friend, having then practised some time, attended her. He was surprised to observe, as the fever advanced, a development of the mental powers. During that period of the fever when others are delirious, this patient was entirely rational. She recognized in the face of her medical attendant the son of her old master, whom she had known so many years before, and she related many circumstances respecting his family and and others, which had happened to herself in er earlier days. But, alas! it was only the gleam of reason. As the fever abated, clouds again enveloped her mind; she sunk into her former deplorable state, and remained in it until her death, which happened a few years afterwards.' These facts are positive, and there can be no doubt of similar causes influencing the faculties of the mind surprisingly; yet they can only act immediately upon the organization. We must perforce conclude, that when physical and organic causes excite the most impudent lasciviousness, the most arrogant pride, despair, which rejects all consolation, and so on, these various manifestations depend on the organization.

"Sleeping and Dreaming. The states of watching, sleeping, and dreaming, also prove the manifestations of the mind depend on organization; for corporeal organs can alone be fatigued and exhausted. Now it is known that mental operations cannot be continued incessantly, that rest is indispensable, and that a regular recurrence of that inactive state of the mental faculties called sleep, is necessary to enable them to display their perfect energies. If single organs be by any cause excited, and enter into action while the others are inactive, partial sensations and ideas, or dreams, arise. Dreams, then, are almost always the result of certain material causes, and are conformable to the age and organic constitution of the dreamer. Men and women of an irritable habit of body, find difficulties and endless impediments in their dreams, and generally suffer pain, and feel anxiety and alarm. This constant relation between dreams and our bodily frame, which has been verified by an infinity of observations, proves further that the mental manifestations depend on organization.

Exercise. The possibility of exercising and of training the faculties of the mind, also shows their dependence on the organization; for that an immaterial being can be exercised is inconceivable."

In our next we will give his seventh proof, which is the "Relation between the brain and the manifestations of the mind. How different from the powerful reasoning and clear proofs of Spurzheim are assertions of theologians, who hold that the soul has dominion over the body, and that after death a man can think and act better than ever. Spurzheim's reasoning is in perfect accord with the statements of the view of man set forth in the Bible. That declares that man is a material being, and it would be well for Christianity if all theologians would bow to the word.

OUTSIDE VIEW.—No. 1.

I. C. WELLCOME.

We propose to give the substance of various conversations with brethren and others on outside things.

Inquirer. Why do our preachers not come and preach to us?

Preacher. Perhaps you have never opened the way; never invited them, nor secured a place in which to preach. Have you done so?

I. No; but the people need the gospel here as much as elsewhere.

P. Yes, but we cannot fill half the calls, and you don't call. Be active in the work of the Lord yourself, and let all your neighbors know you love the Lord and his truth, and get a place to preach in, a meeting-house, town-house, school-house, a barn, a grove, or dwelling-house; then ask a preacher to come, and ask the Lord to send him.

I. Well, I do not want to ask a preacher to come unless I can do something to support him. I cannot do much of that.

P. But if he comes without your asking it costs just as much to support his family, and pay his fare, as though you invited him.

I. Yes, but I should not feel responsible for that.

P. Ah! Then you want them to come and pay their own expenses, and support their families, and preach the truth to the people, and to you, and you feel no responsibility to aid. This would do you no good.

I. Well, I know the preachers ought to be sustained, but I find it hard work to sustain my family and pay my bills.

P. Do you not believe we have the most important part of the gospel message to preach that the world ever heard?

I. I do, and I want all to hear it.

P. Do not Advent preachers get along through the year with one half, and most of them with one quarter the expense which other preachers do? Do they not preach four or five times as much in a year?

I. Yes; that is so, I know.

P. When you were a member of another church, you did much more to support your minister than you now do to support those who do four or five times more work, did you not? Also your neighbor who is no better situated than you, and with not half as much truth, you think, pays double or triple the amount you do to a minister who preaches much less, and gets four or perhaps ten times the amount which your preachers get.

I. I suppose this is so, but I never looked at it so before.

P. Yet, you doubt about the religion of your neighbor, and be doing five times as much as you to preach the gospel.

I. Ah! I have to do and give considerable to support the preacher who is stationed with us. They beg, and I have to pay them to keep along with them.

P. Then you want Advent ministers to travel, preach, live cheap, deny self, stint their families, overwork to earn half their bread, and preach to feed those who are starving for the bread of life; while you help pay men fat salaries to keep up fashionable religion.

BAD HABITS.

A. MUNGER.

BRO. GRANT:—There has been much able argument brought forth to fit every nook and corner of bad habits. There is one on which you have spoken, as well as others, i. e., long sermons and meetings, about which there is great complaint by many. These things are certainly making our meetings irksome. I will make a few statements as given to me on this point.

A few days ago, I asked one how he liked ——? Very well, said he, but he was too awful long. The first forty-five minutes he did well; after that I lost all interest. He continued one and a half hours. Some of us think we shall not go again if he comes. This man is an outsider.

Another case. How did you like —— last evening? Very well, for forty-five minutes, and then I got tired, then I got nervous, then got out of patience and left. This also was an inquirer after truth.

Another in ——. We cannot sustain the interest of our meetings, among outsiders, unless some of our preachers hold up after the people get tired out. In addition to this, we sometimes have an exhortation fifteen to twenty minutes long, which kills us out. Another complaint from ——, nearly the same, only worse; and from some dozen places there is the same complaint within three months of the habit of long preaching; for it is a habit, and nothing else. Some hold their meeting two hours, and some two and a half; one hour too long certainly for all the services.

But some will say, or think, Whose business is it? Why, those that suffer by it; and these are their complaints.

Another case of complaint,—at a funeral. The preacher read two long hymns, after getting there late, made a long prayer, preached one and a half hours, addressed the mourners fifteen minutes, making two and a half hours service, sitting on a hard seat. Such preachers will say, Whose business is it? Surely, the business of the mourners, who were tired out before, while watching and taking care of their sick, and getting ready for the funeral. They could not stand it, and some of them left. The dead did not go. Now these habits are annoying, and as wrong and out of place as many others that are more private. One person at this funeral thought if he died, he hoped they would not get an Advent minister to attend his funeral; and so it goes, on account of some of these long services. But, whose business is it?

I will venture to say, on the authority of what I have seen and heard about long-sermon preachers, if you will leave off this habit, and not preach so long by half an hour, or a quarter even, you will please God and your hearers better, and do more good, and save strength enough to get up in the morning by seven or eight o'clock. Again some may think, Whose business is it? and still persist in their habit. I will tell you what we will do to wean you from this habit, who feel it is our business, who are sufficient to pay some five or six of our preachers one dollar for closing their sermons fifteen to twenty-five minutes sooner than usual. I am getting somewhat old, and cannot do what I could once, but know more about the feelings of the people than younger men in experience. I will head the paper to start the thing with fifty dollars out of my own means, and many others will pay something, after paying you for your long sermons.

This will show you how some feel about your bad habit of long preaching, and I think the people that have been complaining in the different places ought to speak out, for our light is put out in many places by this habit alone, and we who have the experience know it, and hear the complaints of those who are grieved. You to whom this applies will not be likely to hear these complaints. Let those who preach one hour, or over, if they doubt these facts, ask any old preacher of experience, and even if he is addicted to this habit, he will own up the truth of this statement. In new places there may be a demand for one hour sermons, and in some extreme cases one hour and fifteen minutes; but in our churches where they have preaching all, or half of the time, forty-five to fifty minutes is all the people want. Those who preach long, are long getting to work, generally act lazy, and have but little life, said an old Methodist revivalist; which is the truth generally.

Now, Bro. Grant, are there any means to be used, or arguments to be introduced, to persuade the preachers who have acquired this habit of long preaching to condense one-fourth? which will be a great relief to many of their hearers, as well as to themselves. How long did you preach in California, where God is at work so powerfully? Please tell us something about it, as this is a delicate subject to touch. The time has come when we, as a people, need a reform from this habit. It is certainly injuring us. It is getting to be a proverb, or by-word, Such and such things are "as long as an Advent sermon." Now that these are facts, the question is, Whose business is it? Well, I feel $50 worth of interest in the reform, and no doubt that five hundred could be raised, if money could bring it about; but if writing and praying, and offering to pay for stopping, will not do it, we must endure it until He comes who prayed short, preached short, and taught us so to do by his example. We hope he will soon come.

"SINFUL GAMES."

J. T. ONGLEY.

Having cut the following from a secular paper, I thought it would be well for our brethren and sisters to read it, and ponder it in their hearts; for I am afraid that some of them may perhaps be doing the same things, besides devoting a good deal of time to reading the worthless novels of the day, instead of searching the Scriptures. O that we all might have a more anxious desire to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and to be in a waiting position to meet him at his coming, is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

The Methodist preachers' association met yesterday to discuss the following question:—"What is our duty as ministers concerning fashionable pleasures and amusement?" Rev. Dr. Crawford presided. Rev. Mr. Harris said they should avoid many of those amusements which to-day were considered allowable by many christians. He was opposed to operatic and dramatic performances, to dancing, horse-racing, card-playing and drinking whiskey, and all drinks which came under that cognomen.

A voice—What about croquet?

Rev. Mr. Harris—Well, I don't know, I never played that childish game.

Rev. Mr. Gorse needed instruction on the theme, as the experience of country ministers differed from that of those engaged in the city. He considered dancing and going to the theatre detrimental to spiritual development. He had preached against such practices, and his opinion was that ministers would have to stand up against these amusements. They would have to discipline the church or it will become demoralized. In proportion as they loved the dance and the theatre, they loved the church less. The church was in danger from cowardice in the pulpit. Rich men, he said, give parties and invite libertines to their houses, men whose only recommendation is their riches. Those men should be disciplined or else asked to leave the church.

Rev. Mr. Vinne was of the opinion that the membership of the church required purification. He believed that money had a most injurious influence on the morality of the church.

Rev. Mr. Weed asked Rev. Mr. Ferris to give his views on the subject.

Mr. Ferris said he considered it a live question—one which the church should consider.

Rev. Mr. Smith felt a deep interest in the question. He never went to a theatre, never played cards or checkers, but he knew to his deep regret that those games were practiced by church members. He even disapproved of chess as a parlor game. The church should have no fellowship with these works of darkness.

Rev. Mr. Shaffer never attended an opera, never smoked a pipe or cigar, or chewed tobacco. He was a total abstainer from his boyhood. He kept a piano in his house for the amusement of his children, and he occasionally danced in the parlor with them.

A voice—Did you open the dancing with prayer?

Rev. Mr. Shaffer—I did not.

Another voice—Did you dance to sacred music?

Rev. Mr. Shaffer—I did not; I don't know how.

Voice No. 2—Well, then, God help you.

Mr. Shaffer, in continuation, said it was a standing rule in his house that those amusements should be limited. He considered it right to have amusements in one's own family. If he was wrong, he asked them to pray for him.

A voice—God forgive you for breaking the rules of the church.

Mr. Shaffer further said that he was brought up to believe that theatre-going was wrong, but the day was gone by for arraigning members of the church with the threat of expulsion for dancing at their own house, at which there was no social gathering. If members were found delinquent in those matters, they should be approached mildly, which would have a more beneficial effect than threats of expulsion. Expulsion was sometimes necessary, but it should not be resorted to except in very extreme cases.

Rev. Mr. Ferris never supposed that he should have the humiliation of hearing a minister of the Methodist church confessing to such a violation of the law as was admitted by Mr. Shaffer. The man who practices dancing in his own family, he continued, cannot reprove others for dancing elsewhere. With the utmost kindness, and in no spirit of disrespect to Brother Shaffer, he would say that if called upon to administer discipline, he would begin with Brother Shaffer.

Rev. Mr. McClean was opposed to the views of Brother Shaffer. It was dangerous to tempt the devil to tempt them. He was for the old-fashioned Methodist ways which their fathers practiced.

Rev. Mr. Landon could not altogether condemn those amusements, if they were practiced with a spirit of religion. If a person could dance and go to a theatre in a spirit of religion, it was, he thought, within the rules of discipline. The men who preach in the pulpit against those very things, come down and meet the men who practice them and are in good fellowship with them every day. Preaching will go for nothing until the minister comes to the man and says: "You are the man I mean." Let the man feel that you have a righteous indignation against him, and preaching will have its effect.

An adjournment then took place. The question will be resumed at a future day.—N. Y. Times.

CHRIST FOR ME.

My heart is fixed, eternal God,
Fixed on thee, fixed on thee;
And my eternal choice is made,—
Christ for me, Christ for me.
He is my prophet, priest and king,
Who did for me salvation bring,
And while I breathe, I mean to sing,
Christ for me, Christ for me.

Let others boast of heaps of gold,
Christ for me, Christ for me;
His riches never can be told,—
Christ for me, Christ for me.
Your gold may waste and wear away,
Your honors perish in a day;
My portion never can decay,—
Christ for me, Christ for me.

If I in sickness, or in health,
Christ for me, Christ for me;
In deepest poverty or wealth,
Christ for me, Christ for me.
Then in the all important day,
When I the summons must obey,
And pass from this dark world away,
Christ for me, Christ for me.

JOURNEYINGS OFT.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Feb. 15th. Having a day to improve before engaging in a protracted meeting, I turned from my course, and called on Bro. H. B. Sevey and family, and attended the dedication of their brick chapel on the 16th. Found them well, with some apparent prosperity in the work of the Lord. The "chapel" is a remodeled brick school-house, which was sold at auction by the school district, to change the location of schools, and was bought by a few brethren as a house for the Lord. It was a good purchase, and makes a convenient chapel for the sparse community in its vicinity. May the Lord bless the sacrifice made to the saving of sinners there.

16th. The chapel was to-day dedicated to the worship of God. It was a refreshing season. Here we met with several who have lately come into the faith, and with some of the old workers, among whom were Bro. D. W. Griffin and his faithful daughter.

Feb. 17th. Went to Hartford, and, in company with Bro. E. M. Haggett, commenced a protracted meeting in Bro. Bryant's neighborhood. Here we found the "little flock" of believers, who have been raised up mostly under the labors of Bro. Haggett, somewhat enlarged by several additions. Our meetings began well, and a deep interest was manifested to hear the word. After preaching once, I was laid by for two days with severe neuralgia pains in the head, causing me all the distress I seemed able to endure. When it subsided I rallied again, and found the meetings were going well under the labors of Bro. H. We continued them through another week, and over Sunday, Feb. 26th, a portion of the time in the Methodist meeting-house, which was kindly granted us. It was a precious season in the Lord. The believers were strengthened and blessed of the Lord, and seemed more determined than ever to press on to the soon coming kingdom of God. The evidences of Jesus' soon coming were given, which gladdened the hearts of the waiting ones. Some came nine miles and returned, to attend evening meetings, and felt greatly blessed in so doing. Members of other churches came in, and listened attentively to the word preached. Sinners felt deeply their need of salvation, and we trust some seed sown will spring up unto eternal life. We called on the Methodist minister, and invited him to come in and assist us, but he refused. May the Lord open his heart to see and feel the truth of Jesus' soon coming and kingdom.

TEMPERANCE.

COM. BY H. H. T.

At a meeting of the Congressional Temperance Society, held in Lincoln Hall, Washington, D. C., on Washington's birth-day, Hon. Henry Wilson, of Mass., in the chair, the following able and eloquent address was delivered by Mrs. Paulina W. Davis, wife of Hon. Thos. Davis, Ex. M. C. from R. I., and editor of a Temperance paper, the New World, published at Providence, R. I.

Mrs. Davis commenced by saying, that "when invited to speak by the president of the society she had asked herself what she should say. She had read the reports of the temperance meetings, and felt from the standpoints occupied by the speakers that had covered the entire ground, but as a woman she saw that there were other deeper and more far-reaching cases than had been presented. She was early led to look deeply into the question, and asked why so many families were swept away from their moorings and lost. A thorough study of physiology had revealed to her mind many causes which do not appear on the surface.

From this observation she was led to believe that the intense, ungovernable desire for stimulants is much more frequently found among the children of those who are given to the pleasures of the table, to the stimulants of condiments and sauces, which are deemed harmless, so far as transmission goes, than among those of positive drunkards. It is the moderate drinkers and inordinate eaters who transmit a demand for the most fiery stimulants. Fathers do not always remember that their sins are visited upon their children, and that the more subtle as well as the grosser are transmitted. Violations by mothers are more rapid in effect. The child of a mother given to intemperance tells its own wrongs—its miserable dwarfed physique and the idiotic glare of its eyes. Mrs. Davis had known a young mother who was advised by her physician to take a whisky punch at night in order to procure sleep. She followed that advice. The child was one of promise, but at seven or eight months it died under such peculiar circumstances that the attending physician desired a post mortem examination. This examination showed the child's stomach and brain to be in precisely the condition of those of the drunkard who dies of mania a potu. Here was the effect of a sleeping potion.

Mrs. Davis mentioned other instances of a similar nature, and then turned to another appetite which is a part of men's lives, and their companion day and night, the little demon with one fiery eye, whose incense wreaths around their heads, exciting their imagination, and dulling all their finer and more delicate nerves of taste and smell, so that it is no wonder that condiments are needed to sustain the tone of their systems. She did not denounce this, but, as a mother, entreated young men to look at this great question from the highest standpoint of physical and moral science. To allow any habit to have the mastery, is to be a slave. I regard those who cannot do without their tea, coffee, wine, or cigar, as slaves, and my heart yearns over them with profoundest pity; for who shall strike from them their fetters, stronger than ever bound a slave upon a southern plantation, because more subtle and more difficult to reach?

That there is a craving for stimulants in every human being, none can deny. Now, the question is, how shall this demand be met and lessened? I have hinted at the causes; study them, and the remedy will suggest itself. Learn to control all your appetites, and thus purify the fountain head of transmission.

Mrs. Davis had often heard women called the tempters, the Eves who still proffer the sparkling wine cup. She grieved that she must admit that it was so, for she desired above all things purity, truth and nobleness in her own sex. But gentlemen should remember that women were the subordinate class; that they make the laws for women and naturally they seek to please their masters. A young lady dreads ridicule. All this was weakness, but it was the education of ages given them by their lords. 'God thy law; thou mine,' has made a very prominent part of the theological, legal and moral teaching of women. They give no laws, even of fashion, but simply help to popularize them. There is the motive to please a father, a lover, a brother or husband. But when at no distant day women stand by the side of men, no longer their dependents, but their equals, they will be found true on this question of temperance, as on all others. She will never be in favor of legalizing any vice. Remember that woman is also subject to inherited appetites, and must she be strong for herself and man too, while she is still held in the age an irresponsible being?

When Eve transgressed it seemed wondrous easy for Adam to follow. If he had been really manly and resisted the proffered fruit she would have had to walk out of Paradise alone. But mark, the curse was heavier upon Adam than upon Eve, and to her was given the promise and it is by her that redemption comes to the sons of earth. Her hour is at hand, and with it comes a new and higher civilization, even the reign of peace, temperance and righteousness.

I have trenched upon delicate, almost untrodden ground, sacred to the mother's heart of womanhood, but where duty bids there woman must go, even to the stake or to the cross."

AN ANTI-DESTRUCTIONIST.

J. R. CLARK.

We read a document from the pen of an Anti-Destructionist, a short time ago, a specimen of which we give, as follows:—

"I tell you plainly, there are many things among the Advent believers that I do not believe in, and among others, is that doctrine of soul and body resting in the grave, and soul-destroying and diabolical doctrine of destructionism, which I firmly believe had its origin in the infernal pit of hell." "I tell you plainly, that at the coming of Christ, I would as soon be found a believer in the religion of Mahomet, or a worshiper of the idol Juggernant, as to be found a believer in that soul-destroying, abominable doctrine of destructionism."

We now present a few quotations of the Word, which abideth forever: "Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction." Matt. 7: 13. "If any man defile the temple of God (whose temple ye are), him shall God destroy." 1 Cor. 3: 17. "Thou castedst them down into destruction." Ps. 73: 17. "Who shall be punished with [eternal torments in hell? No, no,] everlasting destruction." 2 Thess. 1: 9. "Whose end is destruction." Phil. 3: 19. "All the wicked will he [God] destroy." Ps. 145: 20. "And shouldest destroy them which destroy the earth." Rev. 11: 18. "Fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." The word of God demands a more serious consideration from those who oppose its most plain truths. Let us not be found fighting against God. We pray the Lord to forgive the blasphemy of this Anti-Destructionist. The name we withhold.

THE MORNING COMETH.

MRS. J. FINN.

The night is far spent, the day is at hand. The long, long night of weeping, of sin, sorrow and death, is almost gone. Friends have been torn from us by the cruel and unrelenting hand of death, and left us to mourn in silence for loved ones whom we can see no more until the morning of the resurrection. Death is the last enemy that shall be destroyed, when Jesus, our life-giver, shall come to reign. O glorious morn of eternal day, when all the saints of God shall awake to everlasting life, free from toil and sorrow; free from sickness and pain. O blessed thought! O happy day! Let us be faithful, that we may wear the shining diadem of royalty, and with the white-robed throng join in the sweet anthems of eternal day. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!

PRAYER IS THE LIFE-FEEDER OF THE SOUL.

Prayer is just as vital to my spiritual life as water is to the monthly rose, whose leaves are now dripping from the refreshing of the pitcher. Prayer is the conduit-pipe between my soul and heaven. It is the outlet upwards for gratitude, and yearning desires for blessings. It is the inlet through which the supplies of grace pour downward into the heart. When the channel is allowed to freeze up, I am in the same condition with the housekeeper who inquires, "I wonder why the water does not run to-day?" The plumber is sent for, and he soon explains the difficulty. "Your pipes are frozen up; the connection with the reservoir is stopped." Alas for the christian who has broken his connection with Christ!

Prayer may be also likened to a telegraph with heaven. Our messages go up with the lightning speed of thought. The mercies asked for often flow backward to us with the promptness and velocity of a divine love. Sometimes the blessing sought is ours at once. Sometimes the answer is delayed. Then we can only do our duty and wait. Sometimes the reply comes in the sudden shock of an unexpected trial; it comes like a death message over the wires. But it is all right. God knows what answer to send. I must take what my Father chooses to give. But trying messages are not so dreadful as to have the telegraph of prayer utterly out of order through long disuse, and the soul cut off from communication with Jesus.

But with prayer the Master also coupled watchfulness. The oversight must be close, constant, and wakeful. "Wherefore I say unto all, watch." Watch over your soul's nurseries in which the thoughts are cradled. Watch over an unruly tongue. Let the Mary side of your religion be ever at the feet of Jesus in humble devotion; let the Martha side of your piety be ever abounding in the work of the Lord. You must not take off the spiritual eye for one instant. Have the arm of resolution ever ready to seize it the very first moment that it attempts to fly off into sin. Never yet have I seen the christian whose heart would not "bear watching."—Dr. Cuyler.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

EACH CAN DO SOMETHING.

What if the little rain should say,
"So small a drop as I
Can ne'er refresh those thirsty fields;
I'll tarry in the sky."

What if the shining beam of noon
Should in its fountain stay,
Because its single light alone
Cannot create a day.

Does not each rain-drop help to form
The cool, refreshing shower?
And every ray of light to warm
And beautify the flower?

Then let each child its influence give,
O Lord, to truth and thee;
So shall its power by all be felt,
However small it be.

THE LOST MARBLES.

Andrew, or "Ande," as he was called, sat down to dinner. While he was eating, the tears rolled down his cheeks. He tried to stop them, but come they would.

"What troubles you Ande?" asked his father. The little fellow tried to swallow his trouble, whatever it was. "Can you not tell us, my son?" asked his father kindly.

"I've lost my all, sir," said Ande, trying to put on a brave face; "that's all."

"How is that, Ande?" asked his father.

"This morning I went out, sir," said Ande, "with twenty-one marbles, and five were the handsomest you ever saw, and I've lost them all. I played with Bill Taylor, and he won every single one."

"You can bear that, Ande."

"Oh yes, sir, but—" he stopped.

"Never mind, you can win them all back again," said James; "yes, and get Bill's too."

"I know it," said Ande, "the boys all say I can get Bill's some day; but then Bill wont have any, and I know just how he'll feel."

"That is gambling," said his father. "You don't think much of gambling, do you, Ande?"

"No, sir, I don't" answered Ande.

"In lawful trade, Ande," said his father, "a man parts with his property, his potatoes, his cloth, his iron, or whatever he has to sell, and receives in return its value in money; or a man buys something, a farm, a house, an engine, or whatever he wants, and gets for his money his money's worth. You see that, Ande."

"Yes, sir," said Ande.

"In gambling," continued his father, "you agree to part with your property without receiving anything of equal value in return, which is a foolish and sinful wasting of what you have; or you take another man's property without giving him anything for it, which every honorable mind must see to be ungenerous and mean."

"I think as much," said Ande. "I should not enjoy what I got that way, I know I should not. I don't want Bill Taylor's marbles unless I give something for them."

"Gambling then, you see, Ande, is bad in principle, and worse in practice, and I hope you will never countenance it even in play."

"I never shall, sir," said the little fellow.

Ande smarted a good deal under his loss, because, as he said, it seemed such a mean way of losing. It is mean. Gambling is mean business, and that is the reason it sneaks into back alleys and by-places, and allures people to its haunts by some cheat or other. People engage in it as a play; but it is a play that frets, sours, disgusts, hardens, and in the end ruins.

In all your recreations, boys, choose those which give a cheerful exercise to both mind and body, and leave no sting behind.—Child's Paper.

NO USE FOR IT.—At school, little boys and girls learn lessons about how many ounces make a pound, and how many farthings make a penny. One day when the lesson was the table called "Ale and Beer measure," a little boy, remarkable for the correct manner in which he usually said all his lessons, was quite unprepared.

"How is this, John?" said his teacher.

"I thought it was of no use," said John.

"No use?" interrupted the teacher.

"No, sir; it's ale and beer measure," said John.

"Well, sir," said the little boy, "father and I both think it is of no use to learn about ale and beer, as we mean never to buy, sell or drink it."—Ex.

POLITE LITTLE HARRY.—I was visiting Harry's mother lately, and she, happening to turn suddenly, not knowing the little fellow was so near, struck against him, then catching the face in her two loving hands said,—"I beg your pardon." A little while after, Harry was climbing in his mother's lap and pricked his finger on a pin in her belt. The pain made him start, but instead of crying he took the wounded finger in the other hand to examine, hastily murmuring—"I beg your pardon." His mamma thought it was she who should ask pardon of him this time also.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

CARE OF THE TEETH.

The best and safest tooth-wash in the world, is tepid water. There is not a tooth-powder in existence, or a tooth-wash, that does not inflict a physical injury to the teeth, and promote their decay. Each dentist has a powder of his own, which he sells at a thousand per cent. profit, which he may honestly imagine will do a positive good without any injury whatever; but he is mistaken. The teeth were never intended to be pearly white. Every intelligent dentist knows that the whiter the teeth are, the sooner and more certain they will decay; he also knows that those teeth are the soundest, last the longest, and are the most useful, which have a yellowish tint; then why provide powders to take off this yellowish surface?

It is useful to wash the teeth, once a week, with white soap, making the mouth as full as possible with "lather," so as to be close to every particle of every tooth for a few minutes; because the tartar on the teeth is the product of a living thing, which is instantly killed with soap suds. A few persons have another living thing about the teeth, not affected by soap, but which is instantly killed with salt; hence each person is advised to wash the teeth with white soap, once a week, and once a week with salt.

The teeth should be washed with a stiff brush every morning on rising, by dipping it once in the water, and rubbing the teeth slowly, front and rear, from side to side, and finally twisting the brush, so that each bristle shall act as a tooth-pick at the joinings of the teeth, so as the more thoroughly to dislodge anything which might remain in the hollows between the ridges. The water in the brush combines with the saliva of the mouth, and, by its great softness, makes one of the best solvents in nature for any extraneous substances about the teeth. The teeth should be brushed immediately after each meal, with a soft old brush, with plenty of water, twisting it up and down as before. After each washing, the brush should be placed far back on the tongue and also turned from side to side, so as to clear off the tongue; this does much towards freeing the teeth from the odor of the last thing eaten.

If persons would brush their teeth well immediately after the last meal of the day, instead of putting it off until bed time, the teeth would be clean for four or five hours more in the twenty-four, which is not a slight advantage.

It is unnatural, absurd, and unphilosophical to have the teeth separated with a saw, or frequent picking, or by threads.—Hall's Journal of Health.

THE STOMACH AND THE MIND.

Much of our conduct depends, no doubt, upon the character of the food we eat. Perhaps, indeed, the nature of our meals governs the nature of our impulses more than we are inclined to admit, because none of us relish well the abandonment of our idea of free agency. Bonaparte used to attribute the loss of one of his battles to a poor dinner, which, at the time, disturbed his digestion; how many of our misjudgments—how many of our deliberate errors—how many of our unkindnesses, our cruelties, our acts of thoughtlessness and recklessness, may be actually owing to a cause of the same character! We eat something that deranges the condition of the system. Through the stomach nerve that derangement immediately affects the brain. Moroseness succeeds amiability; and under its influence we do that which would shock our sensibility at any other moment. Or perhaps a gastric irregularity is the common result of an over-indulgence in wholesome food, or a moderate indulgence in unsuitable food. The liver is afflicted. In this affliction the brain profoundly sympathizes. The temper is soured; the understanding is narrowed; prejudices are strengthened; generous impulses are subdued; selfishness, originated by physical disturbances, which perpetually distract the mind's attention, becomes a chronic mental disorder; the feeling of charity dies out; we live for ourselves alone; we have no care for others. And all this change of nature is the consequence of an injudicious diet.—Ex.

☞ WHY are feather-beds objectionable? Feathers are very poor conductors of heat, and consequently keep the skin overheated, debilitating it, preventing the full performance of its functions, and rendering the person more liable to colds. Not only this, but the functions of the skin being impaired, the liver, kidneys and lungs have to do extra duty, and are liable to become diseased in consequence. Another objection to feathers is, that there is a decomposition of their animal matter going on all the time, and they absorb and retain the emanations from the body to such an extent that they soon become too filthy for even common decency.

TO STOP BLEEDING.—It is said that bleeding from wound on man or beast may be stopped by a mixture of wheat flour and common salt, in equal parts, bound on with a cloth. If the bleeding is profuse, use a large quantity, say from one to three pints. It may be left on for hours, or even days if necessary. The person who gave me this receipt says: "In this manner I saved the life of a horse which was bleeding from a wounded artery; the bleeding ceased in five minutes after the application."

☞ IF absolute thirst be experienced while eating, a few sips of cold water held in the mouth, and slowly swallowed, with no food in the month, is sometimes allowable. The remedy for thirst when eating, singular as it may appear, is to eat the driest kind of food, and masticate it slowly and thoroughly.

THE COMING OF CHRIST.

Com'st thou at evening? We would fain
  Be found before thee meekly kneeling,
Where through the far off storied pane,
  The last soft gleam is upward stealing.

Com'st thou at midnight? Oh! may we
  Be watching found; some lonely moan
Just breathed in humbleness to thee—
  Some hidden deed of penance done.

Com'st thou at cock-crow? Well for those Whose pillows vacant shall be found,
And they gone forth to seek repose
  Perchance with thee upon the ground.

Com'st thou at morn? The home how blest,
  Where from thine altar trimmed aright,
The hallowed lamp hath known no rest,
  The chanted psalm outworn the night.

PARDON.

WM. KELLAWAY.

God has many attributes. This we know from revelation, and have confirmed our belief by observation and reason. He is almighty. We have seen it in the power of his gospel over most obdurate and demon-possessed men. This mightiness of Omnipotence has overcome their evil propensities, and saved them from the power of the devil. We have seen his might in the universe, and marked how he upholdeth all things by the word of his power. So much for the power of God.

He is also glorious in holiness. We have seen his abhorrence of sin, and his infinite distance from the abominable thing. We have learned of the rectitude of God in that way, so as to believe he cannot sin. It is against his nature; contrary to his thoughts; and, further, he being the head over all, is amenable to none. And of how many attributes, all glorious and good, is Deity the possessor. "Praise belongeth unto God."

But of all his attributes, there is one that is supremely greater to man than any of the rest, and that is his attribute of mercy. I may stand and look at God's power, and gaze with astonishment; but it will only lead me to reverence and adore Jehovah. I may think of his holiness, of his consuming brightness and perfection; but it makes me stand afar off by very reason of its unapproachable grandeur. O how can sin, which is another name for man, draw nigh to holiness like God's? There is nothing in common, there is no affinity between the fallen state of man, and the glorious excellency of Jehovah's immutable and unimpeachable character. This attribute of God makes me sanctify him in my heart, and hallow his name.

But mercy, O mercy! how near and dear is that blessed attribute to a sinner like me. Does that repel me? O no. Does that necessitate distance from my Maker? Just the reverse. Does that cause me to adore only? Nay, but to love. Mercy emboldens me to approach God. Mercy brings me to him. Mercy makes even a sinner ready to come to the God he has insulted, whose laws he has disregarded, or knowingly trampled under his feet.

We may here notice this doctrine of forgiveness of sins. It will be profitable for us; for the greatest scholars in the school of Christ love to fall back on it equally with the most newly-born babe.

Man is a sinner. O to thrust the thought home, and not to talk about others, but ourselves. We are sinners, I, you. "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." "There is none righteous, no, not one." "All the world is become guilty before God."

God is the being against whom man has sinned. He is the sovereign over all. He made all. He owns all. All are his. He has a right therefore to our obedience. He has the most natural claim upon us as his property, and good reason to hold us responsible to his will, as the Sovereign of all, the God that ruleth in the heavens, whose kingdom is over all. He has promulgated certain commands among men, and we have broken them. It is worse than useless for any one to dissent from this. "Thou art the man." Thou art the sinner. Thou art the transgressor. Some people flatter themselves that they are not sinners; but I dare assert, if there is one reader of this kind who peruses this article, that your conscience, if not too seared, and delusively persuaded to the contrary, bears witness against you. What, no misgivings? Have you never had an evil thought? Ah! it is only "wicked" men who flatter themselves they have no sin. For thus saith the Lord of the wicked, "He flattereth himself in his own eyes, until his iniquity be found to be hateful." So you are a sinner, and I; and "he that saith he hath no sin deceiveth himself, and the truth is not in him." All sin is directly, or indirectly, done against God. All transgression is the transgression of his law.

We are not responsible to any law, any further than he lays responsibility upon us; and if he lays us under such responsibility, then if we do wrong, or leave right undone, we sin against him. Said the Psalmist—"Against thee, thee only have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight; that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and clear when thou judgest." To know that sin is committed against God, you may refer in your Bibles to Gen. 20: 6, when God tells Abimelech, king of Gerar, in a dream that he withheld him from sinning against himself. And Joseph also asked, when tempted by Potiphar's wife, "How, then, can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?"

"Sin against God"—think calmly. It is God whom I have offended. What will you do? He is great; he is strong; he is just; he is holy. O his majesty! What can you do to be saved from his just displeasure? How can you be saved the penalty of the law? How can you be delivered from the reward of unrighteousness? Do you not feel concerned for your state? O your peril! Well may your heart tremble as his voice thunders in the heavens, and his eyes glance fire of lightning there. Well may you fear as the signs of that man whom He has appointed judge of quick and dead appear one by one, as the stars of the evening, in the black background of time. O the fire which is kindled in his anger. O to perish without a look of pity from your Maker! O to have no one to compassionate, no one to cheer, no one to help, no Savior in that day. Man, man, awake! See the peril before you. Behold the shame of the lost—"the second death." O to be blotted out of the book of the living, as the meteors disappear from the heavens. How terrible to lose consciousness for ever. The mind a blank for ever—destroyed. Who would commit himself to sleep to-night, if he thought he should never wake again? Afflictive thought! But not only so; this death is to be brought about in terrible anguish by fire. And all because you have sinned against God. O do I hear the cry—Is there any way of escape? Can I not fly from this doom? Thank God! there is. God has made it possible for such as we are to be saved. Hear, then.

God is our help. He who gave us our being, is also sufficient for our sin; yea, more, for by mercy he can triumph above it, so that where sin abounded, grace did much more abound. God loves me; he loves you. "Man," says he, "thou hast destroyed thyself." "I know it, I feel it," says my soul. "Thou, O God, art true." And as I cast a wistful eye to him, and long to hear what else is coming, he says to me, "But in me is thy help." What, he whom I have offended, tell me he is my helper! He whom I have robbed, going to crown all with a gift? It is true; oh, so true. If it were not for God, I should have had no being; I should have had no life; I should have had no Jesus. We owe Jesus to God. We are indebted to him for Christ. Christ is the fruit of his love—the expression of his love—the persuasion of his love. No love, no Jesus. But as God is love, Jesus Christ came into the world to seek and save those who were lost to obedience. He, the dear Savior, the true and only begotten Son of the true God, sacrificed all he had for us; the comforts of this life, and himself at the end. God, as he tells us, is our help. He points us to Jesus. It is very remarkable, but the name "Jesus" is from an old Hebrew word, which literally translated means "Help of Jehovah." And he caused him to be lifted up on the cross for us to see, and rejoice in his words. He has spoken—"I have found a ransom." Truly, God is the help of the believer. He has redeemed man from death by Christ, and saved him from eternal destruction.

God is merciful. If the old serpent introduced sin and death into the world, God checked it by sending "The Lord our Righteousness," and opening to us "eternal life." God is merciful. The character of offended majesty—of heaven's King—is one of mercy. Mercy! "Publish the tidings abroad." Ye rebels! mercy. Ye sinners! mercy. Bless you, dear soul! this is no broken reed on which to lean your weight. Mercy in Christ. He is the mercy-seat. From him—through his name—comes forgiveness of sins. Once the Lord descended in a cloud, and stood before Moses and proclaimed his name to be "The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, FORGIVING INIQUITY, transgression and sin, and that will by no [other] means clear the guilty." What a name! What a God! How beyond all praise his disposition to forgive! How eminent his clemency! How great his tenderness! His goodness to penitent delinquents how unbounded! But yet this "secret of the Lord is with them that fear him." I have felt, through faith, this pardoning love, and rejoiced in it. O! wretched is the man that longs for it, and does not trust in the promise; whereas "the desire accomplished is sweet to the soul."

God's pardon is abundant pardon. "Abundant"—thank God! He does not take up the case of the sinner and say, "I will forgive you some of your crimes; I will pardon the smallest; but here you sinned against light and knowledge in these cases, and I cannot forgive these transgressions." Abundance implies mercy that forgives not a part of the crime, but the whole; not a few of the sins, but the whole, to the last; for "the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth from ALL sin." His merciful-kindness is a sponge that wipes from off the tablet of Divine recollection every blot; a stone, which sinks all our iniquities into the depths of forgetfulness.

Sinner, O how we want you to be blest. Do listen. "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near; let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and HE WILL HAVE MERCY UPON HIM; and to our God, for he will ABUNDANTLY PARDON him." Come, and have "abundant" pardon. God is no niggard. His heart is too generous to make his hand spare. He means "abundant" pardon. All he asks is a character as he describes—forsake your evil ways and thoughts. Simple, is it not? Which is best, God's mercy, or sin for a season? Surely God's mercy. Then let wisdom bring you to God, saying, "pardon my iniquity, and my sin, and take me for thine inheritance."

Christian, faithful, but not free from sin that dwelleth in you, there is "abundant" mercy with God for you. He keepeth mercy for thousands of them that love him and keep his commandments. I am glad God keeps that cordial on his shelf, in Christ, his blessed dispensary. If any have strayed, do not keep your sin. Tell the Physician what is the matter, and he will heal you. And go, and sin no more. That medicine is most often called for in God's laboratory. My soul! what a tonic hast thou often found it! O, if you are not a pardoned sinner, come and ask God very humbly and hopefully for his good word. Tell him you want the "abundant" pardon—that is the name of the heart-cure. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to FORGIVE us our sins, and to cleanse us from ALL unrighteousness." "Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." Here, dear soul, I have right to tell you that if now you truly repent toward God, and put trust in Christ, God pardons you: your sins are remitted; you are forgiven—freed from condemnation.

God is ready to pardon. He is ready, ready to-day, ready this hour, ready this moment, now. He has no business demanding his first attention. You need not wait. He can give present attention to your prayer. He will not keep you in suspense. He is ready. He even now looks toward you to see if you are ready. Shall God be ready, and you not prepared? Shall he be all waiting in his inimitable condescension to do you this good turn? It is even better than that. Shall the Majesty of heaven come down to a worm, to serve it in the person of Jesus, and frail man be so sadly deranged that he will not know Him who would wash him whiter than snow? Stop; God is ready to pardon. My Father can pardon by hundreds and thousands. He holds innumerable laws in nature in control at one and the same time, and if they all converge to him, and he can rule the whole at once, he can pardon hundreds in a word. I have an illustration in my mind. I have sought to get rid of it, but still it will come. A cashier stands behind the counter. He stands ready to attend to the business of the next comer. He could dispatch him at once. The gospel is like the glass of his counting-room—the window into which you can look. There are pardons all made out in the name of Jesus, and signed by the Father. They hang before your very eyes. You hear people talk about them. O come and be forgiven. Take by faith the white stone, which has the initials of Jesus in it, and be glad and thankful.

Again, God is ready to pardon. He has made all the necessary preparations. "All things are now ready." "Christ has died, yea, rather, is risen again." Jesus "shows cause" why you should be forgiven. There are only two grounds on which people can be justified. (1) On the ground of their innocence. (2) On the ground of mercy. The latter is the ground on which God is ready to pardon you. Point to Christ, as all your plea. "Christ," say you, "is my trust. O great High Priest, bear in my case, and bring out my absolution."

Jesus is coming to pronounce openly the absolution of the pardoned. He shall come forth from the heavenly sanctuary to bless his people. Then he shall declare whose sins are forgiven. They will be the people who have received forgiveness and pardon here by faith. But the sins of some shall be retained. No blood shall cancel their debt; dissolve their iniquities; drown their sins. My God! what shall the reader do, if he shall appear in the judgment unpardoned? Do? Do? O what can you do? O what an "eternal weight" will your sin be! It will sink you into death eternal. It will drown you in the sea of wrath, and it will be so heavy that you will never rise again. No resurrection with that weight on you.

There are some, said Jesus, "who hath never forgiveness, not in this world, or the world to come." They accept it not now—they desire it not; and when the nations of the saved are openly pardoned and received back again to God, not into friendship merely, but now into relationship, they shall remain unpardoned. "Now is the day of salvation"; if it slips, it is gone irrecoverably.

"There's no salvation in the tomb,
Or pardon offered to the Lord."

Then whilst it is to-day, and God is ready—that is a marvellous word—"whosoever will let him come and take of the water of life freely."

And O saint! "I write unto you because your sins are forgiven." The forgiveness is in God's purpose, in his mind, in his thoughts, on his books, in your hearts. But the day of declaration comes with Jesus. I want Christ to come. Pardoned, I hold fellowship with him; and am "looking for the mercy of God unto everlasting life." If every infidel knew God as a pardoning God, and a Savior, if they only could realize it by faith, there would not be the vestige of an infidel left. "But ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." "And this is life eternal to know thee the only true God [as a loving, pardoning sanctifying Savior], and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." Amen. "We speak the things we do know."

— I am more afraid of my own heart than of the pope and all his cardinals. I have within me the great pope—self.—Luther.

THE MODEL PREACHER.

O. R. FASSETT.

Our Lord had entered into Capernaum, and it was soon noised abroad that he was in the city, as his fame had preceded him because of the marvelous and wonderful miracles which he did, the gracious words he spoke, and the remarkable doctrines he taught, with the singular commanding authority and unction with which they were delivered. The house into which he entered soon became packed with an audience, and an immense concourse of people assembled about the door, so that all further ingress was impossible. The teacher took advantage of the occasion, and "Preached the word unto them." Mark 2: 2. The probability was, that Jesus on this, as on other occasions, expounded the Scriptures concerning himself. Not egotistically, but in the utmost meekness and humility, as when the woman of Samaria said at the well, "I know that Messias cometh, which is called Christ; when he is come, he will tell us all things." Jesus replied, "I that speak unto thee am he." This was direct and positive, but in no spirit of ostentation, and so commended he himself in the manner of its delivery, that she was convinced of its truthfulness.

On the resurrection of our Redeemer he instructed the disciples thus: "Beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself. . . . And he said unto them, "These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me." Luke 24. Christ "preached the word," and his chosen apostles followed his example. "Paul, as his manner was, . . . reasoned with them out of the Scriptures." Acts 17: 2, 3. And thus gives a "charge" to Timothy, and through him to every minister, "Preach the word." 2 Tim. 4: 1, 2. If there was more of this done by the ministry of our day, there would be less ignorance of the Scriptures, both on the part of ministers and people; for the preachers would have to study to acquaint themselves with the Scriptures; and when they preached the word, the people would be fed with gospel truths.

As the custom is now, the Bible is a mere text book for preachers. If a clergyman can take a text from the Scriptures, and then close his Bible and lay it one side, not to look at again, and give his audience a harangue of the scintillations of his own mind and opinions, he is a marvelous preacher in the estimation of thousands. Or if another can write a manuscript sermon, in which there is not a passage of Scripture given, aside from the text, but which is a beautiful essay, or a well written discourse, with rounded periods, closing eloquent sentences, on moral, religious, or political, and even scientific themes; this is "a heavy" sermon, an "admirable discourse." And in too many instances, yea, may we not affirm as a general rule, "the people love to have it so"; and say of an effort at Scriptural exposition, "We can read our Bibles at home; we want to hear the preacher preach a sermon without reading the Bible." This is the cry, and yet they denounce these very preachers who withhold the word of God from them, when you come to converse with them in private, saying: "They give us shucks," "chaff for wheat." Yet still they will go to hear, and be charmed with human eloquence, and human opinions and tradition. "Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of."

Let the preachers follow Christ and the apostles, and please God. The "New York Herald," as one says, "turned preacher" a few weeks ago! and quoted the language of the prophet as applicable to the church-going community in this day, declaring that there was "a famine in the land; not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord; and they wander, and run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and do not find it." This is a merited rebuke from the secular press, and most sadly true. Let us do as did Christ, the great Teacher: "Preach the word unto them" till that famine actually occurs.

GOD IN HEAVEN—DAVID IN THE TOMB.

"Never man spake like this man," said one in reference to Jesus. Never man spake by the inspiration of Jesus as did Peter on the day of Pentecost, say we—when that great gospel baptism of the Spirit was poured out on the apostles at Jerusalem. Now notice what Peter said to those Jews who thought more of David than they did of Jesus, in Acts, 2d chapter:

"Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us to this day. Therefore, being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; he seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul [he] was not left in hell [the grave], neither his flesh did see corruption. This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses; therefore, being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear. For David is not ascended into the heavens; but he saith himself, the Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand until I make thy foes thy footstool."

We hear everywhere, continually, especially on funeral occasions, of souls going to heaven at death; but Peter very plainly tells the Jews in that memorable sermon, that David, the man after God's own heart, the sweet singer of Israel, and Israel's favorite king, had not ascended into the heavens, but was dead and buried at Jerusalem, and his tomb was there as evidence of the fact, unto that day. It was Jesus who had ascended into heaven after leading captivity captive. Here is a great positive truth boldly declared, in which the Old and New Testaments abound; yet, as a late English writer has said, theology would about as soon die in error as relinquish a life long belief in some man-made creed. Paul says of all who have died in the faith, they sleep, just as David is now sleeping, and will be "satisfied," as he said while yet alive, when he awakes in the likeness of Christ.

When will christians gain sufficient stamina to accept gospel truth in preference to the uninspired wisdom of men, coming from doctors of divinity, made such by feeble, ignorant man—in many instances having none of the grace of God in their hearts. Let truth prevail, though all the bricks and mortar in Christendom tumble down—though all the denominational divisions of Christ's church be swept from the earth, and creeds be driven as chaff before the wind.—The Nazarene.

ALL THINGS FOR OUR GOOD.

Oft times we meet with trials
  And toils upon our way;
We're pressed to self-denial,
  And know not what to say.
The path seems rough and strong,
  Ourselves misunderstood;
'Tis then, we must remember
  All things are for our good.

Sometimes our life seems dreary,
  A sad and lonely one;
Our feet are worn and weary,
  We wish that it was done.
But when we see the shadows
  Of this approaching mood,
We ought to hold the promise—
  All things are for our good.

Christ says he will not leave us
  To grope our way alone;
He always will relieve us,
  And keep us, every one.
But we must all be tested,
  And stand, as christians should,
Amid the fiery furnace;
  All things are for our good.

TOO LATE.

J. W. THOMAS.

How these words thrilled through my mind on the morning of Jan. 23d, when I reached the depot in Montpelier, Vt. Through the kindness of Bro. Hill, who gave me a passage in his own private team, I was permitted to leave Cabot about four o'clock A. M., supposing we had ample time to reach the train which left for Boston at nine; but in riding twenty-three miles, with the thermometer thirty-two degrees below zero, it was necessary to stop and warm up once on the way, and then meeting with one or two accidents, and not looking at the time, we were saluted, on arriving at the depot, with the words, "You are about two minutes too late." Our feelings can be imagined. In the distance I heard the whistle, but it was no use. "Too late" rung in my ears, and the only alternative was to wait in the midst of strangers, enduring their cursing, swearing, and smoking, until two P. M. Being quite weak in body, and fearing that the long journey might bring on a relapse of the same difficulty with which I had so recently been prostrated, it was to me a day of serious reflection and unusual prayer. All day long was my heart lifted to Him who has "all power in heaven and earth," that he would grant me grace and help in time of need, and bring me safely home. His promise was sure, and on the following Tuesday evening, I was permitted to greet dear friends, from whom I had been absent three months, and who had experienced no little anxiety on account of my illness. Praise God for his abounding mercy, and unspeakable goodness. With good old Samuel, here will I erect my Ebenezer, saying, "Hitherto the Lord hath helped me."

But the disappointment, and the words "too late" above referred to, have suggested to my mind some practical thoughts, and the object in writing this is to express them for the benefit of others. What uncounted multitudes there are now living, who, ere long, will hear it said, "too late," in a more solemn and significant manner than ever before. The gospel of salvation, through Jesus Christ, is freely offered to all, and there are many who intend to embrace it before they die, or before the Lord comes to judgment; but they will procrastinate, or neglect it until they shall hear those words of awful import—"Too late." In the case above mentioned, the principal reason of my being late was in neglecting to look at the time. If I had looked at my watch occasionally, we might have urged the horses, and thus gained a few minutes; but it being so cold, and I was wrapped so closely with external garments, I neglected to do it. And will not this be the principal cause why many will hear the words "too late? They think there is no danger, and are so closely wrapped in their garments of pride, worldliness, covetousness, etc., that they neglect to look at the time; hence they will be overtaken as a thief.

Would it not be wise to look at the "time piece," which God has given us, and thus learn our whereabouts in the history of this world? Where are we? How much time have we in which to prepare for the coming kingdom? Everything indicates that probationary time is almost over. Only a little while, and the gospel trumpet will be blown no more. In my disappointment, I only had to wait a few hours, and then take the next train, but in this case, there is no other train of salvation to run over the track of time. When the Lord appears, those who are ready will go in with him to share the joys of the New Jerusalem; but those who are not ready will be shut out. Sinner, you have no time to spare. Make haste, prepare to meet thy God now, or it may be be forever "too late."

— All over this world what an endless chorus is singing of love, and thanks, and prayer! Day tells to day the wondrous story, and night recounts it to night.

CHURCH DIVISIONS.

THE CURE.

A. A. PHELPS.

7. Do not expect too much of others. In our early experience we are apt to look for angelic perfection among the followers of Jesus. Time works many a modification in our estimate of men and things. After our hopes have been repeatedly disappointed, we come to entertain more truthful views of the frailties and imperfections that belong to the race. Everybody has some weak points. Some people are weak in understanding, some in the Christian graces, and some in moral principles. In vain do we look for a church whose members are all models of moral excellence. Even the apostolic churches had a liberal sprinkling of "weak" members, whose "infirmities" demanded the special forbearance of the more vigorous. This fact is clearly brought out in such scriptures as the following: "Him that is weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations." Rom. 14: 1. "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves." Rom. 15: 1. "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself lest thou also be tempted." Gal. 6: 1.

A faithful compliance with these Bible directions will prove a two-fold blessing: (1.) It will benefit the weak. Our kind consideration of their frailties will give us access to their hearts, increase their confidence in our piety, and thus increase our power to do them good. How much more like Jesus thus to bear with the weak and commiserate the erring, than to haughtily repudiate all who do not exhibit a faultless character. (2.) It will benefit the strong. The kindly disposition we manifest toward others will have a reflex influence on our own hearts. Our graces are improved by exercise. What experienced disciple has not had his patience, meekness, and long-suffering put to the severest test by the dullness, backwardness, and inconsistency of many bearing the Christian name? The devil has tempted us to chafe and censure and anathematize; but whenever we have resisted the tempter and "let patience have her perfect work," we have gained a victory that made us stronger for future conflicts. In exercising forbearance toward the weak and wavering, the law of association has conducted us back to a point in our experience when God and the brethren had everything to bear, from us. We follow on the train of reflection until the serious inquiry arises, whether it is not much the same with us yet. Perhaps our weakness—largely concealed from our own view—taxes the patience and charity of those in our advance, quite as severely as ours has been taxed by the infirmities of those in our rear. Thus we are saved from censoriousness. Our humility is deepened, and our gratitude raised to a higher pitch. We feel more sensibly our own dependence, and our hearts flow out with new sympathy and love toward the feeblest portion of the Shepherd's flock. If we are extravagant in our expectations and exacting in our spirit, life will be a continued series of disappointments. But if we make due allowance for the limitations of human knowledge and the various weaknesses of our common humanity, our course will be directly promotive of Christian unity.

THE ROMAN QUESTION.

MRS. JOHN PELL.

Having been a subscriber to the Crisis, we have watched closely the various articles on the Roman question, and as yet have seen nothing clearly satisfactory to our minds; and it appears to us some of the points of the prophecy have been overlooked. It is generally understood by prophetic students that the beast of Rev. 17th is the Napoleonic dynasty, and that the woman that sits upon it, the Papacy, has its seat at Rome. The ten horns upon (or, as the Syriac reads, with) the beast, are the ten kingdoms of Italy. These ten horns are represented as having one mind, and giving their power and strength to the beast; they are also to hate the harlot, and make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh and burn her with fire. It is well known that since 1848, the Pope has only kept his temporal power in Rome by the aid of French troops; therefore she (the harlot) sat upon the beast; and while Napoleon has been supporting this power at Rome, he has allowed the ten horns (the Italians) to pick the Pope's pockets, to make her desolate and naked, eating her flesh, and burning her with fire. In the 17th verse of the above chapter it reads, "For God has put in their hearts to fulfill his will, and to agree and give their kingdom to the beast until the words of God shall be fulfilled." How marked is the prophecy, and we think here is the point that has been overlooked since the downfall of Napoleon. The ten horns are to fulfill the will of God, and to agree and give their kingdom to the Napoleonic "beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled."

Let us examine and see what are the words of God to be fulfilled. We turn to 2 Thess. 2, and learn that Paul's man of sin is to oppose and exalt "himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God" (the Pope declaring his infallibility). Again, in Dan. 7: 11: "I beheld then because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake" (declaring himself infallible). How marked is the prophecy! These shall hate the harlot, "and give their kingdom to the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled." We will see how the events have marked the correctness of the prophecy.

The Pope declared his infallibility on the 19th of July, 1870. On the 22nd of the same month, Napoleon declared war against Prussia; and eight days after, the French troops had all left Rome, leaving the infallible one to take care of himself. On the 19th day of July, the words of God were fulfilled, and then the harlot power could sit upon the Napoleonic beast no longer; and the ten horns ceased (with the withdrawal of the French troops from Rome) to give their power and kingdom to the beast. The words of God having been fulfilled, there was no further use of Napoleon. The ten horns have taken possession of Rome, proclaimed it the capital of the nation, and have confiscated the Pope's property. In Rev. 18, we read that her plagues shall "come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine." Death, we understand to be the loss of her temporal power. The mourning has already commenced. Great efforts are being made at present by the Roman Catholics of England, Ireland, and the United States, to make the most of the present position of the Pope as a prisoner, as he calls himself, in the hands of the Italian government. Protests, not only against the indignities offered to the Pope as a sovereign, but the occupation of Rome by the Italians, are made from nearly all their churches, especially in cities; and many efforts made to get up excitement on the subject. A monster demonstration was held by the Catholics of Philadelphia, on Sunday, Dec. 4th, 1870, and meetings were held in all the churches of that denomination in New York city, to consider the same subject. A protest by the Archbishop of Westminster was read in all the London churches on the same day, denouncing the act as sacrilegious and treasonable, and also subversive of religion and morality. This we understand to be the commencement of the mourning, and in the end she is to be overthrown with violence, and be found "no more at all." Such, we think, is the fulfillment of the prophecy. Even if Napoleon should be reinstated on the throne of France (an event quite probable), he cannot reinstate the papacy at Rome.

We notice that some writers are of the opinion that the "city" mentioned in Rev. 18 is Paris, but that cannot be, as Paris is not built on seven mountains; neither has it reigned over the kings of the earth. Rome has done that; she is Babylon, the highest dignitaries of the papal church having ruled there. But there is every reason to suppose that Paris is the city of Rev. 16: 19—"And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell, and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath." The Syriac translation reads, "The city of the nations fell, and Babylon the great was in remembrance before God." Paris is evidently the city of the nations. She is called the queen city. The French say it is not Paris that is blockaded, but the whole world. It looks at present as though "the city of the nations" will soon fall; and what next? Great Babylon comes in remembrance before God. She will go down with violence. Such, we think, is and will be the fulfillment of the prophecy. Let us watch and be sober, for great events are just at hand that will usher in the coming of the King of kings.

FORGETFULNESS.

D. F. NEWTON, Author of "Shining Light."

"Work well done is twice done." Never mix up things; do one thing at a time; begin one thing and finish one thing—make clean work as you go. Have order, system, regularity; a place for everything and everything in its place. Whatever you do, do it well. A job slighted, because it is apparently unimportant, leads to habitual neglect, so that men degenerate, insensibly, into bad workmen.

Training the hands and the eyes to do work well, leads individuals to form correct habits in other respects, and a good workman is, in most cases, a good citizen. No one need hope to rise above his present situation who suffers small things to pass by unimproved, or who neglects, metaphorically speaking, to pick up a cent because it is not a dollar. A rival of a certain great lawyer sought to humiliate him publicly by saying, "You blacked my father's boots, once."

"Yes," replied the lawyer, unabashed; "and I did it well."

"Do justice; 'tis thy God's command,
  The mandate of thy King;
Be prompt in rendering dues to all,
  And let no fraud spot, great or small,
    Unto thy conscience cling."

"Be ye doers of the word," says the apostle James, "and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves."

As it is with little folks, so it is with great folks. "Oh, I forgot it." Forgot it, indeed; and why did you forget it? Why vow and pay not? Why make an engagement and fulfill it not? You forget to comply with your promise. How is this? Do you forget your breakfast, your dinner, your supper? Do you forget to provide your bodily comforts or necessities? And yet you forget to do a thing that might have saved a soul from death eternal. Wicked man! wicked woman! Is this you—brother, sister, forgetting to do good, and that good you promised to do? This indicates obtuseness of conscience, a lack of God's fear, love, and mercy. Besides grieving the Holy Spirit by this omission, you forfeit your reputation for strict honesty, curtail your usefulness greatly. We beseech you, consider engagements binding to the very letter, for conscience' sake. Do you promise to visit the sick, the poor, the oppressed, to attend to such a meeting, to deliver such a message, such book, such a tract, for the soul's salvation? and then will you say, when questioned, "I forgot it?"

"Work, work, nor covet an ignoble rest;
  Allow no sin thy spirit to beguile.
Those love the Savior most who serve him best;
  And he who blesses others shall be blessed
    With the full sunshine of his Savior's smile."

Things to be Remembered.

In raising your list—the names may be obtained from as many different places as you please, and the papers will be mailed by us to each separate address.

Subscriptions may be taken for the year, with $2.50 each; or double the number for six months, with $1.25 each; or any number for both periods, which, with $1.25 and $2.50 each, shall make up the requisite amount.

Keep a list yourself of all names and monies obtained by you and forwarded to us, with the date when sent.

In sending to us—put the list always on a sheet by itself. If, at the same time, you write on other matters, or remit for old subscribers, put that on a separate sheet.

Write each name plainly, with its Post-office, County, and State, and amount paid, all on one line by itself, in that order; and, at the bottom, give the whole amount of premium monies sent, with your own name and full address.

Names sent "for a premium," should, in all cases, be so marked when sent. No name should be sent without the money.

All names and monies can be forwarded at once, or from week to week, as fast as you get them, until the 1st of June.

Any one aiming for a higher premium, and failing to get the full number of names and amount, can pay the balance in cash, and so get the premium; or he can order some other premium on the list corresponding to the amount obtained.

When you have got all the names you can and want your premium, send us a full list of all the names, addresses, and monies you have sent, so that we may compare them with our books; then we will send you whatever premium you may select from the catalogue—the Sewing Machines and Webster's Dictionaries by express, at the expense of the receiver, and the other books by mail, postpaid.

Monies, if under $6.00, may be sent by letter at our risk. If a larger sum, and under $25, send a Post-Office Money Order, or Registered Letter. If $25 or more, send a Bank Draft, or money Order, payable to the order of GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass. All sums of $6.00 and over, sent in any other way than above directed, will be at the sender's risk.

All letters and remittances for premiums should be addressed to the Business Agent, undersigned, or, if more convenient, they may be enclosed in letters to the Editor, MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

And now, dear brethren and sisters everywhere, from Maine to California, and from the Lakes to the Gulf, put your hearts and hands to the good work, and a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together! and the blessing of the Lord be with you!

TOO MINISTERIAL.

It often happens that prayer-meetings are much injured by ministers, who are too "ministerial." By this we mean, that when they speak they try to say something worthy of a minister; i. e., something "smart." In other words, they do too much, they talk too long; they make a kind of a "set speech." The effect is to discourage the little ones,—the one-talented ones,—who say inside, If I could only talk like the minister, or Bro. and Sr. A. or B., I would be willing to take a part in the meeting; but I don't like to get up and make a fool of myself. In this way the Spirit is grieved, Satan is pleased, and a dull, cold, formal meeting is the result. All are glad when it is closed; and but few care to come again.

If the minister would only say a few simple words, in the most informal, familiar manner, as he would speak to his near friends, who make him an evening call—just merely talk to them, without any effort to say big things,—he would find those in the meeting would feel much more freedom to speak and pray. Throw off all formality, and put on great familiarity. Talk as children. Make no effort to say great things. Pure christianity is very familiar and specially social. It makes one feel easy, when in company with those who truly love Christ. The talking in a good prayer and conference meeting should be as social and familiar as any visit between the most loving friends; and the praying like the petition of an affectionate child to a kind parent, who is ever ready to do whatever is best for the dear little one. In short, carry the warmest expression of social, true christian friendship, and brotherly love into the prayer-meeting; and let it gush out in songs, prayers and exhortations, and such meetings would soon become the most attractive of all social gatherings.

A FACT.

No amount of reasoning can ever change a fact. It will still be a fact, when the objector has finished all his arguments, and uttered all his hard sayings against it. Suppose one should say he did not believe a person could sail around the earth; and should deny that the earth is a spheroid, turning daily upon its axis from west to east; and should present various reasons in opposition to these facts; when he had finished his arguments it would still be a fact that the earth is of globular form, turning over daily, and that navigators have sailed around it frequently.

We wish to state a fact: there is not a single passage of scripture in the Bible, in which the words soul or spirit have any qualifying words which signify unending existence. Keep this fact before the people. If the passage can be found where the words soul or spirit are ever qualified by such words as "immortal," "everlasting," "undying," "endless," or any other word of like import, let it be produced. No uninspired man has a right to prefix any word to soul or spirit in the Bible, which is not found in the original. What is not taught in the Bible cannot be a Bible doctrine. The immortality of the soul, or spirit, is not taught in the sacred Scriptures; therefore it is not a Bible doctrine. The preacher has no more right to attach the word immortal to the word soul, than he has to any other name in the Scriptures, if it is not found in the text.

Again we say, Keep these facts before the people.

PERSONAL.

We had a very pleasant interview, at our office, with LIEUTENANT CRAIG, of the Royal Antrim Artillery, London, Eng. In company with several other distinguished English gentlemen, he has given himself away to Christ, that he may walk in the "higher life," where he can enjoy perfect peace and love, with full assurance of acceptance. He has just returned from Cal., where he arrived about the time of our departure. He is fully convinced that Jesus is coming soon. He says about one-third of the believers in England are looking for the speedy return of our Savior. It was a feast to talk with one from the higher walks of life, who has condescended to step down to the simplicity of a pure, unsectarian christianity. Such things are not common in these days of cold formalism. He remarked that he found only a few who enjoyed the "higher life" in Christ, as the result of entire consecration. He intends to return to England in a few weeks. . . . . SR. S. K. TAYLOR, from Harrison, Me., has been preaching at the Branch Chapel, in Boston, to good acceptance. She leans heavily upon Christ, and he blesses her labors. We commend her to the churches. . . . . We also enjoyed pleasant interviews with Brn. I. I. Leslie, J. Hemenway, and Edwin Burnham. The latter is now in good health, physically and spiritually. . . . . . Bro. A. W. Sibley has become pastor of the church at Rutland, Vt. May the Lord greatly bless his labors. . . . . The church in Carver, Mass., will have a chapel ready soon for dedication. Bro. Leslie has been instrumental in forwarding the building of the house.

☞ IF any of our friends, who may visit Boston, should forget where to find us, they have only to look in the city directory, where they will find our address.

FRANCE.

The rebellion in Paris is about ended; but it has closed in blood and fire. There has been a terrible slaughter of human life, and a wanton destruction of valuable property by the insurgents. When they saw but small hopes of success, they set fire to the Tuilleries, and other palace buildings. It is said they fought "like fiends." They slaughtered some fifty ministers in cool blood. We may now daily expect a radical change in the aspect of things in France. A new government must be organized, and new men put into office. Some of the leading insurgents have been shot. Paris is passing through a reign of terror, quite like the one of 1793. Things are ripening for the end. The world's harvest is apparently ready for the sickle of the reaping angel. Great events are at hand. Soon the great clock of time will strike the hour of judgment. This is the time to watch and be ready.

PROGRESSING.—There is much said of the progress of the present age. The following are specimen examples in church matters, as published in the Chicago Post, May 13th and 16th, 1871:

"The young people of the Oakland Congregational Church will give a musical and dramatic entertainment, on Tuesday evening, at the residence of H. R. Smith, on Vincennes Avenue, between Egan and Oakwood Avenues. Proceeds for the benefit of the church."

"A strawberry and floral festival, with dancing, will take place this evening, at Martine's north side hall, No. 248 Ohio street. The object being to raise funds for the erection of a parsonage for the Church of the Ascension."

It is very evident that many professors of religion are progressing rapidly into the spirit and manners of the world.

SAD NEWS.—We have just seen in the Boston Journal, of May 29th, the following sad news from Concord, N. H.:—

DEATH OF A PROMINENT CITIZEN.

Rev. Jonas Merriam, who was for many years the Editor of the World's Crisis, a Second Advent paper, died in Concord yesterday, aged sixty-eight years. He was a native of Topsfield, Mass., and graduated at Bowdoin College in 1826. He was an able writer and an esteemed citizen. Since 1855 he had resided in this city. The deceased left a widow, but no children.

A MODEL BUSINESS LETTER.—The following is so plain and concise, removing all excuse for mistakes on the part of the Crisis office, we venture to give it entire, word for word, hoping it may be a benefit to some not accustomed to writing:—

"OAKFIELD, N. Y., May 15, 1871.

PERIODICALS FOR JUNE.—Received, "The Manufacturer and Builder," published by Western & Co., 37 Park Row, New York. $1.50 per annum. A valuable monthly for mechanics.—"The Child's Hour," and Arthur's "Lady's Home," published at 809 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.—"Good Health," published by Alex. Moore, Boston. $2.00.—"Laws of Life," by Austin, Jackson & Co., at "Our Home," Dansville, N. Y., $1.00.—"Home and Health," by W. R. De Puy & Brothers, Broadway, New York, $1.50.—"The Herald of Health," published by Wood & Holbrook, 15 Laight St., New York, $2. These periodicals, relating to health, are valuable, and should be in every family.

THE FRENCH REBELLION ENDED.—The latest news from Paris brings the glad tidings that the rebellion is now at an end. It closed in bloody scenes. It is estimated that fifty thousand dead bodies are in the houses and cellars. The slaughter was terrible. No quarter is given to the rebels. Death awaits them at every turn. One third of Paris is said to be destroyed. What next?

STRANGE THEORIES.

The strange religious theories advanced at the present time are truly astounding. It seems that Satan has set men's minds at work inventing new theological dogmas and fables, with all the zeal that ever characterized a noted mechanical inventor. It is also a little remarkable that nearly all of the wild theories make the coming of Christ a prominent point; but instead of teaching in harmony with the Bible, most of them deny his personal coming, and, like the Spiritualists, claim that he is only coming spiritually, by the spread of certain "eternal principles," taught by the spirits. Those who set forth these new theological fables, claim that they have received them by revelation in dreams, through mediums, or some other remarkable way.

A few days since a man by the name of Frederick Hyren, who was born Feb. 7th, 1812, in southern Finland, Russia, presented us with a work of his, entitled "Dispensation of the Fullness of Times," containing 178 pages of strange matter. He very properly calls it "a strange book." It contains "a sketch of his autobiography." He claims "it is written by Divine authority; . . . under the influence and guidance of the Holy Spirit." See page 4 of preface. He speaks as follows:

"When the book was ready to be printed, God declared to me plainly that this book is all right." Page two of preface. He was converted in 1835, when twenty-three years of age. On the 12th of Aug. 1846, he arrived in New York. He has been quite well educated, having studied twelve languages, and claims that the Lord has called him by direct revelation to a special mission, which is, "to form and establish the true, holy, and everlasting Christian church—the Millennial Church,—and to prepare the way of Jesus Christ for his second advent." Page 14. He claims to be under the direct influence of the Holy Spirit, and sets aside the teaching of the apostles, as inferior authority. He says the Lord told him to go bare-headed and barefoot; and not to use the rasor or the comb. He says the Lord revealed to him that the Bible and Paul are "the two great idols of all the churches" (p. 35); that "the works of Swedenborg are . . . almost divine" (p. 36); that he "shall be burnt alive, . . . and that the Lord will raise" him "again on the third day, even of the ashes." p. 38. He also speaks of what "the spirits told" him. He affirms that the Spirit spoke to him with a loud voice as follows: "Andreas Bernardus Smolnikar, formerly Professor of the University of Klagenfurth [German]; he and thou are the two only true servants of God in this country" (p. 48.) "A Spiritualist medium, being in a trance, spoke very highly both of me and of my book" (p. 48.)

When referring to the punishment of the wicked, he says the Lord spoke to him thus: "We must not understand that the fire will destroy the wicked; but, on the contrary, it will purify and cleanse them from all their pollutions." (p. 69.) He claims to have learned that marriage is of the devil; and says the Lord has taught him "that promiscuous intercourse between the sexes is not sinful or unlawful, if it is done in love and with mutual agreement" (pp. 98, 99); and that "of all the churches and societies of the world, the Oneida Community is the nearest Christian-like society" (p. 96.) In describing this society, he says: "there is no marriage, no division of any kind, but all are living together in a community as one family." He further says: "God does not care in what way men live; whether they have one or many wives, or whether their wives are lawfully married to them or not, if they only live in love and peace, and if they only agree among themselves." p. 15 second part. Such are some of the teachings in this "strange book," of which its author affirms that God said, "this book is all right."

It is most evident that he is being taught by a demon, instead of the Lord. It is the theology of the Devil, and not of Christ. It is the religion of the antichrist. Yet the spirit that he follows has required him to perform an almost intolerable amount of fasting in order to bring his body into the right condition for these remarkable revelations; also to live in the most abject manner, enduring a great amount of self-denial and hardship. One might reasonably conclude, after reading his book, that Satan wished to make him one of his special apostles.

Since looking over this "strange book," and talking with its strange author, we have received a communication for the Crisis, from J. S. Speights, of Baltimore, Md. Some of our brethren and sisters in Conn. are quite well acquainted with him. He says:—

"We have reached the end of the eleventh and last hour of the day's work, which has brought the penny, and opened the door of the new dispensation of life to all who are prepared to receive it.

Without arguments, or any apology, I proceed to give the facts as they now exist, as the 'true sayings of God' which will judge both the house of God, and the world at large. 'T is done. The end of all things has come. The prophets are fulfilled. All time is out. The days are ended. The door of the gospel tabernacle is closed. The mercy-seat of the gospel of atonement is vacated. The door is opened in heaven, or life-age. The invisible tabernacle into which the gospel age went by faith, is come down from God out of heaven. The tabernacle which God pitches, and not man, is on the earth, and he dwells here. The Lord God and the Lamb is the light thereof. The living order—or order which is to give life—is revealed. The key of life and death has been given. The throne is erected. The judgment has come. The marriage of the Lamb has taken place. The Bridegroom has come. The Lord has been revealed. The race of the human nature has been run. The circuit has been made of the compound of good and evil. The curse has been removed in a pair made divine. The race of divine beings commences. The ark has rested on the mount. Noah and his family of seven comes forth to till the new earth, and repeople it with inhabitants that shall never say I am sick."

"The Amen."

To the foregoing he appended the following, copied, as we suppose, from a letter sent some one, as descriptive of this man:

"The Devil's vicegerent, who has succeeded in inducing women to leave their husbands in Conn., and follow him; and he has had seven women follow him to Montreal, and broken up their families. It is the same that was at campmeeting two years ago. A. P. MOORE."

This may explain what Mr. Speights means by "his family of seven," who are to till "the new earth, and repeople it with inhabitants that shall never say I am sick." Perhaps it may be well to keep a little watch of this noted "seven," and see whether they have any more sickness.

Well, these are strange times. What next? When men depart from the Lord, and yield to the devices of Satan, it is astonishing to see what strange notions the deceiver gets into the minds of some. Satan flatters them with the idea that they are to perform some very important part in the programme about to be unfolded. He gives them strange revelations, dreams, or visions; and tells them they are direct from the Lord, or his angels. These visions and revelations usually relate to the subject in which the individual is specially interested; and about which he had not been fully satisfied, for want of light. The deceiver takes advantage of this state of mind, and plays all his arts to gain the confidence of his victim; giving excellent advice at first, and calling his attention to some portion of Scripture that might be used to blind the eyes of the one he could seduce away from Christ. After the Devil once gets their attention, he leads them step by step away from the narrow path, till they become completely absorbed in his new revelations, visions and dreams; the Bible is neglected, prayer omitted, they become exalted in their own estimation, and denounce with bitterness those who refuse to accept their strange notions. This class of people is rapidly increasing, thus showing the active workings of the powers of darkness.

This is the time for christians to gird on "the whole armor of God," that they may be able to stand against the wiles of the Devil.

WILL CHRIST BE "A PRIEST UPON HIS THRONE"?

One of my correspondents desires to know if there is not positive proof in Zech. 6: 13 that Christ will "be a Priest upon his throne," thus involving the doctrine of probation after the reign of Christ commences? We answer, No; it does not even hint such a thing, but refers to the then officiating high priest, as the context will show: "And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Take of them of the captivity, even of Heldai, of Tobijah, and of Jedaiah, which are come from Babylon, and come thou the same day, and go into the house of Josiah the son of Zephaniah; then take silver and gold, and make crowns, and set them upon the head of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest; and speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, saying, Behold the man whose name is the BRANCH; and he shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the Lord; even he shall build the temple of the Lord; and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne; and the council of peace shall be between them both. And the crowns shall be to Helem, and to Tobijah, and to Jedaiah, and to Hen the son of Zephaniah, for a memorial in the temple of the Lord. And they that are far off shall come and build in the temple of the Lord, and ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you. And this shall come to pass, if ye will diligently obey the voice of the Lord your God." Zech. 6: 9–15.

1. This refers to Joshua, the "high priest," here called the "branch." Some have incorrectly applied it to Christ, simply because Christ is sometimes called a "branch." On the same principle Ezekiel is called "son of man"; so is Christ; but that neither makes Ezekiel Christ, nor his type.

2. The building of the temple, here ascribed to Joshua, is a past event, having commenced under the joint control of Zerubbabel the governor, and Joshua the high priest, in the second year of Darius (Hag. 1: 14, 15); and God said, "The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house; his hands shall also finish it." Zech. 4: 9. This was accomplished jointly by Zerubbabel and Joshua, and was finished in the past, and does not belong to the future. W. S.

PAUL'S DESIRE FOR TRANSLATION.

An eastern correspondent inquires why I interpret Paul's "desire to depart and be with Christ" to signify a desire for translation personally, instead of a desire for the "return" of Christ. We reply—

1. We regard the criticisms in favor of rendering the original terms by "return" in this text quite defective, for which conclusion we wish to give our reasons at another time.

2. Paul himself speaks of this departing in contrast with abiding: "I know that I shall abide and continue with you all"—instead of departing, as he had desired; and such a statement is irreconcilable with the supposition that the return of Christ is meant instead of the departure of Paul; for it is not true that the return of Christ could thus be deferred, that Paul might remain longer with his brethren; nor could Paul remain with them instead of accepting Christ's return when due; in other words, Christ's return could neither be dispensed with, or postponed, like the departure here spoken of, all of which could be said of a coveted translation.

3. To "abide in the flesh," instead of being translated, or departing, sounds much better in an apostle's mouth, than to say, "To abide in the flesh is more needful for you" than the return of Christ. I opine the text needs no such tinkering. Paul desired translation, but did not expect it, but expected to remain with them. "In the flesh" simply means in person, as when it is said Christ was "put to death in the flesh"; so Paul's decision to remain with them in person is contrasted with his desire to depart in person, which, could it have been granted, would have been "far better" than a life of persecution, or the "gain" that death would have afforded him by exempting him from persecution. He did not choose death, nor a life of persecution, as his personal preference; but a third thing, "far better"—translation—though not granted nor expected. W. S.

CHRIST BORN TO BE A KING.

At the birth of Jesus, wise men came from the East to Jerusalem, inquiring, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? Being convinced that the Messiah was born, these wise men felt confident that he was destined to be the King. And this impression was in harmony with prophecy, for the angel Gabriel, in predicting the first advent of the Messiah, styles him "Messiah the Prince"—an heir to a throne; and about four hundred and eighty-three years later, the same angel affirmed, "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." In harmony with this, Jesus himself "witnessed a good confession" "before Pontius Pilate," in reply to Pilate's question, "Art thou a King?" Jesus confessed, "To this end was I born;" but in the same conversation, he affirmed, "My kingdom is not from hence"—not from this time onward. At some time, and in some locality, he must reign as King.

If he is simply to be King in heaven, over disembodied men, why need he ever have been born to be King? Would it not be more appropriate to have a bodiless King over bodiless subjects? A kingdom with a physical King, and immaterial subjects, would be a strange kingdom. But when we learn that our vile bodies are to be "changed" at his return from heaven, and "fashioned like unto his glorious body," and that "we shall reign on the earth," the plan looks harmonious and beautiful. With physical subjects to reign over, it was appropriate that Jesus should be "born to be a King." Soon may he "reign in Mount Zion," and be "King over all the earth." W. S.

A SUCCESSFUL MINISTRY.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, pastor of a large Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., gives a brief sketch of his "Twenty-five years in the Pulpit." He says these years "have been spent in unbroken labor, each day rounded with sound honest sleep." He had received 2527 persons into church fellowship, 1200 of whom were received on profession of faith. He adds: "During our whole ministry we have made it a rule never to let a week pass without at least one article of a moral or religious character—long or short—being sent to the press. These articles number 1800." He had also preached four thousand times, and delivered about as many public addresses. Dr. Cuyler was never more popular and useful as a minister and writer than at present.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 24th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

A CALL FROM EUROPE.

VERY DEAR SIR:—The awful signs of our times, and past and present events, call for a special edition of your paper for Europe, with agents for all your issues in London, Scotland and Ireland; as you may have a weekly sale here of ten thousand. While it pleases the Lord to "tarry," you have a field here spacious, and in the highest degree inviting and remunerative for immediate action, and for our united effort to your new plans for international action. Our loved and beloved Second Advent Christians of Boston would find in friends here the heartiest co-operation. We want from you a powerful and well directed lecturing and working agency, with a budget of all your issues at this important epoch; and never had you, dear sir, as one of the able directors of the Second Advent press, such a grand opportunity for united effort in Great Britain, and throughout the continental states generally, as you now have at this crisis. Millions in old Europe would be awakened to a becoming attitude, with an American agency; and why should you all in the States "stand idly by," while the United Kingdom and the Continent is spread out for Second Advent operations?

By the teaching we have been doomed to here, with the creeds of Christendom, so antagonistic to Second Advent action, we are far behind, and want your agency with all dispatch. The intense interest of the prophecies of Ezekiel, Daniel, and St. John, with the awful signs of our times, in the seeming nearness of the Redeemer's advent, furnish matter for your new plans for international action in all lands.

From your powerful pen a second series of addresses should be issued in your paper, directed to ministers of all denominations, in both hemispheres, as well also as to members of the churches. The attacks of the antichristian press also call for a prepared rejoinder, for they have been too long glorying in the anti-millenary controversies, and which, with the awful signs around us in almost every land, call for very different writing, with these divine visitations,—the state of things getting now alarming. The prophecies have been too long a dead letter in the anti-christian press, while their writers and defenders have borne reproach, although a vast ocean-full of deep gulfs have swallowed up, by the events of the day, all human wisdom.

The state of things in the Turkish empire, with the drying up of the Euphrates, seem to call for a special series from your pen, in your early impressions, with a series generally to the present Roman rulers, with a divine warning to take heed to coming events, seemingly now at hand. Let friends in the old world have your plans at length for international action by the press; for with your mammoth scheme, any amount can be raised, either in shares, or otherwise, for the press and general agencies. Pardon the suggestion of establishing a new monthly and quarterly in defense and vindication of the second advent of Christ.* The European sale of such issues would be immense, and attended with the most happy, the most beneficial, the most permanent results, while it pleases the Lord to "tarry." Yours, very dear and esteemed sir, in the "blessed hope,"

A BRITISH ADVENTIST.

TO THE FRIENDS OF N. Y. STATE.

Some months have passed since I have saluted you through the columns of "our paper"; but my heart and hands are still in this great work of spreading the news of salvation through a crucified and risen Savior. I am still in this State, and though I have removed to the city of Rochester, it is only a matter of convenience, as I still expect to travel as heretofore, laboring as an evangelist as the Lord, through his people, shall open the way before me. Our State campmeeting, which commences the eighth of June, is at hand. I purpose to be present during the meeting. I am expecting to see a greater number of our brethren and sisters together than I have ever seen on any other occasion. Come, ye lone and sad ones, long deprived the privilege of meeting with the people of your choice, surmount the rising difficulties and rally to the call, and new strength and courage will be gained to hold up the light of truth with a firmer hand and lighter heart.

I learn that our dear sister L. M. Stoddard, of Worcester, Mass., has accepted an invitation to visit this State; and if the Lord permit, will be at the campmeeting with me. Some of our friends may recall to mind the girl in her teens, who, many years ago, stood in one of the largest halls in this city, and witnessed before many people to the same truths which inspire her heart to-day. Though I have without exception received the sympathy and fellowship of my brethren in the ministry, during the four years past which I have spent in this State, yet my heart bounded with a new joy when I heard that one of my own sex was about to visit us. May God enable her to come in the fulness of the gospel of Christ, with balm for the weeping and wounded; words of hope for the wayward and sinful; and life for the helpless and dying; is the prayer of your sister in Christ,

E. S. JENNINGS.

Rochester, N. Y., May 26th, 1871.

COME TO THE FEAST.

WILLIAM A. FENN.

A new interest should be felt by every lover of truth in New York State, in view of the coming campmeeting. The large gatherings that have heretofore characterized our annual conferences warrant us in the anticipation of a good campmeeting, which is to be held in connection with our conference the 8th of June. Let not small hindrances keep any away from this feast. Come, and get strength and courage, and by your presence and aid encourage others. The cause of truth never stood better in N. Y. State than now. In union and co-operation, we can accomplish much.

We have lost much, as a people, from a lack of co-operation and mutual intercourse. Let us come together at our June campmeeting and conference en masse, and pray for the heavenly flame to warm every heart. Begin now to pray God to bless the meeting to the good of every attendant, and be sure to be there at an early day of the meeting, and make the meeting your special business; and you will doubtless carry home with you a sweet fragrance of divine love, and be better prepared to endure the temptations of these last days, than you will to stay at home. It is hoped that we may have the best meeting we ever held in the State, and that is hoping for much. As many well know, we have had some excellent meetings. Come in the name of Jesus; work for him; trust in him; and good will be done. Yours hoping and working.

THE ALBION CAMPMEETING.

This is the first regular campmeeting ever called by New York Adventists, and as it is to be a State Campmeeting, a large attendance is confidently expected. Come, then, dear brethren, from all parts of the Empire State—from eastern, northern southern, western, and central New York. Come praying that peace and heavenly wisdom may direct all our deliberations, and bless all our meetings. Very important business will be transacted. The draft of a new constitution will be submitted for adoption, and the State Conference will probably be divided into two or more quarterly conferences. Mr. Fields, of Rochester, will furnish tents of various sizes for families and societies, at a rental of from two and a half to six dollars for the week. Those desiring tents, should order them immediately. Address William A. Fenn, 63 Meigs St., Rochester, N. Y., stating the number and size of tents desired, and they will be sent to Albion in time for the first day of the meeting. In addition to the articles mentioned in Bro. Brown's notice, it would be well for each tent to have a saw, hammer, and hatchet. For the Committee,

JAMES H. WHITMORE.

P. S.—Albion is thirty miles west of Rochester, on the Niagara Falls branch of the New York Central R. R.

Correspondence.

From Sr. Emma L. Streeter.

Dear brethren and sisters in the Lord:—Although I have never attempted before to write anything for the perusal of the dear ones who read our dear paper, the Crisis, yet this evening my mind has been deeply impressed to pen a few lines for your perusal, and I pray God to aid me by his blessed Spirit, as I shall attempt so to do. My heart is with you in the great and blessed work of trying, if possible by God's help, to be the means of saving some poor soul. I am with you striving to gain a home in the kingdom, which I am looking for and expecting every day. Signs are thickening fast on every hand, and everything seems to say Jesus is coming again, and that soon. O, glorious thought! soon, if faithful, we shall enter into rest, and be free from all earth's trials and afflictions, and where parting scenes will have an end. Glory be to God most high. I never felt more like serving him than now. Although I have many trials to encounter, yet I feel to-night perfectly resigned to the will of God. Let it be what it may, anything that the Lord sees fit to let come upon me, will be for my best good; for "all things work together for good to them that love God," and I know I love him. He knows better what we need than we do; and is not such a God as this worth serving, and such a kingdom as he has gone to prepare worth living for? I am willing to become anything, or do anything that he requires of me, if I can but have a home in the kingdom at last. My whole being is in the work, and I often think, as I sit by the bedside of my dear sick Auntie (Theria B. Weaver), and see her suffering the most excruciating pain, lying in one position nearly all the time, unable to move scarcely at all, on account of its increasing her distress if she does move, or is moved at all; and then to see her have such terrible fits and spasms, as she often has, I feel like crying unto God to hasten his coming speedily; for, dear friends in Jesus, you never can know or think anything what her situation is.

Aunt Theria has lived in our family for nearly fifteen years; and in those long years she has suffered the most extreme pain and distress, beyond all expression; yet in all that suffering, not one word of complaint, or murmuring, or the least impatience, has she ever manifested in her most trying moments; but ever says, It's all right. "Thy will, O Lord, be done," is the language of her heart. She is perfectly reconciled to her lot. Sometimes I wonder how she can be, for it needs so much patience to bear what she has to hourly. It has been a good example for all of us, to see her christian meekness and patience under the rod of affliction. It is a great comfort to her (as well as the rest of us) to receive visits from God's dear saints, for we have none of like faith near us to come in and talk with her. She feels very grateful for the least favor, and especially to those who take the pains to come and see her. Jesus has said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

Are we trying to do all the good we can to those around us? Let us talk in love and meekness, and manifest the sweet and blessed Spirit of Jesus, for without his Spirit we are none of his. Let our hearts be so full of love that no harsh nor bitter words can escape our lips, and, if we do not all see alike on doctrine, let us not get up that bitter feeling that none are good but those who believe as we do. Let us be patient toward all; willing to bear and forbear. All the professed followers of Jesus need that spirit of love. Let us have it, and show to others that we possess what we profess. May the blessing of God ever rest upon all the dear saints, is the earnest desire of your sister, who is waiting, watching, hoping, praying, for a home in the kingdom.

North Dana, Mass.

The Turmoil in Paris.

Humanity sickens and civilization stands aghast over the scenes of carnage and death enacted in unhappy Paris. Pernicious as has been its example, and deeply as it has offended against the cause of law and order, and against Christianity, no one—no Christian at least—could ask for it so terrible a punishment. But having sown the wind it must reap the whirlwind. The Communists, maddened by defeat, and rendered desperate by the prospect before them, seem determined that their overthrow shall be signalized by the destruction of Paris and the ruin of her people. Concentrated in the narrow limits of Belleville, where the insurrection gathered its first adherents, and occupying the Place Vendome, they have prepared to resist to the last calling to their aid the torch of the incendiary, and with cannon, mitrailleuse and rifle sweeping with the besom of death the very heart of the town. Undaunted the troops of the Government press forward, constantly gaining ground and narrowing the circle of resistance. The sacrifice of life must be terrible on both sides. Some idea of the fierceness of the strife and the horrors of the situation may be gathered by the statement in a dispatch sent from outside of Paris last evening, to the effect that the wounded in the streets are unattended and the dead unburied, lying where the messengers of death overtook them. As if these horrors were not enough, the fire fiend is invoked to add his forces thereto. Incendiaries, supplied with chemical combustibles and petroleum, apply the torch to palaces, churches and public edifices. Where these agencies are lacking, powder and flame are called into play. And so, amid cannon, sword and flame, the capital of France is desolated, and the wealth, the art productions and the labor of centuries swept away almost at a breath. The palace of the Luxembourg has been partially blown up. Whether its art treasures have been destroyed is uncertain; many of them were removed during the German siege, and may not have been returned.

At last accounts, the four walls only of the Palace Royal were standing; the Louvre, two-thirds destroyed; the Hotel de Ville, riddled with cannon balls; the Tuileries, saturated with petroleum, rapidly burning, McMahon watching the spectacle from the Place Vendome, from which he had just driven the insurgents; the Place de la Concorde, terribly injured, and the Hotel of Ministry and Finance, burning fiercely. Fires are raging on nearly every street. No wonder a savage feeling is reported to possess the government troops. It is said no quarter is given, although the inhabitants, who manifest great joy at the change, are treated well by the Versaillists. The insurgents are reported fighting like fiends, while the streets are smeared with gore and littered with the debris of the battles and the conflagrations. Meanwhile, an examination of the insurgent prisoners taken reveals the presence of many women and children who, the account reads, maintained a defiant attitude, as though "the eyes of Europe were on them," showing a ridiculous side to this terrible holocaust of death—this horrible mosaic of human passions and frailties.

M. Thiers has issued a circular to-day, in which he sums up the events of the past three days. He says: "We are masters of Paris, except a small portion, which will be occupied to-day. The Louvre has been saved." He claims to have captured ten thousand prisoners, and says the streets of Paris are strewn with insurgent corpses. He thinks France will yet be happy in the midst of her misfortunes. As M. Thiers is something of an optimist, his hopeful view is not likely to be generally shared, nor is it certain that he will occupy at the early hour he has announced the last stand of the insurgents.

This state of things cannot last much longer. The preponderance of the Government forces must soon overcome the desperate fury of the insurgents, and end the conflict. The worst, we think, is over. The dying throes of the Commune may last for another forty-eight hours, for it has shown wonderful vitality; but but beyond that nothing less than a miracle, seemingly, can prolong its miserable life.—Boston Journal.

Obituaries.

BERRY. Died in Farmington, N. H., April 27th, 1871, of heart disease, Sr. Susan, wife of Bro. Andrew Berry, aged fifty-five years.

Our sister gave her heart to the Lord at the age of twelve years. The few last years of her christian journey have been sweetened and cheered by the blessed hope that Christ would soon come, and the dead be raised to life and immortality. The kindness of her generous heart was manifested toward the poor and needy, and her motherly feeling toward all was such that it could hardly be said that she had an enemy. Little did we think when we saw her at the last meeting of the State conference, that it would be her last, but so it was. The Wednesday night following, she retired to rest as well as usual. The next morning she died without being able to speak to loved ones.

Our brother and the children are all united in the same blessed hope of soon meeting where there will be no sad partings. Funeral services attended by the writer, assisted by Elder Park, pastor of the Baptist church. A large congregation of sympathizing friends listened to the words:—"The righteous hath hope in his death." We then laid her in the cemetery to rest until the glorious resurrection morning. J. G. SMITH.

HOLMES. Died in Plymouth, Mass., April 28th, 1871, Miss Alice T., daughter of Sr. Margaret S. Holmes, of Plymouth, Mass.

Alice loved life. She did nor want to die. Yet she could say, "Not my will, but thine be done." We have every reason to believe that Alice sleeps in Jesus. The funeral services were attended by the writer, assisted by Eld. Taylor. Text, Ps. 119: 74, "They that fear thee will be glad when they see me; because I have hoped in thy word."

J. R. BOYNTON.

BROWN. Died in Boscawen, N. H., May 16th, Sr. Mary Brown, wife of Bro. James P. Brown, aged thirty-four years, three months, and seventeen days.

Sr. Brown gave her heart to the Lord last winter. She believed in the soon coming of Jesus to awake all that sleep in him. May God bless the dear husband and children, and may they all meet where death can never enter. SIMEON ROBY.

MCLANE. Died in New York City, April 3d, James W., son of Bro. and Sr. McLane.

James was a moral young man, and before his death became entirely resigned to the divine will, giving evidence of a change of heart, which was a great relief to his friends, who mourn not as those without hope. The rooms were crowded with sympathizing friends, who were addressed by the writer from Luke 23: 42. H. A. KING.

MORSE. Died in Effingham, N. H., April 23d, 1871, Sr. Abbie A. Morse, aged sixty-two years and eight months.

The writer endeavored to speak comforting words at the funeral from Rev. 7: 17.

MARK STEVENS.

TOWLE. Died in Effingham, N. H., Aug., 1870, Tristrom C. Towle, aged seventy-seven years and eight months.

April, 1871, Betsey, wife of Tristrom C. Towle, aged sixty-six years and nine months.

They both died in the triumph of faith. They leave a son of like precious faith. Words of comfort were spoken at the funerals by the writer, from Job 14: 10, and Rev. 21: 4.

MARK STEVENS.

KINGSBURY. Died in Rawsonville, Jamaica, Vt., April 9th, 1871, Ebenezer S. Kingsbury, aged twenty-eight years and eight months.

Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. O. Pease.

Z. T. WOOD.

HAYES. Died in Cumminsville, Ohio, May 8th, of consumption, Clarence D., son of Seely and Sarah E. Hayes, aged five years and four months.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

LONDON, May 23. A dispatch from Versailles Monday evening says the Versaillist troops have occupied a station of the Versailles Railway on the Boulevard Mont Parnasse, within a short distance of the Luxembourg, and that Gen. Clinchamp has turned the insurgent position at the Tuileries and made from 8000 to 10,000 prisoners. A later dispatch says the Versaillists have occupied the Place Vendome, the Tuilleries and the Hotel de Ville.

VERSAILLES, May 23. Advices from Paris report that there has been a terrible fire of cannon and musketry since daybreak this morning in the direction of Montmartre. The isolation of Paris by the Prussians is now complete. Gen. Dombrowski has been wounded and endeavored to make his escape from the Versailles troops, but was prevented by the Prussians. The enthusiasm among the delivered population of Paris is immense. Battlions of the friends of order are reorganizing. The Mayors of Paris assemble at Chateau Murette to-day.

OUTSIDE OF PARIS, May 23. The Versailist flag now floats over Montmartre. The whole city is evidently in possession of the forces of the Assembly.

May 24. The barricades in Place Vendome and Place de la Concorde have not yet been carried, and the barricades at Belleville still hold out against the Government troops. The insurgents, however, are discouraged by the success of the Versaillists. The losses of the latter yesterday were heavy.

VERSAILLES, May 24. The Louvre and Tuilleries are burning. They were ignited by the Federalists with Petroleum. Gen. Dombrowski was wounded and has been captured and imprisoned at St. Denis.

Billionary, the Communist Minister of War, was killed in yesterday's battle.

The insurgents have fired the palaces of the Legion of Honor and the Council of the State on the southern side of the Seine and opposite the Gardens of the Tuileries. Other palaces are also burning. The Versaillists have advanced their left to Belleville, their centre to the Palace of the Louvre and Halle Centrale, and their right to the Observatory. The fumes and smoke of Petroleum pervade the city.

LONDON, May 25. The latest dispatches from Paris say that Luxembourg has been partially blown up.

The Palais Royal is still burning. Only one third of the Louvre has been saved.

The fighting continues at the Hotel de Ville, and at the terminus of the Northern Railroad.

McMahon, with his staff, has removed to the Place Vendome.

A savage feeling exists among the Versaillist troops. Four prisoners were shot because they sat down. Rochefort was brought to Versailles handcuffed. He had five thousand francs and much jewelry in his possession. He refused to answer the questions which were put to him by Picard. Thiers is afraid to pardon him, and demands the committee to exercise the prerogative of mercy.

The fighting to-day in the Boulevard Haussmann and the Faubourg St. Honore was very severe. Many houses are filled with the dead and wounded of both sides. The Hotel of Ministry and Finance are burning fiercely. The four walls only of the Palais Royal are standing. The British Embassy building is much damaged. The Audit Office of Archives is burnt. Place de la Concorde is terribly injured. No quarter is given. The Versaillists behave well to the inhabitants. A fire is raging in nearly every street.

PARIS, May 24. During the last few days ten thousand prisoners have marched through Versailles, including a company of Amazons of the Seine and a battalion of patriotic children. Mounted gensd'armes forced the Amazons, some of whom were handcuffed, to walk under the broiling sun. Their appearance caused much mirth, but they maintained a defiant look. Even the children seemed to feel that the eyes of Europe were on them. Many old men were among the prisoners.

The Northern Railway station is in the hands of the Versaillists.

There is a heavy bombardment on Paris from the barricade on top of Rue Lafayette.

The capture of the Place Vendome made the Tuileries untenable, and the insurgents saturated it with petroleum and set it on fire.

The insurgents are still fighting like fiends.

The Eastern faubourg population seem mad with joy, and the tri-color waves everywhere. The streets are quiet and the Versailles troops are orderly.

The hunt for the Commune leaders has been begun, and the police are searching the houses, rooms and cellars. Paris is enveloped in a dense pale smoke, and terribly damaged. The streets are smeared with blood and littered with debris.

VERSAILLES, May 25. Thiers has to-day issued a circular of information to the provinces as follows: "We are masters of Paris, except a small portion which will be occupied to-day. The Louvre has been saved, the Hotel of the Minister of Finance has been partially burned, and the Tuileries and Palace du Quay D'Orsay, in which the Council of State holds its sessions wholly is destroyed. We have already 12,000 prisoners and shall have 20,000. The streets of Paris are strewn with insurgent corpses. Our loss is small. The army has behaved admirably. Justice will soon be satisfied and France be happy in the midst of her own misfortunes."

The Archbishop Darboy, ten hostages and nearly fifty priests were murdered in cold blood at Mazas prison Tuesday night.

May 26. The following leading insurgents have been shot: Valles, Amoreux, Brunel, Rigault, Dombrowski and Bonsquet. The report of the arrest of Pigot, Delescluze and Cluseret, is unconfirmed. It is rumored that all the hostages held by the insurgents are safe. The following named public buildings have been destroyed: The Palace of the Tuileries, Ministry of Finance, Prefect of Police, Court of Accounts, Palace of the Legion of Honor, Barracks on the Quay d'Orsay, Hotel de Ville, and Mont de Piete. The following have been saved: Ministries of Marine, Interior, Foreign Affairs and Agriculture; the Pantheon, Ecole des Bearux of Arts, Ecole Militaire, Bank of France, Credit Fancier, and the churches generally.

Marshal McMahon has sent to the insurgents the last summons to surrender, in which he says that all who may be hereafter captured with arms in their hands will be shot.

The collections in the Louvre have all been saved, except the library, in which a great many valuable books were destroyed. The National Library and Grand Livres are safe.

The troops to-day surprised and shot on the spot a large company of women engaged in pouring petroleum into cellars, and, afterward throwing in lighted fuses. Fires continue in many places.

A remnant of the Communists attempted to cut away toward Pantin, but were closely pursued by the troops, who slaughtered them without mercy.

ST. DENIS, May 27. The foreign firemen have entered Paris. The conflagrations are decreasing. The workshops of the Versailles railway have been burned.

OUTSIDE OF PARIS, May 28. All is quiet within the city, not a shot has been fired since 10 o'clock this morning. The firemen have the flames under control.

The Prussians at Romainville took a thousand prisoners, including several armed women, on Saturday evening. All insurgents who come within their lines are disarmed and placed under guard.

Provision trains are entering the city. There is great rejoicing within and without the city over the termination of the struggle.

VERSAILLES, May 28. The remaining insurgents surrendered unconditionally at nine o'clock this morning. The slaughter on Saturday night was awful. Altogether the suppression of the rebellion has cost over 60,000 lives and the destruction of one-third of Paris.

PARIS, May 23. The fighting at Belleville, Menilmontant and Pere la Chaise was desperate and no quarter was given to man, woman or child. Military law has been established in the city. Executions are progressing at Champs de Mars, Park de Monceaux and Hotel de Ville. From fifty to one hundred insurgents are shot at a time. No one is permitted to leave Paris without a pass signed by McMahon. The troops, fearing incendiary fires, have caused all cellar gratings and openings to be sealed.

Among the hostages shot by the insurgents were the Abbes Sura and Degnerry, Jesuit Fathers Olivain, Carbert and Bangy, the Abbe Allard and twenty gens'darmes.

Three thousand prisoners arrived here yesterday. The disarmament of the National Guards is proceeding, and multitudes of people have been arrested.

The population of Paris are enthusiastic over their deliverance. Nearly every member of the Commune was shot or executed immediately after being captured.

Religious Items.

—— The Roman Catholic Church is reported to own $50,000,000 worth of property in the State of New York.——Bishop Clark died at Cincinnati, at 9.20 evening of May 23d. Members of his family and Bishop Janes only were present. Bishop Clark was born at Mt. Desert, Me., Feb. 25th, 1812.——The Non-Episcopal Methodist Conference at Pittsburg, by a decided vote, has refused to authorize the ordination of women for the ministry. The conference has decided to remove the Book Concern from Springfield, Ohio, to Pittsburg, next September.

☞ Soap suds are good manure for grape vines. Downing says that he has seen the Isabella grape produce three thousand fine clusters well-ripened fruit in a season, by the use of manure and soap suds from the weekly wash. The effect of soap-suds on various plants is very remarkable.

Notices.

The Springfield National Campmeeting.

The Committee of this meeting are requested to meet at Springfield, Wednesday, June 7th, at 9 o'clock A. M. GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

Notice.

The Lord willing, a feast and supper will be given to the poor, maimed, lame and blind, by Lewis Bean, Jay, Bean's Corner, Me., Thursday, June 29th, at six o'clock P. M., in connection with a grove and basket meeting, which will be held at the same place, and onward over the 4th of July. We wish our brethren and sisters to make special effort to help the needy to attend this feast and meeting. A general invitation is given, and provision will be made for all. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting, praying the Lord's blessing to strengthen the weak and awaken sinners. Those coming on the cars will stop at Wilton Depot, two miles from the grove. Conveyance will be in readiness by notifying Lewis Bean. The day train is due at five o'clock P. M. Will our brethren bring their tents? Preaching brethren are requested and expected to attend. Come one, come all. Brethren will call on Lewis Bean, A. J. Riggs, Rufus Davis, Arnold Ireland, E. J. Bean, and others. Per order of the church,

H. B. SEVEY.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in Bartlett, in Elder J. B. Deering's grove, where it was last year, commencing June 21st, to hold over Sunday, and longer if the brethren think best. We give a cordial invitation to the preaching brethren to come and help us. A good work has commenced here, and sinners are inquiring the way to life. We pray that some more may be gathered in before it shall be too late; for we believe the day is not far off, when he who is to come will come, and will not tarry. Come, all ye who love the Lord. Come from the north, the south, the east, and the west, and help us.

H. PARKER, JR.
J. B. DEERING.

New York State Campmeeting.

As it has been announced that we are to have a campmeeting the coming month, in this State, I would inform all who intend to be present with us, and desire to rent or purchase tents, that such tents can be procured at Rochester. Below you will find the sizes of the tents, with price, for one week.

Tent 24×30 feet one week	$13.00
" 16×24 " " "	8.00
" 12×17 " " "	4.50
" 9×12 " " "	2.50
" 7×9 " " "	2.00

Select your tent, and then send your money to N. McCullock, Rochester, N. Y., who will see that they are sent to the camp-ground, at Albion; also send fifty cents extra for freight. Now, brethren, let us make a little sacrifice for the cause of truth. Come, fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters. Let all who will, come up to this feast of fat things. Pray for the meeting, that the spirit of God may arrest the sinner, and that some may be converted to the truth of God. JAS. E. WELLS.

Notice.

The Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground, at New Hartford, Butler, Co., Iowa, commencing the 22nd day of June, 1871, and hold until the 3d of July. Brethren and sisters, and all who can, come to this meeting. We are anticipating a great blessing from the Lord. The prospect is the best this year for a good meeting that we have ever had. There are to be many ministers present. Bro. C. C. Ramsay, of Chicago, will be with us through the meeting again this year. Hay, straw, and tent-frames furnished free of charge.

ALONZO RAYMOND, Sec. of Campmeeting Board.

In connection with the above meeting, the Iowa Christian Conference will hold its fifteenth annual session. Let ministers and delegates be present. Ministers are required by the constitution to report by letter, if not present. I cannot say positively when the conference will sit; probably on the 27th and 28th of June, or as may be thought best for the interest of the meeting. All are cordially invited to come who can.

JOS GILDERSLEEVE, President.
ALONZO RAYMOND, Clerk.

New York Annual Conference.

The especial attention of all the Advent Christian Churches of New York is called to the importance of immediate action in appointing delegates, and taking the quarterly collection for the approaching annual session. Important business relative to the new constitution, the State tents, etc., will come up. Let no church fail of proper representation. We hope a healthy collection will be sent in to encourage the work. A few strong hands are needed to help put up the large tents Wednesday (June 7th), and all are requested to pray for the blessing of God upon the entire meeting.

B. P. STEVENS, President.
WM. E. BROWN, Sec.

Iowa State Campmeeting.

Partial arrangements are made to secure the Chicago Christian Mission tent, also the Iowa Mission tent, which will give us a larger range of accommodations, as we learn that there are many calculating to attend this meeting, who have not before. We trust all the preachers will come and attend this feast. To secure this, the brethren at New Hartford propose to provide provisions for those who may need, to cook for their families, and other churches may assist in this if they can. Be sure to provide things necessary for yourselves to camp. The meeting will commence June 22d. The campmeeting proper on the Monday following, and continue till July 3d. Also see notice.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Meetings at Bonny Eagle, Me.

For the information of friends residing at a distance from Bonny Eagle, Me., who may desire to meet with us occasionally, I will say that Eld. C. H. Sweet, of Rhode Island, having been invited to settle here, has decided to come and remain as long as may seem duty. Preaching every Sunday, at 10½ A. M., and 1 P. M.; Sunday school at 9¼ A. M. Prayer meeting at 5 P. M.; also Tuesday and Friday evenings. All these services are held in the Chapel. T. J. ROMERY, Ch. Elder.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting held in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday, June 29th, to continue over the following Sabbath, as Brn. James Thorp and H. E. Austin may arrange. J. W. TAYLOR.

A. P. MOORE.

Notice.

The Maine Westerly Quarterly Conference will be held at Hartford, Me., commencing Thursday, June 8th, at five o'clock P. M., to continue over the following Sabbath. It is hoped there will be a general attendance of all the faithful in that section of the State. JESSE GAY.

E. M. HAGGETT.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord permit, there will be a grove meeting in Belchertown, Mass., Dark Corner school district, Sunday, June 11th. Pilgrims in adjacent towns are invited to the feast. Some four or five are to be baptized. M. L. CURTIS.

Notice.

The Mechanic Falls Campmeeting Committee will meet on the camp-ground, Thursday, June 1st, to make arrangements for the coming meeting. A few men and tools might be well used that day.

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

Notice.

Bro. Enoch Morrill is to take charge of the Mass. Conference tent, and will be ready to set it up any time after the fifth of June. If the brethren are ready for a meeting at Littleton, or at any other place, write me immediately, and we will make arrangements as soon as possible, and the tent shall be forthcoming. L. BOUTELL.

Notice.

The Mass. A. C. Conference will hold its next quarterly session in Salem, Mass., commencing Tuesday evening, June 6th, and holding over the following Sabbath. It is hoped that the preaching brethren will make a special effort to attend this meeting, and come filled with a spirit of labor, so that the glad tidings of a soon coming Savior may be echoed throughout the length and breadth of the city. And will not the brethren from the adjoining churches endeavor to attend en masse, so that this gathering may result in good to all, and bring glory and honor to God?

C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

Maine S. A. C. Christian Conference.

EXTRA SESSION.

As the executive board has been petitioned to call an extra session of the Maine Second Advent Christian Conference, to be holden in Portland, in Union Hall, on Free Street, and as there are several items of important business to be attended to; we therefore appoint to meet at Union Hall, Portland, Tuesday, June 13th, at two P. M. A full attendance of the ministers and delegates is desired. Remember, each church or society is entitled to one delegate, and one additional for every ten members, duly chosen and furnished with certificates. Come, brethren, praying that the Lord may direct us in all our work, and make the conference a blessing to his cause. Let all collections for the Maine Mission and Tent cause be reported at conference.

I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

Vermont Tent-Meeting.

The Vermont tent will be pitched at Woodstock, Vt., June 14th, and meetings will be held day and evening, as long as duty may require. We want a general rally of the King's forces from far and near. Brn. Grant, Couch, and Mathewson are expected. Particulars soon. H. F. CARPENTER.

New York Campmeeting and Annual Conference.

These meetings will be held in Stephen N. Whitney's grove, one mile and a half south east of Albion, commencing on Thursday, June 8th, 1871, and to continue one week. All trains stop at Albion, and ample arrangements will be made for the transportation of persons and baggage to and from the camp-ground.

The business of conference, which is rather important for this session, election of officers, etc., will be disposed of in the morning and A. M. sessions, as early in the meeting as possible. Let all ministers and delegates be as early at the meeting as they can. The large new State Tent will be put upon the ground for dedication. The old "State Tent" and the "Lord's Tent" will also be on the ground for the accommodation of strangers, and such as cannot well supply themselves with family tents. Let none forget overcoats, thick shawls, quilts, and such other articles of clothing and bedding as are necessary for camping out.

It is expected that as many as can will associate themselves in family tents, providing themselves with board, etc. But there will be a small boarding tent, though sufficient to supply all those that cannot arrange for themselves, at reasonable rates.

WM. E. BROWN,
LAUREN GRINNELL,
A. RIGGS,
N. WITHINGTON,
N. MCCULLOCK, } Committee.

Wisconsin Campmeeting.

This meeting is to be held at Prairie du Sac (Upper Sauk), Sauk Co., on the old camp-ground, beginning on the 4th of June. We hope to witness a large gathering of pilgrims. Come with tents, if possible. All coming by R. R. between Milwaukee and Prairie du Chien will stop at Mazomanie, and take stage ten miles to the meeting. Those coming over the R. R. between Milwaukee and La Crosse, can take a steamboat every other day at Portage City, or a stage daily at Kilbourn City, direct to the meeting.

Wisconsin friends will please, so far as possible, to come in time to pitch tents on Saturday, June 3d. Fare from Mazomanie, by stage, only 25 cts. Usually boats leave Portage City for Sauk on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. We wish to begin on Sunday morning with a full grown campmeeting, at high water mark.

O. S. KNAPP,
P. W. MATTS, } Committee.
WM. SHELDON,

Dedication.

The Advent Christian Chapel, in North Carver, Mass., will be dedicated to the Lord on Friday, June 9th, at 1½ o'clock P. M. Meetings to continue over Lord's day. Bro. Grant intends to remain with us during the meetings to preach the word. A cordial invitation is given to the friends abroad to meet with us on that occasion. There will be conveyance from Middleboro, on arrival of cars from Boston and New Bedford, on the morning of dedication. W. E. HATHAWAY.

Minnesota Campmeeting.

This meeting will be held at Kasota, beginning June 26th, and closing Sunday evening, July 2nd. Kasota is a station on the St. Paul and Sioux City R. R., about three miles above St. Peter. The Winona and St. Peter R. R. also (which is just completed) runs within half a mile of the camp-ground, making this point the most convenient for a general gathering from the different parts of the State. We hope to announce soon the arrangements for half fare tickets, and other particulars. EDWIN T. HIMES, Chairman of Com.

Wisconsin Annual Conference.

The Wisconsin Conference will convene in connection with the State campmeeting at Prairie du Sac, and hold its first session on the 10th of June. Let the churches elect their delegates in time, and let all ministers who wish to unite come in season. Members and churches unable to attend, will please report by letter to the Secretary in season for the meeting. WM. SHELDON, Secretary.

Tent-Meetings.

Those wishing tent-meetings in the State of New York, are requested to write me at South Butler, N. Y., as soon as convenient, in order that early arrangements may be made. Those wishing meetings in the south and west part of the State, will please inform me before the State Campmeeting, so that arrangements can be made at that meeting. It is expected that Bro. Miles Grant will be at some of the meetings. B. P. STEVENS.

Conference.

The Advent Conference of Nova Scotia will hold its next annual meeting at Bear River, Digby Co., Nova Scotia, commencing Friday, June 16th. A general invitation is extended to all, especially to preaching brethren. The churches are particularly requested to send delegates.

J. J. WOODWORTH.

Notice.

I would say that the committee chosen by the N. H. Advent Christian Conference to meet with the brethren at Great Falls, have attended to their duty. The result is, there is a goodly number that have come together at Franklin Hall, as a church of Christ, by taking the Bible as their standard, and recognizing New Testament officers. Any of our preaching brethren who can preach to them the word of life, can correspond with the Great Head of the church, and with J. T. Hodgdon, Great Falls. For the Com., J. G. SMITH.

Going West.

We are intending to go west, as far as Minnesota, the last of June or first of July, to spend perhaps two months. If the brethren in Montreal, or elsewhere, on the Grand Trunk R. R. from Maine to Chicago, would like to have us spend a Sunday with them and preach, as we go and come, and will notify us in season, we will arrange to call on them, as we may be able, and will give notice in the Crisis when we will come.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Request.

Will Bro. S. K. Southmayd please give the readers of the Crisis an account of his miraculous conversion from infidelity to evangelical christianity, as by so doing it might, under God, be instrumental in bringing others to the light, who are now infidel in sentiment. M. A. B.

Notice.

I supplied a number of brethren with works at campmeetings last year, and those who can possibly send me what is due by mail, in June, I wish they would do so, as I am much in debt for printing, and ought to pay up. If any can aid me in throwing off the unpleasant burden of being in debt, it will be thankfully received. Age and health prevent my obtaining means to live and pay debts as formerly. Direct to J. BLAIN, Buffalo, N. Y.

German Tracts.

I will send my German Tracts gratis (except postage), to any one who wants them for himself, or to distribute. I have a good supply. Send your orders to L. RECKER, 1006 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at WHITE & BAUER'S.

NEW TRACTS.

WHO ARE SADDUCEES? OR, TRUTH VINDICATED. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Sadduceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By GEO. THOMSON.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A COLPORTEUR'S NOTES, by John B. Wadsworth, Mempais, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. AG'T.

JUST PUBLISHED.

By the Advent Christian Publication Society, a new Tract, entitled, "The Judgment Impending: Prophecy and Chronology converging to one Grand Culmination." By Bro. L. T. Cunningham. 52 pp. Price, 8 cents per copy. Postage, 2 cts. 75 cts. per dozen. $5.00 per one hundred. AG'T.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. LIFE AND DEATH THEOLOGY: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. IMMATERIALISM: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. DEATH AND THE DEAD, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. THE COMING JUDGMENT: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

NOTHING TO FEAR.

MRS. S. L. REED.

Though the way be dark and dreary,
  On, still onward, we must go;
Heavy-laden hearts and weary,
  Drinking from the depth of woe.
Never stop to weigh thy sorrow,
  For it is of transient birth;
It will leave thee on the morrow,
  Clinging to its parent earth.

March right onward to the city,
  There is nothing left to fear;
For thou hast no need of pity,
  Walking with the Leader near.
Softly, over rocks and mountains,
  Through the desert waste and sea,
Straight he leadeth to the fountain,
  Flowing through eternity;

Near, to keep thy foot from sliding
  Down the dark and slippery way;
With the golden moments gliding
  Down to never ending day.
See, the golden gates are open,
  Waiting for thine entrance there;
Hear, the gracious words are spoken,
  Thine the city bright and fair.

SAN FRANCISCO.

EDITOR "CRISIS":—Seeing in your valuable paper some letters from California, I infer you will be willing to receive further communications respecting the progress of the work of God here. Without further preface, therefore, I proceed to inform you, and through you your numerous readers, that God's work has recently received a powerful impetus in this state generally, but more particularly in this city. "It never rains but it pours," is an old adage that has been verified in our religious experience here. At the beginning of this year, we had the first installment in the person of our esteemed brother, Elder Grant, who worked so indefatigably. Just after his departure, our city was favored by a visit from Lieutenant Craig, of the Royal Antrim Artillery. This gentleman is connected with the Young Men's Christian Association, and also with several missions in London. He is, however, an efficient, but unostentatious worker. But I do not mention him because of any notoriety that attaches to him; but because of the important fact that he is but one of a number of English noblemen and gentlemen who have counted themselves "of no reputation," and come out on the Lord's side. Associated with him in his "labors of love" in England have been Lord Radstock, Marquis of Cholmondeley, the Earl of Cavan, Admiral Fishbourne, Lord Farnham, Mr. Slewellyn Saunderson, Hon. Henry Noel, Lieut. General Alexander, Mr. Somerset, Saunderson, Mr. John Gosset, Mr. Wilbraham Taylor, Mr. S. Blackwood, and several others. Accustomed, as we are in this country, to hear the English aristocracy decried as a lot of affected good-for-nothings, it is really a matter of agreeable surprise to find that gentlemen of such distinction as those named above are laying aside their hereditary honors to engage in what, viewed from a worldly point of view, is the most uninviting occupation that can be found—preaching the gospel of Christ.

It ought surely to be a convincing proof of the reality of the religion of Jesus, when gentlemen with incomes of $150,000 a year, deliberately give up their worldly pleasures to preach the gospel. Can even the most fertile imagination of the sceptic assign any motive to these men, other than a firm belief in the divinity of the gospel they preach? Decidedly not.

Quite lately we had a grand State Sunday School Convention, held at San Jose, in which Dr. Vincent of New York, D. L. Moody of Chicago, "the singing pilgrim," and other notables took part. It was in every sense a great success; and the important work of Sunday school teaching has doubtless received a very decided impetus from it.

Still more recently, we have been having services conducted in Sacramento, by a delegation of the "national campmeeting association." Not having been to these meetings myself, I enclose you an account of them, which I clip from the "Spectator." Their services have, I understand, been crowned with much success in Sacramento; and to-day they begin to hold services between Santa Clara and San Jose. On the 20th instant they open in this city, and doubtless they will have large audiences.

The present year has brought with it an unusual degree of religious activity; and there seems to be an increasing impression in the minds of men that the advent of our Savior is not far remote. Several of the persons who have accepted the doctrines so ably preached by Elder Grant, have formed a society by themselves, for the purpose of having these doctrines preached to the exclusion of every thing which they deem unscriptural. Though at present few in number, they will doubtless increase rapidly.

The rains have been unusually light in California this year, and fears are entertained of short crops, and consequent general depression. Even in this respect, however, we may find that "God is better to us than all our fears." It will afford me pleasure to inform you that such is the fact; but much greater pleasure to be able to state that the good seed sown in the hearts of the people here, is bringing forth an abundant harvest, to the honor and glory of our great Redeemer.

GAEL.

San Francisco, Cal., May 11th, 1871.

The following is the article from the Spectator:—

"THE TABERNACLE."

On Friday, the 14th ultimo, a huge canvas tent, similar in shape and structure to tents used by circus companies, was reared on the public plaza in Sacramento, and furnished with seats, platforms, pulpit, altar, and all needed arrangements for religious worship, with the words at the head of this article in large letters conspicuously placed on the outside. Such a structure, in that place, very naturally suggested to many minds the circus with all its accompaniments. Hence a very common interrogatory among outsiders, "Have you been to the circus?" when wishing to ascertain whether their acquaintances had been attending the meetings that were held in this tent. The services are being conducted by a delegation from the "National Camp Meeting Association," presided over by Rev. J. S. Inkship, of Baltimore. They have three sermons, preached alternately by the six or seven ministers of the association. Their theme is indicated by the short sentence, "Holiness to the Lord," inscribed immediately over the stand. The opening service was on Saturday afternoon, and up to the following Friday night, every sermon and exhortation (relying upon information obtained from others as to some few of those which I did not hear), was upon the subject of entire and immediate sanctification—in what it consists, with its advantages, and the method of obtaining it.

The preachers are plain, quiet, meek looking, unostentatious men, who seem to make no effort at any display of learning, or of oratory, but seeking a clear and forcible presentation of practical Bible truth, urging those who hear to accept, and act upon it at once. And whether in the morning meeting with a few hundreds, mostly professing christians present, or before the immense crowd of several thousands at night, four-fifths of whom perhaps are non-professors, the theme is the same—entire and immediate sanctification. For this purpose professing christians are invited to the altar at each service with as much regularity as are penitent seekers after salvation at our camp meeting. Sinners and backsliders are thus far referred to incidentally, rather than being the direct objects of solicitude and appeal.

It has been thought, and often said, that nothing of a truly religious nature and tendency can attract, and hold the attention of any considerable portion of the excitable, worldly-minded, pleasure-loving people of California. And some of us know, from long and laboriously acquired experience, how difficult this is. But this meeting has attracted, and for one week at least held the crowd. It is estimated that "The Tabernacle" will seat between two and three thousand persons, and it is full every night, and often to its utmost capacity even of standing room, with an increasing, rather than a diminishing tendency, and usually the most orderly deportment prevailing. Softly, and parenthetically let me add, in one instance at least, in the aisle immediately in front of the pulpit, and just outside of the altar, some five or six well-dressed, respectable looking ladies stood up during the entire sermon, while young and middle-aged, healthy, vigorous looking men remained seated on each side of, and almost touching them, without any seeming discomfort whatever to themselves. The standing may have been, but I am not inclined to attribute the sitting in that case to the presence and prevalence of sanctifying grace.

I will not speak of results, or indulge in criticism now, but may do so in future. The coming of these men to this coast will attract attention, and be the subject of remark throughout the state; and for the satisfaction of such as may not be able to see and hear for themselves, I have given this brief representation of them, and their work. If there is benefit for us and our people in the coming of these men to California, let us avail ourselves of it. We need spiritual power, and any man, or company of men, who can help us to its possession will do us good, and ought to be welcomed by us, no matter who they are, or from whence they come. O Lord, send by whom thou wilt, but send salvation to all the people.

QUESTIONS ASKED TO BE ANSWERED.

H. MUNGER.

About your having the Crisis free, belongs to the Business Agent to say. Perhaps you are unworthy of it. You had better get some one to apply who knows you, and the rules of the Association, instead of a stranger. I know of some who follow up our meetings for the loaves and fishes, who are able to pay for the paper, and something for preaching, wood, lights, rent, etc., etc., and do nothing. I have advised the Association to stop such papers, and all preachers knowing such facts ought to report them. It is a duty.

Again, you want me to come to your place when the Lord sends me. Now, brother, if the Lord sends by impressions, he can as well tell the place as you can; as he did Philip to go south where he found the eunuch searching the prophecies, and needed help to understand what he read. I do not go out by impressions into a strange place, not knowing the circumstances, and what the prospect is for doing good. You tell how far it is from the railroad, but nothing about the place to preach in, whether a house, or barn, or lot, or whether the people have an ear to hear. I do not feel any inclination to go. There are some few left among us who go on such a fanatical call as yours, and if I should give your name and place, you would have them there at once, two or three of them perhaps; and probably would disgust every good, sound-minded person in the place, and the doctrine would be held up in contempt, as it has been heretofore. If you are going to start a meeting, first consider it well, or get some one that can, and count the cost. There are others on the protracted-meeting committee besides me, who are nearer to you than I am. Apply to them, for I do not feel it a call from the Lord or any one else.

Another inquiry. Can you come and preach for us? Our meetings are running down. The people seemed interested when the meetings first started, and if Bro. G. had stayed longer we should have been stronger. Some of us had just begun to see the light, and supposed all Advent preachers were competent to give us light, and we received it all honestly; but soon we found two or three different positions preached, and we got confused and divided in feeling. Some wanted one, and some another, or they would not help support the meetings. And here we are; a few of us have all the burdens to bear; others act as outsiders, unless their particular man comes. And as you have had a long experience, we ask your advice. What shall we do? As there are a number of similar letters of late, I feel to answer them through the Crisis.

Dear brethren:—No infallible advice can be given. It is a difficult task, in these times of crumbling up of powers, to hold people together. It is equally difficult to know what to do. If there are two or three different sets among you, some for Paul, and some for Apollos, and you have the burden to bear, and yet your meetings are losing their interest, and outsiders are not benefited, I advise you to give them up for a while, at least, and pay your money in some other direction, where you can see it doing more good. If the people have tried sufficiently to decide, and have not taken a stand for the truth enough to help bear their part of the burden, you are justified in giving up trying to draw a dead carcass, or a useless one.

There is another advisable position. In some places, there are two or three different parties of interest, and one has as good a right as another to send for their favorite preachers, whether it meets with general favor or not. In such cases, which are becoming more frequent than formerly, such as can agree any way might have a parish committee chosen, according to the laws under which we live, and are commanded to obey, when they do not conflict with the laws of God or good order. The members of this committee will be the only ones to take and pay out monies for the society, or church, lawfully; or to pay for building, or repairing, or hiring a place of worship, etc., etc. I see no other way for those who feel it duty to keep up meetings, and work with those of the same mind, which we all have a right to do, according to the laws of God and man. In this way, you will get rid of the chaff, and perhaps some few kernels of wheat may go off, as in all cases of winnowing. We, as a people, have suffered on account of the want of order, and all know it. But what shall we do? comes from many directions, and that is the question to answer. In some places this course would not be advisable, and in others the difficulties could not be settled in any other way than for those to associate together who can work together, or give up your meeting. Now you must decide which is the best in your cases. To be sure it will be called a division by some, and so it may prove, as it did with the Israelites when they were commanded to give up their strange women and wives, that the cause of God might prosper.

We are getting into a strange fix, and the devil wants to destroy this truth. It is better to have a mortified limb taken off, if the whole body must die if kept on. There are different ways to be mortified; sometimes to cut off, but not when other means will do better.

Now, as I have answered your inquiries in part, take such a course about taking this advice as you think proper, or ask some other preachers of experience, and you will get nearly the same advice. There is an increasing desire to hear in many places on these great truths, and the enemy will try in various ways to hinder the light from shining. We have a variety of trials and perplexities to contend with. One came upon me the other day, which I will mention. It was new to me, and perhaps to others. I was requested to preach on two particular subjects, and it was advertised in the city papers to be in the City Hall. So I took some facts, texts, and items of history, on bits of paper for the occasion, to help my memory. Getting tired of sitting, a brother asked me to go over the bridge and see them fish. We got part way, when there came a whirlwind and took my hat off up into the air, notes and all, two letters, and a silk handkerchief. The hat and letters being heavier fell into the river a few rods above the dam; but the notes being a light affair went up, I do not know where. A man on the bulk-head tried to reach the hat, and over it went. He and Bro. Doe ran down the factory yard to get a boat, and I after them bareheaded, with my long overcoat, and somewhat excited of course. On I ran after the two other men. Some of the girls and boys seeing such a spectacle as I was coming towards them, dodged out of the yard into the factory like rats into their holes for safety, probably thinking I was chasing the two men, and if the men were running to get away from me, they had better. I think they thought I was a crazy man. I found the boat locked, and the hat floating some four rods below the dam, and no way to get to it without swimming, which I was too old to do. As there was no head in the hat, it soon sank to rise no more. The next thing was something to wear, as the wind blew, and I was taking cold. Bro. Doe got an old cap of an Irishman, too large for me, and I passed up through the factory-yard looking for my handkerchief. This made me look more like a crazy man than before, and such a hooting from the help I never endured before. But I found my handkerchief, and got out of that scrape as quick as possible.

Going back, Bro. Doe said that was the work of the devil, for he was the prince and power of the air. But here I was, hat gone, letters gone, and the notes going yet, probably, for the last I saw of them they were two or three hundred feet in the air. After getting settled in my mind, I had a good laugh to myself, and you may if you see it as I did. Here sits the man, with this old cap on, who is going to preach in the City Hall in Dover, who has lost his hat and notes, and frightened the factory girls. Did I not look comical to myself? I hope, brethren, you may not have a trial like this.

I got the loan of a hat from a widow, and as there was not a hat store in South Berwick, I had to walk to Salmon Falls, and bought another. I wrote more letters, and let the notes go to the devil, if he wanted them, as Bro. Doe said, and preached Sabbath without them, to a large congregation of attentive listeners, on the signs of our times and origin of Spiritualism. A good many strangers were out to hear, for the first time. Perhaps the scrape in the factory-yard about the old hat called out some from curiosity, for it was a strange affair, and I felt strange, and looked strange to strangers. But my mind has got settled now under a new hat, and am on my way home rejoicing that my head was not in the hat over the dam.

TOBACCO—INSANITY.

"BEYOND GOOSE-POND."

I. C. WELLCOME.

While spending a Sunday with friends in the town of C——, a man called in the morning just after breakfast and said, "I don't know as I am doin' right on Sunday; don't know but you are religious people here; but I'm goin' away to-morrow, and I came to tell you I had some more hoop-poles over beyond Goose-pond, and want you to have 'em."

By this time he had got seated, and turned his tobacco-colored face and vacant eyes up to the wall, and discovered the portraits of Grant and Colfax, and exclaimed, "Them's the men for President. I train in that company. I go for them men. They ought to been President. Do you train in that company, Cap'n?"

Being answered in the affirmative, the tobacco sot cast his eyes about, and discovered a well-blackened pipe, which he seized, filled and fired, then began to fill the room with the stench of the poison. He soon felt the bewildering effects of his favorite dose, and proceeded to say, pointing to the portraits,

"Them's the men that ought to be President. If them had been made President, we would n't had such work down south. But the old feller we've got now don't know nothin'. He is n't fit for President, no how."

Whiff—whiff—whiff—came the tobacco-smoke, while our hero of the pipe paused to consider how to entertain the company, and then proceeded: "If our President was good for anything, he would n't let the war go on, and kill all the people down south. They are havin' dreadful work down there. It's a pity Grant is n't President; he would stop it quick. He would put down the war."

We asked, "Where is the war now?"

"In Prussia and France," he replied.

We asked, "Then you think the President of the United States could stop that war?"

"Yes, of course he could, if he was good for anything. Grant would do it quick if he was President," replied our hero, now manifesting the true symptoms of tobacco intoxication. He then drew from his pocket a copper, and laid it on the table, saying, "I must have this pipe. I have lost mine, and can't live a day without a pipe. I use about thirty cents worth of tobacco a week."

We concluded to ask him, "Who is President of the United States?"

With a wild, vacant stare he said, "I—I don't remember. Cap'n, who is President now?" "Grant," was the reply.

Recovering a little, he replied, "O yes, he is, but I don't train in that company. I'm a Democrat. I did n't vote for him. I'm a Democrat, but I don't care what party a man belongs to if he 's a good feller."

Our intoxicated smoker then departed, and we went to meeting, thinking of the effects of tobacco on the mind.

THE GREAT CONFLAGRATION.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

"The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up."—2 PET. 3: 10.

This generation has been warned of the near approach of the day "that shall burn as an oven;" warned to prepare for that event; warned to repent and be converted; warned to flee from the wrath to come. The burning of a single dwelling with all its inmates is dreadful to think of; the burning of a town or city is still more dreadful; but who can describe the terrors of that great and general conflagration, in which the world and all that is therein shall be burned up? It is called "the great and terrible day of the Lord;" "the great day of his wrath," "the day of vengeance," "a day of darkness and of gloominess, a day of clouds and of thick darkness;" "even very dark, and no brightness in it." The darkness of night adds greatly to the horror of a conflagration, and we have this "horror of great darkness" added to the terror of the great day day of wrath and fiery indignation.

"Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men." As though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God. For he hath made him to be sin for us who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him."

YET ALIVE.

A. D. SWANSBURG.

To the dear saints and companions in labor:—As there are quite a number of God's dear saints in this province, and also in the United States, who would like to hear how I am getting along through my sickness; and as many have made inquiries about me, I thought I would answer them in the quickest possible way, by sending this to the Crisis. It is now nearly four months since I caught a heavy cold, accompanied with a severe cough, while laboring at Shag Harbor. This brought on hemorrhage of the left lung, and the life-fluid flowed for about two weeks, with intermission of a time of about twelve hours, until I was like Paul's companion in labor, Epaphroditus, who was sick nigh unto death; but God had mercy on me. In this extremity, I could fully realize the language of the good old prophet David (Ps. 23: 4), "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." The rod is an emblem of power; the staff an emblem of support. God, by the rod of his power, beat back the enemy death, and left me his staff to support me through the valley. Praise the Lord.

Now, by the aid of his staff, I am ascending the hill of difficulty, and hope to reach my former elevation, so that I may be able to sound out, in my weakness, what I believe to be the last notes of warning to a doomed world. At the same time I hope I shall always be able to ascribe my recovery to the true cause, whatever means were used. The great Physician has done the work. I do rejoice in the hope of yet seeing Jesus, the King, in his beauty, before I pass into the grave. This hope truly is like an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast.

The dear children of God in Shelburne administered to my wants, after a godly manner. May the Lord gather them with his jewels. I feel it my duty to say also that, from all denominations, I received the greatest of kindness during the severest of my sickness. May God bless them with that reward that will be given at the resurrection of the just.

Although I feel myself improving, it is so slow that while I write I feel sad, not knowing that I will ever be able to labor any more or not; but the Lord's will be done. I ask the prayers of all God's dear children, that the warfare may be continued a little longer, and say at last, when Jesus appears in the clouds, "This is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord; we have waited for him. We will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." Let us, then, all say with the apostle John, "Amen; even so, come, Lord Jesus." From your brother in tribulation.

EXTRACTS FROM SPURZHEIM.

No. 4.

F. H. BURBANK.

"VII. Relations between the brain and the manifestations of the mind. The preceding arguments are founded on reasoning, and prove that all manifestations of the mind depend on organic conditions. In the first volume of this work it is demonstrated, that individual faculties manifest themselves by means of particular cerebral parts, and that the faculties appear, increase in strength, and diminish in vigor, in proportion as the organs on which they depend are developed, increase in size, and shrink again. The brain of the new-born child scarcely shows any traces of fibres; these appear, become firmer by degrees, and attain perfection between the twentieth and fortieth year. As years accumulate, its convolutions, which had been plump, become flabby, and are less closely packed together.

"In conformity with the state of the brain at birth, animal life is confined to spontaneous motions, to the perception of hunger and thirst, to some obscure sensation of pain and pleasure, and to an imperfect state of the external senses. By degrees the number and energy of the affective and intellectual faculties augment, and the child begins to acquire knowledge and determinate ideas of external objects. Through the periods of boyhood and adolescence the faculties gradually gain strength; and, in manhood, they at length manifest the greatest degree of energy. From this state of perfection, however, they soon begin to decline; and, in extreme old age, the propensities are blunted, the sentiments weakened, and the intellectual faculties almost or entirely annihilated.

"If the organs of the faculties, however, do not follow the usual order of increase, but be either precocious or tardy, their respective functions are also manifested with corresponding variations. If the intellectual faculties are often more energetic in rickety children than beseems their age, their brain will also be found extraordinarily developed or irritable. Independently of all disease, however, particular portions of the brain are occasionally developed at too early a period, and then their functions likewise appear prematurely.

"On the other hand, when parts of the brain or its whole mass arrives very late at maturity, the mental imperfections of childhood remain longer than usual, sometimes till about the tenth or twelfth year, so that parents despair of the rationality of their children. After this age, however, the cerebral organs will often take on a particular growth, and the faculties then appear with great vigor. One of the most distinguished physicians at Berlin, when ten years old, could not use his organs of speech, and Gessner, at the same age, had made such slender progress in his studies, that his preceptor declared him half an idiot; yet it is known how famous he became afterwards.

"If the growth of the cerebral organs be incomplete, the faculties of the mind are equally defective. It is impossible to determine with exactness the degree or organic development necessary to the due manifestation of the mental powers; for this depends not on the size of the organs alone, but on their peculiar constitution also. A very small brain, however, is always accompanied with imbecility.

"Children have sometimes the same organic constitution of brain as their parents, and then manifest precisely similar affective and intellectual faculties. Characteristic forms of head are often transmitted from generation to generation; and thus are mental faculties propagated in families during centuries. It is an acknowledged fact, that children who resemble each other, or their parents, manifest similar faculties, making allowances for difference of age and sex. I have seen twin boys so like each other that it was almost impossible to distinguish them; their inclinations and talents were also strikingly similar. Two other twin sisters are very different; the muscular system in the one being most developed, the nervous in the other; and while the first has little understanding, the second is eminently talented.

"To conclude this point, I say that, as the peculiar organs of the affective and intellectual faculties can positively be demonstrated, it is impossible to deny the dependence of mental phenomena on the organization. "The principle of Phrenology, therefore, that the manifestations of the affective and intellectual faculties of the mind depend on the brain, is also ascertained."

We here close our extracts from Spurzheim, trusting that their perusal has afforded light and instruction.

TOBACCO AMONG THE PREACHERS.

We often hear persons plead in behalf of tobacco, but in so doing they make a bad plea.

"Well, sir," says one, I use tobacco to make me fleshy." Another says, "I use it to keep from accumulating flesh." Another alleges that it is an excellent antidote for the tooth-ache; and yet another, that it drives away melancholy, and is a preventive of loneliness. And others, to suit their own peculiarities, frame excuses for their vile habit.

The use of tobacco is of an evil nature, and its tendency is toward destruction. It should be placed in the same catalogue with dancing, dram-drinking, lying, and card playing. Respectable people have given the use of tobacco an air of respectability, so that the weak and simple have fallen into the error, and become habitual tobacco victims.

The minister of the gospel of the Lord Jesus should be an example in deportment as well as a teacher of religion. I met a Baptist minister upon occasion at his meeting; he preached a long discourse, and sent forth mouthful after mouthful of tobacco-juice. Oh! I thought, if you were a Methodist, I would leave words ringing in your ears. But that was not all; after he had finished, he said that he desired to give the hand of fellowship to two new converts. He made an address, and then took the hand of the young brother, and charged him to be faithful, live consistently, and prove to the world that his walk was with God. And then taking the hand of the young sister, he said, "My dear sister," and then he spirted forth a mouthful of saliva, strongly colored with tobacco. My heart sank within me. I said to myself, "Oh, how can a man make a charge to a young convert, and set such an example, while pleading in behalf of a better cause."

It is a filthy habit, and only proves the depravity of man, in manners at least. It is calculated to destroy natural appetite, create a taste for intoxicating drink, and undermine the constitution of its votaries. And yet we find those using it are setting an example to the young with whom they come in contact. We should make this a test of conference membership; and when we send forth a man, he should be a man without reproach; he should teach hygiene instead of destruction; he should teach morals instead of prodigality. But do they do it? They do not teach that the use of tobacco is wrong because it would be self-condemnation.—California Christain Advocate.

THE POPE'S RESIDENCE.—The Vatican, the official residence of the Pope, stands directly against the side of Saint Peter's church, under the guns of the castle of St. Angelo; and it is the most extensive palace in the world. In a building on this site Charlemagne had quarters when in Rome. The larger part of this palace was built about the time Columbus was seeking America. The edifice is a vast block, shaped like the letter L, and contains twenty courts open to the sky, and eleven thousand halls, chapels, saloons and apartments. The main entrance portal of the Vatican is under a mighty Doric colonnade, which cost 850,000 scudi, and is guarded by a company of halberdiers, by birth Swiss, and by profession, mercenaries. One of the halls in the Vatican is 2131 feet long and twenty-seven feet wide. The library of the Vatican possesses 24,000 manuscripts, 50,000 printed books, and over 2,000 volumes of Papal archives, which last comprise the written history of this great branch of the nominal church. An armory, a mint, a magnificent collection of pictures, a still more wonderful collection of ancient sculpture and inscriptions, and a government manufactory of Mosaic, are included in this palace; there are no less than ten thousand different shades of colored glass used in the mosaic factory of the Vatican. Michael Angelo and Raphael executed their greatest works upon the walls of this palace.—Ex.

DIDN'T LIKE THE SINGING.—A certain clergyman of Vermont, a few years since visited New York, and was invited to fill a city pulpit. He had never the privilege of listening to a church organ, and was totally unacquainted with the fashion of hiring a few vocalists to do the singing for the congregation. Giving out his first hymn, the organist played a fancy prelude, and in the highest style of art the choir rendered the four verses. Addressing the throne of grace in a fervent invocation which stamped him as a man of intellect and power with his audience, he coolly re-opened the hymn book, and turning to a page, exclaimed: "The audience will now join with me in singing a good old Methodist hymn, and those person's running that bag of wind in the gallery will please not interrupt."

☞ IN these days we hear much about the "higher life." But the best prescription that we know of for attaining it is to use our knees for prayer, our eyes for watchfulness, our purses for liberal giving, our tongues for confessing Jesus, and both our hands in hard work to do Christ's will, and bring sinners to repentance.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

BE ALWAYS LOVING.

Love the Savior, little children,
  To his cause be firm and true;
Both his hands are full of blessings
  For the little ones like you.
Be like Jesus, gentle, loving,
  In his lowly footsteps tread;
'Twas for you he lived in suffering,
  'Twas for you his blood was shed.

Love the Bible, little children,
  Blessed book of light and truth;
Let its holy, heavenly teachings
  Be the guide of all your youth.
Never shrink from its commandments
  Never from its prospects turn.
It hath stores of choicest wisdom
  That you nowhere else can learn.

Love your parents, little children,
  All they bid you do, obey;
You can never all their kindness,
  All their watchful love repay.
Love your brothers and your sisters,
  Harmless, kind, and truthful be;
O 'tis very sad when children
  Of one household disagree!

Love your playmates, little children,
  Do not shun the ragged poor;
All the needy and the suffering
  Give a welcome at your door.
Let your hearts be full of pity,
  Full of kindness and of love;
Then will Jesus guide your footsteps
  To that city from above.

A STORY FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS.

There was no help for it,—Daisy must be drowned—little, gentle two-months old Daisy, —that was always so good and quiet, and yet so full of life and frolic! Little Katie's heart was quiet broken, thinking about it. But mamma, who knew best, had said so, and there was no help for it. Three cats took so much milk! And there were so many little human mouths to feed! And milk at ten cents a quart! Poor little Katie! She saw it was best, but it brought grief to her heart.

"If some one would only buy Daisy," she said, clinging to her mother's dress.

"People don't buy kitties," said her mother, stooping to kiss the little, flushed, tearful face lifted to hers;" but I wish some one would take her as a gift. You wouldn't mind giving Daisy away, would you? That would be better than drowning her."

"Yes, indeed! a hundred times better!" answered the child, her face lighting up.

That night a little tear-wet face pressed Katie's pillow. The child was offering up her evening prayer. "Dear Father," she said, "please send some one 'long who wants a kitty. It is so awful to have Daisy drowned! and it hurts so! Please, dear Father, be good to Daisy, and don't let her be drowned;"—and here the little voice grew choked, and great tears fell on the white pillow-slip. Soon however, she fell asleep; her prayer had quieted her.

* * * * * * *

"Good-bye, Daisy. Oh, I wish God had thought it best. But he didn't, and you must go;"—and Katie turned from her brother Reuben, who held Daisy in his strong arms.

"Don't cry, Katie," said the boy, pausing a moment; "I'll do it real quick; she won't suffer but a minute. I'll tie a big stone to the bag, and it'll be all over in a giffy."

Poor, blundering Reuben!—He meant to comfort Katie, but his words only made her cry the harder.

Reuben walked along far from comfortable. There was the bag in his pocket and Daisy in his arms, looking up in his face as confidingly as though he were the best friend she had in the world. In a few minutes poor Daisy would be struggling in the water, and he should have to go back and face Katie and tell her it was all over.

"I declare, I can't do it!" he exclaimed half aloud. "I'm going in here to Bill Watson's. Perhaps his folks would like a kitten. Any way, I'll see."

A little girl stood in the doorway.

"Hollo, Jenny! want a kitty? I've brought you a beauty—look!"

Jenny's pretty face flushed with delight. "Oh, mother," she exclaimed, running back into the room, "may I have this kitty? Reuben has brought it a purpose for me!"

Reuben had to tell his story,—how they had two other cats at home, how there wasn't milk enough for them all, and how Katie had cried when mother said Daisy must be drowned.

"Don't say another word," interrupted Mrs. Watson. "Leave puss here. I'm right glad of her."

So Reuben put Daisy into Jenny's arms, and with a heartfelt, "thank you, ma'am, Katie will be so glad," he hurried home to tell his sister the good news.

Oh, how happy Katie was that evening! "God did hear me, didn't he, mamma!"

"Dear little Daisy! I think God must love kitties almost as much as he does little girls,—don't you, mamma?"

"'His tender mercies are over all his works,'" murmured Katie's mother to herself; then she turned to her little girl and said—

"God loves and cares for everything that he has made, dear child. I thank him that my Katie has a tender, loving heart towards his creatures; and I am glad too, that Daisy has found so good a home."—From "Our Dumb Animals."—Selected by J. N. B.

PROMPTED BY LOVE.—One morning I found little Dora busy at the ironing table, smoothing the towels and stockings.

"Isn't it hard work for the little arms?" I asked.

A look like sunshine came into her face, as she glanced toward her mother, who was rocking the baby.

"It isn't hard work when I do it for mamma," she said, softly.

How true it is that love makes labor sweet. So if we love the blessed Savior, we shall not find it hard to work for him. It is Love that makes his yoke easy and his burden light.

FOOD FOR THINKERS AND WORKERS.

There is no subject with which everybody has so much to do, and in respect to which so many people know so little. The subject of diet is an unpleasant one, so we propose to say nothing about it. The subject of food is a very agreeable one, and we shall therefore confine our remarks to it.

There are three necessities for the use of food. The boy would make but one—"Cause I'm hungry." The gourmand would say, "Because it tastes good." Physiology says, "One object of food is to keep up animal heat; another, to give strength to the bones and muscles; a third, to support the brain and nerves, thereby giving power to thought and feeling." In nearly all kinds of food the elements required for the support of the system are found, but these ingredients do not exist in all articles in the right proportions. Speaking scientifically, phosphorus is used up in thinking; nitrogen is used in working the muscles, and carbon is furnishing animal heat and fat. Men who think should use the kinds of food adapted for the support of the brain and nervous system; those who work with the muscles should use those articles of food containing the material in a large degree which sustains muscle; those who go into cold climates, or are exposed to the cold, and have not much physical labor to perform, should eat more bountifully of the food which promotes animal heat and fat. But how few men know what to eat. We have seen lawyers, during court time, come to the table and eat roast pork, rice or Indian pudding highly sweetened, and wind up with mince pie and cheese. They understood the statute laws, but not the laws of the human body, and their causes and clients suffered from the muddy state of intellect induced by their ill-selected food. That dinner might have answered for a stage-driver, or a man going into the forest for a load of wood, with the thermometer at zero. In old times, baked beans and pork constituted the Sunday food in New England, and an old divine carefully and mirthfully undertook to estimate the number of "tons of beans and pork preached to in New England every Sunday while the owners were asleep." This illustrates one point, that those who are expected to be skillful and thoughtful should not eat food chiefly adapted to produce heat, and fat, and sleep.

We are often asked to give in the Journal a list of articles of food which furnish support for brain, and is therefore fit for thinkers and students. We are also often asked to give a list of articles best adapted to support muscular power. We cannot here do more than give a few hints.

Those who expect to think should not eat much food which simply produces warmth and fat, such as ham, fat pork, white bread, butter, rice, tapioca, and starch. These contain very little phosphatic food, being chiefly carbonaceous. . . . .

Barley, oats, and wheat ground without bolting, furnish food for brain; but lawyers, ministers, and students eat the white, superfine, or bolted wheat bread, and go to sleep. That which would fatten a pig, and give him no desire to exercise or to think, is eaten by the learned and refined of the human race, who look in pity upon the poor peasant following the plow, because he is obliged to eat his brown loaf; which brown loaf and cheap fish and wild game contain the incitement to brain work, in which poems, orations, and art are conceived and nursed.—Phrenological Journal.

SANITARY INFLUENCE OF SUNLIGHT.

Dr. John H. Griscom lectured recently in Toronto on the "Sanitary Influence of Sunlight." Sunlight, he said, particularly in dwellings, has become absolutely necessary to health and comfort. It has remained to the present generation to analyze this intangible and imponderable substance in all its influences, especially on animal life and vitality. As on a ship's side substances are found to crystallize by the heat of the sun, while more appear on the opposite side; so also are the crystallizations of the mind more frequent and general when the sun's rays continue longest and penetrate deepest. The lecturer demonstrated how carbonic acid gas is deleterious to human life by exhaling into a bottle the air from his lungs, and then placing a light therein, which was immediately extinguished. The life of a living insect, he said, would have been extinguished there with equal rapidity.

The oxygen necessary to human life is derived from plants through the operation of the sun's rays—the yellow ray—and the vegetables in return absorb the poisonous carbon exhaled from the lungs. Both these operations take place only in the sun's rays, hence the impropriety of sleeping with plants in our rooms. He illustrated at great length the sunlight on the various kinds of vegetable matter both in its luxuriance and richness of color, the absence of the sun's rays producing the very opposite effect, alike in the vegetable kingdom and with the lower orders of animals. With man these rays play a part no less important. Under their operation continual change is taking place in the human system; a constant chemical process is in operation. The action of death was a mere chemical operation, produced by the incapacity of the system to inhale the necessary oxygen and exhale the poisonous carbon of the system. To preserve this condition in life, and a healthy system, as the development of the mental powers, alike in old and young, a due proportion of sunlight is necessary.

The lecturer concluded with contrasting the condition of dwellers in cellars with those dwelling in light and healthy dwellings, showing the latter to be altogether more favorable to health.

WAITING.

I am waiting for the dawning
Of the bright and blessed day,
When the darksome night of sorrow
Shall have vanished far away;
When forever with the Savior,
Far beyond the gloom of tears,
I shall swell the song of worship
Through the everlasting years.

I am looking at the brightness—
See, it shineth from afar—
Of the clear and joyous beaming
Of the "bright and morning star."
Through the dark gray mist of morning
Do I see its glorious light;
Soon shall flee the darkest shadow
Of this sad and weary night.

I am waiting for the coming
Of the Lord who died for me;
Oh! his words have filled my spirit,
"I will come again for thee."
I can almost hear his footfall
On the threshold of the door,
And my heart, my heart is longing
To be his forevermore.

EVERLASTING LIFE.

WM. A. PENN.

"Verily, verily I say unto you, he that believeth on me hath everlasting life."—JOHN 6: 47.

The above scripture is one of several which seems to teach that life everlasting is the believer's portion here. We find in 1 John 5: 11 a similar text: "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." With the popular faith almost inbred, and religious views already established, which are calculated to convince us that we are to continue in an uninterrupted conscious existence, it is no matter of wonder that such passages as the above are considered as proof texts in support of man's inherent immortality. There is too much surface preaching and reading among popular churches. The religious knowledge of the day is not the developments of the day. We speak of that part of religious knowledge which is the production of reason, and the opinions of men; not the plain asseverations of the Bible.

That the faith of the Protestant church of the present day is substantially what it was one century and a half ago is not only a matter of fact, but a matter of boasting. Inflexibility is considered by orthodoxy a christian grace; and the fact that time and science have failed to change it is a matter of pride in the hearts of many. The Bible is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. Each distinctive truth it contains is unchangeable. But the avenue through which man is introduced to the teachings of the Holy Scriptures makes a vast difference in the appearance of the book. Let one come over the track of Calvinism, and predestination shines on every leaf, to his mind. Let another come through Arminianism, and he fancies he hears it said at every step, "Free and full salvation is offered to all." Let the wide road of Universalism be the avenue through which he comes to the Bible, and the beneficence and goodness of God stand out so prominent that he dare believe that the design of the book was to teach the salvation of all men.

By a little reflection, the reader will see that men come to the Bible with these views, rather than go from it. In other words, they are in possession of the thoughts upon which these views are built, before they know that the Bible supports or condemns them. They are worthless, unless something in the Bible can be advanced for their support. This is the grand secret of such a vast multitude of religious views. The discoverer of each was not on his knees with the Bible before him; but with ever busy brain, he is elated all at once with a new thought of a religious nature; and it rolls and rattles in his brain, and his eyes sparkle with delight, as he flatters himself that he is the fortunate discoverer of a gigantic truth.

Now to the Bible to see if there is the like there; but no positive declaration to prop the darling thought can be found. But does the discoverer stop here? No, but he searches from Genesis to Revelation for a text that will bear twisting sufficiently to match the place; and if he is a very smart man, he will not stop long to search the Scriptures, but away he flies through the world, as fast as ever his hobby can carry him; and amid earth's thousands of curious-minded ones, he easily finds devotees to his new and all important idea. With this class, we find the other extreme of inflexibility; and yet each class may settle down on their imaginary truth as firmly as though it was real. Religious convictions are no less difficult to relinquish by being on a false basis.

The above is sufficient to illustrate to the mind of the reader that, whatever our convictions of truth are, we shall lose nothing by candid and thorough investigation. Let us, then, with open hearts and minds come to the question of everlasting life, in the text quoted.

The reader will readily discover that this life comes by virtue of faith, or belief. "He that believeth," etc. "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." 1 John 5: 11, 12. It is manifest that whatever is enjoyed in the way of faith in Christ is not the portion of the wicked; hence the above text, and others of like import, afford no evidence in favor of inherent or natural immortality.

Now as this life is not a quality of our nature, but is attainable through faith in Christ, it becomes us to carefully consider our relationship to it, and learn how and when we get it. The life, mark you, is in Christ, and we receive it by receiving him. Now if we can ascertain in what sense we receive Christ, and how he dwells in us, we shall understand how the life dwells in us, for the life is in him. The following passage is to the point: "That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit, in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith." Eph. 3: 16, 17. From the above we learn that it is by faith the life dwells in us, as the life is in Christ, and could not sustain a different relationship to us than Christ does, while it is a settled fact that the life is in him.

Having learned that the life is with us only as a matter of faith, we plainly see that we have it prospectively, not absolutely. We have it in the relative degree, and may have it in the positive degree when the purpose of God is accomplished. Let us see how that is, by further proof. "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. 3: 3, 4. The reader will now understand, by what the Scriptures say, how we possess the everlasting life by faith, and when we receive it absolutely; i. e., "when Christ who is our life shall appear." This opinion is not my opinion, but what the record plainly asserts.

It may not be misspent time for us now to look a little further into the depths of this matter, and see if we can by reason see how the life is imparted to us. Our present life is limited and mortal, and dependent upon the laws of physical being for its perpetuation. It comes from Adam the first, and soon ends, from the fact that its basis is not suitable for eternal duration. Christ is presented in the Scriptures as the second or last Adam. 1 Cor. 15: 45. The meaning of the term Adam "is appropriately the first man; the progenitor of the race."—Webster.

Christ, then, in becoming the author of our future existence, takes the place of first in order of existence; and by virtue of the future life coming through him, he properly becomes the second Adam. The everlasting life, then, must have something to do with the manner in which we exist. Our present life is the result of conditions of existence adequate to produce it. It is a mortal life, as the conditions are inadequate to an everlasting life. Now if we can learn what the conditions of our future existence are to be, we may be able to conclude whether the result will be everlasting life, or not.

To the record again: "For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself." Phil. 3: 20, 21. We learn from the above that we are to have a body like Christ's "glorious body." The expression "glorious body" would indicate a change for him as well as us; and such a change would seem needful, as he was subject to death, and did die; and if he has now a body, the conditions of which are the same as before he died, we see no reason why he might not be subject to death the second time. But what saith the record about his change? "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies, by his Spirit, that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8: 11. In the above text, we find proof that Christ was quickened, or changed. Doubtless there was a good reason for producing this change, that he might enjoy a state, or condition of being, that guaranteed an endless life. Now that we may have an endless life, we are to be changed like unto his glorious body, so that a condition of being adequate to an endless life may be enjoyed by us.

Life is a result, not an entity; and its duration will ever be commensurate with the condition that developes it. The mistaken idea that life is an entity did not attain with the Bible, as a text book, but was the thought of the barbarian, who never saw a Bible; and the dread of death prompted in him a hope that in some way he would survive the death of the body. So he fixed up the "life principle" in man into an entity, or immortal soul; and though false, the people love to have it so; and all Christendom are flattering themselves that a certain transport to glory is the result of death to the body, as the life of the body must depart as an entity, or soul, or spirit, etc. Now a very little sober thought will relieve us of that error, and enable us to see that life, instead of being an entity (which is a real being) is but a result, or condition of a real being; and when the condition of our being is rendered unfavorable to life, death is the result. We see, then, that life is not a creature, but a condition.

Now when Christ who is our life (or the source of our future life) appears, we shall appear with him in glory, by being changed like unto him, and by the means employed, we are reduced to the requisite state, or condition, to endure unchanged forever. The everlasting life is then enjoyed absolutely, when we are made like Christ bodily, not morally. The moral change is the guarantee of the physical change.

Each and every passage of Scripture that seems to teach the possession of eternal life now must be understood in the sense of the above argument, or our faith will be at once unphilosophical and unbiblical.

With this view before us, we see a reason for the resurrection of the dead, which is so plainly taught in the Bible; while the view that claims more for man in the state of death than he had in life, makes the resurrection an irrelevant matter to salvation, or reward, to say the least of it. If man can be rewarded without a body, to raise the body is a needless work. We may reasonably conclude that the resurrection is a necessity; and if so, the result of dying is not what many suppose it to be.

DEFINITE TIME REVEALED, AND TO BE UNDERSTOOD.

The heading of this article may not receive a hearty endorsement by the cold-hearted and backslidden (and we are sorry to say there is a large number of this class, who love this present world more than they do the coming of Christ and the kingdom of God); but to those who, like the importunate widow, noticed by our Lord in Luke 18th chapter, are crying day and night unto him to be avenged of their adversary, it will not be an unwelcome subject for thought and investigation. And why should it be? Is it not distinctly revealed in the Scriptures? and was it not intended to be understood before its fulfillment? There is nothing useless in the Bible; therefore if the prophecies are of use in this world, they are to be understood beforehand; for "what is the value of a chart that would not tell a seaman where to find his port until after he had arrived?" God represents the prophetic word to be a "light shining in a dark place"; and that professed christian man, or minister, upon whom it reflects no light, is truly to be pitied. It is the "word of prophecy," and not the events fulfilling it, which the Holy Spirit calls a light. The Spirit of Christ in the prophets "searched the manner of time for the sufferings of Christ," as also the glory that should follow; and was not the definite time revealed unto the prophet Daniel for both the first and second coming of Christ? and was not this revelation for the benefit of the church living near these two grand epochs? If God has given any prophecies showing the definite time for the end, he has undoubtedly taken care that history should record all the intervening events foretold, and which must be known in order to understand when the time draws near. Indeed, the events fulfilling all the prophecies of the Bible up to this time have undoubtedly been recorded, either in the Bible itself, or in profane history; for only on such conditions could the prophecy be of any use; and to suppose otherwise, is to suppose that God would suffer his purpose in giving the prophecy to fail, and is an impeachment of his wisdom, goodness, and power.

For the same reason there is nothing really uncertain about chronology, from that period where we must begin to have certain knowledge in order to understand the prophecies, or, in fact, about any of the periods of chronology referred to or contained in the Bible. Those who maintain otherwise, must either maintain that such portions of the Bible have become obsolete, and might be left out; or that we have an uncertain light, instead of a "sure word of prophecy." We will say nothing of the reflection which such a view casts upon God, who has directed us to the prophecies to guide us; for what is it but tantalizing us, to give such a direction, if the prophecies cannot answer their design? He who dictated the Bible has taken care that no errors should creep into it, which would make it impossible for those to interpret these prophecies for whom they were specially intended.

It is conceded by all real Adventists that we are now living emphatically in the last days, amid the closing scenes of earth's history; then is it not time to turn our attention more earnestly to the Scripture record of the period for the close of the last event therein recorded? also the time when that most important prophetic measurement shall end, that marks the resurrection of the righteous dead to occur; namely, the 1335 days, or years?

It has been generally believed by pious and faithful servants of Christ, in former periods, that before the end should come, a true understanding of the time would be known by the godly and watchful before that event should occur; and they have thus spoken with much confidence. This uniformity of belief among the most godly in the past affords, to say the least, presumptive proof of our being correct. Another very important consideration strengthening our position is the analogy of other important events of the past under the government of God.

1. The one hundred and twenty years, the limited period in which the Spirit of God would strive with the antediluvians before the flood, as made known to Noah; also the specific seven days of awful suspense to that doomed generation, after the Spirit of God had stopped striving with them. This interval, before their destruction commenced, was given to Noah. We should, therefore, expect in the second destruction of the world, that God would reveal the time, and as the time of the event drew nigh, all who would be saved would have a clear conception of it, and when the time had about expired, would be in an attitude of expectation; being ready to meet the Bridegroom, because they know the time. On the other hand, those who perish would have an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the time and manner of the end, but none of them would believe in its reality.

2. At the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, we find that all who were saved were apprised of the event a sufficient time previous to enable them to escape, and also to warn some of those who perished, unto whom Lot seemed as one that mocked.

3. The predicted four hundred and thirty years, from the call of Abraham to the time the children of Israel left the land of Egypt. The children of Israel could at any time during their captivity in Egypt have calculated the time of its termination, if they were sufficiently interested in what God had revealed about the period of time. We also find that at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even the self-same day, it came to pass that all the hosts of the Lord went out from the land of Egypt.

4. The overthrow of Israel within sixty-five years. 2 Kings 16; Isa. 8: 1–9.

5. The seventy years' predicted captivity of the Jews in Babylon.

6. The sixty-nine weeks from the first of Cyrus, king of Persia, to the birth of Christ.

7. The seventy weeks from the twelfth of Ahasuerus, where God restrained the transgression from desolating the Jews till A. D. 65, when the work of desolation commenced.

8. The sixty-two weeks from the completion of the wall of Jerusalem, in troublous times, A. D. 406, to the cutting off of the Messiah.

9. The one week of confirming the covenant in the seven years' war, in which Jerusalem was destroyed.

We might refer to many other prophetic periods that have had their fulfillment in the past, connected with the history of the church of God, and so necessary for them to understand in order to be found in the way of duty, on these different occasions. So also with the church of Christ now at the close of the gospel dispensation; it is their duty to receive all the light that shines from the prophetic page, and especially to that period of time, the 1335 days, that reaches to the resurrection of the just, that they may receive the blessing to be bestowed on those that wait and come to that glorious epoch.

For a more direct scriptural argument on this subject, we would refer the reader to the tract entitled, "The Judgment Impending. Prophecy and Chronology converging to one Grand Culmination." Published by the Advent Christian Publication Society, 160 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

VENGEANCE.

O. R. FASSETT.

There is a misapprehension of this word as it is used in the Scriptures. Webster thus defines it:—"The infliction of pain on another, in return for an injury or offence; such infliction, when it proceeds from malice, or mere resentment, and is not necessary for the purposes of justice, is revenge, and a most heinous crime. When such infliction proceeds from a mere love of justice, and the necessity of punishing offenders for the support of the laws, is vengeance, and is warrantable and just. In this case is just retribution, recompense, or punishment. In this latter sense the word is used in Scripture, and frequently applied to the punishments inflicted by God on sinners. 'To me belongeth vengeance and recompense.' Deut. 32. 'The Lord will take vengeance on his adversaries.' Nahum 1."

God is a God of justice as well as mercy; and he is the righteous Judge of all the earth, and cannot do wrong, nor have malice, nor hate, nor revenge. "The Lord passed before Moses and proclaimed, The Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty." Exod. 34: 6. He is not, therefore, the revengeful being he has been declared to be, and which a perverted theology has set him forth before the world, and that old Satan would be glad to have men think he is. What a monstrous injustice has been done "our God" in the setting him forth as an implacable and unmerciful despot, and a most cruel tyrant, delighting in the torment and misery of our race! He has been unjustly accused of creating millions of infants to be damned; and of bringing into existance millions of men whom he "foreordained" and "predestinated" and "elected to be damned" before they were born; and without any free-moral-agency of their own, or choice as to a state of future happiness or sorrow; and furthermore, that this "damnation" in each and in every case of old and young, is to be everlasting torment inflicted in the most aggravated manner, and in the intensest degree! wreaking, too, his revengeful ire in constantly increasing the torture of the soul through all eternity! Horrible! Well may the churches and ministers begin to blush and be ashamed of this doctrine; and may God forgive the error and slander on his blessed name and character, in giving to him that "revenge" which is "a most heinous crime." "The grace of God which bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men," and by "the gospel" God has offered "life everlasting" and "immortality" to all who will receive and seek for the blessing. He sets "life and death, blessing and cursing" before all, urging and entreating them to "choose life that they may live." He has provided an infinite Savior and an ample salvation for all.

If, then, any are finally lost and unsaved, it will be their own fault. They are not saved because they reject the Savior. They "die" because they do not ask for "life," nor "come" to Jesus "that they may have life." They "perish in their own corruption," because they will not have nor "seek for immortality." What, then, can be done? The appointed Judge, who is the Son of man, must pass the final sentence and execute it upon them in righteous vengeance. A humane Judge may pass sentence upon a culprit or felon, as the just law requires, and at the same time compassionate the devoted victim, and pity him for his irrevocable fate. So when "the Son of man" passes the awful sentence, "Depart, ye cursed," it will not be a resentful and revengeful sentence from a stony heart of malice and hate, but the language of stern justice and righteousness to the deserved, who in their "hardness and impenitent heart have treasured up wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God." The wrath in the infliction of the vengeance deserved is "the wrath of the Lamb." They refused of him pardon and life, they must have condemnation and death, and perish in their mortality and corruption.

"If in his love so terrible, what then his wrath in flame?"

God save us the despair, and our righteous Judge the pain, of passing sentence against us and executing a just vengeance upon us.

Jesus "wept, that men might smile!
Jesus "bled, that man might never die!"

HERE AND OVER THERE.

J. W. THOMAS.

How wide the contrast between here and over there. Who does not take pleasure in contemplating the future, and realizing its superiority over the present? Strangely blinded indeed must be that mind, which prefers the fading vanities of time to the enduring splendors of eternity. Here sin contaminates, pollutes, and destroys. Its shadows have fallen upon every land, and its withering influence has reached earth's remotest limits. It has blighted many fair hopes, and ruined the happiness of unnumbered thousands. O sin, why didst thou enter this once beautiful planet? What untold miseries follow in thy train? Who has not felt the bitter piercing of thy poisonous sting? "Over there" no sin will be found. As far as the imagination can roam throughout those holy realms, no corrupting influence will be felt. Holiness shall sit on every hill, and purity flow in every rill. God shall sweep the universe of all its filthiness, and fill it with the unsullied radiance of his glory. The holy, the blest, and the pure of every age, shall fill up its beauteous glades, and for ever delight themselves in the abundance of peace. No tempting devil or defiling companions can enter there. Thy people shall be all righteous, and no sin will ever tarnish the spotless purity of their fadeless robes. Here sickness, disease, infirmity, and imperfection, distress, afflict, and annoy. Everywhere the sighs and groans of mortality are heard. There is not a family or an individual in existence but has felt in a greater or less degree the corroding effects of disease. All are hastening onward to the unconscious slumber of the grave.

Over there, the inhabitants will never say "I am sick." Eternal health and vigor will be depicted in the countenance of the saved. No burning fever or desolating pestilence will visit that shining shore. Infirmity, deformity and weakness will be forgotten, and the atmosphere shall bear upon its undulations the refreshing influence of life and health and blessing. The river of life will send forth its crystal waters to beautify and adorn those immortal bowers, while upon its vernal banks the variegated flowers of paradise will wave their heads in perennial bloom. Beneath the shade of life's ambrosial tree, the holy and happy multitude will forget their poverty and sorrow, while they feast upon its delicious fruit and inhale the fragrance of its healing leaves. Here, death, separation, and farewells are constantly blighting the happiness of home, and filling hearts with inexpressible anguish. Over there, death will never be known. Over those elysian fields not one little grave shall be seen. "There shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away." No farewells will be sobbed forth, or parting hands taken. Here, there is discord and confusion, and every thing to indicate that the world has been marred by a malignant hand. Over there all will be harmonious. The morning stars will again sing together, and the sons of God shout for joy.

"Over there I'll find my treasure,
Jewels lost long, long ago;
Love and bliss in fullest measure
There my sad heart shall know.

Will you go, dear sinner, with me,
Where the Lamb will ever reign,
Where the loved of earth will greet thee,
And never part again?"

THE EFFECT.

Those who are opposed to the destruction of the wicked, as taught in the Bible, say it takes away the motive to repentance. So far as our experience and observation extend, we find the opposite true; it leads men to repentance and love for God. The following sensible and truthful remarks are from the March number of the Rainbow:—

"I remember well my own early days—when, first starting into life, I think I earnestly desired to seek after my Maker,—to draw near to him, and to love him 'with all my heart and all my understanding.' But the more I tried to approach him, the more he seemed to escape me. It was a justice which I could not appreciate. It was a love which was altogether different from my own—an incomprehensible excellency. 'We are all immortals,' I was told—'all fallen in Adam—all doomed to everlasting woe; some had been chosen to be saved from this horror, and some not; the rest are to conflict and wrestle for ever;' so I read in Jonathan Edwards' sermon on Sinners in the hands of an angry God, 'with the flames of this eternal fire.' Oh, it was a long-continued moral agony. The only rest I had in my religion was not to think of it. If I thought, I must doubt; I might become an infidel. And so I held on to Christ, as it were, with a finger or two; but my soul for years was filled with anguish and difficulty, which only deepened as I passed along, and from which I was often tempted to find relief in a total abandonment of it all.

Will you tell me it would not have been good for me if some one had then shown me that these soul-confounding horrors were of human origin, not divine—that the God of the Bible was an intelligible justice, an intelligible love, an awful Judge, but a real Father? Would not my sense of the 'evil of sin' have been deepened if I could have been made to feel that the moral system of God's government was morally intelligible—if I could have been assisted to see all things in the clear light of revealed, paternal love, not in the lurid glare of that lake into which I thought nearly the whole living creation around me was going to burn in agony for ever? Yes, indeed! Sin will never seem so evil as when you can, with your whole heart and soul and strength, 'sing aloud' to God your Redeemer. What is wanted in the spiritual life of most christians is a feeling of intelligent, enthusiastic loyalty to God—a love of his will, because it is his will. And the reason men do not feel this is, I think, because they cannot. They are too full of doubt, distrust, and secret controversy with his supposed government to be able to feel it. And we say,—the root of the evil is in this unscriptural doctrine of endless misery, springing out of the equally unscriptural doctrine of man's natural immortality. Men hold views of the divine administration which freeze up their hearts; yes, freeze up love and joy at their very fountains. Hence church singing so seldom offers the genuine ring of glad voices; hence too, perhaps, the miserable luxury and sensual indulgence in the churches; there is not delight enough in God, in the study of truth, in the work of the Lord, to lead to the sacrifice of the senses; hence the parsimonious money giving,—for men do not spend freely on what they do not heartily love. The real evil of sin is felt by those chiefly who feel the glory, the delight, the enthusiasm of righteousness; and that will be felt most deeply by those to whom God is a near, a glorious, and an intelligible reality, the very sun of righteousness and love, arisen with salvation on his wings.

A secret scepticism is eating out the heart of popular christianity, a scepticism chiefly caused by the incredible doctrine maintained respecting eternal torment. If common christians are to think earnestly, feel strongly, they must hear something in which they can heartily believe. And if you wish them to 'hate evil,' you must show them a God whose very name acts as a watchword that kindles their enthusiasm. It is not the enthusiasm for 'humanity' which Christ came to teach us, so much as this enthusiasm for divinity; but that enthusiasm cannot exist where scepticism is eating like rottenness through the bones. Do not dread the lack of wholesome fear. You will find terror enough left in the awful doctrine of a real 'gehenna of fire;' but you will have an added strength of reason, of conviction, of satisfied justice, of joy, of hope, of gladness, of love, in which you will find far more than a compensation for your lost doctrine of a torment that shall have no end. And when you read your Bible you will find that you hear the voice of God talking with you, not in 'dark speeches, but 'as a man talketh with his friend.'"

WORDS OF LIFE.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

"It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life."—JOHN 6: 63.

Who can measure, or weigh, the full meaning and scope of that one word LIFE? "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his life?" Mark 8: 36, 37. (The word rendered soul in the common version, is life in the Diaglott, and other translations.) Even this mortal life is not to be compared with the best and choicest of the treasures of earth; how then can the mind comprehend the value of that life that shall never end, and that is free from every shadow of evil, and full of peace and joy—boundless joy, and peace like a deep and ever flowing river? "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." John 3: 36.

Do you love life, and "desire to see good days?" If you are united to Christ, as the living branch is united to the vine, then you have life in and through him. But if you have rejected Christ, either openly or secretly, you have cut yourself off from the only source of life, and unless you repent and be converted, you must utterly perish. Have you been convinced of the truth, convicted, yet continue to rebel, and resist the strivings of the Spirit?

O that you might see your danger, and at once find a safe refuge in Jesus. We rejoice in the assurance that some will be saved. The word will not fail of the intended result. It will not return void. It is not all like seed sown by the wayside, or on stony ground, or among thorns. Those who hear, and understand, and obey, bring forth fruit unto everlasting life.

Will you also have this great gift—eternal life? This day it is offered to you freely, but the time is short, and this may be your last opportunity. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Rom. 10: 9. You have no need to go on a long journey, or to descend into the deep, or to ascend to heaven to find the way of life and truth, but the "word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth and in thy heart." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Repent and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out. Jesus died that you might live. He died for you. Believe and live.

PRAISE THE LORD.

S. A. CUMMINGS.

Yes, "praise the Lord" for all his many mercies and blessings innumerable. And among them, I specially praise him for the privilege I enjoyed of going to East Deering to hear Bro. Boutell preach the blessed truths of the gospel. Praise God for the words of comfort he helped that dear brother to preach to us from the blessed Bible. It was good news to us who love the Lord to hear that he is coming again to take his children home. May the Lord bless the word preached to the saving of many souls; and may he help our brothers and sisters to preach the word with power, that many may be gathered into the fold of Christ.

Praise God for free salvation. All may come to him if they will. O the blessed, blessed hope that is given to us, if we are faithful, of a home in the "new earth" when Christ shall come; where the hand of God shall wipe all tears from our eyes; where we shall dwell in mansions built by God's own hand and can praise him forever. Praise God for the promise of a home with him. "Blessed be his holy name for ever."

NO MORE TEARS.

A. A. DUNN.

Numerous are the sources of sorrow in this world. Disappointment, sickness, sorrow and death are continually stirring the fountains of grief, and causing tears in unnumbered drops to roll over the cheeks of the pure and the good. Unseen perhaps by the gay and the proud, who pass thoughtlessly on, but felt and realized in solitude by those who in meekness bear their burdens without a murmur or complaint, looking for the blest Redeemer to come and end their trials and troubles. The poor are trodden down, and the good are despised; homes are broken up, fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters husbands and wives, and loved ones are scattered, perhaps, to meet no more. Circles that were once complete, are now sad and broken. The smiling countenance is no longer seen; the sweet and pleasant voice is no longer heard. Sad, indeed, is the thought.

But there remaineth a rest for the people of God. On the eternal hills no tears bedim the eyes, no sorrow fills the heart. There we shall feel no more affliction or troubles of any kind. The loved and the blest of every age will be united then. Families broken on earth will then be completed, and ties snapped asunder here will there be knit in eternal bonds. O to realize for one moment the joys that await the Christian! Those who fight the good fight of faith are to lay hold on eternal life. May we so live that we may be numbered among those who have part in the first resurrection.

A QUESTION.

Just ask yourselves this question, "On what am I resting for safety in the prospect of that day when the Lord shall shake things to their very foundation?" If there be a mixture of anything with the work of the Lord Jesus—if there be a looking to any other atonement to make your peace with God but the precious blood of Jesus, you are standing upon a hollow foundation which will not bear you. But if, on the other hand, you can as before the Lord, answer that question satisfactorily; if you can say, "The Lord knows there is not anything which affords peace to my wounded conscience but the cleansing blood of Jesus;" then ask yourselves another question, "Is my testimony clear and distinct before the world? Am I evidenced amongst men as a servant of the Lord? Does the world understand me?" For, you may depend upon it, the world is very sharp in its discernment. I do believe that the world has a much more acute discrimination as to who are the Lord's people, and who are not, than we who profess to know a great deal of the things of the Lord. The world marks the inconsistencies of God's people; the world, which wallows in sin, can see sin as a blot upon the character of a professor. The world is keen-sighted in these matters. We ask, what testimony do you bear before the world?

We live in a day when there is a great deal of profession. We live in a day when men love to put on their religion on Sunday, and to put it off on Monday. We live in a day when men can speak of the things of the Lord in one breath, and of the things which are antagonist to the Lord in the next breath. These are trying times, brethren; it behooves those who would honestly manifest to the world around them that they are the servants of God, to live very near to the Lord.

There is nothing which will give real support and comfort but the knowledge of our acceptance in Christ, and the looking for the supply of our spiritual health and strength from Him.—Krause's Sermons.

THE CRY.

O. R. FASSETT.

There is to accompany the proclamation, which is to be given with strength of voice, "Behold, the Lord God will come; . . . behold, his reward is with him." Isa. 40: 9; 10; 62: 6, 7, 11; Rev. 14: 6, 7; 22: 12.

The cry of mortality! "The voice said, Cry. And he said what shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field; the grass withereth, the flower fadeth; because the spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it; surely the people is grass. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand forever." Isa. 40: 6–11.

Our mortal race should be made to know and feel that naught of human form, beauty, glory, or goodliness, survives the withering blast of death; but like "the grass" and "the flower" of it in the burning furnace, "which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven." Matt. 6: 30. Man, physical and mental, perishes in death. And the only hope of future reward and future life is dependent upon the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ to judgment.

When men see their mortality, then they will desire and seek the immortality the gospel proffers them. When they are made to know that there is no future reward nor recompense without the coming of Jesus, then they will begin to pray for his return, and "love his appearing."

Let us "cry." Let us "cry aloud and spare not." Let us preach the mortality of man and the immortality in Christ. Peradventure some in the darkness may comprehend it and be saved.

— It is not your merits nor your righteousness that God requires, but your believing. Just believe that he means what he says when he makes his promises to you. Expect him to be as good as his word.

TRACT DISTRIBUTION.

While it is somewhat impracticable to send out missionaries during the hot season, and the short evenings, great good can be accomplished by the scattering of tracts, which will do much towards preparing the way for the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom when the long evenings return. Let us improve every opportunity for doing good. There are those whose hearts are in the work of tract distribution. Shall they be supplied? During the past few months many thousand pages of tracts have been given away by the Publication Society, which have done much towards awakening new interest in the study of the sacred Scriptures.

An earnest call for tracts comes from San Francisco. Who will help fill up the treasury, so that this important work may be continued with increased vigor? Many are anxiously inquiring after light. Shall we put a lamp into their hand? It is a good time to let our light shine. Our responsibilities as a people are great. Much has been given; much will be required at our hand. Let us meet our responsibilities like true christian men. Time is short, the work is great, and the reward for well-doing is infinite—eternal life. Let us do all in our power to lead men to Christ, that they may with us be heirs of the everlasting kingdom, when paradise shall bloom again.

HYDE PARK.

Bro. and Srs. at Hyde Park, eight miles out of Boston, have just commenced holding meetings again, with an increased prospect of success. Last Sabbath (May 28th) was the first, and their hall was full of attentive hearers. It is certain that there is an increased interest throughout the country to hear about the coming of Christ, the condition of man in death, the final disposition of the wicked, and the home of the righteous.—At the same time, infidelity is advancing rapidly. It requires a firm trust in the Lord to stand against the strong current now rushing into the broad way that leads to destruction. This is no time to parley with the enemy. Let the saints be bold for the right.

There is now bright light for those who truly love Jesus and his appearing,—a pillar of fire at night, and of cloud by day, guiding the pilgrims on their journey to the land of promise. Soon the faithful will pass beyond the reach of the tempter. We have entered a period of thrilling interest, when all should be deeply in earnest in well-doing. Let every watchman give the trumpet a certain sound. Let all divisions, strife, jealousy, hatred and variance, forever cease among those who expect to be saved; otherwise, they can have no seat among the holy ones at "the marriage supper of the Lamb."

HUDSON.—Our meetings in Hudson, Mass., from May 30th to June 4th, inclusive, continued to increase in interest. At the close, the prospect was quite encouraging. We found there some of the dear friends of Jesus, in whose society we took much comfort. The people were anxious to hear about the coming of Christ, and were satisfied that the signs of the times indicate his speedy advent.

PERSONAL.—Our readers will be saddened to learn that our interesting correspondent "C.," from San Francisco, has been quite sick. He is now some better, and hopes to be able to visit New England in early summer. . . . . BRO. J. W. BRITTAIN called on us a few days since. His health is much improved, so that he is again able to preach. He has received rich spiritual blessings from the Lord, and is now traveling delightfully in the "higher-life road," where he enjoys perfect peace and love. We hope many others will seek and walk in the same way. None but those who have tried it are aware what rich blessings are experienced by those who consecrate themselves entirely to Christ. Their peace is then truly "like a river," constantly growing wider and deeper.

WRITE PLAINLY.—We wish to urge those who send articles to the Crisis, to write all proper names very PLAINLY. It is sometimes impossible to make out the name of the writer, and other names of persons and places. Always write your name so that every one can read it; also all other names designed for the press. Please be very particular about this matter, in order that all mistakes may be avoided.

THE POWER OF THE CATHOLICS in this country is increasing rapidly, while it is dying at Rome. Dr. Evarts, of Chicago, lately remarked, "The Roman Catholics of Chicago have more church property than all the other societies combined." It is evident that the Catholics intend to make a grand rally in this country, and try, if possible, to secure its control.

A CHRISTIAN BOARDING-HOUSE.—Those who wish to find a Christian boarding-house in New York, where they can board by the day, week, month, or year, will do well to call on Bro. D. F. Newton, 303 West 20th street. He is the author of "Home Thrusts," "Shining Light," "The Sword that Cuts, the Fire that Burns," and "Apples of Gold in Pictures of Silver"; besides many interesting articles in the Crisis.

ROMANISM.

"The New York Advocate says, that Father Hecker says, 'In fifteen years we Romanists will take the country, and build our institutions over the grave of Protestantism. There is, ere long, to be a State religion in this country, and that State religion is to be Roman Catholic." There must certainly be some mistake about this, since Elder Miles Grant, the Adventist, who is as good authority on the future as Hecker, says that the New Jerusalem (Protestant) is certain to come within five years, and when it does will "cover Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, and nearly half of Pennsylvania.' "

"I enclose to you the above extract, as I regard it partly as a misrepresentation of your position." x.

We did say that the New Jerusalem, as described by John, will be large enough to cover the States named; but did not intimate that it would come down upon New England, but upon the original land of Eden. It is our conviction that Christ may come between the present time and 1875.

POWER OF THE CATHOLICS.

The Examinatori (Italian paper) says:—"The Roman Court expects to control the American Republic, through the cunning of the Papal hierarchy and their universal subjection of the religious interests to those of the politico-ecclesiastical"; and adds "The populous city of New York even now, in fact, is governed by the Roman Court."

That we may know how true this last statement is, we need only observe the official force of the city itself, so far as it is Roman Catholic. "The Sheriff, Register, Comptroller, City Chamberlain, Corporation Counsel, Police Commissioner, President of the Croton Board, Acting Mayor, President of the Board of Alderman, President of the Board of Councilmen, President of the Board of Supervisors, five Justices of the Courts of Record, all but two of the Police Justices, all the Police Court Clerks, three out of four Coroners, two Members of Congress, three out of five State Senators, eighteen out of twenty-one members of the Assembly, fourteen out of nineteen of the Common Council, and eight out of the Supervisors. The Papal Church thus controls in the New York city, first, the taxation of city property; and second, the appropriation of the millions of revenue received from taxation.

The prophet Daniel was inspired to say that the little-horn power "prevailed . . . until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." At the same time they are taking away the "dominion" of the little-horn, at its seat of power; it is to be prevailing, or spreading, in other places. The present facts are in harmony with the prophecy.

"A PRIVILEGED GROWL."

The following common-sense and practical remarks are from the publishers of the Christian Union, an able weekly, edited by Henry Ward Beecher, and published by J. B. Ford & Co., 27 Park Place, New York. Price $3 in advance. We trust our readers may be benefited by a careful reading of the article:

"It would be difficult to name any one minor fault which makes so much trouble as heedlessness. It is one of the least excusable, too, as there is rarely any good reason for the omissions and blunders which people make simply from inattention. Great haste, unusual and crowding press upon business, worry and anxiety about other matters, may palliate the offense of carelessly doing some one little thing; but there are certain things which people seem to think they can neglect or loosely perform without its 'making any difference.' But they think wrongly—if indeed they think at all; and we propose to illustrate how carelessness breeds care, by a brief reference of sundry classes of blunders among our subscribers, whereby it will appear how one little omission makes annoyance and trouble for many people.

1. We have, patiently waiting in a drawer, at least fifty postal money orders which came alone in envelopes, with no letter or name given, no order for anything, no means of knowing whence they came or what they are for. Of course the senders are grumbling because they don't get their paper (or whatever else it was they wanted)—and grumble they must, till they write a 'complaint,' saying that they sent money but got no paper. Those letters must be answered with requests for information as to when and how the money was sent; and so by a painful process of letter-writing, backwards and forwards, these people will at last get what they might have had at first by a little care in sending date, money, name, order, and full post-office address.

2. Many properly dated letters come enclosing money and subscription order—with no name.

3. Many letters come with money and order, but no post-office address.

4. Orders frequently arrive complete in everything but the money.

All of these specimens of carelessness involve disappointment, unpleasant feeling, angry complaint for the subscribers, and much annoyance and trouble for the publishers. And they are but types of other kinds which we have not space to specify. There are so many such troubles that we propose here to offer a few suggestions.

First: In ordering any periodical, send the necessary money, and your full name and post-office address, of town, county and state.

Secondly: If, being a subscriber, you wish your address changed, be sure to give the old as well as the new address.

Thirdly: If your subscription has expired and you send money for a renewal, say so; otherwise it will be put down as a new subscription, and you will be getting two papers, and writing to have one of them stopped."

CHURCH DINNERS.—In these last days of "perilous times" churches are resorting to a great variety of ways to raise money. Among others, is the practice of providing nice dinners for the public. The following is a notice of one in Chicago, published in the Chicago Post, May 26th, 1871:—

"The dinners at Metropolitan Hall, given by the ladies of St. John's church, are elegant repasts. The ladies who serve are handsome, and the cause to be benefited one of the best. To-morrow is the last day, and the house should be crowded."

VICTORIA C. WOODHULL, a noted lady among the brokers in New York, who has been named as a candidate for the next Presidency, has lately issued a card, expressing her sentiments on marriage, of which the following is the substance:—

"I do not intend to be made a scapegoat to be offered up as a victim to society by those who cover over the foulness of their lives and thoughts with the hypocritical mantle of fair professions, and by diverting public attention from their own iniquity in pointing the finger at me. I believe in Spiritualism; I advocate free love in its highest and purest sense, as the only cure for the immorality and deep damnation by which men corrupt and disfigure God's most holy institution of the sexual relation. My judges preach against free love openly, and practice it secretly. For example, I know of one man, a public teacher of eminence, who lives in concubinage with the wife of another public teacher of almost equal eminence." She concludes: "I shall make it my business to analyze some of these lives and take my chance in the matter of libel suits."

"CAN YE NOT DISCERN THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES?"—Question. "Tell us . . . what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"—The Disciples, Matt. 24: 3.

Answer. "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." —Jesus, Matt. 24: 14.

"The whole world has been ransacked and explored; there is not now a corner on the globe where Christianity is unknown."—H. W. BEECHER, Lecture-room Talk, as reported in Boston Traveller, of April 8th.

If Mr. Beecher's statement is correct, as we believe, then it follows that we are near the second coming of Christ. Take any chain of prophecy, and trace it to its end, and it will be found that we are very near the end of the last link in the chain. When we look at the facts in the case, they are thrilling—overwhelming. Is the reader ready to meet Jesus?

THE APOCALYPSE.—Dr. J. A. Seiss, of Philadelphia, has issued No. 5, Vol. II. of his series of very interesting lectures on the Revelation of Jesus Christ, given to St. John, containing a revised text. Dr. Seiss is an original thinker, deeply interested in the speedy, personal coming of Christ. He is the editor of the "Prophetic Times," a valuable monthly, relating to the signs of the times, and the fulfillment of prophecy. We are acquainted with no other work on the "Revelation" so interesting as the one by Dr. Seiss. Price 50cts. a number, postage 4 cts. Send to "Prophetic Times," Box 2245, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL for June is a bright specimen, ever vigorous, lively, and abreast of the times; it contains sketches on John Simmons, founder of the Woman's College; Pursuits requiring strength; How my future was revealed to me; Man, his origin and development; Equal Pay for Equal Labor; Mixed Marriages—Jews and Christians; The man about town; Taste and Economy in Dress; Food for Thinkers and Workers; In the Mammoth Cave; J. M. Hutchings, of Yosemite Valley; Criminals, how to treat and reform them; The means and the object of Education; My captivity among the Indians; The Traveller. With portraits and other illustrations. Price 30 cts. The July number commences a new volume, so that the present is the time to subscribe. $3 a year.

THE KINGDOM TO BE "SET UP."

At the time the prophet Daniel lived, heaven above was as really in existence as it now is; but notwithstanding that, Daniel predicted the setting up of a kingdom after his day, which could not have meant heaven. The prediction reads:—

"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. 2: 44.

Where will this kingdom be set up? And will it be a literal or spiritual kingdom? Many claim that a spiritual kingdom is meant, while all agree that the location of this kingdom is on the earth.

We deny that a spiritual kingdom is meant, because (1) this kingdom is symbolized by a "stone" that smites the "image"; not on its "head," which is explained to symbolize the first universal kingdom, Babylon; not on its "breast," which is explained to symbolize the second universal kingdom, Medo-Persia; not on its "belly," which is explained to symbolize the third universal kingdom, Grecia; not on its "legs," which are explained to symbolize the fourth universal kingdom, Rome; but on its "FEET," which were of "iron and clay," and are explained to represent the "DIVIDED" state of the fourth kingdom. That kingdom was not "divided" till long after the first advent; therefore, the kingdom represented by this stone was not then set up.

(2) A spiritual kingdom, or gospel kingdom, if there were such a kingdom, might absorb other kingdoms by making them component elements of its self; but could never "break in pieces," and cause them to be "carried away," so that "no place could be found for them."

(3.) When the "seventh angel sounds," and not before, "the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord." Rev. 11: 15. This is after the gospel dispensation is ended, and the righteous dead are raised as subjects. This literal kingdom will then "fill the whole earth," and "never be destroyed."

The angel Gabriel thus addresses the prophet Daniel concerning the same kingdom:

"And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom UNDER the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Dan. 7: 27.

Here we have the geographical location of the kingdom definitely specified, namely: "Under the whole heaven," not above it. If we can now find its chronological location, and learn its nature—whether literal or spiritual—all will be plain.

(1.) When will this kingdom be established? Let us look at the vision in this chapter. Daniel sees four great beasts, the last of which is "given to the burning flame;" then he sees "one like the Son of man come with the clouds of heaven, . . . and there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." (Dan. 7: 13, 14.) These four beasts are explained to mean four universal kingdoms on earth. "The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth," "the whole earth" (v. 23;) and after this universal kingdom is "given to the burning flame," the heavenly one, from the skies, sets up a kingdom, which is explained to be "under the whole heaven."

(2.) It covers the same territory occupied by the four preceding kingdoms. They were literal; so will this be; and it "shall not be destroyed;" for "the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever." (v. 18.) Happy home of immortal saints.

For the want of some better argument against the doctrine of the future reign of Christ and his saints upon the earth, we are sometimes informed that this globe would not be large enough to afford a home for all the resurrected saints. The enormous absurdity of this objection is apparent from the following considerations.

It is estimated that men die at the rate of thirty millions a year. Suppose we allow that they have died at this rate from the creation, and are destined to die at the same rate down to the end of the 6,000 years—though this is too large an estimate, for a long time passed away after the creation before men died at the rate of a hundred a year, and a very long time elapsed before they died at the rate of one million a year; but waving all this, and a similar state of affairs that succeeded the deluge, we will count thirty millions a year from the creation down to the end of the 6,000 years, and multiply 30,000,000 by 6,000, and then add in the 1,200,000,000 that are supposed to be living on the earth. Then take the State of New York, and reduce its area from square miles to rods, then to feet, then compare figures; and you will find that the "Empire State" alone is large enough to hold every human being that has lived, or will live, down to the end of the 6,000 years. Then subtract the millions of unrighteous people who have lived and died on earth, and what becomes of this objection? It is driven into oblivion.

When the earth is renovated, and filled with the glory of God; when sin is banished, and sorrow comes to an end; not only will the earth be large enough, but glorious enough as a home for the resurrected saints. When the divine Ruler comes in majesty from the skies, and awakens the sleeping saints, and robes them with immortality, and shall "thoroughly purge his floor," and there shall be no more death," and the inhabitant shall not say I am sick," then earth will become a lovely realm. How changed the scene will be. Now its inhabitants are a dying race; then "neither can they die any more." Now they are all mortal; then this mortal shall have "put on immortality;" now many are sinners; then they shall "all be righteous;" now earth groans under the curse; then "there shall be no more curse," and the tabernacle of God shall be with men." Tears are then all wiped away by a divine hand, and the saints all made "equal to the angels." It will be a sinless, deathless, graveless, and sorrowless paradise; its inhabitants being composed of the good of every age and clime, together with the angelic hosts. Who wants a better kingdom? W. S.

"THERE IS A SPIRIT IN MAN."

Job affirms that "there is a spirit in man; and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding" (Job 32: 8); but he nowhere asserts, or even intimates, that this spirit is a personality distinct from the body. Aside from the spirit of life which returns to God who gave it, when man dies, man possesses a mental spirit, the result of a living organism, but not a personality within the organism; and this mind, often called spirit, instead of outliving the body, dies with it, for "in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 4. As long as the thinker lives, thoughts will have an existence; death kills the mind, hence that is not a deathless personality. The assertion of Daniel, "I Daniel was grieved in my spirit," referred to his mind; and the statement, "The spirit is willing," relates to the mind; so with many other texts. The mind can be "grieved," can be "willing," and can possess knowledge. "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit [mind] of man which is within him?" (1 Cor. 2: 11.

But this mental spirit is never said to be a personality, and is as much the result of a living organism as is the instinct of the beast; for instinct is but a species of mind, in which the reasoning power is diminutive; and who will claim that instinct outlives the beast as a distinct entity? Without mind, man could not love, fear, nor hate. Beasts evince love, fear, and hatred. Can they exercise these passions without a degree of mind? And if they can love, fear and hate, without an immortal entity within, to exercise these passions for them, why cannot man? When men enter death, "their love, and their hatred, and their envy" perishes (Eccl. 9: 6); and the only reason why these passions of the mind thus perish, is because the mind itself perishes under the stroke of death. W. S.

DID THE SOUL OF MOSES APPEAR AT THE TRANSFIGURATION?

It is claimed that the disembodied soul of Moses appeared to the disciples upon the mount of transfiguration; but this is only the guess so of theologians, for the record of the scene neither asserts nor hints such a thing, but positively negates the claim. "There appeared unto them Moses and Elias." Luke 9: 30. If Elias, or Elijah, was really there in person, so was Moses, for there were "two men," not one man, and one spirit of another man. It is certain that Peter did not think that Moses' disembodied soul was there, from the fact he made this proposal. "Let us make here three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias"; and Peter would not have proposed building a tabernacle for an immaterial shadow to live in. He supposed Moses himself was there; and it would have required no more of a miracle for God to have resurrected Moses, and placed him personally on the mount, than to have personally presented Elijah there who had previously been translated. It is objected that Moses could not have been there in his resurrected state, as Christ was "the first born to immortality, but Lazarus and others were previously raised to temporal life, and Moses might have been raised on the same principle. Jesus pronounces it a "vision." "Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man." If it was a supernatural vision, neither Moses nor Elias were there in reality; but if it was a vision of actual sight, then a real Moses was there as certainly as a real Elias, as the result of a miracle, for not a word is said about the soul of Moses in the account. W. S.

WHAT "SPIRIT SHALL RETURN TO GOD?"

It is claimed that a personal spirit returns to God at the death of the body; but this is but an assumption. That a spirit of some kind is to return to God is evident from these statements: "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" Eccl. 3: 21. "And the spirit shall return to God who gave it." Eccl. 12: 7. From both of these texts we learn that man possesses a spirit of some kind, called ruach in the original, which leaves man at death; but is it a personality?

1. The same writer speaks also of "the spirit of the beast." Is that a personality? He affirms of men and beasts, "They have all ONE ruach," or breath of life (Eccl. 3: 19), so if one possesses a personal ruach, so does the other. But if one is an element, so is the other.

2. This spirit is to "return to God who gave it." What kind of a spirit does God give man at his creation—a personal spirit, or an element of life? He "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life" or lives (Gen. 2: 7), the same being also possessed by the beasts (Gen. 6: 17; 7: 15, 22,), and this spirit only is to return to God. Whatever spirit returns to God existed when God "gave it," for God did not give something that was to become a spirit, but he "gave it"—the SPIRIT—and if he gave it as a personality, it will return as a personality; and if we have such a pre-existent personality, why do we not remember our former existence? The spirit of life was given as an element, and will so return. W. S.

CAN AN IMMORTAL SOUL BE SAVED?—We are told that "Christ died for the ungodly" (Rom. 5: 6), that the Lord "laid on him the iniquity of us all," and that "he was bruised for our iniquities" (Isa. 53: 5, 6), and also that we are "reconciled to God by the death of his Son" (Rom. 5: 10), from the fact that "he bare our sins in his own body on the tree," and "suffered for sins, the just for the unjust" (1 Pet. 3: 18). The demands of the divine law must be met either by the offender, or by one that will take the place of the offender, and thus save the offender, which Christ volunteered to do for the sinner, on certain conditions; and the demands of that law are nothing less than death. Christ met that demand "in his own body on the tree," which will shield the sinner from the death penalty, if he accepts Christ as his Savior; for "Christ was once offered to bare the sins of many"—this offering being equivalent in value to millions of copper coins,—but if the sinner refuses the conditions on which the death of Christ can avail in his case, Christ's death will not save him from the demands of a broken law. But how can the death of Christ save a deathless soul from a death penalty? An immortality cannot die, it cannot be saved from death. If we would "save a soul from death," we must save such souls as are capable of dying; and if Christ died for this purpose—"the just for the unjust"—his death can only benefit such souls as are capable of dying, which is not true of immortal souls; hence they cannot be saved by the death of Christ, if there are any such souls. W. S.

"CANNOT KILL THE SOUL."

Said Jesus—"Fear not them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul [psuche—life]; but rather fear him who is able to destroy both soul [psuche—life] and body in hell." Matt. 10: 28. The christian, by obedience, secures a life that is not affected by the death of the body, here called soul or psuche; but this psuche, which is forty times translated life and lives in the New Testament, can ultimately be destroyed with the body in gehenna, if its possessor is unrighteous; hence, it is not immortal; neither is it a personality that lives independent of the body. There is a psuche, or life, for both saint and sinner beyond the reign of temporal death; but in the sinner's case, that psuche or life will be destroyed with the body in hell; but in the case of the saint, a life indestructible is secured; for "this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." 1 John 5: 11.

Here is a life that cannot be obliterated by the hand of man. Men can only suspend temporal life; it will be resumed at the resurrection, when in the case of the sinner God will "destroy both soul and body in hell," beyond which time their life will never be resumed. "Our life is hid with Christ in God," and we now possess it by faith only, till "Christ, who is our life, shall appear," when we shall awake to life everlasting. This life is not a personality. W. OUR WESTERN WORLD—THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN COUNTRY—AN EXCURSION THITHER.

Boston, June 5th, 1871.

ED. CRISIS:—As this is the season we go on recuperating tours, and as no people are so blessed as we Americans in having such an extent of country to visit, we having in company with you lately made a tour over our western world; therefore, for the benefit of any of your readers who have the desire to make summer recuperating tours, to refresh and build up the system, and at the same time see all to be seen on a tour across the great plains to the Rocky Mountains, Salt Lake City, and California, to see the buffaloes by the thousands (see Leslie's pictorial for June); then, go on the route we shall here describe:

Striking out for said tour, go over the Boston and Albany road, stop in to see them at Saratoga; then over the New York Central for Niagara Falls; thence over the Great Western R. R., through Canada to Detroit; thence over the world-renowned Michigan Central, for Chicago, where, in the same depot, you find the ever-reliable Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy R. R., for a ride across the prairies of Illinois, Missouri, and Kansas, for Denver, the C. B. & Q. R. R. running coaches from Chicago to Denver by way of Quincy, and the Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R. to Kansas City; and thence over the Kansas Pacific for Denver,—and on this route only you see the buffaloes (as described by Leslie's June No.). From Denver to Cheyene, thence by U. P. R. R. to Ogden, and Utah Central to Salt Lake City; at which place we recommend the Townsend House.

So here is a route for a summer tour; and for all further information call on, or address the Editor of the Crisis, or James Mills, Esq., Agent, 86 Washington St., Boston.

Yours, A TOURIST.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 18th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

WORLD'S CONVERSION.

I. MAXIM.

BRO. GRANT:—I saw in the Crisis of Feb. 8th, an article from Zion's Herald, headed "Time of the World's Conversion given." The writer seemed to carry the idea that before the two thousand years expire, the people will all be Methodists, according to their increase for the last one hundred and forty years; there being then but eight or ten, and now (1870) three and a half million. Consequently, for the next remaining one hundred and forty years, increasing as fast as formerly, they will fill the whole earth, or amount to (as he says) one hundred times more than the present inhabitants of the world, allowing that to be one billion, two hundred thousand millions. So that, at the same ratio of increase as in the past, the Methodists alone, under God, will save one hundred times as many as now inhabit the earth.

Now, I ask, If this is to be so, what will be the condition of the world then? If the Methodists still increase in pride, and in following the vain fashions, fairs, levees, etc., of the world, the next one hundred and thirty years, as they have for the last fifty years (when compared with the plain, simple and humble costumes and appearance of the eight or ten Methodists of 1740), will they look like the humble followers of the poor, despised Nazarene? or more resemble the world's aristocracy and the proud Pharisees of olden time? Is this the people, and the way the world is to be converted before Christ shall come? or will it be nearer the fulfillment of that scripture (Ps. 14: 2, 3)—"The Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God. They are all gone aside, they are altogether become filthy; there is none that doeth good, no, not one."

When Christ comes the second time, "shall he find faith on the earth?" If all the inhabitants of the earth are Methodist christians when he comes, he will find nothing but faith. Christ says, the wheat and tares shall grow together until the harvest, and the harvest is the end of the world. This cannot be true, if they are all Methodist christians when he comes. For he is coming to reward the righteous, and to destroy the wicked. "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. . . . They were eating and drinking, marrying and given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." If they are all Methodist christians when he comes, will it be like the days of Noah?

Correspondence.

From Sr. H. P. Chase.

BRO. GRANT:—It does rejoice my heart to see increasing evidence that Jesus, our great Life-giver, is soon to come and take his throne, and on it reign; purify old earth that has been groaning under the curse for nearly six thousand years; raise the dead, change the living, waiting saints, and destroy death the last enemy, and forever put an end to sin and sorrow. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear. I do praise God that some have ears to hear about Jesus. I can say of a truth, that I love him, I have kept company with him more than sixteen years, and he has always proved true and kind; and when I have in any way displeased him, he has always forgiven me. The more I get acquainted with him, the better I love him. I would not give up his company for worlds and worlds like this. But the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof. The silver and the gold are his, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. The kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens, will be given to his saints.

The holy city, New Jerusalem, is to be the great capital of the new earth. Its streets will be beautiful gold, its gates of pearl, and it has no need of the sun nor of the moon to shine in it, for the Lord God will be the light of the place. There will be no night there; not one grave-yard will ever be found in all the holy land. Jesus has promised to give me all of this, and let me live with him eternally, if I will obey him; and he does not require anything hard of me. Do you wonder I love him? He loved me so much that he laid down his life to redeem me. Greater love hath no man than this; and he says, Whosoever will, may come and share in his glory. The invitation has been out over eighteen hundred years. It is time you accepted the offer. Soon it will be forever too late. If there is one that has become sick of the sorrowing scenes of earth, and desires something much better, I invite you to come to Christ. You will find far greater riches than all the treasures of earth. They will soon perish, but the riches he gives will last throughout the endless ages of eternity. I do entreat you, in Jesus' name, to seek him while he may be found, and call upon him while he is near. When once he rises up and shuts to the door, it will be too late.

Some have got the idea that to become a christian is rather degrading; but this is a great mistake. For there is nothing else that will elevate one so much; nothing else can give him so high a position in this life. It makes him an heir of God, and joint heir with Jesus Christ to an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. He becomes a son or daughter of the Lord Almighty, having Jesus Christ for his elder Brother. If this will not exalt one, tell me, ye who can, what will? There is everything glorious, beautiful and sublime in the religion of Jesus Christ. It takes one up out of the filth of wickedness, to walk in the King's highway of holiness. What is still more blessed, eternal life is soon to be given to the saints.

The cry has gone forth from east to west, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." Had they believed in Noah's day that the flood was coming, they would have gone into the ark. Had they believed in Lot's day, they would have gone out of Sodom. And did they believe in this our day that Jesus is coming back to the earth, they would get ready, and not be left to call for rocks and mountains to fall on them, to hide them from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne. It will soon be said, He has come. Soon you will be at the judgment. Are you ready? What should you expect if called there to-night? Would it be, "Come, ye blessed"? or, "Depart, ye cursed"? May the Lord help you to look into your own heart now. Delays are dangerous. Put nothing off till to-morrow, that ought to be done to-day. To-morrow, you may be in the embrace of death. The last items of God's word are being fulfilled. Next we may look for the marriage of the Lamb, when Christ will move home his bride. Not for a few years, and then to be separated by death, but to live eternally. How I love the thought. How it cheers my heart, amid the changing scenes of earth. I had rather be the least of them who are the Lord's alone, than wear a royal diadem and sit upon a throne. HANNAH P. CHASE.

Bridgewater, Vt.

From Bro. Geo. A. Barker.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Having been down at death's door panting for mortal life for eight weeks, the past fall, it seemeth to be my duty to praise the name of my heavenly Father, that he has heard and answered prayer in my behalf, and raised me up so that I can walk around a little. For ten weeks I was confined to my room, and most of the time to my bed. While lying low, nigh unto death, I learned much from the Lord. He showed me my entire nothingness, my unfaithfulness, my selfishness, and that I had not advanced in the christian life, for the want of an entire consecration to him. I took a retrospective view of past years, and found I had learned new truth, but had not even retained what I had once attained unto. I had been disobedient too often. I had given way to temptation, instead of looking for the way of escape to bear it.

Now, my brethren, wherein I have grieved any of you, who may read this, from the heart I ask your forgiveness. I wish to take the position our Master sets forth, in Matt. 18—"If thy brother repent, forgive him." Now I do this from the fact that God hath worked in me a reformation. I have begun a new life; and I can say with Paul, "The life that I now live, I live by the faith of the Son of God," knowing he loves me, has accepted my plea, and owns me as his. O how bright and clear the way; how strait the path; how light the burden; how easy the yoke. What peace, what joy, what love. My soul pants continually after the water-brooks of life. "Peace like a river," joy 'midst affliction, contentment in want, light in darkness. I can say of a truth, from the heart, "God is love." Pray for poor me, that my faith fail not, nor my love grow cold; and may the God of peace be with you till Jesus comes. Your Bro., looking for Jesus soon.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. E. SHEPARD, North Easton, writes:—"Please permit a stranger to address you as a brother, and also to add my testimony through the columns of the Crisis in favor of truth. I am a member of the Methodist church, but have dared to leave my accustomed place of worship, and identify myself with that 'peculiar, people, known as 'Adventists.' Some few years ago, no one could have made me believe that I could ever belong to this company.

Well, time passed on, and two years ago last autumn, I was favored with the exceeding great blessing of receiving a visit from a friend and relative, who was an 'Adventist,' and in conversation with him, I first learned, or rather heard the doctrine that man has not an immortal soul. I could not then receive or adopt his sentiments, but through his love for the truth, and a desire for it to prevail, he procured quite a package of tracts, which I carefully read and compared with Scripture, until I had not a doubt of its truth. Since then, it has been my privilege to peruse the very precious columns of your paper, the Crisis, every week, which is lent to me by a kind neighbor; and as I have found its contents so instructive and interesting, I am desirous of adding my mite in favor of its support.

My greatest wonder now is, why the immortal-soul doctrine was ever preached, or at least since Christ; and I verily believe that the Sadducees are not the only people to whom the words of our Savior might apply, when he said, 'Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God.' Oh, how important it is for us to give up the belief that we are immortal, and thus becoming nothing, in order that Christ may be all in all; and also that he may receive the honor and glory which is due him through faith in his promises; for he will come again to raise his faithful ones from the dead, and then they will receive as a free gift that immortality which we have far too long thought we already possessed. I do not wonder that the laboring class have failed to discover their great error, but I do wonder that our ministers, who make the Bible their study (or ought to), have been so long in discovering so important a truth; and my prayer for those who are still unenlightened on the subject is, that they may anoint their eyes with eye-salve, that they may see."

SR. D. A. BEAN writes from Sutton, N. H., Mar. 10th, 1871:—"I have felt so impressed to write, that I have thought it best to ask for a space in the Crisis to express some of the thoughts of my heart. David said, 'While I was musing, the fire burned; then spake I with my tongue'; but I will speak with my pen, for I think I have felt as he did sometimes, when reading some of the pieces in the Crisis. When we first get it, we look for the appointments, to see if there are any for this place; then for the California news. We have felt, of a truth, that God sent you there, and that he has given you success in proclaiming the great truths of the Bible, and winning souls to Christ. I am sure the prayers of God's people follow you.

We have some soul-stirring pieces in the Crisis; many that give us an understanding of the Bible, showing us our proximity to the judgment. If we get a little sleepy, it comes in time to wake us up to watchfulness. There are some in this place that are still trying to keep their garments pure, and be ready for their coming King. We do not have preaching here all the time. Bro. Ross was with us one evening, and gave good satisfaction. It has been said to us often, by those who do not believe as we do, as well as those who make no profession of religion, Is he not coming again? Spiritualism is gaining ground here rapidly. My husband was pleased when he read about a conversation that Bro. Sheldon had with a southern Elder as to whether the negro had any soul, and to see how the Elder got caught in his own trap. We hope he will begin to see things in their true light."

Bro. J. W. Elliot, Ullman's Ridge, Mo., writes:—"The providence of our heavenly Father has led me with unmistakable signs to this part of his moral vineyard, where I feel that my labors will be abundantly blessed, there being no other one to proclaim the coming of our Lord south of the Arkansas line, with the exception of St. Louis. The field is large, and unoccupied by any who hold the present truth. O how inadequate am I for so great a task. But I put my trust in my Master, who has said, 'Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.' This is truly a missionary field. I sincerely request all the aid that our Mission Board can bestow, which will be thankfully received, and duly applied. I never saw a community so eager to read our tracts as they are in this vicinity. I brought quite a number with me, and have distributed the greater part of them already, and would like to have some sent as soon as practicable, by express, to Suscumbia, Miller Co., Mo.

If you know of any good Bro. in the gospel ministry, who would like to come South for his health, I know of no better opening where his labors could be blest, and his health improved, than this place. I should consider it a great blessing to have a co-worker, as it is almost impossible for one man to fill appointments at all times. If any should feel disposed to come, let him correspond with me at once. I have held three stated meetings here, having a full house every time. The audience was attentive, and apparently anxious to hear. I wish to enlarge my field of labor, but cannot do it to advantage without some assistance. Nevertheless, I have consecrated my time to the cause of my heavenly Master, knowing that our labors are not in vain in the Lord. Pray for me, that the Lord would direct and sustain me. Your Bro. in the vineyard of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, looking and watching for his second appearing from heaven. Amen."

CORRECTIONS.

Dear Friends:—Will you have the kindness to correct in your paper three mistakes in articles written by me. In "Once and Now," in May 24th issue, "and of a form of godliness—in short, the power," it should have read, "of a form of godliness shorn of the power." Also the magazine referred to was not "Christian World," but "Christian Herald." In last week's Crisis, article under the head "Pardon," I am made to quote a doublet from a poetic stanza reading thus:—

"There's no salvation in the tomb,
Or pardon offered to the Lord."

Instead of that it should have been—

"There's no salvation in the tomb,
Or pardon offered to the dead."

Knowing you will readily correct these typographical mistakes, I am yours truly,

Fairhaven, Mass. W. Kellaway.

Obituaries.

Thomas. Fell asleep in Jesus, May 20th, in Providence, R. I., Helen, wife of Elder J. W. Thomas, in the twenty-third year of her age.

She was true in her friendship, generous in her sympathies, and unsparing in her kindness to the poor. She "rests from her labors, and her works do follow." Thursday, the 23d, after appropriate services in Providence, we accompanied her deeply afflicted husband, infant son, father and mother, brothers and sisters, and other relatives, to Rockland, the place of her birth, where we found gathered at the meeting-house an assembly of the young and aged, who came to pay a last tribute of respect to one they knew so well, and loved so tenderly. May her death be sanctified to the good of the friends, and especially to her husband, whose health is feeble. A. Ross.

Chadsey. Died Jan. 16th, 1871, at her residence near Fitch Bay, in Stanstead, P. Q., of puerperal fever, Julia G. Moulton, wife of George Chadsey, aged twenty-nine years, ten months, and nineteen days.

Sister Julia had lived a consistent christian life for a number of years, and was calm and tranquil in view of the near approach of death, which she contemplated with composure as the end of her sufferings.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer by request of the departed, from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

Chas. P. Dow.

Bartlett. Died in Northwood, N. H., April 29th, 1871, William P. and Rebecca J. Bartlett, aged eighteen years and sixteen days.

In his last sickness he sought and found the Savior, died in peace, and rests in hope. Funeral services by the writer, assisted by E. C. Cogswell, pastor of the Congregational church.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

Paris, May 29. Already there is a strong feeling that the Paris Government is to weak too last.

Awful massacres continue. At the barricades in Rue Rochuart, in one ditch, wounded people were found in it buried alive. They groaned and shrieked dreadfully all night. An epidemic is feared from the number of dead bodies.

Mathieu, a member of the Commune, was arrested and 150,000 francs were found upon him. He is accused of selling the Commune.

Vidal was shot as was also Frielberd. The body of the latter was claimed by his widow. Forty thousand francs were found in his cellar, spoils of the Republic.

The Versailists have placed back the statue of Henry Quatre which had been thrown into the Seine.

Okolwski, found wounded in an ambulance, was taken out and shot.

Milliere was arrested at the Luxembourg. He resisted violently and fired six shots from his revolver. He was taken to the steps and a platoon of soldiers shot him.

During the attack by the Versailists upon the barricades in the Place des Fetes, a number lost their way and got mixed up with the Communists, by whom they were taken prisoners and fifty of them shot.

Versailles, May 29. At the sitting of the Assembly to-day Changarnier spoke about Metz, defending Bazaine. Thiers replied, calling Bazaine an illustrious warrior.

The Duke Audiffret Pasquer proposed the admittance of the Orleans princes into the Assembly. Picard replied that he would be happy to consider the subject.

Clinchamp's corps have returned in triumph to Versailles with 6000 prisoners, who were discovered to be of the insurgents who murdered nine Domican priests Friday.

Paris, May 30. Rochefort has been condemned to death by the Versailles Court Martial. He has been probably executed already.

Paris, May 30. Gen. Cluseret was shot Saturday in the barracks of Prince Eugene.

A prisoner named Duill, having boasted that he ordered the execution of Gens. Thomas and Le Campt, was instantly killed.

Large masses of troops are now passing down Rue Lafayette, bearing twenty-two insurgent standards.

A girl, seventeen years of age, was shot this morning for firing at officers.

A number of persons were detected throwing petroleum in the cellars of the Faybourg Montmarte, and also in firing upon the troops in Rue Havre. They were all arrested.

All the shops in the city are opening once more, and Paris begins to wear an animated appearance.

Picard has resigned and is succeeded by Le-Franc. Gen. Cissy succeeds Gen. Loleio as Minister of War. Favre remains in the Ministry at the special request of Thiers.

Picard will be made Governor of the Bank of France.

Vincennes was surrendered unconditionally this morning. It contained three hundred men, among whom were eighteen chiefs of the defunct Commune.

General Cissey's L'Admirault's and Vinoy's corps have completely occupied Paris, and will remain until the city is thoroughly pacified.

General Barral has been named Governor of the city, but without title.

Versailles, May 31. McMahon, in his proclamation just issued, divides Paris into four commands, viz: east, north, centre and south. Gen. Vinoy is appointed to command the east, Gen. Ladmirault the north, Gen. Donai the centre, and Gen. Cissey the south. The civil power is transferred to the military, and no ingress to or egress from the city will be permitted.

Paris will remain for some time yet under military jurisdiction, but communication with the city is now unrestricted and entrance and exit is free to all.

The number of prisoners now in the hands of the Government exceeds 40,000.

It is reported that Pyat has escaped from Paris.

The adherents of Duke d'Aumale and the Bonapartists are both very active in schemes for the restoration of the Bourbon and Napoleon dynasties.

London, May 31. To-day's Paris advices say that the executions of the persons denounced continue. As soon as they are discovered in their hiding places they are arrested and shot. Numerous arrests of men and women continue to be made. There have been renewed attempts at assassination and arson. Many of those executed yesterday and to-day seemed perfectly crazy.

A horrible effluvia from the bodies of the dead fills certain quarters of the city.

There are abundant signs of a speedy coup d'etat in the Assembly, to depose Thiers and summon Count de Chambord to the throne of France.

Paris, May 31. Thirty-three Communists, among whom were seven women, were shot in a body by a company of soldiers in the plaza in front of the Hotel de Ville this morning. Around the sides of the square, troops to the number of 1500 were drawn up, under Col. Guizot. At eight o'clock the prisoners, who had been confined in the coal cellars back of the porter's lodge in the Hotel de Ville, were brought out. Their hands were tied behind their backs, and they were then marched out by the main gateway, through a double file of soldiers. Having reached the centre of a wide area in front of the Hotel de Ville, they were ranged in a row and made to kneel down close together. There was nothing on the whole plaza but three empty scavenger carts, which stood in a line at the rear of the prisoners. When the company was in a line and ready to fire, Col. Guizot stepped forward and told the prisoners in a few words that they were to suffer death for having been caught in the act of setting fire to buildings and dwellings in Paris. At this moment the women uttered piercing shrieks, and began to sway themselves back and forth. An officer advanced and made them keep still with the flat of his sword. A few minutes afterward a volley was fired, and when the smoke cleared away a most horrible sight was presented. Three of the women in the middle of the row between the men were still living and writhing in awful agony. A second volley was fired, and then a third, and not until the sixth did all the prisoners cease to live. The dead bodies were then flung into three scavenger carts and carried away to be buried. There were few people at the scene.

Paris, June 3. The streets of Paris have been reopened to traffic. The barricades have all disappeared. The pavements have been repaired, and there is perfect order everywhere. The police are arresting all suspected persons. Ten Courts Martial have been established at Cherbourg for the trial of all prisoners sent there by the Provost Marshal. The latter service is carried on at the Theatre du Chatelet, in this city, where an examination is held prior to trial by the Military Court.

Paris, June 4. A letter from Father Hyacinthe, in the Gaulois, acknowledges the sympathy Italy feels for France, and advises the union of the Latin races, as the balance of Europe is menaced by the preponderance of the Germans. "O, slaves, the acts of the Commune are the result of the negation of God by the people. The nineteenth century is the age of workingmen. The second empire treated social questions in the spirit of the Cæsars, instead of seeking to solve them by dissemination of education. It moreover imposed prolonged celibacy on soldiers, and legalized the prostitution of women; and the church, alas! also failed in its mission. It was too much occupied with dogmatic questions and too little with the instruction of its flock."

Father Hyacinthe concludes: "Paris is in ashes, the work of a people who have no God, or say it is impossible for them to believe in or love him. Let the rulers with whole heart and brain consider the problem and labor for the restoration of France to faith, prosperity and peace."

Paris, June 5. An address to the Pope is circulating in the provinces. It expresses the hope that regulated France will soon lend an avenging arm to the Holy Father. The document is freely signed.

The Pestilence in Buenos Ayres.—Recent telegrams fully confirm the first rumors that reached us of the prevalence, to a terrible extent, of the yellow fever at Buenos Ayres. Indeed, the latest, and apparently most authentic reports speak of the pestilence as increasing largely over the estimates made some few days ago. Up to the time of the departure of present advices, twelve thousand of the two hundred thousand inhabitants of the city had fallen victims to the terrible scourge. A similar percentage of mortality in the metropolis of New York would cut down over sixty thousand people. The end of the dread evil, however, does not even appear to rest with the twelve thousand dead. Not only is the plague increasing materially, in defiance of the feeble efforts that are being exerted to check its ravages, but the terror-stricken populace, bearing the seeds of disease with them, are flying in immense numbers to other cities. It is said that the population now remaining in the place does not exceed twenty-five thousand souls, and that two-thirds of these are sufferers from the epidemic. The whole city, in fact, except the sick and their friends, appear to have sought refuge in flight. It is feared that this action alone will carry the pestilence to Montevideo and the surrounding towns and villages. In the contemplation of so great a calamity as this is, Americans have very plainly two duties before them. Common humanity demands that the utmost exertions should be made by them for the relief of the unhappy sufferers in the plague stricken land, while an appreciation of the safety of our own people demands the exercise of the utmost vigilance by our health authorities. The fever that now prevails in Buenos Ayres, is of an unusually virulent type, far more dangerous and obstinate than ordinary yellow fever. A variety of it desolated Norfolk some twelve or fifteen years ago, and then being carried by the wind from an infected vessel, communicated its terrors to Fort Hamilton, and thence along the shore to Governor's Island and over to Staten Island. In view of these facts, and of the additional one that trading ships from South America are continually droping in at our ports, it is evident that too many precautions cannot well be taken by those in whose hands the health and well being of the people so largely rest.

DOMESTIC.

Terrible Fires raging in the Woods of Canada. A dispatch from Ottawa gives further details of the terrible fires now raging in the country districts in that vicinity, which were started about a fortnight since by persons engaged in clearing land, and which threaten to devastate a larger area of country than those of last year. The fires are favored by the absence of rain, the high winds, the dryness of the trees, and the accumulated leaves of centuries, and they rush with terrible speed on scattered villages and detached farm houses. Between Aylmer village and the Gatineau they seem to be the worst. East and west along the course of the Ottawa river, and north and south, the flames are hissing and rushing with fearful energy. At the Quio, a small town thirty miles above the city of Ottawa to the west, the parsonage of Mr. Moore, the tenant, has been destroyed, with several other dwellings. Business is entirely suspended in that district, and all the inhabitants are busily engaged, day and night, battling with flames, some drawing water from the river near by, and others throwing it upon the dry and burning earth; some beating the fires with branches of trees, and endeavoring to stamp it out with their feet; but as often as this is done, and the workers move off to another spot, the fire again gains headway. The strong wind carries the sparks and huge ignited branches considerable distances, and kindles innumerable new fires in all directions. It is painful and pitiable in the last degree to see men, women and children struggling to save their burning homes, and when that is found to be impossible, carrying off their damaged and broken articles of furniture. Notwithstanding their utmost efforts the fire gained upon them, for it is not only the brushwood and the forest trees that burn; the very sod is also instinct with fire, and the fences, generally made of cedar, carry destruction everywhere. The suffering is intense in the neighborhood of the Quio, at the Charts, near Pembroke, at the village of Sand Point, and at many other small towns and villages along the Ottawa river; and already the destruction of property is immense. Many of the villages are quite close to the woods, so close that thousands of sparks and pieces of burning wood, from one to three feet in length, are carried by the wind and deposited on the wooden roofs or beside the outbuildings and barns, which are universally constructed of wood; and it is utterly impossible for the people to watch all parts of their premises. Almost within view of Ottawa, on the northern side of the Ottawa river, the woods along the base and sides of the Laurentian Hills are on fire, from the village of Chelsea, westward. In the daytime the thick smoke hides the flames and covers the city as with a thick curtain; but at night the fires can be distinctly seen.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so. For the Committe, J. Couch.

Vermont Tent-Meeting.

The tent will be pitched Tuesday, June 13th, in Messrs. King & Hewitt's beautiful grove, upon the east side of Woodstock Green, Vt., one half mile from the park, and near the proposed depot grounds. Our first meeting will be held, if possible, Tuesday evening. Bro. Grant, Couch, and Mathewson are expected to preach the word. It is desirable that a special effort be made to attend this meeting. We say to all come; come early in the week. Don't wait till Sunday. We need your help in this new field. Come prepared to lodge and board yourselves. There are no families of like precious faith to provide for you. We shall endeavor to have things convenient for self-lodging and boarding upon the ground. Bring your bedding and tents, if you have them. Boarding and lodging in private families for 75 cents per day. Meals at hot one dollar per day. Horses kept upon hay and grain for 75 cts. per day. We want a dozen noble christian souls to lodge with tent every night. Who will volunteer? We expect a rich feast. All things are now ready. Come ye. H. P. Carpenter.

Notice.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the brethren in the town of Holden, Me., where the brethren may think best, to hold a meeting of three days, to commence on the 2nd of July, and continue over the 4th. Will the brethren consult with each other in that community, and each one bear their part, like men of God, and receive the "well done" from their Master? I have a tent that I will pitch for the accommodation of those who may come from a distance. Let each one come with a basket of provision to help the poor. Will our preaching brethren, who love to meet in such a meeting, come and help preach the gospel? We invite all who are the lovers of Jesus to worship with us. Come, brethren, to the feast, filled with love to God and man, and seek the salvation of others. Jesus is soon coming. Will Bro. Walker and Howard meet with us? Israel Damman.

R. I. and East. Ct.

The Rhode Island and Eastern Ct. Conference will hold its next quarterly session with the church at Putnam, Ct., commencing Wednesday, July 5th, at two o'clock P. M. A full attendance is very much desired, and confidently expected. All letters should be directed to the care of H. N. Reed. C. H. Sweet, Clerk.

Family Campmeeting.

This meeting will be held in what is called Caaline's neighborhood, at the head of Lewis Valley, commencing July 1st, and hold over Lord's day and the fourth. Bro. Thurber will assist in preaching the word. The big tent will be there. All are invited. Particulars hereafter.

Christian Times, please copy. P. W. Hough.

Notice.

Our annual grove meeting in East Springwater (on the Morris farm), will be held June 24th and 25th, to commence at two o'clock P. M. All our brethren and sisters in the surrounding country are invited to attend, and to be there promptly on Saturday. May the Lord of the harvest bless the meeting to the good of all.

For the Bro., C. F. Sweet.

Notice.

The Lord willing, a feast and supper will be given to the poor, maimed, lame and blind, by Lewis Bean, Jay, Bean's Corner, Me., Thursday, June 29th, at six o'clock P. M., in connection with a grove and basket meeting, which will be held at the same place, and onward over the 4th of July. We wish our brethren and sisters to make special effort to help the needy to attend this feast and meeting. A general invitation is given, and provision will be made for all. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting, praying the Lord's blessing to strengthen the weak and awaken sinners. Those coming on the cars will stop at Wilton Depot, two miles from the grove. Conveyance will be in readiness by notifying Lewis Bean. The day train is due at five o'clock P. M. Will our brethren bring their tents? Preaching brethren are requested and expected to attend. Come one, come all. Brethren will call on Lewis Bean, A. J. Riggs, Rufus Davis, Arnold Ireland, E. J. Bean, and others. Per order of the church,

H. B. Sevey.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in Bartlett, in Elder J. B. Deering's grove, where it was last year, commencing June 21st, to hold over Sunday, and longer if the brethren think best. We give a cordial invitation to the preaching brethren to come and help us. A good work has commenced here, and sinners are inquiring the way to life. We pray that some more may be gathered in before it shall be too late: for we believe the day is not far off, when he who is to come will come, and will not tarry. Come, all ye who love the Lord. Come from the north, the south, the east, and the west, and help us. H. Parker, Jr.
J. B. Deering.

Iowa State Campmeeting.

Partial arrangements are made to secure the Chicago Christian Mission tent, also the Iowa Mission tent, which will give us a larger range of accommodations, as we learn that there are many calculating to attend this meeting, who have not before. We trust all the preachers will come and attend this feast. To secure this, the brethren at New Hartford propose to provide provisions for those who may need, to cook for their families, and other churches may assist in this if they can. Be sure to provide things necessary for yourselves to camp. The meeting will commence June 22d. The campmeeting proper on the Monday following, and continue till July 3d. Also see notice.

Peter S. W. Dyco.

Meetings at Bonny Eagle, Me.

For the information of friends residing at a distance from Bonny Eagle, Me., who may desire to meet with us occasionally, I will say that Eld. C. H. Sweet, of Rhode Island, having been invited to settle here, has decided to come and remain as long as may seem duty. Preaching every Sunday, at 10½ A. M., and 1 P. M.; Sunday school at 9½ A. M. Prayer meeting at 5 P. M.; also Tuesday and Friday evenings. All these services are held in the Chapel. T. J. Rumery, Ch. Elder.

Notice.

The Maine Westerly Quarterly Conference will be held at Hartford, Me., commencing Thursday, June 8th, at five o'clock P. M., to continue over the following Sabbath. It is hoped there will be a general attendance of all the faithful in that section of the State. Jesse Gay.
E. M. Haggett.

Levant, Me.

The Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference will be held at Levant Village, Me., commencing Thursday evening, at seven o'clock, June 22nd, and continue over the following Sabbath. All are invited to come and help. Provision will be made for teams and people. Preaching brethren are requested to attend. For the brethren,

F. A. Baker.

Tent Meeting.

The Mass. tent will be pitched at Littleton, Mass., June 11th, and continue over two Sundays, and longer if duty seems to demand. Meetings afternoons and evenings. We hope the Bro. in all that region will be interested, and come is ready to work for the salvation of men, and the spread of Bible truth relative to the speedy coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. E. Morrill.
L. Boutell.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a series of meetings in Holderness, N. H., at the True schoolhouse, commencing Thursday evening, and continuing Friday evening, and over Sunday. A general invitation is given to the brethren and sisters to come to work for the Lord.

H. C. Willoughby.
J. H. Evans.

Maine S. A. C. Christian Conference.

EXTRA SESSION.

As the executive board has been petitioned to call an extra session of the Maine Second Advent Christian Conference, to be holden in Portland, in Union Hall, on Free Street, and as there are several items of important business to be attended to; we therefore appoint to meet at Union Hall, Portland, Tuesday, June 13th, at two P. M. A full attendance of the ministers and delegates is desired. Remember, each church or society is entitled to one delegate, and one additional for every ten members, duly chosen and furnished with certificates. Come, brethren, praying that the Lord may direct us in all our work, and make the conference a blessing to his cause. Let all collections for the Maine Mission and Tent cause be reported at conference.

I. C. Wellcome, Sec.

Dedication.

The Advent Christian Chapel, in North Carver, Mass., will be dedicated to the Lord on Friday, June 9th, at 1½ o'clock P. M. Meetings to continue over Lord's day. Bro. Grant intends to remain with us during the meetings to preach the word. A cordial invitation is given to the friends abroad to meet with us on that occasion. There will be conveyance from Middleboro, on arrival of cars from Boston and New Bedford, on the morning of dedication. W. E. Hathaway.

Minnesota Campmeeting.

This meeting will be held at Kasota, beginning June 26th, and closing Sunday evening, July 2nd. Kasota is a station on the St. Paul and Sioux City R. R., about three miles above St. Peter. The Winona and St. Peter R. R. also (which is just completed) runs within half a mile of the camp-ground, making this point the most convenient for a general gathering from the different parts of the State. We hope to announce soon the arrangements for half fare tickets, and other particulars. Edwin T. Himes, Chairman of Com.

Tent-Meetings.

Those wishing tent-meetings in the State of New York, are requested to write me at South Butler, N. Y., as soon as convenient, in order that early arrangements may be made. Those wishing meetings in the south and west part of the State, will please inform me before the State Campmeeting, so that arrangements can be made at that meeting. It is expected that Bro. Miles Grant will be at some of the meetings. B. P. Stevens.

Conference.

The Advent Conference of Nova Scotia will hold its next annual meeting at Bear River, Digby Co., Nova Scotia, commencing Friday, June 16th. A general invitation is extended to all, especially to preaching brethren. The churches are particularly requested to send delegates.

J. J. Woodworth.

Notice.

I would say that the committee chosen by the N. H. Advent Christian Conference to meet with the brethren at Great Falls, have attended to their duty. The result is, there is a goodly number that have come together at Franklin Hall, as a church of Christ, by taking the Bible as their standard, and recognizing New Testament officers. Any of our preaching brethren who can preach to them the word of life, can correspond with the Great Head of the church, and with J. T. Hodgdon, Great Falls. For the Com., J. G. Smith.

Going West.

We are intending to go west, as far as Minnesota, the last of June or first of July, to spend perhaps two months. If the brethren in Montreal, or elsewhere, on the Grand Trunk R. R. from Maine to Chicago, would like to have us spend a Sunday with them and preach, as we go and come, and will notify us in season, we will arrange to call on them, as we may be able, and will give notice in the Crisis when we will come.

I. C. Wellcome.

Notice.

The Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground, at New Hartford, Butler, Co., Iowa, commencing the 22nd day of June, 1871, and hold until the 3d of July. Brethren and sisters, and all who can, come to this meeting. We are anticipating a great blessing from the Lord. The prospect is the best this year for a good meeting that we have ever had. There are to be many ministers present. Bro. C. C. Ramsay, of Chicago, will be with us through the meeting again this year. Hay, straw, and tent-frames furnished free of charge.

Alonzo Raymond, sec. of Campmeeting Board.

In connection with the above meeting, the Iowa Christian Conference will hold its fifteenth annual session. Let ministers and delegates be present. Ministers are required by the constitution to report by letter, if not present. I cannot say positively when the conference will sit; probably on the 27th and 28th of June, or as may be thought best for the interest of the meeting. All are cordially invited to come who can.

Job Gildersleeve, President.
Alonzo Raymond, Clerk.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, there will be a grove meeting in Barnard, Vt., in Bro. Adams' neighborhood, three miles west of the centre of the town, commencing Sunday, July 2nd, and to hold over the fourth. Free meeting for all to come and worship the living and true God. Z. T. Wood.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting of the "church of God of Wayland and Loan Lake," will be held at Wallace Station, Steuben Co., N. Y., on July 8th and 9th. All are invited to attend.

C. F. Sweet, Pastor.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord permit, there will be a grove meeting in Belchertown, Mass., Dark Corner school district, Sunday, June 11th. Pilgrims in adjacent towns are invited to the feast. Some four or five are to be baptized. M. L. Curtis.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting held in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday, June 29th, to continue over the following Sabbath, as Bro. James Thorp and H. E. Austin may arrange. J. W. Taylor.
A. P. Moore.

Notice.

All persons desiring to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are respectfully requested to communicate with the Secretary, T. E. Wood, before publishing their appointments. For the church,

T. E. Wood,

A New Work.

We have a new work now in press, of about one hundred pages, entitled "The Life beyond Death, in the Home of the Holy: When and where to be enjoyed." By Wm. Sheldon. This work will be ready for circulation in a few weeks. It will be specially adapted to do missionary work in new fields, as well as in older parishes; just the right size and of the right tone to lead to your neighbors, or send to a friend. Probably the price will be: in paper, 25 cents single; $2.00 per dozen, by mail, prepaid; in cloth, 50 cts. single; $4.00 per dozen, by mail, prepaid; and will probably be kept at the Crisis office, Boston; Advent Times office, Buchanan, Mich.; as well as by the author at Brodhead, Wis. Perhaps we may not be able to fill orders before the first of August, but hope to earlier; but the first orders will be filled first. With this understanding, orders may be sent at any time. W. S.

Notice.

All papers, letters and postal matter of any kind, must be sent to Sandy Hill, N. Y., in order to reach me until further notice. A. W. Sibley.

Notice.

I supplied a number of brethren with works at campmeetings last year, and those who can possibly send me what is due by mail, in June, I wish they would do so, as I am much in debt for printing, and ought to pay up. If any can aid me in throwing off the unpleasant burden of being in debt, it will be thankfully received. Age and health prevent my obtaining means to live and pay debts as formerly. Direct to J. Blain, Buffalo, N. Y.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books, tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at White & Bauer's.

NEW TRACTS.

Who are Sadducees? or, Truth Vindicated. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Saddeceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By Geo. Thomson.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A Colporteur's Notes, by John B. Wadsworth, Mempuis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. Ag't.

JUST PUBLISHED.

By the Advent Christian Publication Society, a new Tract, entitled, "The Judgment Impending: Prophecy and Chronology converging to one Grand Culmination." By Bro. L. T. Cunningham. 52 pp. Price, 8 cents per copy. Postage, 2 cts. 75 cts. per dozen. $5.00 per one hundred. Ag't.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. Life and Death Theology: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. Immaterialism: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. Death and the Dead, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. The Coming Judgment: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY.

OR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

By Elder James H. Whitmore. Published by the Western Advent Christian Association.

This little volume of three hundred pages is a valuable contribution to the literature of the subject on which it treats, and is worthy of a wide circulation, not only among those who hold to the views advocated therein, but among others who have not given them due thought and investigation.

Price, single copy, postpaid, $1.00. Six copies, by mail, $5.00; by express, $4.20.

THE JUBILEE HARP.

We are now ready to supply friends with the new Hymn and Tune Book, at the following prices:—

AN EXTRACT.

Alas! I have walked through life,
Too heedless where I trod;
Nay, helping to trample my fellow-worm,
And fill the burial sod—
Forgetting that even the sparrow falls
Not unmarked of God.

I drank the richest draughts,
And ate whate'er was good;
Fish and flesh, and fowl and fruit,
Supplied my hungry mood;
But I never remembered the wretched ones
That starve for want of food.

I dressed as the noble dress,
In cloth of silver and gold,
With silk and satin, and costly furs,
In many an ample fold;
But never remembered the naked limbs
That froze with winter's cold.

The wounds I might have healed,
The human sorrow and smart;
And yet it never was in my soul
To play so ill a part:
But evil is wrought by want of thought,
As well as want of heart.

"WHAT SHALL CHRISTIAN PARENTS DO?"

B. F. NEWTON, Author of "Shining Light," etc.

"They must not furnish their children with money to gratify pride. It is as wrong for them to furnish means to buy jewelry and artificials for their children, as it is to wear these things themselves. They must not be cruel under the guise of tenderness. Out of love for the souls of their children, they must stand firm, and tell them they cannot encourage them in that which God has positively forbidden in his word."

So says the editor of the E. C. True, indeed, brother; so far thou speakest wisely. But what meanest thou? Will children born of the Holy Spirit, regenerated, washed in the blood of the Lamb, lust after evil things, delight in conforming to the world in dress, folly, fashion, sinful amusements? "If any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." 2 Cor. 5: 17. What avails a religion that does not cast out Satan and let in Christ? To bring up children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord is your privilege. Besides, God commands it. Eph. 6: 4. See also Deut. 6: 6–9; Prov. 22: 6. A child disciplined? Yes, fully, from the first dawnings of infantile life; molded over and over in the gospel mold, trained as he should be "in the way he should go," and as God requires, is measurably proof against the wiles of Satan and every temptation.

What child was ever surrounded with evil influences more fearfully corrupting and contaminating, soul-destroying, than little Samuel? The sons of Eli were sons of Belial. The whole atmosphere around was morally contagious with spiritual malaria, and yet he let his light shine, walked in white, kept his garments unspotted, had no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reproved them, "cried aloud, spared not," showed the people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins. Little Samuel grew up in the Lord, as every child should.

Our religion begins so late in life, we are compelled to maintain a perpetual and unequal warfare with old habits. To make a graceful and complete christian character, it needs itself to be the habit of existence; not a grape grafted on a bramble; and this requires a christian childhood in the subject.

"Scatter the gems of the beautiful
In the depths of the humble soul;
They shall bud and blossom and bear the fruit
While the endless ages roll."

There is no license for children to sin because they are children. God makes no distinction between little folks and great folks, touching moral deportment, a life of godliness. God's precepts are equally binding on the lambs of the flock as on those of riper years. Children born of the Holy Spirit, quickened into life, as all children should be, are expected to let their light shine, walk softly, exhibit Christ in their daily walk and conversation, be living epistles, read and known of all men, ornaments in society, "olive plants around the table," precious, lively stones in God's house, active in the divine life.

Christians will be more sprightly, energetic, buoyant, in juvenile life than when advanced to mature years. We have no sympathy whatever with ascetic piety. Religion is happifying; cheerfulness and joyfulness are the fruits of faith and hope in God. The fruit of the Spirit is love, peace, joy, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith.

"The sorrows of the mind
Be banished from the place;
Religion never was designed
To make our pleasures less."

Religion is in every way just the reverse of gloom or sadness. It imparts true pleasure and abiding peace, and sweetens everything in life.

But when and where does God palliate sin? There is one Bible, one Spirit, one precept, "one Savior for great folks and little folks." The Lord makes no distinction whatever between old christians and young christians, little or big. What the Lord requires of great folks, the very same he requires of the littlest of the little, where grace is proffered freely, light from heaven, the word and testimony. "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." And "without holiness" no little folks shall see the Lord. If Paul was crucified with Christ, so must we be crucified with Christ. Jesus was called Jesus, what for? To save his people from their sins or in their sins? Look and see—Matt. 1: 21. Little christians need to be washed clean in this open fountain for sin and uncleanness, as much as those in advanced in life.

"As he who hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation, because it is written: Be ye holy, for I am holy." "Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth, for ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God." "Be blameless and harmless, the sons of God without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world." Phil. 2: 15.

"Let us therefore," says Paul, "as many as be perfect, be thus minded. . . . Whereunto we have attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing. Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them who walk so as ye have us for an example—for many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ."

"'Tis not a cause of small import
A holy life demands,
But what might fill an angel's heart,
And filled the Savior's hands."

This training children on Bible principles as God commands is a happy method, glorious, unspeakable! It removes entirely the obstacles so frequently complained of by parents in household duty, the troubles and vexations arising from truancy in their children, their love for vain and fashionable society, their desires for unlawful pleasures and amusements, games of chance, the card-table, the gay party, the ball-room, the theater and opera-house, the light, silly, nonsensical popular readings, idolatry in dress and equipage. "Train up a child in the way he should go," and all desire for evil associations, vain, foolish, and dissipating, the pride of fashion, the friendship of the world, things earthly, sensual, devilish, is destroyed, rooted out. The love of God takes possession of the soul, the affections are placed on things above, "where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God."

Parents obeying God implicitly in family training in accordance with Bible precepts, are delivered entirely from the vexations, troubles, painful anxieties, bitter regrets, heart-rending tears of anguish, resulting from disobedient, ungodly children, sons of Belial. Children trained from early infancy in the way they should go, in strict obedience to the holy precept, are sweet-tempered, mild, gentle, patient, meek, loving, lamb-like, god-fearing. They hate sin in every form, pride, folly, self-will, and wicked companions. They love the truth, the word of life, prayer and praise, the society of the blessed. The family circle, instead of being a little bedlam, disorder, and confusion, a charnel-house, is a little Eden, a paradise, the very gate of heaven.

What sight on earth more delightful, transportingly joyous. At such a sight the hosts angelic tune their harps afresh, glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, and good-will to man.

Is this picture too highly colored, above the common walk, quite on the verge of heaven? Does God, the ever-blessed, require less of little folks or great folks? Will he accept a less holy standard? Will anything short of this gospel purity, or entire consecratedness to God's service, insure any one a seat in glory, on the right hand of mercy eternal? Look and see, search and see; to the law and the testimony.

"Some angel guide my pen, while I draw
What nothing else than angel can exceed—
Children on earth devoted to the skies."

Oh, what blessed encouragement have parents for obeying God in household duty. Remember, christian parent, it is not enough to pray for, or even with your children, if you do not also instruct them; and it will be in vain to instruct them, if your example contradicts your teaching; and in vain will be the prayer, example, and instruction, if, like Eli, when your children do wrong you restrain them not.

Religion begins in the family. One of the holiest sanctuaries on earth is home. The education of the soul for eternity begins by the fireside. The principle of love which is to be carried through the universe, is first unfolded in the family. "Let them learn first," says the apostle, "to show piety at home." "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand."

"Let thy lambs we sought to feed,
By thy hand be nourished;
Let them be thy lambs indeed,
In thy bosom cherished."

LETTER FROM SR. C. TULLER.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—I feel it to be both a duty and pleasure to acknowledge the reception, since my last letter to the Crisis, of some valuable gifts to aid me in my work among the freed people. First came $5 from "A friend of the oppressed," a most timely gift, which caused me to exclaim, Can I ever distrust again? Next a letter from Sr. Way, of Monroe, with $1.50, to pay freight on a box of papers, which came safe,—a blessed gift for my Sabbath school, for which I give thanks. A package of beautiful papers from J. Rathgeber, of Freemansburg, Pa. Two packages, on which are the names Ada Martin, Dorchester, and Warren L. Howard, Hebron, N. Y. I am grateful for these papers. They keep up an interest, and are a real help. Last, came two barrels of clothing from Sister Palmer, of Norwalk, Ohio, the most valuable lot I have ever seen sent south; all clean and mended. They will scatter many smiles, and much comfort, and afford me pleasure to fix up the fatherless and motherless ones for Sabbath school. The most of those under my care are tolerably comfortable, though the best off have little enough. But there are a few to whom gifts of this kind are truly a God-send; and Sr. P. has heartfelt thanks. There is another small box for me, at the store-house, but no letter has come, telling me who it is from. The freight is not paid, and as my purse is utterly exhausted, I will have to let it remain awhile. I am not going to plead poverty, my friends, but I am really working on short allowance, having no salary, and no present available means of my own.

I feel that I am allied by deep sympathies to the household of faith, and often feel that it would be a sweet privilege to meet with brethren and sisters, and tell them the way my mind has been drawn the past three years. I feel least of all, and weak in faith, but I had a great desire to work for Christ and his poor, and my heart said, "Guide me, O thou great Jehovah." To tell you all would exceed the bounds of a letter; but allow me to ask your prayers, that I may have an increase of wisdom, and be guided by the Master's own hand.

I have opened another school back in the country, where nothing has been done for them. I have got a little log house, and we use it for school and worship. I felt it duty to divide my time between this and West Point. It is in a poor region, and the people are poor. When able, they pay me ten cents tuition. I have been teaching here a month, and have received two dollars. These littles keep me in plain food, and I enjoy uninterrupted health. Have bought me a good steady horse for $65, with a year's time to pay for it. A side-saddle is loaned me; so I keep up my Sabbath school at the Point, and I feel that I am well paid in witnessing the advancement of my young men and women. I cannot express to you the pleasure I feel in meeting them in our comfortable house, neatly clad, with testaments in hand, committing verses to memory, and showing by their answers that their understanding is being enlarged. O friends, priceless mind is hidden all over our land. Do we realize that beautiful gems might be gathered from the rubbish? O why are there not more reapers and gleaners? It must be that Jesus is coming soon; but will all labor in this direction be lost? I do believe there are some here that will become polished stones in the temple of our God. I have several scholars that have been in school less than five months, who are real helpers. Two, in particular, are happy christians, ready to pray or teach as I call upon them, and are beginning to decide all matters of right and wrong by the word of God. Many less capable are advancing. One young woman, who has been just one month with me here, rose in Sabbath school to-day and repeated the first verse of Christ's sermon. It was her first effort, and her black eyes glistened with pleasure. She had worked very hard, and came home to rest. It is too far to walk; so she brings her food Monday morning, and stays till Friday night. She gives me great comfort by her diligence and attention. I often think, O that I had some of the money that is squandered, that I could take in the scattered ones and give them instruction.

I had forgotten to say in the right place, that the Christian and Woman and her Work come to me with comfort, and whoever so kindly sends them, has my thanks. I receive the Crisis occasionally and prize it.

West Point, Ky., May 21st.

P. S.—If any have sent me letters, that I have not acknowledged, please inform me. I have had some reason to suspect that all letters have not been handed me.

DISCUSSION.

H. DAVIS.

A discussion took place at Webster, Mass., commencing March 14th, and continuing four evenings. Question. "Do the Scriptures teach that man is wholly mortal, and that there is an intelligent entity that leaves the body at death capable of enjoying happiness or of suffering pain?" Eld. A. Durfee, of Westerly, R. I. (Advent), affirmative. Rev. J. Perry, of Thompson, Ct. (Baptist), negative.

Eld. Durfee, in maintaining the affirmative, brought many strong passages of Scripture to prove that man was wholly mortal. Mr. Perry, in replying, asserted that they all applied directly to the body, and had no application to the spirit in man; but brought no good proof to sustain such an assertion. On the soul, they were agreed. It was an entity, but did not possess intelligence. On the spirit, Eld. Durfee took the position that it was from ruach and pneuma, and when applied to man, meant "breath of life," and did not possess in itself anything of intelligence. Mr. Perry, in replying, did not take a position, but endeavored to ridicule Elder Durfee's position, by reading Matt. 12: 43—"unclean breath"; v. 46—"seven unclean breaths"; John 4: 24—"God is a breath"; Heb. 1: 14—"Are they not all ministering breaths?" with several others in the same way; but it was very evident the audience did not see the force of it, as Eld. Durfee had explained that when it was applied to God, it meant a spiritual being; and when applied to angels it meant real beings, which had real bodies.

If man has a spirit that can be separated from his body, and still be intelligent, could the same be said of God, or the angels? By no means. Neither has man such a spirit that can be separated from the body, and still possess intelligence; but yet it can be separated from man; but the spirit of God cannot be separated from God, nor the spirit of angels from their bodies. Mr. Perry, in replying, asserted that angels could and did take on their bodies and lay them off again, but when called upon for proof, failed to give such proof, as he very often did when called upon for proof of his many assertions.

On Luke 23: 43, Mr. Perry would not locate paradise at first, but when he came to 2 Cor. 12: 4, he said it was in the third heavens, above the starry heaven. Eld. Durfee, in replying, asked him how Jesus and the thief could possibly have reached such a place that day, as it was about the close when they died? Mr. Perry said he did not know, but if they did not get there that day, JESUS TOLD A LIE. Here, Elder Durfee, in replying explained where paradise was, or would be,—in the new creation, or new earth, or Christ's kingdom. God did bless Elder Durfee, the truth shone, and a deep impression was made on the people.

Mr. Perry undertook to make light of it, but utterly failed. God had set the truth home to the hearts of the people, and Mr. Perry lost many friends by trying to ridicule. He then went back to making assertions, and closed by telling the people he had the question, and if they knew anything, they knew it was his, etc. Mr. Perry's position, as a public defender of immortal-soulism, ended with the discussion. In short, he spent his whole time in making assertions, using slander, and trying to ridicule Eld. Durfee and his position. Eld. Durfee took his position on all points, reasoned to a conclusion, and sustained such conclusions by Scripture. Truth never took such hold of the people before in this place. Prejudice has been very strong, but, thank God, it is giving way. Eld. Durfee left with an earnest request from the people to return as soon as possible, and let them hear more about that new creation, Christ's kingdom, etc.

Perhaps I ought to add right here, that Mr. Perry wanted to know what evidence Eld. Durfee could give that the third heavens would be any better than the first had been, or second was now? Both were full of sin and wickedness. He did not have to ask a second time for the reason, and this is why the people wished Bro. Durfee to preach on that point. A stranger told Mr. Perry at the close he had one word of advice to give him, before he left the hall. He said, "I am not a christian—make no pretensions in that direction,—but should you ever meet another man in debate, use him a little like a gentleman. You have not acted on that stage much like a minister of the gospel."

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER.

The following letter was written by Dr. Colver to a "Brother Mason" in Chicago:—

"Your friend requests me to express to you my opinion, as to your liberty as a Royal Arch Mason, to publish the secrets of masonry within your knowledge.

I am perfectly free to express my opinion upon the subject. The time was, when I supposed the obligations of masonry binding upon me. It was at the time when all the secrets of masonry was published in the state of New York, and masons were everywhere denying the disclosures, and persecuting seceders with a spirit of malignity unsurpassed at any time, by the slave-holding rebels of the South. I suffered very much at the time in my spiritual feelings; I felt that though silent, I was indorsing deception and lying, and yet my oaths bound me from frankness and truth. I did not suffer more when under conviction for sin than I did in that terrible state.

While in that terrible state, I read one morning in the Providence of God for our family worship concerning the forty Jews, who bound themselves under an oath not to eat till they had killed Paul. It struck me, and unfettered my thoughts. I soon arrived at the conviction that they were morally bound, not by, but to repent of, their oath; that any oaths which contravened the law of God, were a matter of repentance and abandonment. I was free, and my happiness and relief was little surpassed when, in view of Christ, I first found the burden of sin removed. From that time to this I have neither honored, obeyed, or spared that lying impostor, Free and Accepted Masonry. I got out from the snare with repentance and brokenness of heart—but oh! I thank God I am out.

I am free to say it is my deliberate opinion, the vicious character of masonry and its guilt-concealing and barbarous oaths is such, as not only to release all from their bonds, but also to lay upon them the solemn obligation to tear off its covering and expose its enormity. I regard it as Satan's masterpiece, a terrible snare to man. It sits at this moment as a nightmare on all the moral energies of our government, and utterly paralyzes the arm of justice. It is . . . a shield for the vilest murderers of the south. It tampers with all our civil matters and carries its monopolizing partiality through all our social and civil relations. Its persecutions are to be dreaded. I warn you to count the cost before you assail it. I myself have endured its persecutions so long and so severely, that I cease to dread it in some measure; but I fear for others that provoke its hostility.

Many good men are masons, and strangely blind to its enormities; but it is a power in the hands of bad men unsurpassed for mischief. There must be no vulnerable points in a man's whole life, or their shafts will be fatal. I, perhaps, have no need to say this, as it is none of the christian's business what shall befall him, so he does his duty. But it will be well to count the cost before you begin. On my own part, I have no reserve; what I say, I say upon the housetop, but everything pertaining to yourself is strictly subject to your own discretion and control. The Lord guide you in the path of duty. Yours truly for righteousness, NATHANIEL COLVER.

HELEN.

J. W. THOMAS.

All night around the bed we watched,
Life's flickering lamp to trim,
Till, as the sun was coming up,
Hope's last bright ray grew dim.

She could not close her eyes in death,
While yet there were absent ones;
"Johnnie," she said, with faltering breath,
"Have Richard and Johnnie come?"

It was a night of deep, deep grief,
When loved ones gathered nigh;
And bent in sorrow o'er that child,
Crying, "Must dear Helen die?"

She was the sunshine of our home,
A spring morn, calm and bright;
The lily 'midst our garden flowers,
A wife all smiles and light.

Her voice, in soft and gentle tones,
With hopeful faith oft said,
"Weep not, dear husband, do not mourn,
For God will raise the dead."

Sweet Louis, O that precious babe!
He was his mother's joy;
"God bless you, Josie," she meekly prayed,
And help you to rear the boy."

Long hours we lingered by her side,
As slowly she sank to sleep;
Two years ago a happy bride,
Now by her dying couch we weep.

How thronged the scenes of by-gone days
Upon my memory now,
While close beside that lovely form
My heart in anguish bowed.

Farewell! O can I say that word
To the one I have loved so well?
Can it, must it be, O Lord!
This grief no tongue can tell.

At length the throbbing pulse stood still,
Her flesh grew cold as clay;
The sun arose, her brother came,
And my loved one passed away.

Farewell, with weeping heart I said,
Choice of my love and care!
And then I kissed those pale, cold lips,
For Helen still was there.

Then as we laid her in the ground,
Farewell, once more I said;
Thy presence here no more 'll be found,
Till Jesus wakes the dead.

But years are rolling swiftly by,
And time will soon be o'er;
Then "vict'ry over death" we'll sing
On that immortal shore.

Then shall I clasp that hand once more,
And smooth that brow so fair;
Then shall I kiss those lips again,
When I meet dear Helen there.

HOW LONG WILL IT DO TO WAIT?

Dr. Nettleton had come from the evening service in some country town to his home for the night. The good lady of the house, rather an elderly person, after bustling about to provide her guest with refreshment, said directly before her daughter, who was in the room:

"Dr. Nettleton, I do wish you would talk to Caroline. She don't care nothing about going to meeting nor about the salvation of her soul. I have talked and talked, and got our minister to talk, but it don't seem to do no good. I wish you would talk to her, Dr. Nettleton." Saying which, she soon went out of the room.

Dr. Nettleton continued quietly taking his repast, when he turned round to the young girl, and said:

"Now, just tell me, Miss Caroline, don't they bother you amazingly about this thing?"

She taken by surprise at an address so unexpected, answered at once:

"Yes, sir, they do; they keep talking to me all the time, till I am sick of it."

"So I thought," said Dr. Nettleton. "Let's see—how old are you?"

"Eighteen, sir."

"Good health?"

"Yes, sir."

"The fact is," said Dr. Nettleton, "religion is a good thing in itself; but the idea of all the time troubling a young creature like you with it, and you are in good health, you say. Religion is a good thing. It will hardly do to die without it. I wonder how long it would do for you to wait?"

"That's just what I have been thinking myself," said Caroline.

"Well," said Dr. Nettleton, "suppose you say till you are fifty? No, that won't do; I attended the funeral the other day of a lady fifteen years younger than that. Thirty? How will that do?"

"I am not sure it would do to wait quite so long," said Caroline.

"No, I do not think so either; something might happen. See, now, twenty-five or even twenty, if we could be sure you would live so long. A year from now; how would that do?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Neither do I. The fact is, my dear young lady, the more I think of it, and of how many young people, as well apparently as you are, do die suddenly, I am afraid to have you put it off a moment longer. Besides, the Bible says, 'Now is the accepted time.' What shall we do? Had we not better kneel right down here and ask God for mercy through his Son Jesus Christ?"

The young lady, perfectly overcome by her feelings, kneeled on the spot. In a day or two, she by grace came out rejoicing in hope, finding she had far from lost all enjoyment in this life.—Christian World.

DOES GOD DO ANYTHING THAT IS USELESS?

S. KNEYTER.

Then, I ask, Is the keeping alive of the ungodly sinner of any use after the judgment? No, is the only reasonable answer. Again: Does God derive any good from endless life of the wicked? Not at all. Does the sinner himself derive any benefit from it? The answer is emphatically, No. Well, do men, angels, or even the devil, derive any good from endless torment of the wicked? No! No!! Then it would be altogether useless to punish sinners with endless life in misery, and to do something useless is inconsistent with the divine perfection. The useless cumberer of the ground will be cut down, as the sure consequence of his barrenness.

AN INDICTMENT.

The history of King Alcohol is a history of shame and corruption, of cruelty, crime, rage and ruin.

He has taken the glory of health from off the cheek and placed there the reddish hue of the wine cup.

He has taken the lustre from the eye and made it dim and bloodshot.

He has taken beauty and comeliness from the face, and left it ill shaped and bloated.

He has taken strength from the limbs and made them weak and tottering.

He has taken firmness and elasticity from the steps, and made them faltering and treacherous.

He has taken vigor from the arm and left flabbiness and weakness.

He has taken vitality from the blood and filled it with poison and seeds of disease and death.

He has transformed this body, fearfully and wonderfully and majestically made, God's masterpiece of animal mechanism, into a vile, loathsome, stinking mass of humanity.

He has entered the brain—the temple of thought—dethroned reason, and made it red with folly.

He has taken the beam of intelligence from the eye, and exchanged for it the stupid stare of idiocy and dulness.

He has taken the impress of ennobled manhood from off the face and left the marks of sensuality and brutishness.

He has bribed the tongue to utter madness and cursing.

He has turned the lips to songs of ribaldry and revelling.

He has taken cunning from the hands, and turned them from deeds of usefulness to become instruments of brutality and murder.

He has broken the ties of friendship and planted the seeds of enmity.

He has made a kind, indulgent father a brute, a tyrant, a murderer.

He has transformed the loving mother into a very fiend of brutish incarnation.

He has made obedient and affectionate sons and daughters the breakers of hearts and the destroyers of home.

He has taken luxuries from off the table, and compelled men to cry on account of famine, and beg for bread.

He has stripped backs of their broadcloth and silk, and clothed them with rags.

He has stolen men's palaces, and given them wretched hovels in exchange.

He has taken away acres and given not even a decent burial place in death.

He has filled our streets and by-ways with violence and lawlessness.

He has complicated our laws and crowded our courts.

He has filled to overflowing our penitentiaries and houses of correction.

He has peopled with his multitude our poor-houses.

He has straitened us for room in our insane asylums.

He has filled our world with tears and groans, with the poor and helpless, with wretchedness and want.

He has banished Christ from the heart and erected a hell within.

These are the counts of our indictment. Let the world judge of the truth.

ARE WE NOT MISTAKEN?

I. C. WELLCOME.

This question is quite often asked by our brethren and sisters, who have been led to think Napoleon III. was "the coming man," "the anti-christ," etc., and now see he is a prisoner and France in peril.

To save time, talk, and letter-writing, I wish to state to all at once, that only those who have believed the above ideas seem to be mistaken on that point. I never yet saw evidence nor felt convicted that Napoleon or his empire would ever do more than he has done. I think the number among Adventists comparatively small who ever held that he was "anti-christ," "the coming man," etc.

"But, do you not think Napoleon will be restored to the imperial throne?"

No, sir, not to control France, as a sovereign. I think those who do expect any such things, will find they have chased shadows. When the Lord fulfills prophecy once, he does not do it over again, because people did not learn when he did it. Once will do. Let us learn, and watch the events which are to come, and be ready for the coming of "the Christ," our Lord.

SECRET OF SUCCESS.

J. E. CLARK.

A few days since, I met a gentleman, who is the owner of a large paper mill. He took me through the mill, and showed me the great piles of pulp, and the great piles of paper, all ready for the market. After seeing all the machinery, and how they sent for United States stocks, fifty and a hundred dollars at a time, every time he went to the city, I said, Will you please, sir, tell me the secret of your great success, for you tell me you began life with nothing?

"I don't know as there is any secret about it. When sixteen years old, I went to S—— to work. I was to receive forty dollars a year and my food, and no more. My clothing and all my expenses must come out of the forty dollars. I then solemnly promised the Lord that I would give him one-tenth of my wages, and also that I would save another tenth for future capital. This resolution I carried out, and after laying aside one-tenth for the Lord, I had at the end of the year much more than a tenth for myself. I then promised the Lord, whether he gave me more or less, I would never give less than one-tenth to him. And if there is any secret to my success, I attribute it to this. I believe God blesses me and makes my business to prosper. And I believe any man who will make the trial will find it so."

THREE BAD THINGS.

By three bad things I mean bad thoughts, bad words and bad deeds. We know that an ear of corn grows from a grain, a flower from a seed, and an oak from an acorn. Well, just in the same way bad words and bad deeds spring up from bad thoughts.

If we leave the door of our mind open, and are not watchful; if we let bad thoughts come in and stay there, bad words and bad deeds will follow them. When proud, wicked Haman fell into a rage with Mordecai, the Jew, he let bad thoughts into his heart, and then he began to consider how he could punish Mordecai. The more he thought of the matter the more his bad thoughts pushed him on to evil; till, at last, he made up his mind to bring about the death of Mordecai, and all his people, the Jews.

But did the matter end there? O, no! bad thoughts will go on from bad to worse; so Haman's bad thoughts made him use bad words. He went to the king and spoke against the Jews, and persuaded him to give a command that they might all be destroyed. Thus you see, bad words followed bad thoughts.

Haman was not yet satisfied; for, as I said, bad thoughts and bad words are sure, unless it please God to order otherwise, to be followed by bad deeds. Haman took good care that the king's command should be sent through the country; and, after that, caused a gallows to be made, that Mordecai might be hanged thereon.

But mark what bad thoughts, bad words and bad deeds did for Haman. The king found out that he was a wicked and deceitful man, and so he had him hanged on the very gallows he had set up for Mordecai. Again I say, beware of bad thoughts, and words and bad deeds.

Pray against these three bad things; say, "Search me, O God and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts: and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting."

"PLEASE, SIR."—"Sir, do you want to know how I was converted; I, an old gray-headed sinner?" said a good old man to a minister.

"Yes, tell me," answered the minister.

"I was walking along one day and met a little boy. The little boy stopped at my side: 'Please, sir,' he said, 'will you take a tract? and please, sir, will you read it?' Tracts! I always hated tracts and such things, but that 'please, sir,' overcame me. I could not swear at that kind-spoken 'please, sir;' so, no, I took the tract and I thanked the little boy, and I said I'd read it; and I did read it; and the reading of it saved my soul. I saw I was a sinner, and I saw that Jesus Christ could save me from my sins. That 'please, sir,' was the entering wedge to my old hickory heart."—Christian at Work.

Gems.

God sends the silvery dew of eve,
To fill the tiny cup
Of every flower o'er all the earth,
That meekly looketh up.
And never weary love is turned
With trusting love to him,
But, softly as the evening dew,
His blessing falls thereon.

— He that does a base thing in zeal for his friend, burns the golden thread that ties their hearts together.—Jeremy Taylor.

— Prayer is a virtue that prevaileth against all temptation, and against all cruel assaults of infernal spirits, against the delights of this lingering life, and against the motions of the flesh.

— There is only one thing worse than ignorance, and that is conceit. Of all intractable fools, an overwise man is the worst.

— That man cannot be truly blessed in whom virtue hath no place.

— Love cannot any more burn without goodness, than the flame without fuel.

— Where the conscience is drowned with worldly pomp and riches, there wisdom is turned to foolishness.

— Truth is health that is never sick, a life that hath never end, a salve that healeth all sores, a sun that never setteth, a moon that is never eclipsed, an herb that is never withered, a gate that is never locked, and a voyage that never breeds weariness.

Do not look at life's long sorrow,
See how small each moment's pain;
God will help thee for to-morrow,
So each day begin again.

— Prayer must be freely given, and never sold.

— Peace flourisheth where reason ruleth; and joy reigneth where modesty directeth.

— Without the understanding of the will of God by his word, our sight is but blindness, our understanding ignorance, our wisdom foolishness, and our devotion fraud and hypocrisy.

— A mother's prayer will draw up from the depths of the sea.

— Without God, even across the sea; with him, not even to the threshold.

— It is a point of godly wisdom, to be at peace with men, at war with vices.

Forgive! 'Tis heaven's divine command,
The measure of its grace;
Said Jesus, When ye praying stand
Within the holy place,
Bring no resentments in your hand,
No frowns upon your face.

— We often censure the conduct of others, when, under the same circumstances, we might not have acted half as well.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

HOW TO EAT.—Dr. Hall's Health by Good Living has the following: "The common vice of our people of the United States, in both town and country, in city and village, among old and young, rich and poor, is rapid eating, when the stomach, like a dark bottle which is attempted to be filled with a funnel, gets full and overruns before one knows it. There are two ill-effects from hasty feeding; the food expands considerably, both by increased warmth and by its being divided and liquified, so that if the stomach is not full when one ceases to eat, it will be full enough in a few minutes, by the heating and liquifying process; thus it happens when a person is from the table, he may feel as if he could very easily have eaten more, if detained a few minutes more, he comes back, feeling that he does not want to taste another particle, and often expresses himself impatiently about dinner being 'spoiled,' when the truth is, his food has been enlarged in bulk by the necessary preparation which it has undergone, thus making the stomach full enough for comfort.

If a meal is eaten with great deliberation, this expanding, heating, liquifying process begins and keeps pace with the meal, and the man does not feel like a gorged anaconda. The English people thus eat as a nation; they give themselves time to enjoy their food, to experience the pleasure of its taste, and make eating a gratification, while we Americans, in multitudes of cases, look at it as a thing to be gotten through with—as a task which has to be performed, and the quicker the better."—Baltimore Episcopal Methodist.

CURE FOR CANCERS.—A piece of sticking plaster is put over the cancer with a circular piece cut out of the centre a little larger than the cancer, so that the cancer and a small circular rim of healthy skin next to it are exposed. Then a plaster made of chloride of zinc, blood-root, and wheat flour, is spread on a piece of muslin of the size of this circular opening, and applied to the cancer for twenty-four hours. On removing it, the cancer will be found to be burnt into, and appear of the color and hardness of an old shoe sole, and the circular rim outside of it will appear white and parboiled, as if scalded by hot steam.

The wound is now dressed; the outside rim soon suppurates; the cancer comes out a hard lump; and the place heals up. The plaster kills the cancer, so that it sloughs out like dead flesh, and never grows again.

This remedy, discovered by Dr. Fell, of London, has been used by him for six or eight years, and not a case has been known of the re-appearance of the cancer, where this remedy has been applied. It has the sanction of eminent physicians and surgeons of London, but has not till recently been used in this country. If it is what is claimed for it, this terrible disease will be shorn of most of its terrors. The application is painful, but the pain is of comparatively brief duration, which any one so afflicted would cheerfully endure.—Milwaukee Free Democrat.

HOW TO RISE REFRESHED.—Every person who toils daily at any kind of labor requiring great physical or mental exertion, should be extremely careful to practice a regular system of ablution at the close of each day's work. Sometimes a person may become so completely exhausted as to render this anything but an inviting performance; yet by its omission a great deal of refreshment, which the hours of repose are designed to impart, is lost. To be cleanly is a strictly religious duty, and is absolutely essential to sound and refreshing slumber; hence the labor of keeping one's person clean is amply repaid by the elasticity which follows nightly ablutions before retiring. Heed this advice, and the reader will sleep soundly; disregard it, go to bed unwashed, and you will rise in the morning unrefreshed, with feelings of lassitude, which the exertions of the day will hardly be able to remove.

DYSENTERY.—Dr. Hall says that it "ought to be extensively known that ordinary boiled rice, eaten with boiled milk, is one of the best remedies known for any form of loose bowels. Its efficacy is increased if it is browned like coffee, and then boiled and eaten at intervals of four hours, taking no other food or liquid whatever; its curative virtue is intensified if no milk is taken with it, and the patient will keep quiet in a warm bed; then it becomes an almost infallible remedy."

THE BEAUTIFUL.

A. L. ADAMS.

DEAR CHILDREN:—I think we should cultivate a taste for the beautiful, especially the beautiful in nature. I would not despise art, for it is often pretty, sometimes beautiful. But it is in nature we find the original, the living, the truly beautiful. Art can be only an imitator.

It is of flowers I wish to speak now, although there are many very beautiful things in nature, towering up to heaven in sublimity and grandeur. All can and should cultivate flowers. Flowers are always good, always smiling, always appropriate. In scenes of festivity they are a living charm and joy; in places of sadness they add a heavenly solemnity. They smile with those that smile, and weep with those that weep. Flowers may always be given as a token of love and friendship. They are never out of place; they are used on "the bridal day, the festival, the tomb."

I love every body that loves flowers. I have an "immortelle," a perpetual bloomer, which I brought from Mount Vernon, Va., a year ago. I love it. Give me a boquet of roses, geraniums, and verbenas, and in my happiness I will not forget the giver. Flowers are the poetry of plants; the sunshine of vegetation; the footprints of angels. God makes the plants grow, blossom and smile on us; and shall we not thank him for them? Flowers speak to me of innocence, purity, heaven and God. That home must be dreary, and that heart cheerless, that has no "pet" flowers. Children, make your flower beds. If you want to see an illustrated Floral Catalogue, send to Briggs & Bro's of Rochester, N. Y. They have out a very nice one for 1871. It is healthy for the mind and body to work among flowers; besides, it softens the heart; it makes one better. When Eden shall be restored it will be a flowery land. "The desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." Isa. 35: 1. Give your pastor flowers if you want to make him feel that you love him. I wish I could send Bro. Grant a bunch of roses. I know he loves flowers.

THE TRUE TEST.

I stopped on my way down stairs last evening to speak to Jennie Barnes, who had just gone to bed in her cozy little room. I bent over to kiss her.

"Jennie," said I, "do you love Jesus?"

"Oh, yes," she answered.

"Are you sure? How do you know?"

"Why, of course I know," said she. "Don't I feel it all over inside?"

"That's good," thought I, "I wish every one had that same consciousness of love; there would not be so many fearful, trembling christians."

"Do you think that Jesus knows that you love him, Jennie?"

"Why, of course," she answered again. "Don't he know everything? Don't he look right down into my heart and see it there?"

"Well, Jennie," I continued, "how shall I know it? I can't look into your heart."

Jennie sprang instantly to her feet.

On the wall at the side of her bed, hung a large picture sheet, containing twelve scenes in the life of Christ, and a number of short texts: his own dear words, were printed here and there around the gaily-colored border. Putting her tiny finger on one of these, without speaking, she turned around and looked triumphantly up into my face. I put up the gas and read the words, "If ye love me, keep my commandments."

A LITTLE BOY'S FAITH IN JESUS.

One day as a little boy was crossing a dam, his foot slipped, and he fell into it in one of its deepest parts. His companion ran at once to the nearest house for assistance; but, when aid reached the drowning boy, hardly a ripple moved the surface of the water to show where he went down. A strong arm, however, soon brought him to the surface. But, oh, how changed from the merry boy, of a few moments before, were those livid features, those staring eyes, that cold, dripping form! Would life ever return? After some time of deep anxiety with what delight did his friends hail the first signs of returning consciousness!

When he became able to speak, he said, "I thought I should die; but I was not afraid."

He was asked, "Why not?" The reply was, "I love Jesus. I said my prayer. I thought of my parents and little sisters, whom I should never see again." He further stated that, while he was in the deep water, he thought that, though father and mother did not know where he was, Jesus knew; and thus this boy, only eight years old, had a faith in the Savior that enabled him to say, "I am not afraid to die."

THANKS.

L. A. BROWN.

O it is sweet to trust our God,
To feel his powerful arm,
Leading us safe from every snare,
Shielding us from all harm.

O it is sweet to pray to him,
With troubles sore distressed;
To lay our weary, aching head,
On Jesus' loving breast.

We thank our God with grateful hearts,
For every blessing past;
And look with eager, longing eyes,
For his own peace at last.

THE NATURE CONDEMNED.—THE NATURE REDEEMED.

E. BROWNE.

"For the judgment was by one to condemnation." "Judgment came upon all men to condemnation." Thus it was by one man that the judgment came upon all men to condemnation. Now, the question is, Who and what was condemned? You will say, Adam. Well, what was Adam's nature? For "the judgment . . . came upon all men to condemnation." The nature condemned is the nature that is to be redeemed; otherwise there is no salvation of the race. Adam was human, and we derive our nature from him. I do not say our guilty nature; but flesh and blood, or human nature. As the stream cannot rise higher than its fountain; neither could we save ourselves from the judgment or condemnation passed upon Adam's race. But God has opened a way, through the second Adam, showing whereby the nature condemned may be redeemed. For Paul says, "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God, sending his own Son, in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh." Rom. 8: 3.

The law could not give life, nor immortalise flesh and blood; but God has shown, by his Son Jesus Christ, that organized humanity can be made immortal; and that nature which was condemned and lost in Adam, will be redeemed and restored by the second Adam, or Jesus Christ. For he sent him "in the likeness of sinful flesh; and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh"; thus showing conclusively that we can also condemn sin in the flesh, become partakers of the divine nature, and our bodies be made immortal like unto Christ's when he rose from the dead, for "his flesh did not see corruption"; thus making it manifest what we shall be when we are raised from the dead, or changed from mortality to immortality, and humanity, or flesh and blood, be redeemed from death and live forever.

But does it not read, "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God"? Yes, and I believe it. But it does not say flesh and blood cannot enter the kingdom, but cannot inherit it. Now, we do not inherit it by Adam, or by Abraham, or by lineal descent of flesh and blood. If we could, then it would be by inheritance. But it is God's gift, bestowed upon us through the obedience of faith in Jesus Christ, who is the "resurrection and the life" of all that believe in him, as we read: "For this is the will of him that sent me, that every one that seeth the Son and believeth on him may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day." Therefore it is of faith, that it might be of grace, or gift; for God bestows upon us that which we never did inherit, nor can through flesh and blood descent. Hence the nature condemned in Adam is redeemed by or through Jesus Christ; for "as the children were partakers of flesh and blood, he also likewise took part of the same." What for? That he might destroy death, and thus show that sin might not reign in our "mortal bodies," but be "condemned in the flesh"; so that death would have no dominion over those who are worthy of eternal life, when he comes to "give reward unto" his "servants the prophets," and all that fear his "name, both small and great."

We think the Scriptures will sustain us in this view of the nature and plan of salvation, which we think is not rightly understood by the mass of the people at the present day. The reason why we think it is not rightly understood at the present day is this: the apostle in his charge to Timothy tells him to "preach the word, . . . for the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth; and shall be turned unto fables." Now it is a fact that there are many fabulous stories at the present time gotten up by a people who believe when a person is dead he knows more than he did when living; and many believe that the spirits of the dead communicate with men in the flesh. Both of these assumed positions are alike condemned by the Scriptures, and, consequently, cannot be true; for the Scriptures declare, "The dead know not anything . . . also their love and their hatred . . . is now perished." Eccl. 9: 5, 6. David says, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence."

Peter in his second epistle speaks of the same class of people, where he says (2: 2, 1), "But there were false prophets also among the people; even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies; and many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." Paul also declares: "For this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believed not the truth." Many have turned the "truth of God into a lie." For the truth of God declares, if there is no resurrection from the dead, "then they that have fallen asleep in Christ are perished." Query: But what need of a resurrection, if we are better off and know more after death than we did when alive? It was Christ's mission to this world to bring life and immortality to light through the gospel, or good news of life from the dead. Hence the necessity of a resurrection to life from the dead, to redeem mankind from death, or the condemnation; and restore him back to that state in which he was when first created, and pronounced "very good."

Thus you see the nature that was condemned, was declared by God to be "very good." Hence the nature that was condemned and had to die must be redeemed, or God has lost the work of his hands. But Job says—"Thou wilt have a desire for the work of thine hands." Why? "For thou shalt call, and I will answer thee"; also, "In my flesh shall I see God." Thus you see Job believed that which went down into the grave would be redeemed from the same; for we hear him say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand in the latter day upon the earth; and though, after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Job did not expect to see him in spirit, but in his flesh; that nature which was condemned would be redeemed "at the last day." He did not expect to behold him in heaven, but upon the earth. For says he, "Man lieth down and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, he shall not awake, nor be raised out of his sleep." "O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave; . . . that thou wouldst appoint me a set time, and remember me." God "hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world . . . by that man [Jesus Christ] whom he hath ordained." When he shall come to raise from the dead those "that sleep in him," he will call Job, and he will come from the grave, clothed with immortal flesh, and behold his Redeemer. David says, "I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." What was Christ's likeness? It was our nature made immortal. The apostle John says, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he [Christ] shall appear, we shall be like him." Christ "died unto sin once"; but now being raised from the dead, "death hath no more dominion over him." So you see Christ took on him our nature, suffered and died, and rose again, and now lives by the power of God."

Please keep in mind the nature; "For verily he took not on him the nature of angels, but he took on him the seed of Abraham. Wherefore in all things it behooved him to be made like unto his brethren." "For it became him, for whom are all things, . . . in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through suffering." For this cause he was made "a little lower than the angels"; and the next order of beings in the likeness of God, lower than the angels, is man; and this order, this nature, must be a partaker of the divine nature. You may ask, How are we to become partakers of the divine nature, and when? We believe that we become partakers of the divine nature in this life, when we receive the "gift of the Holy Ghost." For the divine nature consists in the spirit of holiness and love, joy and peace, in the Holy Ghost. Peter says, "According as his divine power hath given us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue, whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these we might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." 2 Pet. 1: 3, 4. Paul says Christ was "of the seed of David, and declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." Rom. 1: 3, 4. The apostle says we should "be partakers of his holiness."

Now just in proportion as we are in harmony with the holiness of God, and made one with Christ, we become partakers of the divine nature; as the apostle says: "Having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust"; for nothing corrupts us worse than unholy desires gratified. As we become partakers of the divine nature, we are made perfect in love; for whoso "dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him." Thus are we fitted for a future life in the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

It is the work of the Holy Spirit, which is freely given us of God, that makes us one in him, and gives us a knowledge of the same; as the apostle John declares in his first epistle, fifth chapter, and twentieth verse: "And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ." We must not love the world, nor the things of the world; for whoso loveth "the world, the love of the Father is not in him."

James says: "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God." Paul, speaking of the "beggarly elements," says, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, . . . and I will receive you, . . . and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." You will see by this, we must give the beggarly elements of the world a wide berth, if we would be partakers of the divine nature, and be sons and daughters of the Lord, and be fitted for the kingdom.

Our bodies must be fit temples for the Holy Ghost in this life. It is the work of the Holy Spirit to fit and prepare our nature for the change from corruption to incorruption, from mortal to immortal. When "this mortal shall have put on immortality," death will be "swallowed up in victory," and our corruptible, mortal natures be immortalized, and live forever, and in our flesh we shall see God.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED.

B. PERHAM.

Will the wicked rise from the dead? "What saith the Scripture?" Let us reason together in a friendly manner, and see what we can find in the word of God. We will turn to the prophecy of Daniel, 12: 2. "Many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Can dead folks wake, so as to be ashamed of their life of sin, and still remain dead, in the dust of the earth? We think not. Turn to John 5: 28, 29. Here we are informed by the positive declaration of our Savior, that the wicked shall come forth to "the resurrection of damnation," or condemnation. Can we place words in any position that will assert the resurrection of the wicked in any plainer terms? We dare not trifle with these words, and deny the resurrection of the unjust.

Please look at Matt. 25, beginning at the 31st verse, and read to the end of the chapter. Here our Savior positively declares that all nations shall be gathered before him, when he shall set upon the throne of his glory. Will not Nero be there? Will he escape destruction by fire and brimstone, while thousands and millions of others, not the one hundredth part as wicked, must be consumed in the dreadful flames of fire? If the wicked do not rise from the dead, those who pierced the Savior can not wail because of him, for "the dead know not anything." They cannot look on him whom they pierced, if they are dead and in their graves, and do not rise to mortal life. But the Savior says, in Rev. 1: 7, that they shall look on him whom they "pierced"; and that "every eye shall see him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him."

In Matt. 7: 22, our Savior says, "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord." What! and still be dead, and never to rise from the state of death, in order to plead for themselves before the judgment throne? Please look at Matt. 10: 15. How will it be more tolerable for the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for those cities who reject the preaching of the apostles? How can this be the case, if none of the wicked rise from the dead at the great day of accounts? Also look at Matt. 11: 21–23, where our Savior tells the inhabitants of Chorazin and Bethsaida, where many of his mighty works were done, that it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon, in the day of judgment, than for them. How can this be true, if the wicked dead do not rise from their dusty beds?

In Matt. 12: 36, 37, the Savior tells the wicked Pharisees, that they must give an account for every idle word at the day of judgment; and says to them, that by their words they should be justified or condemned. How can this take place, if they do not rise from the dead? Says the prophet Malachi: "Behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Mal. 4: 1. Will not all the wicked have a share in that punishment? So it reads.

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS.

A. PRIEST.

Ho! all ye who love the Lord, and who are "looking for that blessed hope"—the appearing of Jesus, our blessed Redeemer and glorious King—"lift up your heads and rejoice," for our "redemption draweth nigh." The indications are increasing, the evidence is brightening, on every hand, in corroboration of the faith and hope of those who are anxiously awaiting the return of Jesus to establish his everlasting kingdom on earth, and to give reward to his servants—the prophets and martyrs, who have long been sleeping in the dust, and to all his saints. And it must certainly be a great source, not only of consolation, but of rejoicing, to every true believer, who has the assurance of having "passed from death unto life," by being "begotten unto a lively hope" through the resurrection of our dear Redeemer, in prospect of the speedy realization of the precious and glorious promises of the Scriptures. King Jesus is soon coming to reign with his people upon the earth! In the language of the poet—

"Not many years their course shall run,
Not many mornings rise,
Till He in glory stands revealed
To our admiring eyes."

The kings and rulers of earth have been lording it over God's heritage for many centuries, exercising themselves in wickedness, and oppression, and warfare, and all manner of evil; but now "the time of the end" has come, and their time to rule and corrupt the earth has expired by limitation; their power is fast vanishing; yea, from the "disobedient to parents" of children, and others in the household, to higher governments and states and kingdoms, we behold clearly and increasingly manifested the spirit of rebellion, of insubordination; a desire to throw off the yoke of restraint which has existed. The time has come for Jesus, whose right it is, to reign; and he will "overturn" the rulers and kings of earth, by dashing the wicked nations in pieces like a potter's vessel. Behold France and the Popedom already. All human efforts for the reformation and amelioration of the condition of mankind have, to a great extent, failed, at least of enduring value, the constant tendency being toward degeneracy and corruption; until vanity, corruption and abomination have become insidiously interwoven, and are undermining every ramification of church and state; and as it was in the days of Noah, all flesh has corrupted its way upon the earth, and is emphatically "ripe for destruction," save the comparatively "few" of God's true people, and they are more or less contaminated by the surroundings.

All the governments and institutions of this world are rapidly approaching a state of crumbling or dissolution, though not so perceptible to a superficial observer; but their elements will soon be so melted, ready to crumble and fall to dust, that the winds of earthly commotion will carry them away like the chaff of the threshing-floor, so that no place will be found for them, or they will be consumed from the places which they occupied; and the "stone"—Christ's kingdom—which is to smite the colossal image of this world's kingdoms, will become a great mountain, or kingdom, filling the whole earth.

This is our only hope. We can look for nothing better till Jesus comes to establish justice and peace and righteousness in the earth. Then shall "the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, be given to the people of the saints of the Most High" for an everlasting possession; and the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Amen! Lord Jesus, hasten thine appearing and kingdom, even in thine own good time.

SWEETNESS OF SUBMISSION.

CARRIE ANDREWS.

When languor and disease invade
This trembling house of clay;
'Tis sweet to look beyond my pain,
And long to pass away.

Sweet to look inward and attend
The whispers of his love;
Sweet to look upward to the place
Where Jesus pleads above.

Sweet to look back, and see my name
In life's fair book set down;
Sweet to look forward and behold
Eternal joys my own.

If such the sweetness of the stream,
What must the fountain be,
Where saints and angels draw their bliss
Directly, Lord, from thee?

THE MIS-UNDERSTANDING.

THE SPIRIT IS THE CAUSE, NOT THE CONTRAST, OF REALITY.

J. S. COOK.

"The spirit" is taken as opposed to reality, materiality, or matters of fact. "The spiritual man" is made to go to "the spirit land," a presumed state of isolation from all material things. Hence the prevailing mis-understanding of this whole subject, and the popular support given to fanaticism. For this world was made with man at the head. It still exists in its matter-of-fact form and reality, as God's world. "God is a Spirit," the Almighty Creator. The creation is not the contradiction; but the production of his omnipotent will, word, or spirit. Nay, more, when we rise above present things, seen and temporal, to those that are unseen and eternal, we find the same order of sequence. The spirit, purpose, word of God, have set forth man and earth perfected in "the restitution of all things spoken"—the new earth and heaven; "all things made new." Such is the general statement; now for the proof. "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth." Ps. 33: 6. "The spirit of God moved" on chaos (Gen. 1: 2), light, life, organic beauty, and man in paradise resulted. "Thou sendest forth thy spirit, they are created." Ps. 104: 30. "It is the spirit that quickeneth . . . (maketh alive); the words that I speak . . . are spirit; and are life" (spiritual and life giving.) Thus believers are begotten again to a lively hope by the incorruptible seed, the word of God. 1 Pet. 1: 23. Thus the worthies "waxed valiant" in fight and strong in spirit to achieve their wondrous triumphs. Heb. 11: 5–39.

Take an illustration to get this "doctrine of the Lord." "The pattern" shown to Moses in the mount, and to David by the Spirit, did not supercede the tabernacle, or temple; but was the sure precursor, or certain cause, of their existence and real value to mankind; to foreshadow the living temple, the body of Christ, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all. Eph. 1: 23; 1 Cor. 3: 17.

Thus, again, the church chosen in Christ "before the foundation of the world" gives the divine assurance to faith of its effectual calling, and blessed destiny. These grand portions of Bible truth demonstrate this point, that the spirit, the will, the word of God, is the intelligent antecedent cause in creation, and in redemption. "Not by might (of man primarily) but by my spirit saith the Lord." This is God's order. "The spiritual" is then the primal movement in the great system of causation; and instead of dispensing with such material things as man and earth, Israel and the church, the law and the gospel; it evolves all these things to be the agents and instruments of the Almighty to carry out and consummate his blessed purpose in a paradisaic earth, to be enjoyed by immortals. Rev. 2: 7; 21: 1–5.

Even in human affairs, the spirit, mind, or purpose, determines in advance the intended achievement; only men are often foiled, because sinful, and so out of agreement with God's good pleasure; but God never can be. He sees "the end from the beginning; . . . saying, My counsel shall stand, and will do all my pleasure." Isa. 46: 10. The doctrine then seems demonstrated, and made absolutely certain and plain. It embraces man and natural causes as parts of the grand system; and hence, no right view of second causes can change this primary doctrine.

But the mis-understanding referred to inverts or ignores all the above noted human and divine proceedings. It assumes to be wise above what is written. It will not allow that the future will unfold after "the pattern," or prophecy, but backslides with a perpetual backsliding, till it loses sight of the ordinances of grace, of Christ and his Christianity; nay, of creation itself, as a whole. Thus the great lights of example; of cause and accomplishment; of God revealed in Christ; and our risen glorified humanity, in Jesus, are left; and those so deluded float away from both redemption and creation, to an imaginary state; as if before Christ came, or ever, the world was made. Thus they theorize themselves and all else into the Hindoo "Nigban." Such may sing: "Beyond the bounds of time and space"—no-where and never! Further still, they swing off beyond all vision, or prophecy from God, that he will ever make another world, and go to NOTHING. Surely this is the deepest device of the devil to catch away the word; and so subvert all faith in God as Creator, or in Christ as the Restorer.

This subject was suggested by a minister who objected to man's mortality and personal resurrection, because "the spiritual took such infinite precedence, and the literal view would make him the most miserable of men." But he did not see that he had taken up Satan's old scare-crow to sinners—"you'll be miserable if you believe." This is the same fright that is flaunted in our faces all along the path of life, and at each stage of progress in the way of truth, and we should not be "ignorant of his devices."

The spiritual, or intelligent purpose, is the antecedent to the actual, with God, and with man made in the image of God. But the opposite Platonic and Romish theory of man, deathless even in death, belongs to "the world that lieth in the wicked one." 1 John 5: 19; Gen. 3: 15–19. It is the grand negation of God's truth and works in both creation and redemption. "Ye shall not surely die," was the primal contradiction. Ye are immortal, and go to glory, if never resurrected, is but that same contradiction maintained. It is Platonism Romanized, though surrounded with some Scriptural terms. An objection may be raised from the first and second Adam—the natural and spiritual; or first and second Advent; but that numbering and succession of events, however essential to the right apprehension of the subject there given (1 Cor. 15), does not change the vast range of God's truth before us, nor justify the mystical notions that lead to Nigban, or nothing; which is the only proper notion of "annihilation." Those who arrogate such special spirituality, are the most arrant, and perhaps the only "annihilationists." It is the end to which the first lie of the liar leads all who are so deceived.

The truth honors "the Spirit"; gives it its proper precedence, and takes in the spiritual and the real; the cause and the consequent reality. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. 8: 9. The spirit, soul and body are all embraced and secured in redemption. 1 Thess. 4: 13–18; 5: 23. The living temple made up of lively stones will be the antitype of Solomon's. Occupied by "the living God," it will be the radiant centre of the wisdom, and the virtue, and the glory that shall fill and refresh the world restored.

The past goings of God's spirit over chaos and a sinful race, are the pledge of its future goings to achieve its ultimate triumphs in the renewal of man, and all material good, in the new heavens and new earth, wherein righteousness will dwell. The glory will be commensurate with the reality.

Note the cardinal points of Bible theology.

I. The creation of man, Adam, made a living soul to rule over the earth; all which realities exist, and are the ever present memorials of the truth recorded. Gen 1 and 2.

II. Death by sin. Rom. 5: 12. Sin still reigns unto death. It demonstrates itself as death. Against all controversy it does reign to take down to death and dust, even the Platonic theologian, and to brand its author a "liar," though he has deceived the whole world.

III. Redemption by faith in the risen Savior, and the resurrection.

IV. Christ's second coming, and reign with his glorified saints, to consummate God's primal or spiritual plan—all again "GOOD." Ps. 72, 1 Cor. 15, Rev. 21: 1–5.

The navigator may safely voyage the ocean with no compass or chart, as soon as the minister of Christ can guide "the old ship Zion" (without the cardinal points) into the gospel harbor—the promised rest. The co-worker on any earthly structure must obey instructions and work to the plan, or he will lose his labor and spoil the lumber; so with the christian co-worker. 1 Cor. 3: 9.

In running the christian race, we shall go wide of "the way" if we lose sight of our immortality, and do not "seek for glory, honor, immortality," as the gospel goal. In fighting "the good fight of faith," he must fail and join the foe, on maintaining the primal cause of the curse; that man, the living soul, did NOT SURELY DIE; and hence cannot need a real, personal resurrection, as Jesus was raised, "the first fruits of them that slept." If the spiritual had been the end, or aim, God the Spirit might have stopped at the ideal; omitted the actual in all things, and there rested; but as he did not so do, he has demonstrated the folly and falsehood of all spiritualism in doctrine, by the things that are made to show his power and Godhead. Amen.

THE TIME IS NEAR.

SANFORD P. HOWLAND.

The time is near when the earth shall be robed in its Eden beauty. The Messiah is even at the door. We can now lift up our heads, for our "redemption draweth nigh." Nearly all the signs have come to pass for which our Savior and apostles told us to watch. The stars have fallen from heaven, as a fig-tree casting her untimely figs, shaken by the wind. O let us watch for his coming, lest we be found without the wedding garment on, and be cast out into outer darkness.

"Watch, for the time is short;
Watch, for 'tis called to-day;
Watch, lest the world prevail,
Watch, christian, watch and pray.

But to the righteous, it is not a day to be dreaded, for if they love him they will also love his appearing. But how many there are who profess to be followers of Christ, who would tremble if they thought the Lord was coming the next day. Would they not fall upon their knees, and beg him to wait a little longer until they could get ready to meet him? But no; that cannot be. The door is shut, forever shut. But those same ones are now slumbering and sleeping, and not watching. But to the christian, it would be the most glorious news he could hear.

Oh! it sends a thrill of joy through my soul to think how near the time is. Young christian, do not fall back to the flesh pots of Egypt, but strive to enter that goodly heritage. The race is almost run. Don't give up now; only a few more steps will bring us to that blest abode, where sorrow and sighing shall be known no more. Who now is willing to give up the pleasures and vanities of this life for "glory, honor, immortality and eternal life," and reign with our Elder Brother in his kingdom forever? May the Lord hasten the time when "the glory of God shall fill the whole earth," as the waves fill the sea. We can afford to bear persecution for Jesus. He died for us, and why may we not die for him, if necessary? He can quicken our mortal bodies, and fashion them like unto his glorious body. Let us have on the whole armor of God, with the shield of faith, with which we can quench the most fiery darts of the devil; and have on the helmet of salvation, and be girded about with the girdle of truth, and take with us the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, and stand and fight for Jesus; for right will triumph over wrong in the end. Lord, hasten this time, and gather us all within those pearly gates of the New Jerusalem, is my prayer. Amen.

CHURCH DIVISIONS.

THE CURE.

A. A. PHELPS.

8. Cultivate the spirit of kindness. How can you do otherwise, while claiming to be a follower of Him who is "meek and lowly in heart?" Kindness is eminently characteristic of the Christian religion. "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits." James 3: 18. A Christian is not a vulture, but a dove—not a tiger, but a lamb. He is not for war, but for peace. He heeds the exhortation of the great apostle to the Gentiles: "Be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Eph. 4: 32. It is not enough to be even with a vicious party, by exhibiting the same revengeful spirit; rather conquer him by kindness, and rise above him by exercising the glorious attribute of forgiveness. The patience and pardon which you extend to an offender, will prove that you possess a power over yourself far superior to any you might exercise over another.

Peter fully agreed with Paul in urging Christians to treat each other with special tenderness: "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous; not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing, but contrariwise blessing." 1 Pet. 3: 8, 9. Similar injunctions are largely interspersed through the New Testament Scriptures. If we were more richly imbued with the spirit of kindness, we should be less sensitive under provocations that grow out of our intercourse with each other. Good sense and good religion will overlook a thousand little faults. Charity knows how to excuse the mistakes and bear with the weaknesses of the ignorant and the erring. For want of this heaven-born element we grow morose and exacting, and petty differences ripen into turbulent strife and disastrous divisions. A kind word has allayed many a storm, and healed many a breach. Exactly the opposite results are constantly produced by crabbedness. It will be exceedingly difficult to get up a quarrel where one of the parties is so saturated with kindness that his only weapon of warfare is love.

9. Construct no iron-bedsteads. Make due allowance for the differences that exist in disposition, education, association, and exposure to evil. The Bible distinguishes between "babes," "little children," "young men," and "fathers" in the gospel. It would be both foolish and cruel to expect as much from "little children" as from experienced "fathers" in the gospel. If you prize Christian fellowship, do not require everybody to pronounce your particular "shibboleth." The moment you do this you become a hobby-riding bigot, with very little sense and less grace. Among the very best specimens of the Christian religion there will be real differences of opinion. Let us learn to tolerate them. Head-divisions are not half so deplorable as heart-divisions. To require all, irrespective of circumstances, to feel, and think, and act just alike, is to prove that we have made but poor proficiency in the school of Christ.

Liberty of conscience is too precious a boon to barter for a song. If we prize it for ourselves, let us not rudely assail it in others. We are sorry to be obliged to confess the shrivelling narrowness of the age, notwithstanding the loud boast of liberalism that rings out from every class of religionists. Guillotines and inquisitions have passed away, but the spirit of them remains. Conscience-cramping creeds are not far removed from thumbscrews. How utterly unkind it is to make Christian fellowship depend upon the unqualified acceptance of certain declarations and deliverances which somebody construes to be the teaching of God's holy word! "Orthodoxy" is the iron-bed upon which the trembling candidate must be stretched; but "orthodoxy" is so strange a thing, that the religious world has been greatly puzzled to find a suitable definition for it. Practically each church takes about the same ground as did the English bishop who was asked to give his view of what constituted orthodoxy. Said he, "Orthodoxy is my doxy." "What then is heterodoxy?" "Any body's else doxy," the bishop quickly responded. Such religious tyranny may result in what some choose to call unity; but it is the unity of slaves under the driver's lash—of subjects under the monarch's power—of culprits within prison walls. Let God's children be exhorted to seek the light, and allowed to walk in all that shines upon their pathway. Christian toleration will be promotive of Christian fellowship. Grant to others what you claim for yourself. Live and let live. Learn to love and to labor with those whose sentiments differ from your own. This will give you an expansion of heart that will prove a rich inheritance amid the perplexing scenes and distracting influences of this revolted world.

"WHAT WILT THOU HAVE ME TO DO?"

T. W. GILES.

This expression is of great importance to every one who is, or desires to be, a christian. It should be at all times his greatest desire and anxious concern to know his duty in relation to God, his fellow men, and himself, and to perform the same with cheerfulness. It should be an established principle of his nature to do right, because it is right. No other consideration should be recognized as worthy of his respect and dignity as a christian.

What does God require of me, as an individual, to do for the good of my fellow men, and the promotion of his cause in the earth? If this question was uppermost in the minds of the professed followers of Christ, an immense amount of evil surmisings and uncharitable criticisms of one another would be done away, and a more peaceable, loving spirit manifested in its place. This question is seldom thought of by many christians of the present time. They are apt to rely too much upon their own strength and resources, independent of divine aid.

When Saul of Tarsus was struck under conviction, he uses the following question: "What wilt thou have me to do?" When the Lord made known to him what he should do, he attended to it immediately. This language shows conclusively that the person who in sincerity utters it, feels his utter helplessness, and dependence upon the Spirit of God to direct his steps. This earnestness to know duty and perform it, was a characteristic of the apostle through his christian life, and an example worthy of imitation.

It is a great study for any one to know himself, and to be able to bring his whole nature into submission to the will of God, so as to be ever ready to obey his divine precepts—the prompting of the Holy Spirit. We should never allow ourselves to hesitate to perform duties when they are made known to us. Duties to our fellow men are constantly coming before us in all their multitudinous forms, and many times it will require study and reflection to ascertain what course to pursue in reference to them. But if we make it a principle to ask our heavenly Father about it, he will give us all necessary instructions, and thus obviate all difficulty in regard to it. There is no danger of being too obedient to the will of God, who hath so loved us as to provide a plan of redemption, proportionate to the demands of our fallen race, in the gift of his only begotten Son, who died that we might through him have immortality and eternal life. But the human heart is in a state of alienation from God by nature. How liable are we to forget the obligations we are under to our Creator for his fatherly care over us. We many times bestow but little thought upon our responsibilities, and try many times to evade them.

How important it is that all christians should enter into a self-examination of themselves, to see if their hearts are in harmony with the divine Spirit. Does the infinitude of God's blessings and love inspire in our hearts a loftier aspiration; an earnest endeavor to so live in this world as to reflect honor upon the cause of Christ; an earnest desire to develop all those christian graces which embellish the christian character; and an ardent wish to be useful in life, and prepared for the joys of the redeemed?

In fine, if the expression "what wilt thou have me to do?" is the leading inquiry of the mind, we cannot materially err from the path of rectitude, but shall grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth. We shall be ready to hail our glorious King "when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day." That will be a joyous day to the child of God, who will then put on immortality and inherit an eternal existence on the new earth.

☞ THE meanness of the earthern vessel which conveys to others the gospel treasure, takes nothing from the value of the treasure. A dying hand may sign a deed of gift of incalculable value. A shepherd's boy may point out the way to a philosopher. A beggar may be the bearer of an invaluable present.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

At a meeting of the committee held on the camp-ground, June 7th, it was voted that our annual meeting this year commence Saturday, Aug. 19th, and continue over the 27th. Particulars hereafter.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

THE TRUTH SPREADING.

Our correspondence from different parts of the world affords abundant and very satisfactory proof that the truths advocated in the Crisis are spreading rapidly; especially among those who truly love Jesus. Men of talent and piety are waking up to behold the perils of the hour in which we are living; and are beginning to sound the alarm. Sectarian walls, which have hitherto separated good men and women in different denominations, are tumbling to the ground, and the true disciples of Jesus are coming together to wait for his coming in glory. This is what we have been expecting for years. It is a movement in the right direction. At the same time, Satan is doing all in his power to keep up the old sectarian walls, or else persuade those who come out from them to build a new one by adopting some creed, sectarian name, or tests of fellowship, to which all true christians can not conscientiously subscribe. Let us beware of his devices, and have no creed but an open Bible, no test of fellowship but christian character, no bond of union but brotherly love, no name but Christian. All can unite on such a platform, who truly love Jesus; and we can see no other true basis of union, or any other that is practicable, or any improvement on the unchristian sectarianism that has for centuries crippled the efforts of the disciples of Christ.

The time has come for a grand rally among all the friends of our dear Lord against the powers of darkness. Let the petty things that have separated the real friends of Jesus be thrown to the moles and bats, and let us act like men of God, and no longer push aside the man who truly loves the Savior, because he does not see all things just as we do. If this be done, we shall soon stand side by side with noble men and women whose hearts are warm with love for that dear coming One, whom we soon expect to see in all his glory. Let us treat all kindly, and try to lead them to the glorious light now shining on the word of the Lord. Let no harsh words, no reproachful epithets, no unkind feelings be manifested towards any one; but "let the peace of God rule in" our "hearts;" and soon we shall be with the redeemed, at "the marriage supper of the Lamb," chanting the song of deliverance, where love will be the only law of society.

"O hail, happy day."

DEDICATION.—The chapel at North Carver, Mass., was dedicated to God for religious worship, Friday, June 9th, 1871. The house is a model of good taste, and economy. We do not think the amount expended could have been used more judiciously. Bro. I. I. Leslie has had the general superintendence of the building, and has shown himself to be the right man in the right place. The church in No. Carver have good reason for the gratitude they feel towards Bro. L. During the dedication, and at subsequent meetings, we felt conscious of the approval of our Heavenly Father, of the presence of his Holy Spirit to comfort our hearts with his peace and joy.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.—One of our readers sends the money from his own purse to pay for eight new subscribers, saying at the close of the list of names: "From one who loves the truth, and wishes others to see and love it too." Will not others make a sacrifice to send the truth to their friends and neighbors? Many have been brought to the light in this way, who are now rejoicing in the "blessed hope."

"THE CURE."—We would call special attention to the article in another column, headed "Church Divisions," and the "Cure." It is excellent. At no time, since we began to look for the coming of Christ, has there been more need of attention to the "cure," than at the present. When the small pox and the yellow fever are raging in a community, every one should be particular to observe the laws of health. So in these last-day moral perils, every one who wishes to be ready for the coming of Christ, must "follow after the things which make for peace." Bro. Phelps, pull hard on the chord of peace, and the "God of peace shall be with you."

DO NOT FAIL to read the article concerning "Preacher's Wives and Widows." It contains meat in due season. Ponder it well.

A QUESTION.—Will the editor, or some one tell us which they wish us to believe, that Spiritualism is the work of the Devil, or the tricks of men? As I see sometimes one, and sometimes the other. J. G. SMITH.

In answer to the foregoing inquiry, we would say we believe some of the phenomena attributed to spirits are the work of men, and some of demons. Much that is done in dark circles is human trickery. In producing the varied phenomena of Spiritualism, both men and demons are operators, as facts most clearly show.

ANCIENT JEWISH BELIEF.

It is sometimes assumed that the early Jews believed in the immortality of the soul; but we can find no proof that any of them believed it till the sect of the Pharisees arose, about one hundred and fifty years before Christ; and they learned the doctrine from the heathen philosophers.

In the book of 2 Maccabees, we have an account of a mother and seven sons, who were martyred in a most cruel manner by Antiochus, because they would not eat swine's flesh. We give below a portion of the record of their martyrdom, as found in 2 Maccabees, 7: 1:

"The king being angry, commanded . . . to cut out the tongue of him that had spoken first; and the skin of his head being drawn off, to chop off also the extremities of his hands and feet; the rest of his brethren and mother looking on. And when he was now maimed in all parts, he commanded him, being yet alive, to be brought to the fire, and to be fried in the frying-pan; and while he was suffering therein long torments, the rest, together with the mother, exhorted one another to die manfully." Then the second son was served in the same manner. "And when he was at the last gasp, he said thus: Thou indeed, O most wicked man destroyest us out of this present life; but the King of the world will raise us up, who died for his laws, in the resurrection to the eternal life."

The third shared a like torture. When the fourth was "ready to die, he spoke thus: It is better, being put to death by men, to look for hope from God, to be raised up again by him."

Here we find the true Bible faith clearly expressed; and that is, a hope of the resurrection of the dead, by means of which, eternal life may be obtained; and not on account of having inherent immortality.

BRO. HERRON IS DEAD.—On our return home, from Carver, Monday, June 12th, we read the following in the Boston Journal:

"DEATH OF AN EDITOR.—W. B. Herron, editor of the Young Pilgrim, died at his residence in North Somerville on the 8th instant, of pneumonia. Mr. Herron also sustained a business relation with the Congregationalist, where he had served about a year. His age was forty-six years."

He has been out of health for some weeks. He now sleeps in Jesus. Pray for his deeply afflicted family.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books, tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at WHITE & BAUER's.

"THIEF ON THE CROSS."

BY ELDER GEORGE THOMSON.

A New Tract.

One of the best ever published on the above subject. Just the thing to scatter widely. Price, 3 cts. single; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail.

AD'T.

CALIFORNIA EXCURSION.—In relation to the proposed California excursion, to which reference has been made in the Crisis, we would say it is quite doubtful whether any arrangements can be made that will be of special benefit to those who have written us on the subject. When plans are matured, we purpose to inform all those interested.

ENVELOPE OPENER.—Those who wish for the best "Envelope Opener" and "Eraser," will do well to call at some stationer's store, for an article manufactured at Plainville, Ct., by Mr. Stevens.

THE LESSON OF PARIS.

What lesson is to be drawn from the late insane exploits of the Parisians? It is indeed a problem which even the most acute student of history and human nature cannot solve. We see a people to whom has been accorded, by all the world, the standard of taste in culture, art and refinement; in short, in everything which belongs to the æsthetic nature of man. But what are the fruits of this abundant intellectual development? Does it produce the comfort of the people, or any gain in their condition? The lesson of the last few months teaches exactly the reverse. Is not 'civilization a failure' indeed? The dullest cowherds know the value of peace and harmony, but the most elegant people on the face of the earth are become the bloodiest butchers of one another and the vandal destroyers of those monuments of art and genius which they themselves have erected. Is it true that "ignorance is bliss."—Boston Herald.

In looking over the history of the past, the Editor of the Herald will discover that worldly "refinement," and "abundant intellectual development" are not security against infidelity and wickedness, even in their grossest forms. Following Christ is the only remedy and shield from evil.

BRO. HENRY SNYDER has fallen asleep in Jesus. The following is from the Chicago Post, May 26th, 1871:

Rev. Heny Snyder, pastor of the Second German Baptist church in this city for a long number of years, departed this life on the 14th instant. He was in more than one sense a very remarkable man, and his works will follow him. A native of the city of Amsterdam, Holland, he came to this country some twenty-five years ago, and embraced with great fervor the Baptist faith shortly after his arrival in the United States. Fifteen years ago he was ordained a minister of the Baptist church, and has since then incessantly, and at the sacrifice of all personal considerations, worked for the good of his congregation. He acquired by study, reading and personal intercourse, the knowledge and perfect use of six living languages, and could use them to equal affect and purpose in his sermons and lectures. He was widely known as an indefatigable disciple of Christ, and brought about his early death, at not quite fifty years of age, by his over exertions in his profession. His family traces its descent to one of that sturdy class of burghers who, under William of Orange, defended their sea-girt country against the savage hordes of Philip II. of Spain and the bloody butcher known in history as the Duke of Alba. Henry Snyder was at all times the friend of the poor and the afflicted, and turned many into the right path. His sermons were particularly affecting and touching, his words finding a sure road into the human heart by the quaint reference to incidents in actual life, and by his unfailing sharpness in the dissection of human frailty.

He belonged to that branch of the Baptist church known as the Second Adventists, and exhausted all ingenuity in the expounding of the prophecies by Daniel and in the Revelations, while lecturing on the topic of the return of the Messiah.

Bro. Snyder was a faithful watchman, whose exhortations often cheered us during our meetings in Chicago.—Ed.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the A. C. Association, held in Boston, Mass., June 8th, 1871, Eld. S. G. Mathewson, President, presided. Prayer was offered by Eld. J. Couch.

The vacancy of Secretary, occasioned by the death of Elder H. H. Dickinson, was filled by the election of Eld. H. F. Carpenter to that office. In the absence of the Secretary elect, Eld. A. W. Sibley was chosen Sec. pro tem.

Eld. M. Batchelor was elected to fill the vacancy in the Publishing Committee of the A. C. P. Society, occasioned by the death of Bro. Dickinson.

The following preamble and resolutions, presented by Bro. G. T. Adams, were unanimously adopted:—

Whereas, in the providence of our heavenly Father, Eld. H. H. Dickinson, late Secretary of the Advent Christian Association, has suddenly been removed from the scenes of his earthly labors by the hand of death; therefore,

Resolved, That in the decease of Bro. Dickinson the Association has lost an able and efficient officer, the church an earnest and faithful minister, his family a beloved husband and an affectionate father.

Resolved, That, as the associates of our late brother, we extend to his afflicted family our warmest sympathies, and assure them of our prayer that the blessing of our heavenly Father may ever rest upon, and finally bring them, with the dear sleeping one, to an inheritance in that land where sickness can never enter.

Resolved, That in the sudden death of our brother, we are individually admonished of the uncertainty of life, and of the importance of earnest and faithful service in the work assigned us, that we may be in readiness for any event that may await us in the providence of God.

At an adjourned meeting of the Board, held June 12th, 1871, the sudden death of the Secretary of the A. C. P. Society—Bro. W. B. Herron—was announced, and the vacancy occasioned thereby was filled by the election of A. W. Sibley to that office.

A. W. SIBLEY, Sec. pro tem.

ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of this Society, held at its office in Boston, June 12th, 1871, the President, Eld. John Couch, presided. Prayer was offered by Eld. S. G. Mathewson.

After some appropriate remarks made by the members relative to the sudden death of the Editor of the Young Pilgrim—Bro. Wm. B. Herron, the following preamble and resolutions were offered by Bro. G. T. Adams, and unanimously adopted:—

Whereas, death in its onward and irresistible march has suddenly removed from our midst Bro. Wm. B. Herron, late Secretary of this Society, filling our hearts with sorrow, therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of our brother, the Society has lost an accurate, reliable, and valuable officer—one who served it for many years to its entire satisfaction.

Resolved, That as the originator and Editor of "The Young Pilgrim," he ever evinced a strong and ardent desire to benefit the young, "to bring the children to Jesus, instruct them in righteousness, and prepare them for the kingdom of heaven."

Resolved, That for his most deeply afflicted family—an invalid, helpless wife, and two young daughters, who have been bereft of a beloved husband and affectionate father, we do express our warmest sympathy, and assure them that our hearts are deeply affected by this sad loss; and we do most devoutly pray that the widow's God and the orphan's Protector may have them in his special care and keeping unto the day of redemption.

By vote, Eld. I. I. Leslie was chosen Editor of the Young Pilgrim in the place of Bro. Wm. B. Herron deceased. Services as such to commence with the August Nos. of said paper.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

IS EZEKIEL'S CITY YET FUTURE?

Frequently we meet honest expositors of Scripture who locate the city, described in the eight closing chapters of Ezekiel's prophecy, in the future age, insisting that it is to be a literal city. But the incorrectness of this conclusion will appear after a little reflection; for if this city, and the descriptions connected therewith, are to be literally realized in the future age, the following inadmissible conclusions will follow:—

1. That the "Sabbaths and the new moons" will be observed in that age (ch. 46: 3), which Paul pronounced "a shadow of things to come," which ended at the cross (Col. 2: 14: 17); and to introduce the shadow again would be to deny the substance or body which cast it, which is Christ.

2. That "circumcision" will be observed in that age (ch. 44: 9); whereas Paul affirms, "If ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing" (Gal. 5: 2); and thus Christ must be repudiated to give place for this arrangement in the next age.

3. That sacrifices, "sin-offerings," and trespass-offerings" will be made in that age (ch. 42: 13); which would make the kingdom of God a sinful realm, inhabited by sinners.

4. That the "passover" will be observed in that age (ch. 45: 21), while Paul tells us that Christ is the passover lamb "slain for us;" and to continue the type is a repudiation of the antitype.

5. That there will be "death" in that age (ch. 44: 25), while John affirms, "There shall be no more death."

Thus the effort to locate this city in the future age carries "sabbaths and new moons" "circumcision," "sacrifices," "sin-offerings," "passovers," and "death" into the kingdom of God. But I insist that the state symbolized by this city, and its appendages, was realized subsequent to the return from Babylonian captivity, so far as a conformity to the designated conditions would allow. The "river" and "tree" in this vision, being appendages to this symbol, cannot synchronise with John's river and tree of life, especially since in the description of Ezekiel there is "death," while John's tree is located where "there shall be no more death."

This city was a symbol, as will presently appear, and not a prophecy of a city yet to be built. Symbols never signify a subsequent reality like themselves, but always represent something else: as, for instance, in the eleventh chapter of Revelation, the treading down of the "holy city" for the space of "forty-two months" implied the treading down of the church—the city being used as a symbol of the church. So with the city which Ezekiel saw in vision: it was a symbol to represent something; and instead of inquiring, Where shall we locate the event or scene symbolized by the city?

But preparatory to answering this question, it may be well to learn what this city is a symbol of. Is it a symbol of the Jewish church, then in captivity? And was it shown to the prophet to represent the subsequent upbuilding of that church in their own land? Let it be borne in mind that a city seen in vision is entirely different from a prophecy foretelling the building of a city. In the one case the city has a present existence in the mind of the prophet, not as a reality, but as a symbol, to represent something else while in the other case there is distinct announcement of a future reality. All the existing speculation concerning this city has grown out of the shocking blunder of reducing a symbol to a reality—thus looking for the symbol to become a reality represented by this symbol.

To learn what this city symbolizes, let us notice the circumstances under which the vision was seen, and find out the purpose for which the vision was given.

"In the five and twentieth year of our captivity . . . in the visions of God brought he me into the land of Israel, and set me upon a very high mountain, by which was as the frame of a city: . . . declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel.' Ezek. 40: 1-4.

"They have even defiled my holy name by their abominations that they have committed; wherefore I have consumed them in mine anger. Now let them put away their whoredom, and the carcasses of their kings, far from me, and I will dwell in the midst of them forever. Thou Son of man, show the house to the house of Israel, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities; and let them measure the pattern. And if they be ashamed of all that they have done, show them the form of the house." (ch. 43: 8-11.

This vision was given when twenty-five of the seventy years' captivity had been endured by the Jews, and it was given to show them the blessings in reserve for them on condition they would "be ashamed of their iniquities." Their minds were thus to be impressed with the assurance of their restoration to their own land, to enjoy their long-neglected worship. And true enough, the Jewish church was again planted in the land of Israel, and resumed their ancient worship, as foreshadowed by the brilliant symbol in this vision. But am I told that their city, their temple, and their division of the land was not according to the description given? Certainly not, for the description was simply a description of the symbol, and not a description of the thing symbolized. We have no right to apply the description of a symbol to the reality represented by the symbol. Let this be remembered, and we shall save all confusion.

We will do well in our expositons of prophecy to always remember (1) that revelation marks a boundary line for death and sacrifices, and (2) whenever we attempt to locate a prophecy which includes death and sacrifices, BEYOND THAT BOUNDARY LINE, we are surely getting it out of its true latitude. Prophecies including death belong to an age of death, and not to a deathless age; and prophecies containing sacrifices belong to an age of sacrifices, and not to an age after sacrifices are superceded. By remembering this, we shall be more apt to come to safe conclusions in our prophet investigations. W. S.

"RESTORE AGAIN THE KINGDOM TO ISRAEL."

Just before Jesus took his departure from earth, his disciples propounded this question: "Lord wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Acts 1: 6. They had gathered the impression both from the predictions of the prophets, and from the discourses of Jesus, that a kingdom of heavenly origin was destined to be set up by an heir of David, as indicated in predictions like the following: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. Jer. 23: 5, 6. They confidently believed Jesus to be the very personage indicated in this prophecy, and up to the time of his crucifixion, they had expected to see him elevated to the throne of David; but when they saw him under the dominion of death, their hope was blighted; but with his resurrection their hope revived, and again they hoped to see the kingdom restored to Israel.

Jesus had already conversed with them, in his resurrected capacity, forty days, "speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God," and now they anxiously inquire, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" They knew that the "kingdom of Israel" had been overturned, and was then in ruins; they, likewise, knew that it was destined to be restored. They well remembered the following prediction concerning that kingdom: "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him." Ezek. 21: 27. Furthermore, they knew that Christ was the true heir to the throne of that kingdom; hence, they do not inquire, "Shall the kingdom of Israel be restored?" They have no doubt upon this point; they know that it will be, for the prophets have so testified. Neither do they inquire, "Wilt thou restore the kingdom?" They well know that he will do it, if he is the true Messiah, for the prophets have testified that the Messiah should do this work.

But the question relates to time: "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Inasmuch as to say, We know from the testimony of the prophets that the kingdom is to be restored, and believe that thou art the Messiah who shall do this work; but we feel interested to know how soon it shall be accomplished. We are anxious to know if thou wilt "at this time restore again the kingdom?" Does Jesus reprimand them for expecting its restoration? No; but his reply strengthens their expectation—"It is not for you to know the times and seasons which the Father hath put in his own power."

But "times and seasons" of what? of something that never can be realized? Nay, verily; but "times and seasons" of the actual restoration of the kingdom to Israel in the future. If the disciples were really in an error in this expectation, why did not Jesus show it to them, instead of confirming them in their view?

If restored merely to its former imperfect state, it would require a mortal king, and mortal subjects, and exclude Christ and every immortal saint therefrom. Shall we so interpret it as to shut out Christ and the saints, in order to include the carnal Jews? No.

When the kingdom is restored, it will not be restored under a mortal king, with mortal subjects, as in its imperfect stage; for Jesus, who is to be the King, is already immortal; and as he is to reign as "King of saints," he has purposed that their "vile bodies shall be changed and fashioned like unto his glorious body." Phil. 3: 21. Then a deathless King will reign over deathless subjects. Then "the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." Then "the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick." A kingdom that shall have "no end," no sickness, no death!

Some have supposed that the term Israel must always signify mortal Israelites; but the time is coming when all righteous Israelites will be made immortal, and all unrighteous ones be destroyed; and the promised kingdom belongs only to the righteous, together with the engrafted Gentiles. Let us be among them.

PREACHERS' WIVES AND WIDOWS.

GEO. THOMSON.

I have been long waiting for some one, not specially interested, to write something on this subject; but have become tired of waiting, and have concluded to write something myself, not about a preacher's wife in particular, but preachers' wives as a class. But I do not mean the wives of those preachers who get a salary of from one thousand to twenty thousand dollars a year. They do not need an advocate; but I speak of those whose happiness, and life, and hopes, are linked with a class of gospel preachers who place too high an estimate on their work to make it a subject of merchandise. It is admitted that this class of preachers make many sacrifices, foregoing the pleasures of home, and the society of the loved ones, while absent on the Master's business; but the fact is too much overlooked that the "wife at home" is also making sacrifices for the cause. Sometimes for many weeks, and even months, she is deprived of the society of her companion and protector, and she is thus aiding in the spread of gospel truth. The preacher gets credit for his successful labors, and the lonely wife at home should get some share of that credit, as she contributes in no small degree to the work.

If this were all she had to sacrifice, it were well; but ah! the unwritten history of her sufferings, the economizings to make the meal hold out, to appease the hunger of the little ones, the patchings and darnings to protect little bodies and feet from the piercing blasts of winter; these, and very many other inconveniences, are cheerfully submitted to for the gospel's sake. But, then, she cannot help thinking sometimes how pleasant it would be, if Bro. A. or Sr. B. would just drop in and say, "How do you do?" and take a peep at the meal barrel, examine the dimensions of the wood-pile (if there be any), observe if Simon's toes are exposed to the cold, and speak a word of good cheer. O how much it would lighten her cares. But the preacher's wife lives much on hope. Father is away off holding protracted meetings; and though we have not much now, when father comes home perhaps Tommy will get a new pair of shoes, and Jennie a new dress, so that she can go to school; and perhaps mother will get a new shawl, that she may attend meetings. Father comes home, but, alas! those hopes are not realized.

I knew two preaching brethren, who preached nine discourses in a place, one hundred miles from home, and were rewarded with ten cents between them. Another held a three weeks' meeting, and received fifty cents. It is not always so; but is it not too often so? Who can imagine the sufferings and disappointments of the preacher's wife under such circumstances? And, then, it is frequently the case that the husband must lay down his life in his labor; and then the poor struggling wife becomes a destitute widow. Because her partner's work is done, is she to be dismissed from the hearts and sympathies of her brethren? God forbid. She bore a large share in his toils and privations; let her be remembered and provided for; not as an act of charity, but in the true sense of obligation and indebtedness. "But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother (or sister) have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him (or her), how dwelleth the love of God in him?" 1 John 3: 17.

Let the wives and widows of preachers be remembered. Give them a place in your prayers, and your tangible sympathies. Let the sisters visit them in their loneliness, remembering the words of our dear Master, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

MINNESOTA CAMPMEETING.

As will be seen by notice elsewhere, our camp this year is to be at Kasota. The committee have changed the camp from the old ground at Ottawa, on account of the railroad advantages that are gained by so doing. Friends in the south and western parts of the State will have no inconvenience in changing cars or staging, as heretofore, and those coming from the northern part will have but a few more miles to travel. We trust that the liberal arrangements that we have made with the railroad companies will induce our brethren to make a grand rally, and come to this meeting in such numbers as will show to the world that we are in earnest in our work of preparing a people for our soon coming King. We have but a little while to work. Now is the time to toil and sacrifice in this good cause. The resting-time will soon be here, when our labors will cease.

In regard to tent accommodations, we would say that the State tent will be pitched, and arrangements made to give a home in it to those not otherwise provided for; but we trust that those living in the vicinity, and all others that can, will erect family tents of cotton cloth or lumber. Those coming in wagons can make a roof with a few yards of cotton, and secure a very comfortable sleeping-place in that way. Let all begin immediately to make their preparations to attend, and come with hearts warm in the Savior's love, ready to work for the salvation of perishing men.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 24th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

THE GOLD DOLLAR.

Taking up the Crisis of Feb. 8th one morning, to read just one piece, the first one that met my gaze was entitled "The Gold Dollar." No sooner had I read the heading of that article, and quickly supposing some one had given one, than the thought presented itself—I have one that I might give. After reading the article, I decided to give it to the Lord. By doing this, however, I am not setting a good example of sacrifice and self-denial, as was the Wisconsin sister; but perhaps am setting an example of thoughtfulness, as I have been carrying it in my porte-monnaie for three years, where it has gained nothing.

Doubtless many are carrying a gold dollar, or have one stowed away, which they would never miss were they to give it into the treasury of the Lord, thus having it in the bank of heaven, where the interest is not small. Will not all the readers of the dear Crisis stop for a moment and just think if they have not a "gold dollar" laying idly by, which they might give to the glory of God?

I am a constant reader of your beautiful paper. I love the truths therein contained. Next to the Bible do I prize it. I am trying so to live that when Jesus shall come again to earth, I may, through his merits, receive eternal life. SISTER EMMIE.

Lawrence, Mass.

SPEIGHTS.

BRO. GRANT:—The communication from J. S. Speights in the Crisis of May 31st, which he affirms are the "true sayings of God," suggest a few thoughts for the benefit of those who are unacquainted with his career.

It is about four years since he came to Ct., with the "words of Christ" to the church waiting "for the Lord from heaven." His method of handling the divine oracles has resulted in the dismemberment of five or six families; and for about a year and a half past from one to seven women have been wandering with him from Canada to Maryland and intermediate points, leaving their families in distress and anguish.

Although originally designed to walk uprightly, he has developed a rare faculty for creeping into domestic enclosures. He denies the personal coming of the Lord Jesus from heaven, which is not strange for one bringing forth such fruits.

Communications similar to the one in the Crisis emanated from him last winter, since which time disease has broken his regulations, and two of the "seven" have been transferred to the "sick list" with fever and erysipelas; we are glad, however, to record their recovery.

He has flattered his followers with the hope of receiving divine power without measure, with which they were to overcome all opposition. At length the opportunity came, and in the evening of April 25th, 1871, he found himself in the hands of frail humanity in Wallingford, Ct. Notwithstanding he claimed to have passed the human, and reached the divine where even bullets could not harm him, he offered twenty, and then fifty dollars, to sever this unpleasant union with the human, without success. He was subsequently released with an application of tar. This conflict between the assumed divine Mr. S. and humanity, shows that when severely tested, his entire arrangement can be bought cheap for cash! Earth cannot alleviate the aggravating scenes that have attended this man's teaching. His deceitful handling of the words of Christ, inspired prophets and apostles, leads to the severing of every tie of natural affection. 2 Tim. 3: 3.

It is reported that he has been lecturing in Boston of late, doubtless to beguile others more honest and unsuspecting than watchful, to secure funds to prolong his mad career. We wish him and those under his control no harm, but rather that they would turn from the error of their ways and be content to act in their proper sphere, and not credit the Lord with deeds of darkness which belong to the devil.

The moral of this lesson is, that while the word of God is the only light to our feet, and lamp to our path, we are in extreme danger from "Bible expositions" in the hands of designing men, who handle the sacred book deceitfully, through feigned words making merchandise of those who desire to learn, but neglect to watch. "Beware of plausible tampering with scriptural testimony," which rapidly leads to the easy rejection of any or all, at pleasure. Every attempt to obscure and wrest any plain, simple statement of the Holy Spirit, by clothing it with sophistry, leads to shipwreck of faith. Man cannot reason the stony heart and proud will into conversion, but the power of God can. It can only be known by experience. We believe it; and while we do, let us not set our reason to work to create unbelief in our hearts touching any point relating to either the righteous or wicked, because we may not be able to comprehend, by reasoning, God's power to fulfill all that is written. Let us take heed to the words of Jesus, Mark 13: 37. O. D. WOODRUFF.

PROCRASTINATION is fatal to all plans for reformation. Whoever intends to repent and seek the Lord to-morrow, or next week, is in the broad road that leads to death.

Correspondence.

From Bro. Richard Mosher.

BRO. GRANT:—For the first time I commence to write for your excellent paper, the Crisis, thinking it might be entertaining to some of its readers to learn some of my experience in embracing the truth. I commenced preaching in 1832; in 1835 I was ordained, and united with the N. Y. Eastern Christian Conference, with which I continued a member until last June. I then withdrew from that denomination, and united with the Christian Adventists. I can truly say that I never saw such loveliness and beauty in God's word as I now see. I much regret my former prejudice against the Advent doctrine; but glory be to God, I can say as the blind man said, "One thing I know, wherein I was once blind, now I see." Thank the Lord.

In 1842, Elder G. W. Burnham came to Raidsville, Albany Co., where I was preaching, and lectured for over two weeks, day and evening, on the prophecies. I refused to investigate any doctrine he taught. Soon after this, Elder Geo. Storrs sent me a tract on the final destruction of the wicked. I read it, and re-read it with care. It so harmonized with God's word, I believed it. This weakened my superstition and prejudice against the Advent doctrine very much; yet I preached the immortality of the souls of the righteous, but had hard work to reconcile all my views with the Bible, and be satisfied. I searched the Scriptures, and prayed for God to give me light and truth, and for several years continued unsettled as to a permanent faith.

At last some good friend sent me the "World's Crisis," and continues to send it (I know not who he is) at his own expense. I was much interested in that excellent paper, and am yet. It settled my mind on many points. I occasionally visited my friends at Sandy Hill, and held much conversation with the Advent brethren on doctrine and Bible teaching, which greatly convinced me they had the truth. In 1868 I moved to Sandy Hill, rather for retirement, as my health was not sufficient for pastoral duties. I preached occasionally for the Advent church in this place, and winters went South and preached where I had formerly lived. Yet my mind was laboring hard for truth, and after a hard struggle I yielded to my convictions, and embraced the Advent cause. Now I feel like a bird let out of its cage. O how plainly the Bible teaches the near approach of Christ's second advent, and the renewed earth, the habitation for the saints. I sometimes feel almost young again, I am so happy in these views. Last August I attended the Advent campmeeting at Springfield, which put on me the finishing touch, and made me an Adventist all over, outside and in. O how I wished the whole world could have been there and heard the preaching as I heard it. Glory to God, it makes me happy to think of it.

My health has greatly improved, and I am now preaching here and at Fort Edward every Sunday; and God blesses me. I have met some who say they know the Bible teaches the Advent doctrine, but it is unpopular. I consider such men lovers of applause, more than lovers of God. May the Lord have mercy on all such, is my prayer. I feel like proclaiming God's truth to the world all I can, for I consider our time is short, and Christ is coming. Work while the day lasts. Yours in hope of the gospel, R. MOSHER.

Sandy Hill, N. Y.

From Bro. H. P. Wright.

BRO. GRANT:—I have never as yet contributed anything for the Crisis, yet I trust you will pardon this first aggression, as I wish to note as briefly as possible current events, etc., in this quarter. I do not hesitate to say the Crisis is the best paper I have ever taken; and its contributors, in the main, are those who understand the plan of salvation, and advocate convincing truths, which is just what the dying world needs in these last days. You may be aware ere this reaches you that Bro. Henry Snyder is now sleeping from his labors. He died May 24th, '71, leaving convincing proofs that all was right, and hopes bright with the knowledge that Jesus was his while here, and will be his in the morning, when he may call his slumbering saints from their dusty beds in the likeness of himself.

The Lord is with us, and our beloved Bro. Frank Burr, who is breaking the bread of life to us, and is very faithful in the responsible sphere to which he has been called; and there is a general disposition to encourage his labors. I do not know as there could have been one selected that was better calculated to be instrumental in harmonizing the body of the membership, and in showing that unity is strength, and that brotherly love will be the leading principle in all who are rooted and grounded in Christ.

Bro. D. S. Clark preached to us yesterday. The Lord gave him much liberty, especially in the evening; and no doubt those who heard him felt enlightened and blessed. We are now having some internal repairs made in the chapel, where we worship; the use of which is given us by our kind and much beloved Bro. A. M. Billings. May the Lord bless him for his liberality to the cause that lies so near a noble heart.

Bro. C. C. Ramsay, who has been with us more or less for three years, is now laboring in Floyd, Iowa. He has left here a large number who will ever look after him with that love and sympathy that is in the hearts of those who have been glad and are rejoicing in a hope that is full of assurance, and based on a foundation that will stand when all things else will be as wood and stubble.

May the Lord lead us all in the path of duty, and form within us a desire to be faithful in the cause so near and dear to our hearts. Yours in waiting, H. P. WRIGHT.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. A. F. DODGE writes:—"No church can live on preaching alone. The minister cannot keep the church alive. Unless she takes hold of the matter, and works in earnest, she is bound to die. The minister has his work to do, while the church has her's; and unless they both work together, but little permanent good will be accomplished. How pleasant it is for those who preach the word, to visit churches that are alive in the work of the Master. It cheers their hearts, lifts their drooping spirits, and imparts to them new courage and zeal in the cause and services of their Master. They love and feel like laboring with such a church, because they are in an element of power. I speak from experience.

I am happy to be able to report that there is a general waking up all through N. W. Missouri. Three years ago, there were none in this part of the State looking for Jesus. I came here three years ago. I have since traveled and preached in the following counties: Nodona, Andrew, Gentry, Davis, DeKalb, Waith, Hold, Clinton and Colwell. In all these counties the seeds of truth have been sown, have taken root, and are bringing forth fruit. Praise the good Lord. The desponding ones in the west are now lifting up their heads, and taking courage, for they see the good work going on. Our conference, organized two years ago, and known as the S. W. Iowa and N. W. Mo. Conference, now embraces eight churches, and about ten ministers. We have some churches not yet brought into the conference that will be shortly. Now, brethren, we need help. The harvest is large and ready. Who will come to our help? Laborers are few. May the Lord direct the steps of some good brother this way, who will let his light shine, and help carry on the good work."

Bro. D. B. Hunt writes from Knoxville, Pa., May 20th, 1871:—"The time has arrived to try our souls, and test us as soldiers; and as soldiers let us endure, manifesting the spirit of our Captain, having zeal according to knowledge. While we are persecuted and defamed, and our names cast out as evil, and all manner of evil is spoken against us falsely, for Christ's sake, let it incite us to pity. While on their part he is spoken evil of, on our part let him be glorified. To let you know where I am, I will say the Bible is a new book to me. The life and death, the sleep of the dead, immortality in Christ at the resurrection, is simple and plain; and I am glad I have been brought out of the fog and dark of creedology into gospel light."

"CONVENT LIFE."

I wish to recommend to all readers of the Crisis Miss Edith O'Gorman's book on the Romish system of religion, written by herself. Having been in a convent six long years, she speaks from personal experience and positive knowledge. She feels called of God to speak the truth, whereby some may yet be saved; and as the scales of superstition have been taken from her eyes by Him who will yet reveal all things, she has fearlessly written "Convent Life Unveiled." Having heard her lecture, and read her book, and knowing the family for a number of years, as they live on the same street with us, we feel competent to judge. We think there never was in our day a book written, or lecture given, which thoroughly draws the very life-blood from the Roman Catholic religion as does this book. It certainly is a book for our times. Again I say, be sure and read it, especially you who say there are as good people in the Catholic church as any other, you knowing all the while nothing but the blood of Christ can save any one. This they do not believe. The book is $1.50, and entitled "Convent Life Unveiled." It may be had by sending to Cory Brothers, No. 120 Westminster street, Providence, R.-I. N. D. Babcock.

Obituaries.

Willoughby. Died, at Holderness, N. H., May 16th, our father, Calvin Willoughby, aged seventy-one years, two months, and twenty days.

Our father was looking for the coming of the Lord as an event near at hand. He has been a reader of the Crisis for a number of years. That and his Bible have been his constant companions for a long time. We deeply feel his loss, yet we sorrow not as those that have no hope; for we believe that he sleeps in Jesus, and we are assured that such will God bring with him. Words of comfort were spoken on the occasion of the funeral by John H. Evans, from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

Hastings C. Willoughby.

Leighton. Died at Bangor, Me., March 29th, 1871, Lettie M. Leighton, aged seventeen years and eight months.

Lettie was converted about three or four years before her death, and baptized. Her walk was that of an humble disciple of Jesus. She was ever ready to bear a testimony in the prayer-meeting. She was loved by all the people of God. Her afflicted father, mother and brother have the consolation that she died in the triumphs of faith. Words of comfort were spoken at her funeral by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 29. "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all?" F. A. Baker.

Normand. Died at Higginsville, N. Y., March 21st, Charles, son of Richard and Minerva Normand, aged two years and eight months.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

W. J. Morrell.

Collins. Died at the same place, April 10th, Dewitt, only child of Stephen and Ellen Collins, aged nineteen months.

Words of comfort were spoken by

W. J. Morrell.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

Versailles, June 7. [World special.] On the highest authority I state that the fusion of the Monarchists has wholly failed owing to the intrigues of M. Thiers, who privately exults over the certainty of maintaining a nondescript republic with himself as chief, as in the case of Prim in Spain, for an indefinite period.

Incessant attempts are making in Paris to induce the soldiers to fraternize with the people. Intense dissatisfaction prevails among all classes, and fresh trouble is feared.

Paris, June 7. The obsequies of the late Archbishop Darboy took place to-day at the Cathedral of Notre Dame with great pomp. They were attended by a large number of political, military and literary celebrities and a delegation from the National Assembly. The church was crowded and the number of spectators on the line of the funeral procession was immense.

Rome, June 6. An encyclical letter has been issued, calling on Catholics throughout the world to give thanks to God on the occasion of the Pope's jubilee.

Bucharest, June 6. The session of the Romanian Chambers was opened to-day by Prince Charles, who met with an enthusiastic reception.

Rome, June 6. By order of the Pope, a solemn High Mass was said to-day in honor of the French priests assassinated in Paris.

London, June 6. A letter from Guizot, published to-day, advocates the validation of the elections to the Assembly of Duke d'Aumale and Prince de Joinville, and the settlement of a form of government for France by a vote of the nation. Tranquility prevails throughout France.

The Constitutionel says the first duty of the Assembly is to fill its own 120 seats, next to assume constituent powers, and finally to order a plebiscite for the determination of the question of the future form of government.

Paris, June 5. The influx of the people into Paris is enormous. 400,000 persons have entered the city since Saturday, including a large proportion of former citizens. Business is quickly reviving, and the streets present a livelier appearance. M. M. Rothschilds have re-opened their banking establishment and are doing business as formerly. The Parisians are not permitted to take part in the supplementary elections, all city officials being placed by the Versailles government for the present. The telegraph lines will all be in working order again by Saturday next.

Paris, June 5.—The French soldiers, on returning from imprisonment in Germany, replace the mobilized guards as fast as they arrive. In Algeria, none of the mobile guard will be retained under arms.

Paris, June 7. The Municipal elections at Marseilles and Tarascon have been declared void.

All the pieces of the Column Vendome have been found, and that monument of the military glory of France will be exactly restored.

Florence, June 10. The Government has informed all foreign ambassadors that the capital of Italy will on the first of July be transferred to Rome.

Vienna, June 10. Prince Hohenlohe goes to Rome to congratulate the Pope upon his twenty-fifth anniversary of his election to the Papal chair.

The Austrian Government has instructed its Representative, Baron Kubeck, to follow Victor Emmanuel to Rome.

Paris, June 11. A strong effort will be made by the Bonapartists in the coming supplementary election. The Journal of Paris says that the Prince Imperial, not Prince Napoleon, will be put forward as a candidate for the Assembly.

The Clocks thinks that the result of the election in the cities will check the tendency to monarchism.

The restoration of the public buildings has commenced.

Gen. Douay has issued an order that all civilians found with arms in their possession after a certain day shall be tried by court martial.

All the sacred vessels and ornaments taken from the churches by the Communists have with few exceptions been discovered in the mint and other places.

London, June 12. The resignation of Favre as French Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Valentin as Prefect of the Seine, are reported to have been tendered to Thiers.

Paris is already crowded with returning citizens and strangers.

The French Government has determined to indemnify the owners of houses destroyed during the recent fighting in Paris.

Marshal McMahon has refused to become a candidate for the Assembly from the vacant district of Paris.

Late advices from Teheran state that the famine in one district of Persia has reached such a state that the starving people have killed and eaten fifty children.

Constantinople, June 7. Fires were discovered simultaneously in four places in this city this morning, and at one time two hundred houses were in flames. Fortunately the wind is light, and there is a prospect of getting the conflagration under control. The fires are supposed to be incendiary.

Buenos Ayres. This once beautiful Argentine city is truly ill-fated. Latest advices represent the yellow fever as having broken out there with renewed violence and even greater fatality than at any previous time. About the first of May the malady had almost subsided; the inhabitants, who had fled to the interior, were slowly returning, and business, which had been almost entirely suspended, was being gradually resumed. On the 13th of May, the fever burst forth again, spreading with almost the rapidity of a cyclone. The deaths from the fever reached seven hundred a day, and 25,000 persons had already been swept away by the fearful pestilence. All communication between the city and the outer world has been cut off, and all hope banished of abating the terrible ravages of the fever until the autumnal frosts appear. Meantime the city may become a blank waste and the fever subside for lack of material to feed upon.

☞ The Pope of Rome has just issued a decree of excommunication against Rev. Dr. John Joseph Ignatius Dollinger, Professor in the University of Munich, and one of the most influential theologians in Europe. Dr. Dollinger is a native of Bavaria, and is now in his seventy-third year. He was ordained in 1022, and was immediately appointed chaplain to the diocese of Hamberg.

DOMESTIC.

San Francisco, June 7. The steamer City of Melbourne, from Australia, May 4th, arrived today with sixty passengers. She reports a tremendous hurricane in the vicinity of the Figi Islands, in which the brig Kentucky, from San Francisco for Melbourne, foundered with all on board. Capt. Bryant of the Kentucky had just been married before sailing and had his wife with him.

Great floods had devasted a large portion of the colony of New South Wales.

In South Australia heavy floods in the interior have put a stop to the operations of the constructors of the overland telegraph.

A new disease has broken out among the sheep, which is destroying them by thousands. No remedy has yet been discovered.

Worcester, Mass., June 11. A sweeping tornado passed through the towns of Paxton, Holden and West Boylston this afternoon at half-past four o'clock, demolishing every building in its track, and tearing up trees by the roots. The first account of it received here was of its appearance in the town of Paxton, where it demolished the barn of L. N. Parkhurst and blew off one gable of his house. From there it went in a north-easterly direction and blew down the buildings of Mr. Bigelow on the Oldtown farm. From there it went through the woods, sweeping all before it, and striking the house and barn of Lewis Martin, in Holden, entirely demolishing them both. The village of Holden was next in its destructive march, and here five barns, three houses and one carpenter shop were blown down and three persons were injured—one man who was in the carpenter shop, Charles Burnett, quite seriously. A strip of heavy stone wall, some twenty rods in length, was completely blown over, and large trees were blown thirty rods with upward of a ton of earth upon their roots. The tornado took but a moment for its work, and was accompanied by thunder, lightning and rain. The last heard of it by any one here was near Oakdale, where trees were blown down.

Wonderful Phenomenon in Illinois. Chicago, June 5. A cyclone occurred near Mason city, Illinois, on Friday morning. An inky-hued cloud or smoke-like column was observed gathering near the earth's surface on an open prairie, six miles from that place, and from this column there soon shot out three narrower and spire-like cloud columns, which continued to ascend rapidly until they reached and seemed to attach themselves closely to a passing cloud above, and moved slowly toward Mason city, but finally changed its course a mile from its track. An odor of burning sulphur was plainly perceived, and at one hundred yards' distance small flashes of electricity were constantly visible passing from the earth to the clouds, and rapid crackling reports were heard like infantry in battle firing their muskets as fast as possible. The pathway of the cyclone was nearly three miles in length and from twenty to eighty feet in width, and in that pathway not a particle of vegetation was left alive. For some distance the earth was literally ploughed to the depth of six inches. The column of whirling air must have been intensely hot, as every green thing in its path was dried to a crisp. Another feature of the cyclone was that while its rotary motion was inconceivably swift its progressive motion was not above six miles an hour. Its outlines were so well defined that five feet from the outline of the total destruction of vegetation not a vestige of its effects could be seen. Fortunately no houses stood in its line of march.

The Pope's Jubilee. The Pope's Jubilee, which is to be celebrated by all good Catholics throughout the world, occurs on the 16th inst. On that day will be completed the twenty-fifth year of the pontificate of Pius IX. This is the longest papal rule on record since that of its founder, St. Peter, who is said to have been in office three or four months over a quarter of a century. At the first view it seems rather a singular that, in the course of eighteen centuries, the general term of papal service should have been so short, in comparison with the tenure of kings and other temporal rulers. Probably the chief explanation is found in the fact that most Popes were not elected till they were well along in years. Pius IX. is now in his eightieth year, and he has not had so easy and encouraging a session in the Papal Chair that any Protestant need begrudge him whatever comfort he can get out of the approaching jubilee.—Boston Journal.

The Cancer Cure. The dispatches of "Perley" have alluded frequently to the new discovery of the effect of cundurango as a cure for cancer. It is said that a woman of Ecuador, where the plant grows, gave it to her husband by mixing it with his food, in the hope that it would terminate his intense sufferings from internal cancer by causing death. Much to her surprise this poisonous root effected a cure. The fact was communicated to the authorities at Washington, and Dr. Bliss, procuring a small supply, tested it with truly wonderful results. A supply will soon be secured from Ecuador, and the medical fraternity are anxious to test its effect. In one case, after taking the decoction less than a week, the cancer became less indurated, and the color changed from angry red to pale pink.—Boston Journal.

In Brief.

—— Strawberries are a drug in the San Francisco markets at four to six cents per box.——An address to the Pope is circulating in the provinces of France. It expresses the hope that regulated France will soon lend an avenging arm to the Holy Father. The document is freely signed.——Letters from California state that mechanics and workmen generally can now do no better in the East than by wandering off to the Pacific States. ——California exultantly estimates its coming vintage at from eight to twelve gallons.——Deaths from hydrate of chloral are becoming alarmingly frequent, and people should take warning against the careless use of this popular anodyne. Doses that have been heretofore considered safe, and that are safe for some people, prove fatal to others. ——Three thousand men are engaged in laying the track of the North Pacific Railroad through Minnesota and westward. Their progress averages a mile a day.

Father Hyacinthe to Dr. Dollinger. Father Hyacinthe has addressed from Rome a letter to Dr. Dollinger, in which he says that the time of words is past and that of action come. He denominates the Infallibists a "sect," the evergrowing boldness of which has gone so far as to contemplate the establishment of a new Catholic faith. The "schism" exists, he says, with the Papacy at Rome, whose "unmeasurable pretensions" are "growing stronger and stronger." The letter terminates: "Courage, great and noble heart! Be blessed for having offered yourself spontaneously to the danger for the House of Israel. The strong ones have disappeared from among us, and have gone to rest, but Jehovah has raised you in your old days for new combats and new victories."

☞ A helpmeet of the old-fashioned sort was the wife of Mr. Allibone, author of the "Dictionary of Authors," as is shown by the fact that she copied over thirty-thousand pages of her husband's manuscript, in foolscap, preparing it for the press, besides looking up and verifying dates, and so on.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so. For the Committe, J. Couch.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a tent meeting under the Mass. Mission Tent, at Littleton, Mass., commencing Wednesday, June 14th, and continue afternoons and evenings for twelve days. We hope the brethren in all that region will be interested and come to this meeting, and labor for the salvation of the perishing, and help spread the Bible truth relative to the speedy coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Enoch Morrill.
L. Boutell.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting near Canaan Village, Vt., commencing Wednesday evening, June 21st, at seven o'clock, and holding over the following Lord's day. Brethren and sisters from adjoining towns are earnestly invited to come up to this feast. If you have any hobbies, don't bring them here, but come bringing gospel liberty with you, praying that God will pour us out a blessing. Will Bro. J. A. Libby be able to be with us? For the Brethren, L. F. Cole.

Grove Meeting.

The annual Fourth of July grove meeting, at Kingston, N. H., will be held this year as usual, the Lord willing. The old familiar grove no longer exists, but another will be prepared near Bro. Gale's residence. Elders G. W. and W. Burnham, M. B. Laning, B. D. Haskell, and C. Cunningham, are expected to be present. Let all the lovers of the coming One in the region rally to this meeting, as it may be our last.

Franklin Gale.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting (at West Wareham, Mass.) will commence on Monday, July 24th, and continue over the following Sabbath. With the blessing of the Lord, we expect an interesting season on this consecrated ground, as in former years; and hope all who can will make arrangements to attend this annual feast.

Henry V. Davis, for the Committee.

Notice.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the brethren in the town of Holden, Me., where the brethren may think best, to hold a meeting of three days, to commence on the 2nd of July, and continue over the 4th. Will the brethren consult with each other in that community, and each one bear their part, like men of God, and receive the "well done" from their Master? I have a tent that I will pitch for the accommodation of those who may come from a distance. Let each one come with a basket of provision to help the poor. Will our preaching brethren, who love to meet in such a meeting, come and help preach the gospel? We invite all who are the lovers of Jesus to worship with us. Come, brethren, to the feast, filled with love to God and man, and seek the salvation of others. Jesus is soon coming. Will Bro. Walker and Howard meet with us? Israel Damman.

R. I. and East. Ct.

The Rhode Island and Eastern Ct. Conference will hold its next quarterly session with the church at Putnam, Ct., commencing Wednesday, July 5th, at two o'clock P. M. A full attendance is very much desired, and confidently expected. All letters should be directed to the care of H. N. Reed. C. H. Sweet, Clerk.

Family Campmeeting.

This meeting will be held in what is called Casline's neighborhood, at the head of Lewis Valley, commencing July 1st, and hold over Lord's day and the fourth. Bro. Thurber will assist in preaching the word. The big tent will be there. All are invited. Particulars hereafter.

Christian Times, please copy. P. W. Hough.

Notice.

Our annual grove meeting in East Springwater (on the Morris farm), will be held June 24th and 25th, to commence at two o'clock P. M. All our brethren and sisters in the surrounding country are invited to attend, and to be there promptly on Saturday. May the Lord of the harvest bless the meeting to the good of all.

For the Brn., C. F. Sweet.

Notice.

The Lord willing, a feast and supper will be given to the poor, maimed, lame and blind, by Lewis Bean, Jay, Bean's Corner, Me., Thursday, June 29th, at six o'clock P. M., in connection with a grove and basket meeting, which will be held at the same place, and onward over the 4th of July. We wish our brethren and sisters to make special effort to help the needy to attend this feast and meeting. A general invitation is given, and provision will be made for all. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting, praying the Lord's blessing to strengthen the weak and awaken sinners. Those coming on the cars will stop at Wilton Depot, two miles from the grove. Conveyance will be in readiness by notifying Lewis Bean. The day train is due at five o'clock P. M. Will our brethren bring their tents? Preaching brethren are requested and expected to attend. Come one, come all. Brethren will call on Lewis Bean, A. J. Riggs, Rufus Davis, Arnold Ireland, E. J. Bean, and others. Per order of the church,

H. B. Sevey.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in Bartlett, in Elder J. B. Deering's grove, where it was last year, commencing June 21st, to hold over Sunday, and longer if the brethren think best. We give a cordial invitation to the preaching brethren to come and help us. A good work has commenced here, and sinners are inquiring the way to life. We pray that some more may be gathered in before it shall be too late: for we believe the day is not far off, when he who is to come will come, and will not tarry. Come, all ye who love the Lord. Come from the north, the south, the east, and the west, and help us. H. Parker, Jr.
J. B. Deering.

Iowa State Campmeeting.

Partial arrangements are made to secure the Chicago Christian Mission tent, also the Iowa Mission tent, which will give us a larger range of accommodations, as we learn that there are many calculating to attend this meeting, who have not before. We trust all the preachers will come and attend this feast. To secure this, the brethren at New Hartford propose to provide provisions for those who may need, to cook for their families, and other churches may assist in this if they can. Be sure to provide things necessary for yourselves to camp. The meeting will commence June 22d. The campmeeting proper on the Monday following, and continue till July 3d. Also see notice.

Peter S. W. Deyo.

Meetings at Bonny Eagle, Me.

For the information of friends residing at a distance from Bonny Eagle, Me., who may desire to meet with us occasionally, I will say that Eld. C. H. Sweet, of Rhode Island, having been invited to settle here, has decided to come and remain as long as may seem duty. Preaching every Sunday, at 10½ A. M., and 1 P. M.; Sunday school at 9½ A. M. Prayer meeting at 5 P. M.; also Tuesday and Friday evenings. All these services are held in the Chapel. T. J. Rumery, Ch. Elder.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting held in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday, June 29th, to continue over the following Sabbath, as Bro. James Thorp and H. E. Austin may arrange. J. W. Taylor.
A. P. Moore.

Minnesota Campmeeting.

This meeting will be held at Kasota, beginning June 26th, and closing Sunday evening, July 2d. Kasota is a station on the St. Paul and Sioux City R. R., about three miles above St. Peter. The Winona and St. Peter R. R. also (which is just completed) runs within half a mile of the camp-ground, making this point the most convenient for a general gathering from the different parts of the State. There will be service on the ground, Sunday, June 25th.

HALF FARE.—RAILROAD ARRANGEMENTS.

Persons going to the meeting on the Winona and St. Peter R. R., will ask for excursion tickets to the Advent Campmeeting at Kasota, for which they will pay full fare, and return on them free. Those going on the St. Paul and Sioux City R. R. will buy tickets for Advent Campmeeting at Kasota, for which they will pay full fare, but be sure and ask for a return ticket, which will be granted free. Tickets on both roads will be good from Saturday, June 24th, to Wednesday, July 5th, inclusive. Board will be furnished at reasonable rates for those who may desire it, but all that can are requested to come prepared to board themselves, and let all come provided with bedding, and those who have no tents will be furnished with lodgings in the State tent. A grocery and refreshment stand will be kept for the accommodation of the camp; also feed for horses.

Arrangements have been made for extra trains on Sunday, July 2d, from Mankato and St. Peter. We anticipate the largest gathering of Adventists ever held in the State of Minnesota, and shall welcome saint and sinner to this our annual feast, trusting all will pray that it may result in much good. Edwin T. Himes, Chairman of Com.

P. S. For further particulars, address me at Winona, Minn., Box 724.

Tent-Meetings.

Those wishing tent-meetings in the State of New York, are requested to write me at South Butler, N. Y., as soon as convenient, in order that early arrangements may be made. Those wishing meetings in the south and west part of the State, will please inform me before the State Campmeeting, so that arrangements can be made at that meeting. It is expected that Bro. Miles Grant will be at some of the meetings. B. P. Stevens.

Conference.

The Advent Conference of Nova Scotia will hold its next annual meeting at Bear River, Digby Co., Nova Scotia, commencing Friday, June 16th. A general invitation is extended to all, especially to preaching brethren. The churches are particularly requested to send delegates.

J. J. Woodworth.

Going West.

We are intending to go west, as far as Minnesota, the last of June or first of July, to spend perhaps two months. If the brethren in Montreal, or elsewhere, on the Grand Trunk R. R. from Maine to Chicago, would like to have us spend a Sunday with them and preach, as we go and come, and will notify us in season, we will arrange to call on them, as we may be able, and will give notice in the Crisis when we will come.

I. C. Wellcome.

Notice.

The Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground, at New Hartford, Butler, Co., Iowa, commencing the 22nd day of June, 1871, and hold until the 3d of July. Brethren and sisters, and all who can, come to this meeting. We are anticipating a great blessing from the Lord. The prospect is the best this year for a good meeting that we have ever had. There are to be many ministers present. Bro. O. C. Ramsay, of Chicago, will be with us through the meeting again this year. Hay, straw, and tent-frames furnished free of charge.

Alonzo Raymond, Sec. of Campmeeting Board.

In connection with the above meeting, the Iowa Christian Conference will hold its fifteenth annual session. Let ministers and delegates be present. Ministers are required by the constitution to report by letter, if not present. I cannot say positively when the conference will sit; probably on the 27th and 28th of June, or as may be thought best for the interest of the meeting. All are cordially invited to come who can.

Joe Gildersleeve, President.
Alonzo Raymond, Clerk.

Levant, Me.

The Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference will be held at Levant Village, Me., commencing Thursday evening, at seven o'clock, June 22nd, and continue over the following Sabbath. All are invited to come and help. Provision will be made for teams and people. Preaching brethren are requested to attend. For the brethren,

F. A. Baker.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, there will be a grove meeting in Barnard, Vt., in Bro. Adams' neighborhood, three miles west of the centre of the town, commencing Sunday, July 2nd, and to hold over the fourth. Free meeting for all to come and worship the living and true God. Z. T. Wood.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting of the "church of God of Wayland and Loan Lake," will be held at Wallace Station, Steuben Co., N. Y., on July 8th and 9th. All are invited to attend.

C. F. Sweet, Pastor.

Notice.

All persons desiring to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are respectfully requested to communicate with the Secretary, T. E. Wood, before publishing their appointments. For the church,

T. E. Wood,
L. K. Lydston, } Committee.
L. Leach,

A New Work.

We have a new work now in press, of about one hundred pages, entitled "The Life beyond Death, in the Home of the Holy: When and where to be enjoyed." By Wm. Sheldon. This work will be ready for circulation in a few weeks. It will be specially adapted to do missionary work in new fields, as well as in older parishes; just the right size and of the right tone to lend to your neighbors, or send to a friend. Probably the price will be: in paper, 25 cents single; $2.00 per dozen, by mail, prepaid; in cloth, 50 cts. single; $4.00 per dozen, by mail, prepaid; and will probably be kept at the Crisis office, Boston; Advent Times office, Buchanan, Mich.; as well as by the author at Brodhead, Wis. Perhaps we may not be able to fill orders before the first of August, but hope to earlier; but the first orders will be filled first. With this understanding, orders may be sent at any time. W. S.

Notice.

I supplied a number of brethren with works at campmeetings last year, and those who can possibly send me what is due by mail, in June, I wish they would do so, as I am much in debt for printing, and ought to pay up. If any can aid me in throwing off the unpleasant burden of being in debt, it will be thankfully received. Age and health prevent my obtaining means to live and pay debts as formerly. Direct to J. Blain, Buffalo, N. Y.

Notice.

To Bro. D. Collins, Hook, and the dear children of East Boston:—The $13.50 I received by steamer, for which I return many thanks. To you and all the dear friends at East Boston, I would say, may God bless you all, and pour into your hearts the riches of his grace; and may you be repaid tenfold in this world, and in the world to come receive everlasting life. Praise the Lord for his goodness to me. Amen. Praise ye the Lord. A. B. Swanzburg.

Rochester, N. Y.

The Second Advent Christian Church will meet hereafter for the worship of God over 102 State Street, at the head of the second flight of stairs. It is a new hall. It is one block south of the New York Central Depot. Will be a permanent place. Meetings Tuesday and Friday evenings, and three times on the Lord's day. Preaching afternoon and evening. Preaching brethren will find a home at Bro. D. T. Cooper's, No. 72 Mount Hope Avenue. J. Phelan, Secretary.

German Tracts.

I will send my German Tracts gratis (except postage), to any one who wants them for himself, or to distribute. I have a good supply. Send your orders to L. Reimer, 1006 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Notice.

I have just published three new pieces of music, entitled, "Consolation," "Wait," and "Sweetly Sleeping." Sent postpaid for ten cents, or fifty cents per dozen. Geo. E. Lee, Brimfield, Mass.

Notice.

All papers, letters and postal matter of any kind, must be sent to Sandy Hill, N. Y., in order to reach me until further notice. A. W. Sibley.

☞ A short poem, "The Blissful Vision," may be had for 30 cts. per dozen, of the author, J. Albert Libby, West Poland, Me.

☞ Bro. going to Gloucester, Mass., to preach, will call on G. H. Smith, Washington St., near old Cemetery.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. B. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.00; $4.00 per one hundred copies.

I AM WAITING FOR THE DAWNING.

I am waiting for the dawning
Of the bright and blessed day,
When the darksome night of sorrow
Shall have vanished far away;
When forever with the Savior,
Far beyond this vale of tears,
I shall swell the song of worship
Through the everlasting years.

I am looking at the brightness,
See, it shineth from afar—
Of the clear and joyous beaming,
Of the "Bright and Morning Star."
Through the dark gray mist of morning
Do I see its glorious light;
Soon will flee the every shadow
Of this sad and weary night.

I am waiting for the coming
Of the Lord, who died for me;
Oh! his words have thrilled my spirits,
"I will come again for thee."
I can almost hear his footfall
On the threshold of the door,
And my heart, my heart is longing
To be his forevermore.

THE MIND NOT IMMORTAL.

A. N. HITCHCOCK.

It is said by many that we have reached a period in the world's history in which there is a greater development of light and knowledge, than in any period heretofore known in the annals of time; and that this evolution of light has been not only upon scientific, but upon biblical subjects. We readily admit this to be a fact. But our own observation teaches us, that those only enjoy the blessing of increased scriptural light who are unbiased by prejudice and tradition. It is the wise only who are to understand; and certainly it is no characteristic of wisdom to be prejudiced against investigation, and to seek no further light than that had by our forefathers. But we are glad that these chains are being broken, and that many, by resolving to think for them, are coming to a knowledge of the truth.

The question of the mind's immortality is one among the greatly agitated subjects of the day. Yet if popular opinion settled the question, it is at once decided in favor of the mind's immortality. But as both reason and revelation conflict with this theory, I choose to have the truth, though I be on the unpopular side. I shall offer a few reasons why I consider this theory to be false.

I. The mind of man is not immortal, because it is dependent upon matter. We are often represented as advocating what some are pleased to call the "gross theory" that mind and matter are one and the same thing. We set up no such claim. Though mind and matter are inseparably connected, they are essentially different. Mind is not matter, neither is light that substance from which light emanates. Remove that burning, or luminous body, and the light is gone; so destroy the brain, and the mind ceases to exist.

The mind, therefore, instead of being an independent, thinking personality, is a set of faculties which are dependent upon the brain for their existence. It is the aggregate action of the brain, and is composed of a set of faculties corresponding to certain organs of the brain. We must discriminate between an organ and a faculty. The brain is composed of organs, and is material; the mind is composed of faculties, and is immaterial. To illustrate: the arm is a physical organ, but strength is a faculty; yet the latter is the action of the former.

Now if this view be correct, facts will corroborate it. Let us appeal to our every-day observation. In infancy and early childhood the mind is incapable of intense labor and application, and is often fatigued and overpowered by comparatively moderate exertion. Is this because the "immortal soul" or mind is weak, and must become stronger in order to endure? Certainly not; for the very idea of its becoming stronger shows its mutability. Whatever may become stronger, may become weaker; and whatever may become weaker, may be entirely deprived of strength. Rather, is not this weakness of the mind in infancy caused by the weakness of the brain, which has never exerted itself? and, is not its growth dependent upon the growth and development of the brain by repeated exercise?

Again, it is a fact that when any organ of the brain is diseased, that faculty of the mind corresponding to it also suffers. For instance: if that organ of the brain producing memory be diseased, so as to be debilitated, that faculty will also be weakened, and the person will be forgetful; and so of any other portion of the brain. This statement is abundantly proved by many familiar observations. It is not unfrequently we meet with persons who, by having overtaxed one or more of the organs of the brain, have brought on such a derangement in that respect as to become insane, as far as regards the faculty, or faculties, corresponding to the one, or more, of the overtaxed organs. Yet the person may be perfectly sane in regard to all the other faculties. Now if the mind is perfectly independent of the brain, why this insanity from a derangement of the brain? And, really, it must be difficult to conceive of an immortal mind becoming insane! If, however, by accident any organ becomes extended beyond its natural bounds by the compression of any surrounding organ or organs, the faculty of the mind corresponding to that organ will be unduly excited. The following case illustrates this point:—

It is authentically related of an Irishman, that on one occasion, when he was employed in mining, he was under the necessity of blasting. Having lit the fuse, he ascended, but accidentally left a crowbar behind. Suspecting no danger, he remained over the mouth of the pit. But no sooner had the charge exploded, than the crowbar flew out of the pit, striking the man on his head in such a manner as to considerably expand the organ of tune. He was rendered insensible by the blow, and was immediately borne to the house. But as soon as he had partially recovered the shock, he began singing, and sung almost without interruption until his death, which occurred about two hours afterward. And it was remarked by those who heard him, that he was never known before to sing with such touching pathos and expression.

Now I would ask, If the mind is immortal and independent, why should the musical faculty be unduly excited by the agitation of its corresponding organ? In truth, this would not be the case were the mind independent. These facts, then, with many others, show conclusively the utter dependence of the mind upon the brain for its existence. Hence, of course, it is not immortal; for whatever is immortal is self-existent, and therefore independent.

COMFORT EACH OTHER.

R. P. EMERSON.

How often have I desired to see, and to greet with a cordial grip, those dear saints of the coming kingdom, brethren and sisters, whose signatures I see so often in the Crisis who to me are all unknown, and I to them, personally; yet in Christ we are all one, even as he and the Father are one.

In my lonely hours, how it has cheered my weary footsteps, soothed my aching heart, and illumined the "narrow way" that leadeth homeward, as I have read of their trials, their temptations, their dark times, and weary strugglings, to know that there was somebody else in the world that knew something about them as well as poor me. O how I can sympathize with them, and appreciate the inexpressible anguish they feel, as they pass under the rod. It seems so much like my short experience, so familiar, that I know they have learned of Him who also was a "man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief." They write so good, too, as they exhort us to patience and constancy, that I wish they would write much oftener than they do. Really, I have earnestly coveted that sweet, unassuming style that characterizes their communications. Their words seem so simple, so artless, and good; their epistles so meek, and unostentatious, that they instinctively find a place in my heart. So that is why I like them, because of their very simplicity and spontaneous artlessness, which to me is so unerringly indicative of a heart that is warm.

And I know, and am persuaded, that many of God's children are fed with these crumbs, who, by reason of a limited education, are unable to find essential nourishment in those profound, long-winded theological expositions, that fly over their heads higher than the peaks of the Chimborazo. Of the discouraging cares of this life, of trials and temptations, I know something. But after all the thought is comforting, "If we suffer with Him, we shall reign with him." So when, dear tried ones, you are weighed down with doubts and fears, wrestling with unbelief; thinking no one else in the world suffers just as you—that no one else is tried with just such feelings, thoughts, and imaginations—even doubting that you were converted at all, perishing for want of a satisfactory evidence of your acceptance and favor with God, feeling that you are of no particular consequence any way; that your efforts at exhortation are unimportant, and unappreciated, that you never could be saved; it was no kind of use, you might as well give it up first as last, drinking the cup to its bitter dregs; then think of me, one whose sympathetic heart throbs in unison with yours, an appreciative brother ever ready to extend a friendly hand, and to comfort with words of cheer.

Can we comfort each other? We can. By what means? By these words: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." "I will come again, and receive you unto myself." "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world . . . to sit upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment and justice, from henceforth even forever." "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." This declaration of the oath-promise of God unto the fathers, found written in his word, constitutes the foundation of that "blessed hope," which comforts us amid adversities, cheers and encourages us when weary, faint, and tired. Glory to God! the night of prophecy is fast approaching its consummation, and we will shout hallelujah in the morning.

A HOLIDAY PRESENT;
OR,
Educating Little Mary for the Heavenly Kingdom.

D. F. NEWTON, Author of "Shining Light," etc.

"There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death."

"Far off, the road which leads to death
Looks beautiful and fair;
Lord, seek thy servants if they stray,
Nor let us perish there."

Beloved, it is the religious novel, the mixed publications, containing the bitter and the sweet, the honey, the wormwood and the gall —partly good and partly evil, partly Christ and partly Belial, that work mischief, "defile the whole body, and set on fire the course of nature, and it is set on fire of hell." James 3: 6. "Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter? Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh." James 3: 11, 12.

These popular works of fiction, sprinkled here, sprinkled there, with fine moral sentiments, things lovely and of good report, in a style fascinating and beautiful, and with imagery the most seductive, are the snakes in the grass, the serpents that bite, the adders that sting, sugar-coated poisons, the sparkling decanters, the mixed wines, the golden goblets—wine that is red "when it giveth his color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." Prov. 23: 31. 32.

The great danger lies in the concealment. The serpents are coiled unseen, till the poisonous, forked tongue darts forth; or if seen, in comely form, in the garb of pleasure, with fair face and flattering lips.

"And underneath her eyelids sat a kind
Of witching sorcery; that nearer drew,
Whoever with unguarded look, beheld;
And seeming free of all disguise; her song
Enchanting; and her words which sweetly dropped
As honey from the comb, most large of promise,
Still prophesying days of new delight
And rapturous nights, of undecaying joy,
And in her hand, where'er she went, she held
A radiant cup, that seemed of nectar full,
And by her side danced fair delusive hope.
The fool pursued, enamored. * * * * *"

What caps the climax of high-handed, God-defying iniquity is these satanic transformations—these cockatrices eggs, which, if a man eat thereof, he dieth, these inlets or initiatory steps to the vilest French novels, the most corrupting, wanton and lascivious readings, are set in motion, pushed into public favor, into families, Sunday-schools and circulating libraries by the religious press, by men and women called disciples of the Lord Jesus! Was Christ ever wounded more deeply in the house of his friends? Could Diabolous himself desire agents more efficient—more to his liking? This helping Satan to do his dirty work has been going on in the editorial department and in the pulpit from time immemorial, and will go on. "For this mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now-letteth will let until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." 2 Thess. 2: 7, 8. "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land. The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means, and my people love to have it so; and what will ye do in the end thereof?" Jer. 5: 30–31.

"How far may we go in sin—
How long will God forbear?
Where does hope end, and where begin
The confines of despair?

An answer from the skies is sent:
Ye that from God depart,
While it is called to-day repent,
And harden not your heart."

"DISCERNING OF SPIRITS."

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

"Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world."—1 JOHN 4: 1.

Jesus says, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me." In the parable of the good Shepherd he says, "And a stranger will they not follow, but will will flee from him; for they know not the voice of strangers." What is this "voice" which is heard, the voice of strangers? Is it not the doctrine, or the teaching of error? And the voice of the good Shepherd is heard when "the truth" is spoken in love, the truth as it is in Jesus. False teachers are as often met in these days as in the days of the apostles. And we used the gift of discernment now as much as it was needed then. If we keep very near to Jesus, we shall hear his voice so often, and it will be so well known to us, that we shall not be in danger of mistaking the voice of a stranger for the voice of Jesus.

We may conceive it to be possible that a poor lost sheep may stray so far, and be gone so long, as to forget his voice, and becoming familiar with other voices, may follow them instead of following the shepherd. And it is well known that to embrace certain forms of error is a sure proof of a backslidden state. Backsliding prepares the way for the entrance of error, and the operation of error confirms the backsliding. Then beware, O lambs of the flock. Keep close to the good Shepherd. Hear his voice often, and obey it always. Then he will lead you through green pastures, and by the side of still waters. And he will give unto you eternal life. "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

COME TO JESUS.

JENNIE M. PRATT.

Would you have a home with Jesus,
In his kingdom ever reign,
And meet with all the loved ones,
Never more to part again?

Come to Jesus, then, I pray you,
Give your heart to him to day;
He is waiting to receive you,
Come to him without delay.

SANCTIFIED.

B. W. DAVIS.

"Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you."

Let us briefly consider a few points suggested by these words of Jesus.

1. The necessity of being made clean. That all have been polluted by Adam's sin, and by our own actual transgressions, is apparent from the fact that all are polluted, and that Christ gave his life to redeem us from the effects of sin; but that all need cleansing, only those who have seen themselves in the light of God's word will admit.

2. The time when we are sanctified. Christ says ye are now clean, not will be at death, or when Jesus comes. It will be noticed that he uses the present tense of the verb; and the Syriac is rendered—Ye henceforth are clean; that is, from the time ye receive my words. If we should wash a dish, and say to our friends, "It is clean now," we should be understood to mean that it was wholly clean, inside and outside, and not a part of it. So we are to understand Christ when he says we are clean, and believe it, and not say we are only partly cleansed, and hold on to a part of our sins; for if we do, we show we never have been cleansed at all. Christ perfectly understood our case, when he undertook to redeem man from the pollution of sin; and came into the world fully prepared to accomplish the work he had in view; for he so "loved the church" that he "gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word; that he might present it to himself a glorious church, "not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing."

3. Who are made clean? Christ here represents himself and his people under the figure of the vine and its branches; and it is of those who abide in him, as the branch in the vine, that he says, "Ye are clean," for it is only while they abide in him, that they bear fruit; and "by their fruits ye shall know them."

4. The means, or process, by which we are sanctified. "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." Christ prays to the Father that he would "sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." Again he says, "I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified [margin—truly sanctified] through the truth." And the apostle Peter says: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit, . . . see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." So we see it is through the reception and obedience of the truth, which Christ taught, that we are sanctified. The conditions of sanctification are the same as the conditions of salvation, submission to God. "Submit yourselves therefore unto God, as unto a faithful Creator." God will re-create the heart submitted to him. So Christ will wholly sanctify the heart committed to him for sanctification. Commit then, troubled one, the sanctifying of thy heart to Jesus.

SEED AFTER ITS OWN KIND.

* * * * * * * *

I suppose you eat preserved things. What do you do with the cans? With us the moment they are empty they are can'ts. It is impossible to get rid of them. No one will accept them as a gift. It involves too great a responsibility. They cannot be used. Even the boys have given up the horrible instruments of auricular torture which they made from them. It is not reputable to take them for flower pots. And the supply is enormous; and each can has nine lives; and every household has the same despair when thinking of them.

Now the family that lives opposite to us threw one of these unfortunates into the road the other day. It rolled over on to our side. I threw it into the road a few hours after, and it rolled over on to their side. In the morning it was on our side again. The temptation was strong; but I saw that it was the beginning of a thirty years' war, and resisting the natural impulse, I crushed the can, though it was bright and undented, and its respectability plead with me to spare it—I crushed out its rollability, and then carefully put it into the very middle of the road.

Let me commend this to any who find they have a quarrel brewing. Unless I am mistaken a good many controversies, in Church and State, are about cans that have been emptied and that the people find it hard to get rid of. It would be the best disposal of not a few of them to reduce them to a quiet, amorphous condition, and put them where the world can roll on its way over them without being troubled. Some of them, indeed, have already been disposed of in this manner, and with admirable results. You see it proves to your neighbor that you don't wan't to keep the thing rolling; and our own state of mind generally comes back to us. Every one we deal with is a reflector for it. Our kind acts and courteous words usually get returned. Love wins love, hate begets hate, and peaceful ways make peace. There are exceptions, I know; but they only draw attention to the rule—Christian Union.

COMFORT.

LAURA A. BROWN.

You are laboring for Christ, praying for his blessing, and striving to do all his will; and yet you see no fruit. You feel your labor is utterly useless, and wearied and discouraged you go about your daily work. Take courage, God will not try you above what you are able to bear; but in his own time will lift you out of the clouds to see his face in peace; and as Paul in trouble and temptation was comforted by the coming of a christian brother, sent for his helping, so your eternal Father, seeing all your suffering, will send down his white-winged doves.

When I first went about my chosen work of teaching the young, I prayed earnestly for strength and grace to walk ever in the steps of the great Teacher, and to lead my pupils up to himself. With a heart full of his love, and feeling in my very soul that the harvest was plenteous, but the laborers few, I longed to be one of those laborers sent into his vineyard. Striving to lead the young minds upward, I never went into the school-room without an earnest prayer to God for help and blessing; never returned to my room without thanking him for it, and imploring its continuance.

O how often I wept before him bitter tears, praying for those young souls. The evening before I was to leave them, looking back for the good done, my soul was grieved. What had all this accomplished? True, there were some who had never entered a church before, who were now listening Sunday after Sunday to God's word; some whose sole reading before had been the cheap news and the cheaper novels, who had laid them aside for the Bible; but my heart sank when I thought how little real drawing to Christ I had done. It was nothing to what my enthusiasm at the first had pictured to me. And on my knees before God, I told him all my trouble; how I had in truth striven to do his will, claiming through tears the promised blessing. Why did it not come? I rose with the burden still upon me, and sat looking out into the golden west, with such a sad heart. Why did not my Jesus hear and answer? Suddenly there came into my mind a poem of long ago:

"Plant it, consecrate with prayer,
Then cease watching, and cease weeping;
Thou hast done thine uttermost part,
Leave it with a quiet heart,
It will grow whilst thou art sleeping."

In a moment the grief had vanished. I had planted. I had consecrated with prayer, and now I would cease watching, and weeping, trusting to Jesus that it would grow. Again, in my evening reading I found sweet help. "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days." We shall find it.

O trust him, Christian, and do with thy might whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, for soon, oh, so soon, the night comes on when no one can work. Only a little longer, Christian, only a little longer, and then the brightness of thy Father's face forever.

DRIFTING.

LIZZIE C. MORGAN.

We are all voyagers upon the ocean of life, and the haven we seek is on the other shore. Our frail barks have been launched by unseen hands, and whether we wish or not, the journey must be performed. We can neither stop nor turn back; onward is our only course. We may make the journey one of almost infinite profit to ourselves and our fellow-voyagers, or a prodigal waste of the most precious means of never-failing wealth. Shall we labor then at the oars, stem the tide, and outride the storm; or shall we sit idly down, and drifting with the current, become nought but unsightly, floating wrecks?

Childhood toys with wind and wave, and speeds on secure; but youth, full of ardent impulses, spurning control, coveting honor, glory and fame, makes its way in peril through the misty deep. Youth has great desires, noble aspirations, lofty conceptions, yet lacks the wisdom necessary to meet and combat successfully the idls of time. Yet to youth the world looks for beauty, for strength, for inspiration. On youth rests the world's weal or woe; so youth must take up the burden of life, and each is responsible for the architecture of his being.

"God makes the soul, but man the character," and while the few succeed in rearing firm structures, that resist the beating tides, the great mass fail, and are swept beneath the surges. How much life means, no human lips may tell; only its author knows its breadth, and depth, and measures to himself. To make it unsightly by distortion, or to mould it into symmetry and perfection, is our work. What care and skill is requisite; what intensity of thought, and earnestness of purpose, if success be attained; what a demand upon our time and energy; what a call for directness of labor, and decision of character.

Life's pulses sometimes falter, when there sweeps for a brief moment over our souls the knowledge of the vast responsibilities imposed upon us by our Creator; feeling ourselves but atoms of an atom world, we shrink from taking up the burden, and by our utter inability to seize upon those salient points that come within our reach, a large amount of moral and mental power is lost to the world.

We float aimlessly on, drifting into unknown seas, whose depths we cannot fathom, whose dangers we do not see, for our eyes are blinded by the tinsel glare of life. We have no just conception of what we might do, or what we might be. Made by the Divine hand, fashioned by the Divine Architect, our work itself is almost divine. Having aspirations which draw us heavenward, we crush and bind them down to earth. With attributes akin to the angels, we allow the precious golden moments to slip away, till life is far spent, and all its splendid opportunities are lost, and then—

"A vague unrest,
A nameless longing fills the breast;
A wish we hardly dare to own,
For something better than we've known.

Idlers in life we must not be. It is evident God meant us to be unwearied, hopeful workers. If not, why are we so fearfully and wonderfully made? Why this marvelous structure of bones, ligaments, nerves, and muscles? Why this active brain, these hands and feet?

Nature herself bears testimony that activity is a law of life. The atmosphere is ever restless, the rivers are ever rolling onward, and old ocean beats against its rocky barriers, murmuring with foamy lips in ceaseless unrest. Earth, moon and stars are whirling through space with inconceivable velocity; the flowers are ever budding, blossoming and falling into decay. The precious stones and the glittering gold are hidden away in the earth, that man shall dig for them; the granite and the marble are imbedded deep, that man's ingenuity may raise their ponderous masses, rear the stately edifice, and chisel into symmetry the beautiful statue. But only he who works with fixedness of purpose excels. The mechanic becomes skillful only by perseveringly following his trade. The obedient instrument sends forth delightful harmonies only when touched by fingers made dextrous by long practice. By long continued effort the artist causes the insensate marble to speak in silent, yet powerful language; only by continued effort does he coax upon the canvas forms and tints that vie with nature's own. Perseverance reared the pyramids, and scaled the Alps ice-bound and cloud-capped; perseverance searches earth, and soars among the stars, unveiling nature's hidden mysteries.

If in the world of matter so much has been accomplished, how much greater the achievements in the world of mind. We may never know what days of toil, what nights of weariness, what struggles of heart and brain it cost, to make a Newton, a Howard, a Franklin, an Everett. The world does them worshipful homage, and their names are carved high on the temple of Fame. They have raised for youth a glorious standard; and though we may never attain to it, yet "it is better to fall below a high standard, than to come up to a low one; for he who attempts grandly will achieve much, while he whose desires are small, will make but small acquisitions." If we fail in any walk in life, no matter how lowly, the fault must in a great measure lie within ourselves. If we drift out to sea, helmless and rudderless, let us not call it luck. Let us rather make such a disposition of our time and means, that our frail barks, beaten by the storms, but not destroyed, may glide at last, with cordage unloosened, and sails unfurled, into the harbor of eternal rest; and may we present to our Creator souls made by long suffering as pure as the leaf of the spotless lily, and hear the joyful words, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

And dare to do battle for right against wrong.

SAVE SOMETHING.—If your income is five dollars a day, spend but four. If it is one dollar, spend eighty cents. If it is but ten cents, spend nine. If it is three potatoes, save half a potato for seed. Thus you will gradually acquire something; while, if you spend and consume as you go, you will never get ahead one inch in life, but every sunset will look on you poorer than at sunrise, because you will have used unprofitably one day more of your strength and your allotted term of life.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

"REST FOR THE WEARY."

"I have tried my best, and I cannot be a christian. I am going to give it up."

"And be what?"

"Why, be happy, like other people."

"But you cannot be happy."

"Why not? Others are happy, who are not christians, and I can be too. At any rate, I have been miserable enough this way, and I am not going to try it any longer."

"You are unhappy, not because you are a christian, (you confess you are not) but because you are a sinner, and know you ought to repent. Ah, Mary, you will not find happiness in turning your back on your Savior."

"Yes, I shall be happy as other people are."

"No, Mary; having felt this longing in your heart for Christ's love and peace, you will never be happy till you find it. Remember what I tell you."

"Oh, I shall be the gayest of the gay."

"Yes, you may be, outwardly, but you will find no rest, no peace, no real happiness. I shall still pray that the dear Savior will incline your heart to love him; but words of mine will do no good."

"Oh, don't trouble about me, I shall be all right." * * * * *

Weeks and months passed after the above conversation. Mary was outwardly "the gayest of the gay," but those who knew her best saw that gladness was not in her heart. Sickness came, but she was not ready to yield. One dear friend after another was taken away, and at length she began to see that there was no rest, no safety, or happiness out of Christ. After a long struggle her proud heart submitted.

"Mary," asked her friend, "have you been happy all these years?—happy as you determined to be?"

"Not a moment," was the quick reply. "Very often I have thought of your words, and thought I never should be happy."

"Are you happy now?"

"Yes, the long struggle is over, and the word that best expresses my feelings is rest. I am at rest in Jesus after long warring against him. He told me years ago to come to him and find rest. Like a foolish child, I have been seeking it everywhere else, knowing all the time I could only find it in him. Oh, I wish I could persuade some one else, not to be so foolish as I have been, but to come to Jesus now, and rest in his love."—Sunday School Times.

A LITTLE SUNBEAM.

A little sunbeam in the sky
Said to itself one day:
"I'm very small, but why should I
Do nothing else but play?
I'll go down to the earth and see
If there is any use for me."

The violet beds were wet with dew,
Which filled each heavy cup;
The little sunbeam darted through,
And raised their blue heads up.
They smiled to see it, and they lent
The morning breeze their sweetest scent.

A mother 'neath a shady tree
Had left her babe asleep;
It woke and cried, but when it spied
The little sunbeam peep
So slyly in, with glance so bright,
It laughed and chuckled with delight.

On, on it went, it might not stay;
Now through a window small
It poured its glad but tiny ray,
And danced upon the wall.
A pale young face looked up to meet
The sunbeam she had watched to greet.

And now away beyond the sea
The merry sunbeam went;
A ship was on the waters free,
From home and country sent;
But sparkling in the sunbeam's play,
The blue waves curled around her way.

But there was one who watched them there,
Whose heart was full of pain;
She gazed and half forgot her care,
And hope came back again;
She said, "The waves are full of glee;
And there may yet be joy for me!"

And so it traveled to and fro,
And glanced and danced about;
And not a door was shut, I know,
To keep that sunbeam out:
But ever as it touched the earth,
It woke up happiness and mirth.

I may not tell the history
Of all that it could do;
But I tell this, that you may try
To be a sunbeam, too.
"A sunbeam, too!" perhaps you say;
Yes, I am very sure you may.

For loving words, like sunbeams, will
Dry up a falling tear,
And loving deeds will often help
A broken heart to cheer.
So loving and so living, you
Will be a little sunbeam, too.

THE COMPASS.

If you take a small needle, and rub it with dry fingers, and then carefully drop it on a tumbler of water, it will swim.

"Nothing very curious about that," says a bright-eyed reader. But watch its movements for a moment. It seems to be disturbed, and whirls around curiously, until it finally rests quietly with its point directed toward the North Pole. There is something curious about that. We say it is caused by magnetism, ... But we don't know what that magnetism is. We are only acquainted with some of its properties, and can see some of its effects, but that is all. The needle on the water is left free to move and turn its point to the north. Now, this is a rude compass, not a very useful one; for the minute you take up the glass to move it to another place, down goes the needle to the bottom of the tumbler, and your compass is destroyed. But place the needle on a pivot, and box it up, and you will have the very thing that discovered America, and the invention of which marked one of the grandest eras in the history of the world.

The compass, or the mariner's compass, was invented about the year 1300. We find in an old Encyclopedia some curious things about its invention and improvement. Previous to this date (1300,) sailors could only navigate the seas in clear weather, and then they dare not venture far from shore. The Atlantic ocean was called the "Sea of Darkness," and sailors supposed it to be illimitable. The book I referred to before, says that men supposed it to end in darkness, or the bottomless pit.

Flavio Giopa, an Italian, was the man who invented the compass. That was only a little more than five hundred years ago; but look what grand results have followed. Navigation and the spirit of discovery really commenced there. With the compass mariners could navigate the seas in cloudy weather, as well as in clear, and were not compelled to keep within sight of land. But everything was not accomplished at once, then nor now—but little by little, till all these grand results were were reached It was a long time before sailors could overcome their superstitious notions about the "Sea of Darkness." It was one hundred and ninety-six years after the invention of the compass before America was discovered.—Bee-Keeper's Journal.

GOD KNOWS.

A little boy and girl, brother and sister, were playing in the dining-room, where their mother had set a basket of cakes on the tea-table and then had gone out.

"How nice they look!" said Charlie, reaching out his hand to take one of the cakes.

"Oh! don't do that, Charlie," said his sister Jane; "you know mother told us not to take any of them."

"But mother didn't count them; and she won't know if I take just one," said Charlie.

"But remember, Charlie, that God counts," said his sister," and he will know."

Charlie put back the cake, and turned away from the temptation, looking very serious. Presently he said:—"You are right, sister; God does count, for the Bible says: 'He telleth the number of the stars;' and, 'The hairs of your head are all numbered.'"—Sunday School Paper.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

GOOD ADVICE.

An article in the May number of "Home and Health," on "the health of women," by Julia Colman, has the following good advice:

Be sure to retire early. Dio Lewis says that he has found this rule absolutely indispensable in his school for young ladies. Many a maid and matron has robbed herself of early bloom, and grown thin and worn for lack of an hour or two more of sleep before midnight. Some take this time to read after the children and husband have retired, saying it is "all the time they can get." Others think it necessary to devote these hours to their sewing. I know one dear good woman who always will insist on sitting up to finish any garment nearly done and dearly enough has she paid for this "sin of finishing off," as her family facetiously call it. But if time must be taken from sleep for such purposes, it is better to take it in the morning. Such a change of hours should be made gradually, but when made it pays well.

Nine o'clock is a good hour for all hard working women to go to bed, but if we grow sleepy go earlier. Above all things we should not allow ourselves to nod or doze before retiring. Of all forlorn moments in one's life, I know of none so utterly desolate as that which comes to the person who must "wake up and go to bed." Besides, an imperfect night's rest often follows such indulgence, and the subject rises already weary before commencing the work of the day. A nap in the middle of the day, if it be not too long, will be of decided benefit to the tired woman. The great difficulty is that it should not be taken soon after dinner, and before dinner we are apt to be busy.

But whatever we do, we must be reasonable, use common sense, and understand ourselves.

NEW HEALTH MAXIMS.

Dr. Dio Lewis pronounces some rather startling propositions in his book on hygiene. For instance:

Potatoes, both Irish and sweet, are very poor food for both brain and muscle.

The common notion that our health and life depend upon a mysterious providence is downright infidelity. A child goes out of a hot room, with naked arms and legs, in pursuit of its daily supply of poisoned candies, and then dies of croup. Is that mysterious providence? If a man indulges himself until he gets the gout, and disease attacks his heart and kills him, is his death a mystery?

The reason that the American people are such dyspeptics is, that they eat and drink so much, and eat and drink so fast.

The teeth will not decay if they are kept clean. A tooth brush is a good thing, but one good tooth-pick is worth an armful of tooth brushes. There is a gentleman living in New York city, who has three beautiful front teeth, which he purchased of an Irishman. His own teeth were removed, and instantly Patrick's were transferred.

The word biliousness is a sort of respectable cover for piggishness. People are not bilious who eat when they should.

The Greek and Roman armies ate but once a day.

The common impression that tomatoes are the healthiest of all vegetables, is a mistake. If eaten at all, they should be with moderation, and never raw. Tomatoes have sometimes produced salivation. Dr. Lewis knew a young woman who had lost all her teeth from excessive eating of tomatoes.

Pies and cakes are poisonous.

To healthy persons mineral waters are not wholesome.

Corsets are most injurious to digestion. Their use finally results in an immense and very ugly protuberance of the abdomen.

Those who suffer from heartburn should avoid soups, drink nothing at meals, say "No, thank you," to pies, cakes, and go without supper.

If you wish to live to eighty-five, in the full enjoyment of all your faculties, go to bed at nine o'clock, and eat twice a day a moderate quantity of plain food.

The present fashion of leaving the neck and upper part of the chest bare, is fraught with evil consequences. It would be less objectionable in countries uniformly warm; but that our daughters, here in this frigid and changeable climate, should constantly expose to the chilling winds a vital part of the body, is one of the evils of fashion which should be discountenanced by every mother, and father, and brother.

THREE GOOD MEDICINES.—Dr. Hall names warmth, abstinence, and repose, as the "three best medicines." We underwrite him as to their great value. If the body is tired, rest; if the brain is tired, sleep. If the bowels are loose, lie down in a warm bed, remain there, and eat nothing until well. If the action of the bowels does not occur at the usual hour, eat not an atom until they do act, at least for thirty-six hours; meanwhile drink largely of cold water or hot teas, and exercise in the open air to the extent of a gentle perspiration, and keep this up until things are righted; this suggestion, if practiced, would save myriads of lives every year, both in the city and country.

IMPORTANT HINT ABOUT THE FEET.—As the feet are kept more closely covered than any other part of the body during the day, they should be thoroughly washed and rubbed till dry, every night. Impurities gather as the result of the confined perspiration, and these should be removed before sleeping. However inconvenient to do so, we repeat it, wash the feet every night.

☞ A thorough course of bathing, says Dr. Hall, will help the man who has determined to give up the use of tobacco.

"PEACE LIKE A RIVER."—Isaiah 48.

Give me a heart of calm repose
Amid the world's loud roar;
A life that like a river flows,
Along a peaceful shore.

I would roll onward to the deep,
In brightness, not in foam;
And 'mid earth's noise in stillness keep
My soul's interior home.

Come, Holy Spirit, hush my heart
With gentleness divine;
Indwelling peace thou canst impart,
Oh, make the blessing mine!

Above these scenes of storm and strife,
There spreads a region fair;
Give me to live that higher life,
And breathe that purer air.

Allay this feverish, restless mood,
Arrest life's eager chase,
And quench the thirst for earthly good
With thy bedewing grace.

Come, Holy Spirit, breathe that peace
Which flows from pardoned sin;
Then shall my soul her conflict cease,
And find a heaven within.

"IF A MAN DIE, SHALL HE LIVE AGAIN?"—Job 14: 14.

C. B. DARROW.

Some of our worthy commentators have fairly exhausted their religious talent on this passage, while others have given it a very unfavorable and impartial consideration. The late deceased Rev. Albert Barnes, in commenting upon this little compound sentence, indulges in some very ludicrous expositions. He says, "Job had unconsciously worked himself up almost to the belief that man might live again even on the earth. He had asked to be hid somewhere—even in the grave—until the wrath of God should be overpast, and then that God would remember him and bring him forth to life." Here he checks himself. "It cannot be," he says, "that man will live again on the earth. The hope is visionary and vain; and I will endure what is appointed for me, until some change shall come." Again he says: "The question here, 'Shall he live again?' is a strong form of expressing negation. He will not live again upon the earth. Any hope of that kind is therefore vain, and I will wait until the change come—whatever that may be." The whole tenor of this discourse seems to imply that Job had no very clear conceptions of a future state; and, in fact, this peculiar notion seems to pervade his entire comments upon the book of Job.

Again he says, in his introductory notes upon this book, page 91, "This view of the future world is remarkably obscure and gloomy, and shows that even the mind of Job had not such anticipations of the future state as to cheer and support him in the time of trial." And in his remarks upon the nineteenth of this chapter, he says: "Job had at times a hope of a future state, yet that hope seems at times also wholly to fail him, and he sinks down in utter despondency. At best, his views of the future world were dark and obscure. He seems to have had at no time clear conceptions of heaven—of the future holiness and blessedness of the righteous; but he anticipates at best only a residence in the world of disembodied spirits."

It is, indeed, quite surprising to see how the great commentator fairly misconstrues the passages under consideration. Can we possibly conceive for a moment that the inspired mind of Job did not comprehend the true destiny of man? But where, pray tell us, where does Job, in all his writings, refer to the "world of disembodied spirits"? It would have been far better for this comprehensive commentator to cite the reader to the particular chapter and verse, and leave his own comments in the back-ground; rather than endeavor to establish such a fact by plain and pointed misconstructions of divine truth. But, that Job did have clear conceptions of the intermediate and final state of the whole human family, by divine revelations, there seemingly cannot be the least approach to a shadow of doubt. That he had preconceived knowledge of the future condition of man, cannot be denied, after having carefully considered the many passages bearing upon this subject.

"If a man die, shall he live again?" We do not clearly comprehend how this passage, in any sense, approaches "a strong form of expressing negation"; but quite the contrary. It strongly confirms Job's faith in a future life beyond the grave. And the balance of the verse must, most truly and emphatically, convey to the inquiring mind the undeniable fact that Job looked forward to that glad day "when this mortal shall put on immortality" with no small degree of anxiety; for he says, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Job 19: 25. But Job expected to wait for that day; for he says, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." 14: 14. What does Job mean by waiting? Bro. Barnes thinks he has reference to this life, and he will wait for death to make the change. But Job is very explicit. He says: "If I wait, the grave is mine house." 17: 13. Again Job says—"Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee; thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hand." Surely he could not believe that "a desire for the work of thine hand" meant that he had a desire to destroy him. No; far from it. But he meant to restore him from death; to bring him to life again. Then it is fair to presume that Job had more than ordinary conceptions of the nature of man here and hereafter. He reveals to us that there are three great, grand, though terrible and trying ordeals through which the entire human family will ultimately pass. And these are, death, resurrection, and the judgment. These are three great pillars underlying the whole superstructure of divine revelation to man.

But again; the same commentator says in his concluding remarks upon this chapter: "What a flood of light and joy would have been poured on his [Job's] soul by the Christian's hope, and by the revelation of the truth that there is a world of perfect light and joy for the righteous—in heaven." May we not, with strict propriety, ask if the Holy Spirit was not just as intelligent in Job's day as in ours? Or, in other words, were not the revelations to Job just as pure and comprehensive as at any other date? Job was God's "perfect man," and should he be incomprehensible of the very facts which God had inspired him to chronicle? It is generally understood that Job penned the inspired book that bears his signature more than 3420 ago. Then, how truly and significantly have Job's words been verified: "All the days of my appointed time will I wait." He must have known that the day of redemption was fixed, but far off. He did not expect to depart and be with Christ, but he longed for that day to come which would ransom his soul from the power of the grave, and Christ should be revealed in the clouds of heaven, coming with power and great glory, and all the holy angels with him. He sought after that morn when the trump shall sound, and the dead shall be raised, and the holy throng shall shout their glad triumphs, and "the long line come gleaming on." The good king Hezekiah could give in his testimony with Job, for he says: "They that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth. The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day." Isa. 38: 18–19. David says: "I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." Ps. 17: 15. Solomon also must have "seen through a glass darkly," compared to the "Christian's hope," when he said, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest." Eccl. 9: 10.

THE TRUMPETS.

Dr. J. A. Seiss, of Philadelphia, Editor of the "Prophetic Times," is giving a series of interesting discourses on the Apocalypse, from which we take the following:—

THE SOUNDING OF THE FIRST TRUMPET.

"And the first sounded, and there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and it was cast into the earth; and the third of the earth was burned, and the third of the trees was burned, and all green grass was burned."

Here is the first touch of what fell from the censer of the priest-angel. I take the language as it stands. This book does not give things veiled, but unveiled. It is the Apocalypse, the uncovering. The results here described are heralded by the sound of a trumpet; what is published by a trumpet is no longer a secret. The phenomena are of a very stupendous sort; but the actors are archangels, the occasion is the day of judgment, and the business is the closing up of the history of a doomed world. In such a case we may well look for wonders. God has also declared his purpose to renew the miracles of Egypt, and to do "marvellous things" like unto what he did in the days of Israel's deliverance. See Micah 7: 15; Jer. 23: 7, 8. The plagues of Egypt were literal realities. They were miracles of judgment, such as have never been since on earth. And if it is the design of God to repeat them on a larger scale, or to do again what at all corresponds to that which he then did, the world has yet to witness just such scenes as are here described under these trumpets. And "as it was in the day that Israel came up out of Egypt," so it is in what John beheld under the sounding of this first trumpet. Then "the Lord sent thunder and hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground; and the Lord rained hail upon the land of Egypt. So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of Egypt, since it became a nation. And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt, all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field." (Ex. 9: 23–25.) Here we have a corresponding visitation, only the fire is more destructive, and there is the further element of blood mingled with the fire and hail.

The whole picture is that of a tremendous tempest of hailstones, lightnings, and bloody products of the infuriated elements. Blood-red rains and blood-red snows are not unknown to the world. We occasionally hear of them. On the 17th of Aug., 1819, Captain Ross saw the mountains at Baffin's Bay covered for eight miles with blood-red snow, many feet in depth. Saussure found it on Mount St. Bernard, in 1778. Ramond found it on the Pyrenees, and Summerfield in Norway, and others have told of it in other places. So blood-rain has more than once fallen. It is recorded by Cicero, that word was brought to the Roman Senate, on one occasion, that it had rained blood; also that the river Atratus had flowed with a bloody stream. (De Div. 2: 27.) Slight falls of this kind have occurred in the Cape Verd Islands, at Lyons, at Genoa, and in the southwest of our own country, to the great alarm of the people of the vicinity. But whether the like of what John describes ever happened before or not, God said, concerning the great day: "I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath, blood and fire." Joel 2: 30. And the manner in which he will do it is here unveiled. A storm of hail, and fire, and bloody interminglings, shall fall upon and envelop the world.

The effects are correspondingly dreadful. At an earlier stage, under the sixth seal, the four angels at the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds, were charged not to injure the earth, nor the trees, till the servants of God were sealed. That sealing being accomplished, the prohibition ceases, the spirit of storms is let loose, and the earth and the trees are hurt. Bloody hail and fire pour upon the world with such fury that the third of the earth is burned. Our English version says nothing of the burning of the earth. It speaks only of trees and grass. The best manuscripts specify the earth also. Modern critics agree that the omission is unwarranted. "The third of the earth was burned"—set on fire and charred by the fierce lightnings of heaven, and a corresponding destruction was, of course, wrought among buildings, flocks, herds, and human life.

"The third" is mentioned, not with rigid strictness, as absolutely just that proportion, but as we would say in general terms, one-third of the earth was burned. And so also "the third of the trees." The Egyptian plague "smote and brake every tree of the field"; this destroys many more in the aggregate, because the visitation is so much more widespread, but it does not consume all. It carries fearful havoc among the forests, orchards, and timber-lands of the earth, but still the major part of the trees escape. Not so, however, with the grass and the more tender portions of vegetation. The Egyptian plague destroyed "every herb of the field," and it is the same in this case. "All green grass was burned." A scene of distressing and far-reaching desolation is thus foreshown, in which a large portion of the earth's surface is charred with fire; many towns, cities, forests and plantations reduced to ashes; every field and meadow stripped of its growing crops, and bloody and putrid blackness spread over all the smitten world.

But most interpreters object to the taking of this as a literal description. If their objection is valid, they must be able to show a different meaning, and one on which we may reasonably rest with greater certainty. If earth does not mean earth, then what does it mean? And if earth means earth, then the trees must mean trees, and the grass grass. If not, why not? And if trees and grass do not mean trees and grass, the burden is upon those who so affirm to furnish the evidence of some other meaning. But, alas, for such attempts! Wordsworth says the trees mean princes and great men, and grass the glory and power of men. Lord says the trees mean stronger men, and the grass the young, the feeble, and the aged. Hengstenberg and Williams say the trees mean great men, and the grass people generally. Wetstein says the trees mean apostles and great doctors, and the grass common christians. Durham says the earth means the visible church, the trees what seems most strong in it, and the grass its lesser excellences. The truth is, if earth, trees, and grass do not mean earth, trees, and grass, no man can tell what they mean. Letting go the literal signification of the record, we launch out upon an endless sea of sheer conjecture, turn the whole Apocalypse into an incomprehensible riddle, and force the conclusion that God was mistaken when he named it the lifting off of the veil; nay, that, if it is a revelation, it has not yet become manifest what that revelation is, and never will, by the light which we now possess.

A large number of writers on this book agree, indeed, that the downfall of the Roman power in the west is at least the most prominent subject of the trumpets; and as far as that downfall is included in the day of judgment, and, as far as one judgment is a type of another, they are correct, but no further. Referring these foreshowings to the decline and fall of the Roman empire, there are not two expositors who concur as to the distribution of events under the several trumpets. Each has a different theory, and each finds the same particular predictions fulfilled in things the most diverse in character and the most widely separated in time. And if we must go to symbol and figure for the meaning, I find one theory about as respectable and well sustained as the other. It is mainly fancy and guess work from first to last, as full of self-contradiction as destitute of solid foundation. Thus Elliott, who has written with so much learning and pains on the subject, finds the fulfillment of this first trumpet in the wars of Alaric the Goth and Rhadagaisus the Vandal, against the western Roman empire. But this gives us two storms instead of the one which John beheld, and the blood of man on earth instead of the bloody substance which the record describes as falling from the sky, and fixes on events which suit as well for either of the first four trumpets, instead of something as distinctive and peculiar as this trumpet is from all the rest. And so the thing works in every other instance. The law of departure from the direct sense of the record, is the law of uncertainty, of irreconcilable contradictions, of the substitution of human vagaries for the clear revelations of God, and there is no remedy for the chaos of opinions that obtains under it.

As well might we look for the laws of symbolization to interpret the plagues of Egypt, of the discovery and settlement of America, as to find such laws for the interpretation of the seals, trumpets, and vials of this book of anything but the great day of God Almighty. But, carrying them forward where they belong, and where God himself has so explicitly put them,—to that day beyond all other days of literal realities and astounding marvels,—there is no more hindrance to the literal acceptance of what is written here, than to such an acceptance of what is written concerning the life and deeds of Jesus, or concerning the acts of his apostles; whilst it gives us solid ground to stand on, and involves us in no bewildering uncertainties and discomfiting self-contradictions.

I must, therefore, take these descriptions in the only attainable sense of them, and insist that a mighty storm of hail and fire, mingled with blood, means a storm of hail and fire mingled with blood; that earth, trees, and all green grass, means earth, trees, and all green grass; and that the burning, and scorching, and destruction, means burning, scorching, and destruction. And, after wading through piles of volumes intended to prove and demonstrate the contrary, I come back to this, as fully persuaded as I am convinced that the Bible is of God, that there can be no interpretation of the Apocalypse, as an intelligible revelation, on any other principle. There are, indeed, symbols and figures in it, as in all other portions of the Scriptures. But when they occur here, as in every other place, the distinct intimations to that effect are given; and, in all other instances, we are to interpret precisely the same as in any other piece of serious writing intended for the instruction and enlightenment of men.

A PRAYER.

My hope, my all, my Savior thou,
To thee, lo, now my soul I bow;
I feel the bliss thy wounds impart,
I find thee, Savior, in my heart.

Be thou my strength, be thou my way,
Protect me through my life's short day;
In all my acts may wisdom guide,
And keep me, Savior, near thy side.

Correct, reprove, and comfort me,
As I have need, my Savior be;
And if I would from thee depart,
Then clasp me, Savior, to thy heart.

In fierce temptation's darkest hour,
Save me from sin and Satan's power;
Tear every idol from thy throne,
And reign, my Savior, reign alone.

GIFTS OF THE GOSPEL CHURCH. WHAT ARE THEY?

J. C. DAY.

As there is much said upon this subject at the present time, I have thought that perhaps it might be right for me to make a few remarks upon the point; and in so doing I shall endeavor to introduce divine testimony, and let that decide the question.

"God who at sundry times and in divers manners, spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds." Heb. 1: 1, 2. This agrees with St. Peter's testimony, Acts 3: 22: "For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you."

The first testimony that I shall adduce is from this prophet himself, as recorded in Matt. 16: 18—"And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." St. Paul also testifies to the same point, Eph. 2: 20—"And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." The next is from Matt. 7: 24,—"Therefore, whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken them unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock." This is in perfect harmony with all the passages which I have quoted, and makes our salvation dependent upon our obedience to this prophet. I will now examine the Scriptures evidence upon the spiritual gifts of the church; and as Paul in his epistles is very explicit upon them, I shall proceed to examine his testimony.

1 Cor. 12: 1—"Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant. 2. Ye know that ye were Gentiles carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led. 3. Wherefore I give you to understand that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." Now here is a rule laid down, by which we may by a careful examination find out what the apostle meant to convey by these expressions. I make this remark, because I think I discover a disposition of late in some of the writers for the Review to wrest this class of Scriptures from their proper bearing, and to make them mean something entirely different from what the apostle intended. I don't think any of my brethren will understand from Paul that we are to have a vision before we can call Jesus Lord, but that we must be adopted into the family of Christ, and receive that spirit of adoption whereby we can cry, Abba, Father. Verse 4—"Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. 5—And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord. 6—And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. 7—But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. 8—For to one is given by the Spirit, the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit. 9—To another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit. 10—To another, the working of miracles; to another, prophecy; to another, discerning of spirits; to another, divers kinds of tongues; to another, the interpretation of tongues." Here we have the sum total of the gifts as brought out in the New Testament.

The apostle goes on in this chapter to illustrate this subject by a human body; that it is made up of members, each supplying its place, and all are necessary to make up the body; so that the eye cannot say to the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you; but all these members are placed in the church by the same God, and fitted for their office by the self-same Spirit. Hence we see that when a person is adopted into the family of Christ, he becomes a member of the body of Christ, and is placed there to occupy upon the talent which is committed to him; to fill his place in the church, and is responsible to Christ only, the great Head of the church, for how he occupies that talent; although we are placed here as members one of another, and for the upbuilding and strengthening of each other. The elders are to rebuke and exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine, but never, I believe, to point out each other's duty in the occupation of our talents. God has never left this to erring, selfish mortals. I think Paul illustrates this very beautifully, in Rom. 14: 4—"Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth." As much as to say, you have no right to judge; they are not your servants, they serve another master, even Christ; and to him alone they are responsible.

But in Rom. 13: 6 and onward he goes on to give illustrations concerning the occupation of the gifts. "Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth, on exhortation; he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that showeth mercy, with cheerfulness," etc. Here again we have each member's duty distinctly pointed out in this inspired volume; so that each may know his duty without any new revelation; and it is a little singular, if so much depends upon visions as some teach, why Paul has not said one word about them among the gifts of the church. He did not forget to name the proper officers that were placed in the church until it should come into the unity of the faith, Eph. 4: 11-14; but not one word said about visions to accomplish that object, nor for any other purpose in all the catalogue of gifts; hence unless we can find them placed among the gifts in some other part of the inspired testimony, we have no more right to place them there than we have to pervert any other portion of God's word.

A mere information that there would be visions in the last days, does not make it our duty to follow them, any more than the same information makes it our duty to follow dreams or false prophets. I will here introduce Peter's testimony (Peter 4: 9–11)—"Use hospitality one to another without grudging. As every man hath received the gifts, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God." Again, in Matt. 25: 14, and onward, we see that God makes each person responsible alone to him, for the occupation of these gifts. And if we trace the subject through the Bible, we cannot find an instance where visions are named as one of the gifts of the church, or that they are to take the place of any one of the gifts. This looks very different from the efforts some are making to have visions take the place of not only all the gifts, but also all the officers of the church. See address of Battle Creek conference, published in Review No. 10.

As to the gift prophecy, it is defined in 1 Cor. 14: 3, to be exhortation. In verse 29 we are told to "let the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge." Now who believes that the apostle taught that all the church might carry on their meetings by visions as the most effectual way to convince the unconverted that God was with them? It would be a perfect Babel.

MAN,

As he was, what he is now, and what he will be.

J. A. CLEAVELAND.

"And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness."—Gen. 2: 7.

Thus man was made perfect, without a blemish upon him, a beautiful specimen of the wisdom of the great Architect of heaven, having a well-developed intellect, capable of choosing either of good or evil, invested with a kingly power, and had given into his hands the entire control of the fowls of heaven, the beasts of the field, and the fish of the sea. A partner for his comfort was given him, and they were placed in the garden to enjoy the fruits of paradise, with a command to go forth and multiply and replenish the earth. There seemed to be nothing to disturb the peace of the happy pair; yet they were made capable of choosing or refusing. God gave them a commandment to keep, and told them they could eat of every tree of the garden save one in the midst of it; of that they must not eat; for in the day that they ate thereof they must "surely die."

Adam could not have misunderstood this command; nevertheless, when the temptation came, he yielded and ate of the forbidden fruit. At once he saw his mistake. The once happy pair were ashamed, and for the first time wished to hide away from their Creator. The curse of God was upon them. What a contrast. Misery took the place of happiness, and they were driven out of the garden. The curse came, and in sorrow he ate of the fruit of the ground all the days of his life. Gen. 3: 17. Now we see man a poor, sickly, degraded, sinful, dissipated creature, without hope, and without God in the world; subject to pain, sickness and death. God saw our condition, and when there was no eye to pity, or arm to save, he sent his only begotten Son into the world to become a propitiation or mercy-seat for our sins. Notwithstanding death is passed upon us, God has placed us on probation, and given us commands to keep; and in keeping them there is great reward.

What we shall be. It is written, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." 1 John 3: 2. Now, dear reader, when Jesus comes, will you be made immortal, and reign on the earth? or will you continue in sin and die "the second death"? Language is too weak to picture the glory of the world to come, or to tell of the anguish and sorrow of the ungodly. We thank God to-day that it is our privilege to have a part with Christ, and live forever. Poor sinner, come to Christ, and live for ever. Be made immortal, and eat of the fruit of the tree of life, and die no more.

Dear brethren, I am glad we have got almost through to Canaan's happy shore, where our trials will be ended, our sorrows all gone. May the good Lord keep us to the end.

THE TWO WITNESSES.

"And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and three-score days, clothed in sackcloth."—Rev. 11: 3.

It would be quite tedious to mention at any length the conflicting views entertained by our commentators and ministers in general upon his subject. Some held that by the the "two witnesses" are meant the Protestant and Greek churches; others, the Old and New Testament; others, the Old and New Testament churches; others, Enoch and Elijah; others, Christ and John Huss and Luther; others, Pope Sylvester and Mena; others, the Waldenses and Albigenses; others, the true ministers of the gospel etc.; but we believe them to be two individuals, yet to be revealed.

It is obvious that the language of the text in question is either literal, figurative, or symbolic; and in order to a proper understanding it is highly important that we first determine to which kind of language the words "two witnesses" belong. If literal, to interpret them as figurative, or deflected from their ordinary meaning, would certainly do violence to the sacred text; if figurative, it would do equal violence to treat them as symbolic, because figurative words are deflected from their common or ordinary meaning, while symbolic language must of necessity be interpreted according to its natural import. Words are not symbols, but must be employed in naming and describing them; and when thus employed they must of necessity receive their primitive or natural signification.

But how are we to determine to which class of words they belong? Are there no competent rules? If not, we are at sea without a compass; and should we venture an interpretation it would only be a venture without any certainty of touching correctness. If the literal meaning of a word is one thing and the figurative another, how is it possible for any one to interpret any text properly until he shall have first determined the kind of language employed. Let us now proceed to examine the words under consideration: 1. Are they symbolic? That they are not symbolic will appear, we think, from the following considerations.

First, the words "two witnesses" form a part of the "saying" or verbal prophecy of the angel; and, as has been shown in former numbers of The Key, it is utterly impossible for a Bible symbol to reside in sayings or verbal prophecy. Be it admitted, however, that all words are symbols or signs of ideas, both in and out of the Bible, yet it does not follow, neither does it argue, that they are Bible or prophetic symbols.

A prophetic symbol is a person or thing employed by the revealing party to symbolize or represent another person or thing. Hence it is that words are not prophetic symbols, but must be employed in naming or describing them, and when so used must of necessity be received as literal. (See Rev. 17: 3) "And I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet-colored beast." Here we have the names of two symbols—"woman" and "beast," and these words "woman" and "beast," both in this article and in the sacred text are simply the names of a person and an animal; hence not symbols further than the word bread, which is the sign or the name of the staff of life. A Bible symbol therefore does not reside in a word, but in the person or thing of which the word is but the name. We conclude therefore that the words "two witnesses" are not symbols. But, says one, may not the persons here alluded to be symbols? This question will be answered under our second reason.

Second, a symbol must be present not to the conceptive, but to the perceptive organs. This will appear from the nature and use of symbols. 1. A Bible symbol is a person or thing, not a word, nor an association of words. 2. They perform an office which could not be performed by words. When words are spoken or written they become signs of ideas, whether they be used in naming or describing; hence addressed to our conceptive powers. But not so with symbols; in them we have not unfrequently a very striking resemblance of the person or thing symbolized; and if their use reside in likeness or resemblance, then they must of necessity have been perceived or been present to him who was being instructed by them.

Again, if it be necessary for A to hear the words of B on any given subject in order to profit by them, so it is necessary for symbols to be seen by any one when being instructed through them as a medium. Let us illustrate: Bro. Watson, a few minutes ago, demanded our attention while he indulged in a description of Rev. H. F. Buckner, and on concluding pointed to his photograph upon the wall; and we can safely say that we gained more information concerning the looks or personal appearance of Bro. Buckner by a single glance at his photograph than we could have gained from Bro. Watson had he spent the whole day in word-description. But the name photograph rendered no assistance whatever, neither would an absent (future) photograph have rendered any assistance, however many times he might have referred to it, because it would have been just as difficult for him to have given as just conceptions concerning the appearance of the picture as of Bro. Buckner himself. In order, therefore, to make the "two witnesses" symbols, the text should read as follows: "And I saw two witnesses—men—endowed with power, and they prophesied a thousand two hundred and three score days, clothed in sackcloth." But John did not see the witnesses, but he simply heard an angel say, "I will give power to my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy." . . .

Let the reader bear in mind that a symbol is perceptive, not conceptive. In support of this we will now turn to Ezek 37, where it will be seen that by two sticks, the two nations, Israel and Judah, are represented or symbolized, and by the uniting of the sticks is shown the reunion of the two peoples, or the incorporation of Israel into Judah. The event symbolized was very remote, yet the symbol was present to their perceptive organs. See 20th verse: "And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes." From the above it is evident that God required the prophet to have the the symbols (sticks) in his hands and before the eyes of the people. Now if a symbol must be present, we conclude that the two witnesses referred to are not symbols, because they were not seen by John.

Third, all Bible symbols are recorded in the present or past tense, never in the future. Indeed the very design of symbols forever precludes their use in connection with verbs of the future tense. This we think is sufficient proof that the words are neither symbolic nor symbols.

Fourth, if it be admitted that the words "two witnesses" are symbols, too much is thereby proved for its advocates; for we learn from the fourth verse that the "two witnesses" are the two olive-trees, and the two candlesticks (luksia) lamp-stands. Whatever is said to be done by symbols as such, must be done by the persons or things symbolized. This rule of course applies only to prophetic symbols.

Let us apply this rule to the words under consideration. Allowing the "two witnesses" to be symbols, then the "two olive-trees" and the "two lamp-stands" must be the things symbolized (see fourth verse.) And it is worthy of remark just here that a thing symbolized never becomes a symbol to symbolize or to represent a third thing. So if the "olive-trees" and the "lamp-stands" be the things symbolized, we must, in looking for the event or fulfillment, look for two literal olive-trees and two literal lamp-stands. And further, these literal olive-trees and lamp-stands must be endowed, must "prophesy for a thousand two hundred and three-score days, clothed in sackcloth;" fire must proceed out of their mouths; they must have power to shut heaven that it rain not during the days of their prophecy; they must be killed, must be raised, and must literally ascend into heaven. Now all know that these things could not be true of literal olive-trees and lamp-stands; but may and can be literally true of two literal, individual men.

Now we think that we have shown conclusively that the words "two witnesses" are not symbols. We also think that we have shown just as clearly that the "two witnesses" or individuals referred to are not symbols. It follows therefore that all interpretations of them as symbols are false. If they are not symbols, as before shown, then the Old and New Testaments can not be the things referred to; nor the Old and New Testament churches; nor the true ministers of the gospel, etc. And more, if we admit that they are symbols, even in that case the above and like interpretations could not be allowed, because the fourth verse settles the question as to what is meant by the "two witnesses," allowing them to be symbols. If they are symbols therefore, the fourth verse is the interpretation, and the things symbolized are the two olive-trees and the two lamp-stands.—The Prophetic Key.

THE SOURCE OF ALL GOOD.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

"Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."—James 1: 17.

Either directly or indirectly every good thing comes from God. If the springs come from below, the water fall first from the clouds above. If we see any thing true, or noble, or lovely in the creature, it did not originate there, but came first from above—from the great Fountain and Source of all good. And as the springs fail and dry up when the rain is withheld, so all that is good in the creature will wither and disappear, when the supply from above is cut off. These thoughts should tend to humble us, and to "hide pride from man." "For what hast thou that thou didst not receive? Now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?" 1 Cor. 4: 7. God only is good, and he alone is the source of all good. Praise him evermore.

☞ Religion is as necessary to reason as reason is to religion; the one cannot exist without the other. A reasoning being would lose his reason in attempting to account for the phenomena of nature, had he not a Supreme Being to refer to. If there had been no God, mankind would have been obliged to imagine one.

— Thousands can be found who, though willing to embrace what is good, are not bold and decided to shun what is bad. They are ready with others to extol virtue and religion, but slow to strike down vice when the weapon is placed in their hand.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

At a meeting of the committee held on the camp-ground, June 7th, it was voted that our annual meeting this year commence Saturday, Aug. 19th, and continue over the 27th. Particulars hereafter.

Geo. T. Adams, Secretary.

WOODSTOCK.

Our meetings in the Vermont tent, at Woodstock, are progressing finely. The prospect is now (Thursday, June 15th) very encouraging. The tent is well filled three times a day with attentive audiences, and the Brn. and Srs. are growing in grace rapidly. They seem anxious to be just right, that they may be ready to welcome Jesus at his coming. The Congregational and Christian preachers have been in, and manifested a kind spirit. We are expecting to see much good accomplished.

Woodstock is one of the most pleasant villages in New England. The streets are shaded by large elms, and the cottage homes wear a very neat and inviting appearance. So far as we could judge, we come to the conclusion that the moral standard in Woodstock is above most villages of its size. It is a delightful place for a summer residence. The only thing lacking to make the people happy is holiness of heart.

Bro. Carpenter is with us, and we expect Bro. Couch to-night. For many years there has been but little said here about the coming of Jesus.

STATE OF FRANCE.

France is still in an unsettled and very critical condition. It is divided between the Bourbons, Republicans, and Bonapartists. Each party is striving to secure the best positions for its leaders. Although the people would prefer a well-regulated republic, the prospect of success is faint. The failure in the effort to establish a republic, and the terrible results connected with the attempts have thrown a damper on the ardor of the Republican party, that will prevent its members from pressing their cause with a zeal sufficient to secure success, in opposition to the union of the monied and imperial interests. The Bonapartists have the inside of the ring. Their friends are busily engaged to bring the political wires under their control, with a fair prospect of success. Exciting scenes must intervene before France again enjoys her former rest. The revolutionary spirit is terribly aroused, and cannot be easily subdued. All Europe shows signs of an approaching political earthquake, that will make thrones and their occupants tremble like Belshazzar at the handwriting upon the wall. A short period will introduce new and important scenes to an astonished world.

"THE WORLD MOVES."

The above heading is the title of a four-page tract (No. 8), published by the Liberal Tract Society, office 275 Main Street, Worcester, Mass. Price $5 per thousand. This tract, and others issued by the society, represents the sentiments of Spiritualists. We copy the following: "Rationalists believe that the welfare of humanity will be promoted by rejecting the Bible as authority and Jesus as the Savior. Belief in the Bible has done much to keep people ignorant, credulous, superstitious, brutal and wicked. It has served the tyrant to justify him in his oppressions, the conqueror in his cruelties, the debaucher in his revelries and the priest in his impostures. Whenever and wherever it has been believed it has produced more strife, enmity, intolerance, suffering, tears and bloodshed than any other cause." Again the tract speaks of the Holy Bible as the "bungling, cursing, lying, obscene priest-book;" and further says; "Its Jesus has become a man; its hell is nearly extinguished; its devil is dead. Science and reason are moving the world along, and the Bible, as inspired authority, must get out of the way." Such are the sentiments of Spiritualists, who claim to be establishing ancient Christianity in its purity; and that Spiritualism is the great reformatory power in the world, which is to introduce the millennium—"the good time coming." When they can succeed in abolishing the marriage laws, and all others, and allow every man and woman "to do as he or she pleases," "under all circumstances," having thrown the Bible away, rejected Jesus as the Savior, and God as our Creator, then they claim that society will have taken an elevated position, and the "good time coming" will have been introduced.

Such is the devil's proposed millennium, and which, by the aid of Spiritualism, he is trying hard to introduce through the teachings of his mediums. If the people would but consent to follow fully the teachings of the spirits, they would be led back at once to the darkest heathenism; but many refuse to follow where they are endeavoring to lead.

On the tract to which we have referred, is a picture of a globe representing a planet, one half of which is in the light, and the other half in darkness. The light part is uppermost, and is represented as being illuminated by the light of Geology, Astronomy, Philosophy, Physiology, Rationalism, etc.; while on the other side the darkness is represented as being caused by a belief in Jehovah, Satan, vicarious atonement by Christ, baptism, etc. With a long lever, called "science," a fulcrum labelled "geology," and a company of men with Prof. Wm. Denton at the upper end, bearing down upon the lever, they are trying to turn the world over into the light of "Rationalism;" and they cry out, "The world moves." And on the other side, right in the path over which they wish to roll the world, lies the Bible as a block in the way. With another long lever called "reason," manned by noted infidels, among whom are Voltaire, Hume, Gibbon, Paine, Volney, Robert Dale Owen, and Theodore Parker, they are trying to pry the Bible out of the way, so that Prof. Denton and his fellows can roll the world over into the light of Spiritualism.

Against the middle of the dark side of the world, where Christianity prevails, is placed another lever manned by the Young Men's Christian Association, labelled "Conservatism," with which a company of the friends of Christianity are pushing against the world, to prevent it from being rolled over by Spiritualism to crush the Bible, and all its supporters, who stand braced against it, in company with those who are using the lever of "conservatism," which is represented as in the act of breaking, thus leaving the Young Men's Christian Association in a powerless condition. At this juncture, the cry seems to come up from Prof. Denton and his co-laborers, "The world moves." In the picture it is still further represented that the enemies of Christianity have already turned the world over sufficiently to nearly crush a meeting-house with its tall, tumbling steeple; with an apparent prospect that they will soon bury alarmed ministers, pulpits, and Bible so deep in ruin as to be seen no more.

Another part of the picture represents a deep pit, from which the flames of hell are rising; while at the same time a large cataract is pouring in water to put out the fire. All this represents the real spirit of Spiritualism; which cries out, Down with Christ as a Savior, Christianity, the Bible, and the God of the Bible; exalt reason, science, and Spiritualism. No doubt Satan would then say, "Well done." We believe most firmly that Spiritualism is the Devil's religion—his pet system. In the name of all that is good and sacred, pure and lovely, beneficial to man in this world or the next, let us wage a perpetual warfare against the powers of darkness which are attacking Christianity in the form of Spiritualism.

THE POPE.

The Pope has recently issued an Encyclical letter "to the whole world," calling on his friends to assist him in securing again his political dominion, stating that he is powerless without it. Some safeguards had been offered him on account of his loss of temporal power, but he finds them of but little value. He sees the necessity of aid from the political arm in order to sustain his position. The following is his Encyclical letter, dated May 15th, 1871:—

"We consider it part of our apostolic duty that we should declare solemnly through you to the whole world that not only what are called safeguards, and which are devised by the sub-Alpine Government, but that all titles, honors, immunities and privileges, whatever shape they take under the general name of safeguards or of guaranties, can be of no avail whatever toward securing a prompt and free use of the power divinely transmitted to us, nor toward guarding the liberty necessary for the church. Such being the condition of affairs, as we have repeatedly declared and professed, that without the crime of breaking our solemn oath at the enthronization we can consent to no conciliation, which in any manner would destroy or diminish the right of good and of the Apostolic See. So now, as of bounden duty, we declare that we will never agree to non-accept, nor can we so agree to or accept those cunningly wrought out safeguards or guaranties proposed by the sub-Alpine Government, whatever their device, or any others of whatsoever kind, or however ratified, which under the form of securing our sacred power and liberty shall have been offered to us in lieu of and in exchange for that civil principality with which divine Providence willed that the Holy Apostolic See should be furnished and strengthened, and which is ratified to us by legitimate and irrefragible titles, as well as by possession, for more than eleven centuries. God grant also that the rulers of this earth, whom it much imports that such a pernicious example of usurpation as we endure may not take root and flourish to the destruction of all power and order, may join with one consent of mind and wills, and that hushing quarrels, the disturbances of rebellions be appeased and the deadly counsels of sects abandoned, they may unite in one movement for restoring the Holy See its rights, and with these his full liberty to the visible head of the church, and desired calm to civil society."

Friday, June 16th, was the Pope's jubilee, he having filled the papal chair for twenty-five years, which is longer than any other Pope. It is said the Catholics have a tradition that when they come to a Pope who shall reign twenty-five years, he will be the last.

THE SPIRIT OF SPIRITUALISM.

At the semi-annual convention of Spiritualists, held in Elliott Hall, Boston, June 1st, 1871, Dr. H. B. Storer presented the following for adoption:—

Whereas, Certain Evangelical Christians, of the more superstitious and unintelligent class, are industriously engaged in efforts to obtain an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, by which the Jewish Jevovah and the Christian religion shall be recognized as factors in the organic law of this Republic; be it hereby

Resolved, That the members of this Association, commiserating the infatuation which actuates these fellow citizens to attempt the subjugation of religious liberty and the inevitable progress of free thought and unobstructed development, will continue to argue, in all proper places and times, the entire independence of the American Government and American prosperity upon the favor or disfavor of the Jewish Jehovah and the ecclesiastical system known as Christianity, and will also strenuously resist any such efforts to prostitute the ægis of the American Republic to the protection of sectarian bigotry.

The resolution was defended by E. S. Wheeler, I. C. Ray, A. E. Giles, and Prof. Wm. Denton. The Banner of Light (June 17th) says:—

"The resolution—denouncing the proposed recognition of God in the Constitution by amendment—was then passed with a unanimous 'yes,' and amid the general enthusiasm, Rabbi Guinsburg, standing upon the platform said, 'If I had a thousand voices I would say yes.'"

Rabbi Guinsburg is the Jewish Rabbi in Boston. It is not difficult to foresee what kind of laws we should have were Spiritualists to make them, as prompted by the demons. It is said half of our congressmen are Spiritualists. We believe the worst is yet to come. Let christians gird on their armor, and stand up for Jesus.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books, tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 418 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at White & Bauer's.

Correction.—In the Corresponding Editor's article of June 7th, entitled "Can an immortal soul be saved?" by some error he is made to say—"Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many,—this offering being equivalent in value to millions of copper coins." The passage should read—"Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many,—this one valuable life being equivalent to millions of ordinary lives, just as one valuable diamond is equivalent in value to millions of copper coins."

IS CHRIST TO BUILD A TEMPLE?

In support of the claim that Christ, as the seed of David, is to build a temple after he begins his reign, and renew the sacrificial system, we are referred to the following text, containing Jehovah's statement to David: "And when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build a house for my name, and I will establish his kingdom forever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son. If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men; but my mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established forever before thee; thy throne shall be established forever."—2 Sam. 7: 12-16.

It is said that this cannot refer to Solomon, but must refer to Christ, because David immediately affirmed (verse 19), "Thou hast spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come." So it was "a great while to come" before Solomon even began to build it—about thirty years, according to Usher's Chronology. But we will proceed to prove positively that Solomon, and not Christ, is here meant as the "seed" that should build the Lord's house, or temple.

1. David is here informed when this seed should be "set up," namely: "when thy days be fulfilled." Solomon succeeded him.

2. It is said, "He shall build an house for my name." Solomon did build such a house; and it is not probable that this would have been entirely overlooked, and another foretold in its stead.

3. It is said of this same seed, who should build this house, "If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men." (verse 14.) To say this of Christ, after his elevation to his throne, in his immortal state, would be a strange statement. What, Christ "commit iniquity"? "Chasten" Christ? All this refer to Christ? Impossible! But it sounds all right when applied to Solomon, a mortal, fallible man.

4. David's own words positively prove that his seed that should build this house was Solomon, and not Christ: "And David said to Solomon, My son, as for me, it was in my mind to build a house unto the name of the Lord my God; but the word of the Lord came to me, saying, ... Behold, a son shall be born to thee, ... his name shall be Solomon, . . . he shall build a house for my name; and he shall be my son, and I will be his father; and I will establish the throne of his kingdom over Israel forever." Chron. 22: 7-10.

Here David distinctly testifies that the Lord informed him that the name of his son who should build the predicted house of the Lord should be Solomon. That should settle the question, proving that Christ was not the foretold temple-builder.

Again, we read that God said to David: "Solomon, thy son, he shall build my house and my courts; for I have chosen him to be my son, and I will be his father. Moreover, I will establish his kingdom forever, if he be constant to do my commandments."—1 Chron. 28: 6, 7. This promise of the perpetuity of Solomon's kingdom, is more fully explained by the Lord to Solomon: "And if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, in integrity of heart, and in uprightness, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and will keep my statutes and my judgments; then I will establish thy throne forever, as I promised David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israel. But if ye at all turn from following me, ye or your children, and will not keep my commandments and my statutes which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods, and worship them, then will I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them; and this house which I have hallowed for my name, will I cast out of my sight."—1 Kings 9: 4-7. The same conditions were given directly from the Lord to David in the words: "If thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in the truth with all their heart and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee [said he] a man on the throne of Israel."—1 Kings 2: 4. These conditions are applicable, not to Christ, but to David's posterity, who might have successively occupied Israel's throne till Christ, the immortal heir, should have been elevated to it; thus the throne would never have been vacated.

5. It is further evident that Christ is not to build a temple, or even have a temple connected with his kingdom, for the Revelator's statement concerning the New Jerusalem after it had "come down from God out of heaven," as the capital of Messiah's kingdom: "I saw no temple therein."—Rev. 21: 22. Indeed, as temple worship, involving the sacrifice of beasts, has been superceded by the sacrifice of the Lamb of God, a resumption of that typical service which has already met its antitype in the death of Christ, would be a repudiation of the prefigured substance, and a return to the shadow. We are far in advance of temple worship in this age; and the subsequent age of glory will be far in advance of this. Then tell us not that Christ will build a temple in his kingdom. No such doctrine is taught in the sixth of Zechariah, as some claim, but allusion is made to Joshua the high priest, who jointly with Zerubbabel did build the second temple. Christ was the last sacrifice accepted of the Lord,—"the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all,"—and we now need no temple for the offering of blood.

GENEALOGY OF CHRIST.

A Bro. propounds the following questions:

"How can the genealogy of Christ be traced back to David through Joseph the husband of Mary, seeing Joseph was not the father of Christ? How is Christ proved to be the son of David by the genealogy given either by Mathew or Luke, seeing they both trace back through Mary's husband who was not the real father of Christ?"

Many have been perplexed over this point by failing to notice in what sense Luke, in his genealogy, pronounces Joseph "the son of Heli" (Luke 3: 23), when he traces Christ's lineage back through Heli to David. Joseph being the legal head of the family, and being the son of Heli by marriage, Luke followed the ancient custom in giving the name of the husband instead of the wife, recognizing Joseph as the son of Heli. But let it be remembered that Heli was the father of Mary, and not the father of Joseph (except by marriage), and it will be plain to all that Luke gives us Christ's genealogy through Heli, Mary's father, back to David. That Heli was not the father of Joseph, except by marriage, is proven by Matthew's statement: "Jacob begat Joseph the husband of Mary." Matt. 1: 16. Then it is certain Heli did not beget Joseph, so Joseph was the son of Heli, only by marriage, and Christ's lineage is traced through Mary's father to David; agreeing with Paul: "Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead." 2 Tim. 2: 8. Matthew simply gives the legal, and not the actual, lineage of Christ, tracing back through Joseph, and Joseph's father, instead of Mary's father.

SOUTHERN TRACT FUND.

At our recent Wisconsin Campmeeting, a collection was taken to aid me in scattering gratuitously my forthcoming book (entitled "The Life beyond Death in the Home of the Holy") in the southern field, it having been prepared with reference to missionary or pioneering work. I desire to send at least one thousand copies of this work, with a quantity of my four tracts, into the southern field this coming fall and winter. It will be a pleasure for some to help me raise one hundred dollars for this purpose. Let such direct to Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Green Co., Wis., or, if more convenient, to Miles Grant, Boston.

Let the Lights Burn.—We frequently find isolated believers who are in doubt as to duty. Not wishing to be deprived of society, and church accommodations, they query whether they had not better unite with some of the church organizations in their locality, and keep still about their peculiar faith. That would please the devil, for "if the light that is in thee become darkness, how great is that darkness." Never take a step that will directly or indirectly, fully or partially, silence you on the living issues of the day between truth and error. Though your influence may be small, let it all be on the side of truth, without compromise. Be always kind, but firm. The privileges that cannot be enjoyed without a sacrifice of right principles are not worth enjoying. We have no right to lower the standard of truth, nor to trail its flag in the dust, for the sake of peace or popularity. Joyfully accept the reproach incurred by holding up the light of truth. If you are the only one in your place to hold up the light, and your light is but feeble, the more need of keeping it burning, instead of putting it out. If a large mansion needs forty lights, and has but one, who would think of extinguishing the one because there were not forty?

Never use your means or influence to hold up a perverted gospel, when a genuine gospel is languishing in many localities for want of funds. If you live where you are not expending means to spread the present truth in your region, send aid to some other point where the truth can be advanced thereby.

Camp Wisconsin.—The State Campmeeting for Wisconsin has just closed. It was a good meeting. A larger number of tents were erected on the ground than in any previous year. Truth is getting a foothold all over the State. About twenty ministers were present. The State Conference convened in connection with the campmeeting. The conference was formed into districts, for the purpose of spreading quarterly meetings all over the State, each district to have the same number of quarterly conferences that the whole State formerly had, and each district having a minister chosen by conference to take supervision. We think this plan will work well, and hereby recommend it to other conferences.

A SUGGESTION.

A brother whom I met with lately, talking about Tremont campmeeting, said he was looking forward with pleasure to that annual gathering. But he would suggest one improvement, which he wished me to represent, and that was that instead of the general meeting in the morning, there should be a number in various tents. His reason was this: The brethren who go to campmeeting are, generally, the most interested of the flock, and they all feel as if they would like to give in their testimony to the love and power of Christ; but at this meeting of five hundred, or more, there is, necessarily, only opportunity for a few to improve the time which is usually taken up by the "pillars" of the church, in longer expositions, exhortations, etc., than should be. If, therefore, the committee of management would consider this, it would doubtless be for the greater good of all.

This is not written in a spirit of interference, or fault-finding, but in one of suggestion,—not for myself, but for others.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 24th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the coming year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

WHAT WE NEED.

C. E. BARNES.

It is said, and said truly, that "order is heaven's first law." We see it exemplified in all the various departments of nature, from the laws which develop the seed into the plant, to the laws which regulate the motions of the planets.

Everywhere nature declares with revelation, that "God is not the author of confusion." Where we find order, there we find harmony; where we find order, there we find regularity, and generally where harmony and precision are lacking, we can trace our way back to a lack of order as the primary cause.

In a machine of many and complicated parts, where the whole is dependent upon its parts, and the parts dependent upon one another, it is very essential that the pieces be properly arranged; for a slight deviation or improper adjustment may disarrange the whole with disastrous results. Hence the necessity arises of having a proper person to act in the capacity of engineer, and thus have the whole under his immediate supervision.

We as a body of people, have suffered from a lack of order. This is not the testimony of one, nor of two, but of the entire body. All admit that the truth we advocate has suffered from this want; that our cause might have been much more prosperous, if some measures could have been adopted which might have prevented the dissensions and divisions which have occurred among us, and which, moreover, are a reproach to a people who, above all others, ought to be united in the closest ties of christian love and fellowship. And I am glad that even at this eleventh hour the people are beginning to be awake to this fact, and it is to be hoped that all will do what they can to remedy this long-existing evil.

If an engine was in the care of a certain man this week, and then he was to be superceded by another, and the second remain a few days and then be set out for another one, leaving the engine for the next man that might happen along, not knowing whom he might be; if in such a case the machinery was to get out of repair, would it require more than ordinary intelligence to point out the fault? And would not every sensible man recommend the owners to secure the services of some trustworthy man, who could devote his time to their engine, and thus have it properly looked after?

As we would advise in the above supposed case, so we can advise in regard to our churches, which are suffering, yea, and more than suffering—many of them are mangled and torn, and barely able to keep erect—from the want of having proper persons to have the oversight of the flocks, and the church which has been purchased with the blood of our Lord.

A shepherd is one who cares for his flocks; who has them in sight during the day, who knows where the grass is freshest, and where water is most abundant; who can tell whether any are missing, and if so, searches till he finds them, if necessary going over hill and dale; who gathers the lambs with his arm and carries them in his bosom. In a word, he is a good shepherd, who can call his sheep by name, who can lead them out into green pastures, and beside still waters; a shepherd whose voice the sheep know; who, when he goes before them, is gladly followed by them.

To me, it looks as though we had too many evangelists and not enough pastors, and from this want our churches are suffering, yea, even languishing for the labors of devoted men of God, who can care for them; who can comfort them in affliction, and strengthen them when in trial; who can counsel them, and who can set them an example of piety; who can be to them "a pattern of good works; in doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech that cannot be condemned."

This want is felt, and it should be remedied. Every church should be under the watch-care of some one, and if one church is not able to maintain a pastor, let two or three adjoining ones unite, if they can agree on any one man, and enjoy the benefits of his labors.

The trials which many of our churches have passed through could have been avoided, had there been a shepherd to lead them. The divisions could have been escaped, had there been a faithful shepherd to prevent the approach of the wolf. The wandering ones could be reached and restored to the folds from whence they have strayed, if there was only a warm, loving heart to go out in search of them.

But while pastoral labor is decried and opposed and prevented, these results will not be changed; weak ones will stray, and wolves will get in and devour and divide the flocks. How often it is that our tents are pitched in a place, an interest awakened, and the people become desirous to hear, when away go tent and preachers to another locality, leaving the interest just awakened to die out, because we have no system whereby the services of a minister can be secured, and the interest nourished and kept alive. From this want, I repeat it, our churches are suffering, and where it can be remedied, they should not be permitted to suffer from it any longer.

And then, too, it would not be without its advantages to the preacher. Aside from the fact that he would save what would otherwise go to the railroad companies, he would have more time for study and self-improvement; and so, while the church would be thriving under his care, he too would be making mental progress, the value of which could not be reckoned in dollars and cents.

I hope and pray that those who have begun to write upon this topic may not lay aside the pen, but keep the matter agitated, until the pernicious working of our present system (?) shall, in a measure, if not entirely, be done away with.

WILL THEY SUCCEED?

J. S. CLARK.

There is an effort being made by some of the despots of Europe to restore the pope to his civil power. The Jesuits are hard at work; we conclude they will not succeed; they are engaged in a fruitless cause. God's word cannot be broken. The papacy has gone down never more to rise, and the despots of Europe are the next to follow. Poor France is a sample. All the kings of that old Roman empire that have committed fornication with the harlot woman, by upholding her spiritual wickedness and bloody persecutions, are next to suffer in their turn. France, the eldest son of the papacy, is the first to suffer, and then one city and nation after another which have been engaged in the support of the papacy will meet their fate, and so on till they are all overthrown and Europe is a desolation, as the prophecy clearly indicates it will be. This of course brings in that state of anarchy which we understand the Scriptures clearly to teach as immediately preceding the establishment of the fifth universal monarchy—the kingdom of God.

These are eventful times in which we are living. Who can fail to discover that the year 1870 was an eventful year; that wonderful changes occurred both to the civil and ecclesiastical power of the papacy? We must be very near the coming of our Lord's personal and visible appearing in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. "Blessed is he that watcheth."

"THE YOUNG PILGRIM."

Having been appointed to take charge of the Young Pilgrim, I would say to its friends and those interested in our Sabbath Schools and the children at home, that I desire the aid and co-operation of all who can write or select good articles for its columns.

All who wish this little messenger of light and joy continued, and still to be the medium of good thoughts for teachers and scholars in our Sabbath Schools, are earnestly requested to give us their aid and prayers in this, to us, new work. Short articles and letters, from old and young, are solicited; and if adapted to the paper and its readers, they will be published. Who will write for the Pilgrim?

OUR YOUNG PREACHERS.

M. D. PRATT.

Having noticed several of Bro. Sheldon's articles on the encouragement of young preachers, and being one myself, I feel it my duty to give a recapitulation of my past experience in this direction. Nearly three years ago, I preached my first sermon. I was young in the faith, scarcely six months old. My first effort was in an entirely new field. I prayed for the guidance of God in the matter, made a confident of none but my wife; asked the advice or counsel of no living mortal. I had become convinced that God called me to labor in his vineyard, and I cared not what man might say. I scarcely need to add that my wife was most radically opposed to my preaching, under any considerations whatever, as she was an unconverted person. But finally the day for trial was appointed, but where was I to hold my meetings? I applied for my district school-house, and was refused, because I was opposed to Methodism. Then I applied to an unconverted neighbor for the use of his house. It was granted, and he circulated the appointment. The time came, and the ordeal was passed; yet I must confess that the old adage proved true, the trial was easier felt than told. None will fail to bear me out in the assertion. Another week passed, and another meeting, with only one religious person present from a boasted religious community, and even he spoke a foreign tongue. I truly felt that I was in a land of strangers, even in my own neighborhood.

My father and mother were willing for me to preach, but detested "Adventism"; while my elder brother gave me a severe reprimand for disgracing myself; therefore the Lord became my only hope and shield. My next effort was with the church to which I was united. A second and third were there, yet no word of encouragement came, and at least by two brethren I was very amicably informed that I was getting crazy; and two sisters very kindly informed me that I could not preach, but thought I might learn how. Just about this time, a deacon of the church gave me the second word of encouragement I ever received. But to compensate for this, I was informed by another Bro. that a well-known minister had told him that Bro. —— meant well, but could not preach; and that such and such a Bro. could preach a great deal better than he could. I knew that myself, but that did not relieve me from duty at all, as long as the harvest was ripe, and the sheaves lay ungathered, to waste in the mire and filth; especially as I heard petition after petition ascend to God, asking for more laborers in his vineyard, and heard also the still command, Go ye out and compel them to come in. I did not give up, for it seemed as if God had called me, and I dared not refuse the summons. I prayed that he would open the way for me, and that prayer was not in vain.

Times have changed. I now have more calls than I can possibly fill. Being hampered by a farm, and being poor in this world's goods, I can spend only a part of my time in the field. But it is not to complain of anything that I write, because I have a very different object in view. It is this: within my acquaintance, and also within the Advent church, there are five young people passing over the same ground that I have just gone over, and one whose hair is whitening for the tomb, whose christian character stands unblemished before the world, and each are considered well informed by friend or foe; and yet the churches to which they belong turn the cold shoulder, call them "home preachers," "supernumeraries," "talkers," "readers," "speakers," etc., and turn out from two or three to ten or twelve, to hear them; while the rest stay at home, or go a visiting. And yet these laborers are manfully stemming the tide, determined to weather the blast; and most of them have thus labored for over a year.

Now, dear Brn. and Srs., this really ought not to be. I cannot, for one instant, think that it comes through premeditation, but only through a careless way of expressing ourselves. Remember, that a word of this kind may become a stumbling-block to some dear friend for life; and when we pray for the Lord to send more laborers into his vineyard, let us pray particularly for those young ministers whom he has already called out.

This letter is only intended as a message of love. Encourage all young ministers, but do not praise them; such a course would ultimately be their ruin; but encourage them by christian courtesy and kindness.

There may be but a few in this condition, and there may be many. Do you not know some one? if so, pray for him. You can have the best talent, and you ought to have it; yet you can hold up the hands of God's infants, as well as you can feed from the mouth of his lions. You ought to do both, remembering that every lion was once a whelp, and every lion in the ministry was once a young preacher. Now, while we look for the appearing of Jesus, let us all be on our guard, and exhort one another, that he may not find us slumbering when he comes.

WHERE IS THE EVIDENCE?

When in our controversy with those who hold the popular opinion, we urge the startling fact that the Scriptures do not furnish a single statement regarding man's natural immortality, we not only employ an argument which we are quite warranted in using; but one which the most "orthodox" are themselves quite ready to, and in point of fact do often, use in reference to other subjects. Thus, for instance, the Rev. John Cox, advocating the blessed truth of Christ's pre-millennial coming, says —"Many assert that the word of God teaches the post-millennial view. Let such produce their Scriptural authorities. It is not enough to raise objections against the views which we advocate, and to say that there are insuperable difficulties in the way of their adoption. This is just the way in which the skeptic treats Christianity. Let the evidence we adduce be examined; and let evidence be produced in favor of the opposite theory, if it be forthcoming. We have long asked for the texts which declare that the millennium will precede the advent, and have asked in vain." (The Future, p. 69.)

Now, is this way of putting the matter a fair one? Is this demand for Scripture evidence in favor of a popular doctrine, just and reasonable? Surely it is. But if so, are we not equally entitled to urge it in reference to another matter? Is it not quite as just and reasonable to say, 'Many assert that the word of God teaches the immortality of the soul. Let such produce their Scriptural authorities. It is not enough to raise objections against the views which we advocate, and to say that there is great danger in their adoption. This is just the way in which the skeptic treats Christianity. Let the evidence we adduce be examined, and let evidence be produced in favor of the opposite theory, if it be forthcoming. We have long asked for the texts which declare the immortality of the soul, and have asked in vain.'

In like manner the editor of a well-known religious newspaper, when recently opposing an advocate of the Romish doctrine of the real presence of Christ in the elements of the Lord's supper, writes thus: "When this eloquent apologist for a superstitious novelty persuasively assures us that 'there can be no doubt that the body of Christ is co-existent with the bread and wine which we receive in the holy sacrament,' we simply reply that this is merely Mr. Rodwell's assertion; an assertion which would be irrelevant, even if it were true; but which is, in fact, directly contrary to truth. When he tells us that 'it is a question of revealed evidence which the church implicitly believed for fifteen hundred years,' we pass by the phenomenon of this implicit faith without inquiring either its character or its cause. We do not pause to ask (curious as we are) about the revelation thus epenthetically asserted; we simply ask for the 'evidence' itself. What is it? Where is it? Why is it not forthcoming?" Ay, just so: "We simply ask for the evidence itself. What is it? Where is it? Why is it not forthcoming?" But if these are pertinent questions in reference to the Romish doctrine of the real presence, are they not equally pertinent in reference to the heathen dogma of the immortality of the soul? Surely, to quote the vulgar but expressive proverb, "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

These remarks have been suggested by my current reading. To the same source I am indebted for the following caustic admission. I have no reason whatever for supposing that the Rev. John Hunt, the erudite author of "Religious Thought in England," has any sympathy with the doctrines advocated in the Rainbow; but this only makes his admission the more valuable. In an article in the Contemporary Review for February, speaking on other matters, he remarks incidentally: "The announcement to Adam simply was that if he sinned he should die. To have extracted from this that he and his posterity were to suffer endless life in hell, must have required the ingenuity of a theologian." How often have we said this, though not so well.—Rainbow.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. C. H. Williams writes:—"On Saturday, Jan. 28th, we committed wife and children to the care of our heavenly Father, and were soon hurried away on Nahum's chariots in pursuit of poor lost sinners. We halted first in Forest Port, N. Y., where three months previous the coming of Jesus had not been preached. By invitation of Bro. Otis J. Thayer, we visited the place twice and preached a week each time, and God's truth made a mighty shaking. It stirred the people up for eight miles around. One Methodist sister came out and was baptised. An old man who had been a Lutheran saw the light, and is now walking in it. Our visit this time was unexpected, but as the brethren and sisters met on Sunday, at one o'clock, for Bible class and conference, we arranged for an evening meeting; and while instructing the class in our 'blessed hope,' an old man, who had long depended upon his immortal nature for universal salvation, saw that his hope was vain, and with tears of penitence coursing down his furrowed cheeks, he gave his heart to Jesus. In the evening our attendance was large, and two middle-aged men came out rejoicing in the pardoning love of Jesus. One of them had discarded the Bible and the cause of Christ for want of the truth; but, thank the Lord, he has got it now. The prospect in Forest Port is glorious.

We went on into Oneida Co., and preached at Fish Creek Landing, Higginsville, Vienna, and Durhamville. The interest was good in each of these places, especially in the last named, which is a new field opened recently by Bro. M. R. Miles; but the opposition was so great we could get no public room to hold our meetings in, so I talked to the people about conversion in Bro. James Hogarty's parlor, and as the result two dear souls started in the service of God; others have come out since. Praise the Lord.

Our next point was South Butler. We found the church enjoying considerable prosperity, and our labors with them were to good acceptance. One rose for prayers. Then on to Victory (where all christians should go.) Here I spent a short time very profitably with the church; but some of the brethren need warming up, which will only be accomplished by their personal exercise. May God help them to work, for they have not gained the victory yet, if they do live in a place of that name. Next we visited the village of Reed Creek, where four or five were looking for speedy redemption, and struggling against the elements of opposition. They furnished us with a splendid hall, in which we delivered eight discourses. Our attendance was excellent, and six adults started in the christian warfare. Here my bodily strength failed, and Bro. M. R. Miles came and baptized.

We next spent two evenings in Alton, where the interest is good. The house was well filled, and we had a heavenly time. The brethren here are all right if the devil does not destroy two or three with jealousy.

Journeyed on to Rochester, where we preached one Sunday. They need help there. They have a hard fight with the enemy. The sifting time is near by, so look out, brethren. Our next point was Lockport. Here we were sick for two days, but we preached for the church one evening. The brethren here are in a prosperous condition, although subject to some of the trials incident to the church militant. They occupy the Advent Hall, which has been occupied by Advent believers since 1843. Here we were urged to locate as pastor of the flock, but we know hardly what duty is.

Our next move was to Brockport, where our New York State Conference had convened. We had a heavenly sitting together in Christ Jesus. It was a time long to be remembered by the dear saints, who feasted so much that Bro. D. Coggswell thought special care should be taken lest dyspepsia should follow. How that may be I cannot tell; but one thing I do know; the fat things of that meeting were well digested. Here my frail body was prostrated with fatigue and disease, but affectionate ones in Jesus staid by, and finally removed me to South Butler, where I could be under the treatment and care of Bro. Brown and family, and God is blessing their efforts in restoring my health; and we hope in a few days to be strengthened sufficiently to reach home. O Lord Jesus, come quickly and take us home.

I have just read with great interest Bro. Sweet's Tree of Life and Colloquy. They are excellent works, and should be possessed by all Bible students. The two pamphlets can be obtained, post paid, for 25 cts. Direct to Eld. C. F. Sweet, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y."

Bro. E. Morrill writes from Littleton, Mass.:—"I am still daily thanking God for life and the blessings accompanying it; and although within the past six months the enemy has tried to get me, and once or twice it almost seemed to me that he would succeed, God has been merciful to me, and in his goodness has raised me up. I will by his help ever praise and glorify his ever blessed name. I have had many letters from dear brethren and sisters, and some of them from the young converts of Springfield and Alton Bay campgrounds, which I have not had time to answer. God bless the dear young converts, and may his Spirit ever lead you, and his grace ever keep you, from the snares and perils of these last days.

I am back again at the same old work, with the tent, driving stakes, tying ropes, singing, and talking to the people about Jesus and his coming; and I need your sympathy, help, and prayers. Make an effort to come to the tent when you see a notice of meeting, even if the distance looks great to you. The Lord will bless you on your journey, and after you get there, if you work for him. In some places your help is so much needed, especially in new places, like this one, where the nearest family in sympathy with the Bible truth as we believe it, is two miles and a half away from the tent, and only two or three families of the faith within six miles. But we hope, by the blessing of the Lord, to see before we leave many of the families here in the village interested in the great truths of the Bible. We have had but two meetings yet. We expect to stay and continue the meeting afternoons and evenings through next week, and over Sunday, June 25th. Come all who can, and you who cannot come, pray earnestly for us and the meeting, that God may bless the efforts to the salvation of perishing men."

Bro. S. Ayres writes:—"Our grove meeting in Belchertown (Drake Corner) yesterday proved to be an interesting occasion. Notwithstanding the unfavorableness of the weather, something like an hundred and fifty gathered from the vicinity composed of all classes, and a sweet, peaceable spirit pervaded the entire company. On account of the rain, we met in a house in the morning, which was filled to overflowing, all seeming eager to catch the words of truth, while we talked to them of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus, not forgetting the subjects waiting for baptism; and while we were presenting that subject, and the Bible mode of it, some rejoiced exceedingly, and others were so shaken upon the mode of sprinkling that they confessed that they must be baptized too. At noon we had the pleasure of leading three down into the watery grave, and burying them in the likeness of Christ's death; after which we repaired to the grove and had one of the most blessed seasons that we had ever enjoyed. Such was the refreshing from the presence of the Lord, they passed a vote to meet again in two weeks in the same grove, so nicely seated for the purpose. Some twenty-five of the lovers of the Lord met at the house to celebrate the Lord's Supper.

The Lord has some dear children in that region, who are determined to stand up for the truth as it is in Jesus. We spent some six weeks in that section last winter bordering upon the two towns of Granby and Belchertown; and although we felt that we were laboring under rather discouraging circumstances, yet we felt certain that the Lord was with us; and now we see the fruits appear, and feel that we did not suffer the scorn of some in vain. May God still bless and increase the number of such as will be saved in the day of his coming."

Bro. L. Boutell writes:—"The tent meeting at Littleton is still progressing. Meetings afternoons and evenings the coming week, and over next Sunday, the 25th.

Come, brethren, to our help. We expect the tent will be pitched at Groton Junction about the first of July. Will the brethren send us aid to help along these meetings in new places?"

Bro. H. S. Mitchell writes:—"The interest at Bowdoin, Me., holds good yet. Bro. H. D. Reed has baptized eleven, and myself three, and others are to go forward soon. I have organized a church, and things look prosperous and good. Those wishing to correspond with the church, will address I. N. Thompson, chairman of the church committee."

— Wait for the seed to grow. Conversion is not growth, but christian character is; there is an instant when the dead seed bursts into life; but the tree does not spring up full-fruited in a night.

Come to the place of prayer!
Parents and children, come and kneel before
Your God, and with united hearts adore
Him whose alone your life and being are.

Obituaries.

Locke. Died in Kensington, Dec. 25th, 1870, Sr. Ann M. Locke, aged thirty-nine years.

She was a faithful child of faith, and bore testimony to the last, by her daily walk and godly conversation, to the manifold grace of God, and was esteemed as one of the Lord's jewels by the church in Seabrook, with which she was connected.

Her funeral was attended by Bro. J. G. Smith, who spoke comforting words to mourning friends, from Job 14: 14. J. C. Smith.

Plaunt. Died in Allenstown, N. H., May 7th, 1871, Lewis Plaunt, aged ninety-six years.

While in the pains and infirmities of old age, he looked with hope and joyful anticipation to that life where there is no infirmity, old age, or pain, and where the inhabitants will no more say I am sick. Words of comfort to the bereaved family were spoken by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 22, 23. Enoch Morrill.

Emery. Died in Kennebunk, May 9th, 1871, Warwick H., youngest child of B. F. and Susan Emery, aged one year, two months, and three days.

May He who watches the sleeping dust of our loved ones, sanctify this bereavement to the good of the bereaved, is the prayer of the writer. W. H. Mitchell.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

London, 15th. Marriage has been arranged between the Princess of Thyra of Denmark and the Duke of Edinburgh.

Paris, 16th. A proclamation has been issued by the International Society, which declares: "We are disarmed, but not conquered, and are still 100,000 strong. Favre and Trochu were the authors of our misfortunes, aided by capital and the priesthood. We accept the responsibility of the conflagrations; we must have no interior deputies, and no division at the polls. The reaction took away our arms, but not our votes. 'Vive la social Republique,' 'Vive la Commune.'"

Rome, June 18. A plot for the assassination of the Pope has been discovered, and was concocted in London, Florence and Paris, by members of the International Society. The assassination was planned to take place yesterday.

The Pope's jubilee was attended with great eclat, and all European sovereigns, including Victoria, sent congratulations to his Holiness.

A further postponement of the transfer of the Capital of Italy from Florence to Rome will probably be announced soon.

Paris, June 19. Indications of a renewal of the insurrection multiply. Workingmen openly insult the soldiers, and attempts at assassination and incendiarism continue.

Encyclical Letter from Pius IX.

New York, June 13. Pius IX., in his last encyclical letter on the Papal guaranties, dated Rome, May 15th, says: "We consider it part of our apostolic duty that we should declare solemnly through you to the whole world that not only what are called safeguards, and which are devised by the sub-Alpine Government, but that all titles, honors, immunities and privileges, whatever shape they take under the general name of safeguards or guaranties, can be of no avail whatever toward securing a prompt and free use of the power divinely transmitted to us, nor toward guarding the liberty necessary for the Church. Such being the condition of affairs, as we have repeatedly declared and professed, that without the crime of breaking our solemn oath at the enthronization we can consent to no conciliation, which in any manner would destroy or diminish the right of good and of the Apostolic See. So now, as of our bounden duty, we declare that we will never agree to non-accept, nor can we so agree to or accept those cunningly wrought out safeguards or guaranties proposed by the sub-Alpine Government, whatever their device, or any others of whatsoever kind, or however ratified, which under the form of securing our sacred power and liberty shall have been offered to us in lieu of and in exchange for that civil principality with which Divine Providence willed that the Holy Apostolic See should be furnished and strengthened, and which is ratified to us by legitimate and irrefragable titles, as well as by possession, for more than eleven centuries. God grant also that the rulers of this earth, whom it much imports that such a pernicious example of usurpation as we endure may not take root and flourish to the destruction of all power and order, may join with one consent of mind and wills, and that hushing quarrels, the disturbances of rebellions being appeased and the deadly counsels of sects abandoned, they may unite in one movement for restoring the Holy See its rights, and with these his full liberty to the visible head of the Church, and desired calm to civil society.

DOMESTIC.

Galveston, Texas, June 13. Another terrible storm from the north, northeast, struck this city yesterday at 10 A. M., and continued with great fury until midnight, destroying telegraphic and railroad communication, and doing immense damage to the city and shipping. St. Patrick's church, just finished, was blown down and is a total ruin. Steamer "Belle of Texas" lost her chimneys. Steam lighter Emily, with 900 bales of cotton on board, was sunk, and also the steam tug Superior. A large number of small craft blown ashore will probably be saved with damage. Five vessels of the fleet anchored outside are missing. The barque Chalmette parted cables at 3 P. M., and went to sea; ships Excelsior and Lemont at 9.30 P. M, and a schooner, name unknown, at the same time. The Caroline Lemont cleared on Wednesday last for Liverpool with 1435 bales of cotton, but has not yet sailed. The oldest citizens say that this was the severest storm of rain and wind ever known here. The velocity of the wind was sixty miles per hour. A steamer has been sent in search of the missing vessels.

A Bad Climate for Spirits.—It is now conceded on all hands that the first Napoleon made a serious mistake in going to Moscow. Mr. Home, the Napoleon of mediums, has committed a like folly in going to St. Petersburg, and with similar disastrous consequences. On arriving he found that he was not to be let off with astonishing the ladies and gentlemen of the court circles. He was invited to perform his marvels before a scientific audience. Now Russian scientists are notoriously sharp-eyed, devoid of all semblance of superstition, and skeptical to the last degree, and Mr. Home, supposing him to be an imposter, might well shrink from the proposed ordeal. He, however, consented to give the desired performance, provided certain conditions were complied with. The Russian professors readily acquiesced in everything, being anxious, they said, to see a "prestidigitateur" of such reputation. The appointed night arrived, but the spirits "went back" on Mr. Home. The performance was not a success. Another evening was named, but its arrival found Mr. Home too unwell to appear in public. The next evening he requested another postponement, but when the time he had fixed upon came round he excused himself on the ground of sudden indisposition. The next day one of the scientists met him at the theater looking hale and hearty. Home told him that he could not give any more seances in St. Petersburg as the climate affected him unfavorably. He experienced, he said, a diminution of his mediumistic powers. Of course there was no use in prolonging his visit under these circumstances, so he very sensibly packed his portmanteau and started the morning after the above interview for London. Curiously enough, those scoffing Russians call Mr. Home an egregious humbug.

A Wonderful Journey.—Three years ago a tour of the Rocky Mountains was undertaken by a private citizen in his own carriage. That journey, the most remarkable ever made by a lady, was accomplished but a few days ago, and the authors, Mr. Z. M. Smith and his wife, returned to their home last week. They made with the own horses 12,000 miles, and over 50,000 by steam, saddle and Indian canoes, visiting every mining camp and village from Montana to Mexico at an expense of over $25,000, traversing nearly every canyon, road, or Indian trail. Their object has been to embody in lectures the results of their rich and varied experience.—Boston Journal.

In Brief.

— The workmen of Paris are almost unanimously Communists, and very bitter because their cause has been defeated, and hate both Thiers and the Bonapartists. Many of them will emigrate to America.——At Rouen, 41,000 workmen thrown out of employment are now supported by public charity; the same blight stretches over the neighboring departments, where the industrial operations of Rouen used to support a multitude of people.——London, is swarming with visitors. There are about 60,000 Germans now there, about 150,000 French, about 80,000 of other continental countries, and about 10,000 Americans. The hotels, lodging-houses and boarding-houses are doing an enormous business.——Mary, Queen of Scots, is reported to have said: "I am more afraid of Old Knox's prayers and the prayers of those christians that walk with him, than of a marching army of ten thousand men."——Two clergymen, late editors of the Ministerial Union—a Christian paper which appeared for four consecutive weeks in Chicago—valedictoried as follows: "Chicago is a good place for a religious paper, providing that three pages serve Satan and the other one is mixed."——Grasshoppers are destroying the crops in Utah and all the pasturage.——A Collinsville, Ct. man, who had for years suffered from rheumatism and been unable to labor, recently lent a hand in extinguishing a burning barn and was thoroughly drenched with water, remaining wet three hours. To his astonishment he now finds himself entirely cured of his disease.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so. For the Committe, J. Couch.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting near Canaan Village, Vt., commencing Wednesday evening, June 21st, at seven o'clock, and holding over the following Lord's day. Brethren and sisters from adjoining towns are earnestly invited to come on to this feast. If you have any hobbies, don't bring them here, but come bringing gospel liberty with you, praying that God will pour us out a blessing. Will Bro. J. A. Libby be able to be with us? For the Brethren, L. F. Cole.

Grove Meeting.

The annual Fourth of July grove meeting, at Kingston, N. H., will be held this year as usual, the Lord willing. The old familiar grove no longer exists, but another will be prepared near Bro. Gale's residence. Elders G. W. and W. Burnham, M. B. Laning, B. D. Haskell, and C. Cunningham, are expected to be present. Let all the lovers of the coming One in the region rally to this meeting, as it may be our last. Franklin Gale.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting (at West Wareham, Mass.) will commence on Monday, July 24th, and continue over the following Sabbath. With the blessing of the Lord, we expect an interesting season on this consecrated ground, as in former years; and hope all who can will make arrangements to attend this annual feast.
Henry V. Davis, for the Committee.

Notice.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the brethren in the town of Holden, Me., where the brethren may think best, to hold a meeting of three days, to commence on the 2nd of July, and continue over the 4th. Will the brethren consult with each other in that community, and each one bear their part, like men of God, and receive the "well done" from their Master? I have a tent that I will pitch for the accommodation of those who may come from a distance. Let each one come with a basket of provision to help the poor. Will our preaching brethren, who love to meet in such a meeting, come and help preach the gospel? We invite all who are the lovers of Jesus to worship with us. Come, brethren, to the feast, filled with love to God and man, and seek the salvation of others. Jesus is soon coming. Will Bro. Walker and Howard meet with us? Israel Damman.

R. I. and East. Ct.

The Rhode Island and Eastern Ct. Conference will hold its next quarterly session with the church at Putnam, Ct., commencing Wednesday, July 5th, at two o'clock P. M. A full attendance is very much desired, and confidently expected. All letters should be directed to the care of H. N. Reed. C. H. Sweet, Clerk.

Family Campmeeting.

This meeting will be held in what is called Casline's neighborhood, at the head of Lewis Valley, commencing July 1st, and hold over Lord's day and the fourth. Bro. Thurber will assist in preaching the word. The big tent will be there. All are invited. Particulars hereafter.
Christian Times, please copy. P. W. Hocor.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting of the "church of God of Wayland and Loon Lake," will be held at Wallace Station, Steuben Co., N. Y., on July 8th and 9th. All are invited to attend.
C. F. Sweet, Pastor.

Notice.

A grove meeting is appointed for Boscawen, N. H., July 4th, near the Gulf school-house. Come, brethren, come to labor for the Lord, and to try and have sinners saved in the kingdom when Jesus comes. If stormy, the meeting will be at the school-house. For the brethren,
Simeon Roby.

Notice.

The Advent Society will hold a meeting on the 4th of July, in Kingston, N. H., near the great pond in Kingston, near where we held it last year. All are invited to come. For the Committee,
R. W. Currier.

Notice.

The Lord willing, a feast and supper will be given to the poor, maimed, lame and blind, by Lewis Bean, Jay, Bean's Corner, Me., Thursday, June 29th, at six o'clock P. M., in connection with a grove and basket meeting, which will be held at the same place, and onward over the 4th of July. We wish our brethren and sisters to make special effort to help the needy to attend this feast and meeting. A general invitation is given, and provision will be made for all. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting, praying the Lord's blessing to strengthen the weak and awaken sinners. Those coming on the cars will stop at Wilton Depot, two miles from the grove. Conveyance will be in readiness by notifying Lewis Bean. The day train is due at five o'clock P. M. Will our brethren bring their tents? Preaching brethren are requested and expected to attend. Come one, come all. Brethren will call on Lewis Bean, A. J. Riggs, Rufus Davis, Arnold Ireland, E. J. Bean, and others. A. A. Abbott, E. M. Haggett, Jesse Gay, Austin Taylor, Mrs. Katie Taylor, and others, will be present.
Per order of the church, H. B. Sevey.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in Bartlett, in Elder J. B. Deering's grove, where it was last year, commencing June 21st, to hold over Sunday, and longer if the brethren think best. We give a cordial invitation to the preaching brethren to come and help us. A good work has commenced here, and sinners are inquiring the way to life. We pray that some more may be gathered in before it shall be too late; for we believe the day is not far off, when he who is to come will come, and will not tarry. Come, all ye who love the Lord. Come from the north, the south, the east, and the west, and help us.
H. Parker, Jr.
J. B. Deering.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting held in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday, June 29th, to continue over the following Sabbath, as Brs. James Thorp and H. E. Austin may arrange. J. W. Taylor.
A. P. Moore.

Tent Meeting.

We expect to pitch the New York State Tent at Arkport, Steuben Co., N. Y. (near Hornellsville), and to open a campaign for the promotion of Bible Christianity, on Sunday, June 25th. The meeting will continue as long as the Lord may direct. We earnestly ask the friends of Jesus in all that section to rally to our help. Let us be willing to make sacrifices for the salvation of perishing sinners.
A. A. Phelps.
J. W. Taylor.

Maine Mission Tent.

This tent will be ready for meetings in a few days. Brethren wishing it pitched in any localities, will please write to me as soon as possible. Let there be a prompt response to this invitation.
For the Tent Committee,
R. R. York, Portland, Me.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in Belchertown, Mass. (Dark Corner school district), Sunday, June 25th. Pilgrims in adjacent towns are invited.
M. L. Curtis.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting at East Lebanon, Me. (Little River Falls), Sundays, Aug. 6th and 13th. Geo. W. Brown, of South Elliott, and others, are expected to preach the word.
J. Bickford.

Minnesota Campmeeting.

This meeting will be held at Kasota, beginning June 26th, and closing Sunday evening, July 2nd. Kasota is a station on the St. Paul and Sioux City R. R., about three miles above St. Peter. The Winona and St. Peter R. R. also (which is just completed) runs within half a mile of the camp-ground, making this point the most convenient for a general gathering from the different parts of the State. There will be service on the ground, Sunday, June 25th.

HALF FARE.—RAILROAD ARRANGEMENTS.

Persons going to the meeting on the Winona and St. Peter R. R., will ask for excursion tickets to the Advent Campmeeting at Kasota, for which they will pay full fare, and return on these free. Those going on the St. Paul and Sioux City R. R. will buy tickets for Advent Campmeeting at Kasota, for which they will pay full fare, but be sure and ask for a return ticket, which will be granted free. Tickets on both roads will be good from Saturday, June 24th, to Wednesday, July 5th, inclusive. Board will be furnished at reasonable rates for those who may desire it, but all that can are requested to come prepared to board themselves, and let all come provided with bedding, and those who have no tents will be furnished with lodgings in the State tent. A grocery and refreshment stand will be kept for the accommodation of the camp; also feed for horses.

Arrangements have been made for extra trains on Sunday, July 2d, from Mankato and St. Peter. We anticipate the largest gathering of Adventists ever held in the State of Minnesota, and shall welcome saint and sinner to this our annual feast, trusting all will pray that it may result in much good. Edwin T. Himes, Chairman of Com.

P. S. For further particulars, address me at Winona, Minn., Box 724.

Notice.

The Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting will be held on the old camp-ground, at New Hartford, Butler, Co., Iowa, commencing the 22nd day of June, 1871, and hold until the 3d of July. Brethren and sisters, and all who can, come to this meeting. We are anticipating a great blessing from the Lord. The prospect is the best this year for a good meeting that we have ever had. There are to be many ministers present. Bro. C. C. Ramsay, of Chicago, will be with us through the meeting again this year. Hay, straw, and tent-frames furnished free of charge.
Alonzo Raymond, Sec. of Campmeeting Board.

In connection with the above meeting, the Iowa Christian Conference will hold its fifteenth annual session. Let ministers and delegates be present. Ministers are required by the constitution to report by letter, if not present. I cannot say positively when the conference will sit; probably on the 27th and 28th of June, or as may be thought best for the interest of the meeting. All are cordially invited to come who can.
Job Gildersleeve, President.
Alonzo Raymond, Clerk.

Levant, Me.

The Maine Easterly Quarterly Conference will be held at Levant Village, Me., commencing Thursday evening, at seven o'clock, June 22nd, and continue over the following Sabbath. All are invited to come and help. Provision will be made for teams and people. Preaching brethren are requested to attend. For the brethren,
F. A. Baker.

Notice.

Our annual grove meeting in East Springwater (on the Morris farm), will be held June 24th and 25th, to commence at two o'clock P. M. All our brethren and sisters in the surrounding country are invited to attend, and to be there promptly on Saturday. May the Lord of the harvest bless the meeting to the good of all.
For the Brn., C. F. Sweet.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, there will be a grove meeting in Barnard, Vt., in Bro. Adams' neighborhood, three miles west of the centre of the town, commencing Sunday, July 2nd, and to hold over the fourth. Free meeting for all to come and worship the living and true God. Z. T. Wood.

Tent-Meetings.

Those wishing tent-meetings in the State of New York, are requested to write me at South Butler, N. Y., as soon as convenient, in order that early arrangements may be made. Those wishing meetings in the south and west part of the State, will please inform me before the State Campmeeting, so that arrangements can be made at that meeting. It is expected that Bro. Miles Grant will be at some of the meetings. B. P. Stevens.

A New Work.

We have a new work now in press, of about one hundred pages, entitled "The Life beyond Death, in the Home of the Holy: When and where to be enjoyed." By Wm. Sheldon. This work will be ready for circulation in a few weeks. It will be specially adapted to do missionary work in new fields, as well as in older parishes; just the right size and of the right tone to lend to your neighbors, or send to a friend. Probably the price will be: in paper, 25 cents single; $2.00 per dozen, by mail, prepaid; in cloth, 50 cts. single; $4.00 per dozen, by mail, prepaid; and will probably be kept at the Crisis office, Boston; Advent Times office, Buchanan, Mich.; as well as by the author at Brodhead, Wis. Perhaps we may not be able to fill orders before the first of August, but hope to earlier; but the first orders will be filled first. With this understanding, orders may be sent at any time. W. S.

Notice.

I supplied a number of brethren with works at campmeetings last year, and those who can possibly send me what is due by mail, in June, I wish they would do so, as I am much in debt for printing, and ought to pay up. If any can aid me in throwing off the unpleasant burden of being in debt, it will be thankfully received. Age and health prevent my obtaining means to live and pay debts as formerly. Direct to J. Blain, Buffalo, N. Y.

Going West.

We are intending to go west, as far as Minnesota, the last of June or first of July, to spend perhaps two months. If the brethren in Montreal, or elsewhere, on the Grand Trunk R. R. from Maine to Chicago, would like to have us spend a Sunday with them and preach, as we go and come, and will notify us in season, we will arrange to call on them, as we may be able, and will give notice in the Crisis when we will come.
I. C. Wellcome.

Notice.

All papers, letters and postal matter of any kind, must be sent to Sandy Hill, N. Y., in order to reach me until further notice. A. W. Sibley.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. Life and Death Theology: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. Immaterialism: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. Death and the Dead, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. The Coming Judgment: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY.

OR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

By Elder James H. Whitmore. Published by the Western Advent Christian Association.

This little volume of three hundred pages is a valuable contribution to the literature of the subject on which it treats, and is worthy of a wide circulation, not only among those who hold to the views advocated therein, but among others who have not given these due thought and investigation.

Price, single copy, postpaid, $1.00. Six copies, by mail, $5.00; by express, $4.20.

SPIRITUALISM CONDEMNED

BY THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE AND ITS OWN WITNESSES.

BY M. D. WELLCOME.

Price 10 cents single copy. Twenty copies for $1.50; $6.00 per one hundred copies.

THE PENITENT.

LUCY M. CHAFFEE.

Take me, Jesus—Jesus, take me,
 Let me have in thee a place;
Me, so weak and so unworthy,
 So undone without thy grace.

Tired of sin, and cloyed with folly,
 Long I much at rest to be;
Something whispering gently draws me,
 Draws my longing heart toward thee.

Say'st thou come? yea, I'm coming,
 Take this broken heart of mine;
Not because thou need'st my friendship,
 But thou knowest I need thine.

Here's my all—to thee I give it,
 Not because it's something worth;
Nor because my gift can bless thee,—
 Thou hast all in heaven and earth;

But 'tis I who need the blessing
 Thou canst richly give to me;
Pray I now, O Jesus, let me
 Have a part and lot with thee.

Let me labor in thy vineyard,
 Not because thou needest me;
Nor because I'm strong and faithful,
 But I do so much need thee.

THE MIND NOT IMMORTAL.

A. M. HITCHCOCK.

In our last, we gave as a reason why we consider the theory that the mind is immortal to be false, is the fact that mind is dependent upon matter; reasoning that as immortality renders its possessor independent, the mind cannot be immortal.

II. The mind of man is not immortal, because whatever proves the immortality of the mind in man, also proves it in the beast. We have before seen that the mind without the brain cannot exist, being dependent upon it; we therefore conclude that, wherever we see brain development, we may see mind development, in a greater or less degree. No one will deny that beasts have brains; many however do deny that they have a mind. Now, if the brain is that portion of man's physical organism whose office is to evolve thought, shall we call it a worthless organ in the beast? But some, hoping to avoid this dilemma, may affirm that the brain in the beast is for the purpose of giving existence to certain inherent faculties known as instinct. We cannot see that they have extricated themselves, or in the least bettered their position, by this assumption. We would inquire, however, what is meant by instinct? Does it mean the memory? It certainly must include this, for the beast has frequently a very prominent development of this faculty. But by referring to man, we find that he, too, possesses the same faculty. Hence we come to these conclusions:

First, man has a brain, a certain portion of which produces memory; second, the beast has a brain, a certain portion of which produces memory. Now, shall we call the one, in man, mind; and the other, in the beast, instinct? the one immortal, the other mortal? If we do, we go entirely contrary to the best impulses of reason. But memory is not the only faculty the beast possesses, which also forms a part of the mind in man. There is Philoprogenitiveness, Concentrativeness, Adhesiveness, Combativeness, Destructiveness, Secretiveness, Constructiveness, Imitation, and several others. Now we are forced to admit that if these faculties, which exist common to both man and beast, be called mind in one case, they must in the other; or if instinct in one, they must be called the same in the other.

But, as a last resort, it may be objected that those faculties which exist common to man and beast, form no part of the mind in either, but are to be called instinct in both; and affirmed, that the beast is incapable of self-instruction, and has no power over the reasoning faculties. That those faculties which exist common to man and beast form no part in the mind, I stoutly deny; for they not only form a part of the mind, but a very essential part—a part which is absolutely necessary to a complete structure, and to the perfect equilibrium of the whole. Take, for example, the faculty of memory in its generic sense. This faculty is the very foundation of the mental structure. It is the store-house of the mind, from which all the other faculties borrow. Without it reason would be dormant, having nothing upon which to act. But is the foundation no part of the structure? Those who produce this objection must, I think, be wanting in some one or more of these depreciated faculties, and are, consequently, somewhat non compos mentis.

It is further objected that the beast is incapable of self-instruction. We are quite sure that those only who now are biased by a pet theory can fail to see that the beast is both capable of taking cognizance of existing facts, and of profiting by them. Who that has seen the sagacity of that noble animal, the dog, will fail to notice his power of observation. How quickly will he recognize a harsh word and sharp look, or a kind word and pleasant countenance. How quick he is to notice the wants of his Master, and the different places in which he can do him service. How readily he learns the different animals of his master by their looks and features, and discriminates between them and other strange ones. All this he learns, frequently, without any instruction. It is also very noticeable that the dog, in common with many other animals, often shows an adaptation of means to ends. When he has a particular object in view, and meets with what seems to be an insuperable obstacle, he often shows considerable aptness in hitting upon some happy expedient, by which he is able to accomplish his designs. This shows beyond a doubt that he possesses in some degree the power of reason.

But suppose we admit, for argument's sake, that the beast is destitute of reason, and that the reasoning faculties exclusively form the mind; then what will be said of those unfortunate members of the human family who lack the power of reason, who are commonly known as idiots? We have seen those who actually did not exhibit as much good sense as many of the inferior animals. Have such an "immortal soul," or mind? or are they exceptions to the general rule? What, too, will be said of those who have lost their reason? Will it be said that they have lost their "immortal soul"? Poor unfortunates, indeed! It were better had not the old body survived the almost fatal stroke.

We are, then, to believe that the beast has a mind, inasmuch as this belief bears the indelible signature of truth. But who believes it to be immortal? Yet we are forced to this conclusion, if it can be proved that the mind of man is immortal; for to prove the former belief is to prove the latter; but as the former is without evidence, we reasonably conclude the latter to be a mistake.

— There is no man suddenly excellently good or extremely evil; but grows either as he holds himself up in virtue, or lets himself slide to vice.

THEOLOGICAL MACHINERY.

H. MUNGER.

What ails the theological machinery of these times? It seems to clash. It appears evident to me that the cause can be ascertained by adhering to the Scriptures. In the beginning, when man was innocent, and ignorant of evil, the devil, or his agent, the serpent, told Eve of other gods that knew good and evil, and she might be like them if she would disobey the one God. The gods here referred to by the serpent, I think, were the fallen angels, or demons, that kept not their first, or good estate. By disobedience they fell into sin, and then knew evil. Facts connected with this class of fallen beings will account for many strange things acted out by the family of man.

The gods, or demons, have operated against the one true and loving God, and his people, since the family quarrel between Cain and Abel. As Cain had the spirit of the wicked one, it shows he knew evil. He was under the influence of the gods, or demons, and Abel was not.

I propose saying a few things that will wake up some one competent to write more fully and correctly. We see the actions of the Cain family taught by demons, who claimed to be wise, knowing good from evil, but always doing evil. This class had a mystery connected with their operations; and they claimed that they came from another source, different and better than came from the one only true God. This mystery man revealed to all who desired it, without restrictions or law of penalty. This was so well adapted to fallen, mortal man, that a great effort was made to introduce it before the world, and it was sought by kings. The first we will mention, were the so called wise men of Egypt, found in Gen. 41, who pretended to foretell future events, and interpret dreams. See their failure and imposition exposed by the king of Egypt, who then sent for one of God's men, Joseph, the son of Jacob, who gave the king what the wise men could not give with the help of the fallen angels, or demons, called the gods. But this Joseph had resisted the influence of the wise man and a wicked woman, which usually go together.

Two hundred and twenty-seven years after, another king reigned in Egypt, who knew not Joseph, or his God; he also had got a class of these wise men from the old serpent's school for his cabinet, or lords. This class had the power to work miracles by their enchantments, or help of demons. See Ex. 7: 11. Clarke gives them the name of teachers of Moses in his youth, while studying in Pharaoh's court, preparatory to taking the kingdom when Pharaoh left it; but God took him in hand, and spoiled him for the use of demons. This is what Paul cites us to in 2 Tim. 3: 8, as coming in the last days, withstanding the truth, which will be noticed hereafter.

We will follow this class of deceivers by their works, instead of their names and uniforms. Their work was so subtle, that all nations sought them as divine beings. They opposed God's people. The old serpent's scholars spread their knowledge among all nations, and in many cases overcame God's people by leading them into worshiping idols, or other gods, that the nations worshiped; when the machinery of God would not work until there was a clearing out and confessing, and turning unto the Lord their God, who brought them out of Egypt, from that wicked, overbearing power. As good a man as Aaron got overcome by this spirit, and submitted to the wishes of the church, or people, and made an idol of gold to worship, after the form of a calf. Then the machinery stopped working by God's power, and the devil ran it until Moses got down from the mount, when the work went back into God's order. Aaron learned a good lesson. We see these demons following God's people, introducing their gods, and taking advantage of weak minds.

We will notice another of the old serpent's scholars, referred to in Lev. 20: 8. Here the Lord's people are warned against those that have familiar spirits. Under the law none of this class of witches—woman necromancers, or oracles—were suffered to live. See Lev. 20: 27. Twenty-eight years later, we find them still at their devilish work, following up God's people. Balak, a servant of the gods, so influenced Balaam that he hired him to curse Israel. By reading the account in Numbers, 22nd chapter, you will learn that Balaam lost his sight, got his foot crushed against the wall, and was reproved by the jackass, and then died for his sin. Thirty-three years later, God warns his people against the old serpent's scholars, nine in number. Deut. 18: 9–14. These were all servants of the gods, instead of the true God. See Bible Dictionary.

We again find this class in Deut. 22: 16–18. Here Israel got to worshiping the gods of the nations, and sacrificing unto devils, or demons, and the machinery stopped working until repaired, as in other cases. Twenty-four years after, Joshua (24: 14–16) marks this same set of deceivers that deceived their fathers by their gods, on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; so we are warranted by inspiration in calling them the same class, belonging to the old serpent's school. Bishop Newton looked at this text in the same light. Three hundred and sixty-seven years later, we see Saul going to the old witch in Endor to divine unto him, and talk with dead Samuel. We have a decision from Scripture what divining is with this class, educated in this old serpent's school. The witch told three things that deceived king Saul, and he lost his kingdom, as other kings have for the same cause; and a second punishment was due to him, for he was once a prophet, and God had previously said if any of his people consulted a witch, or diviner, or either of the old serpent's scholars, they should die for that sin, which was visited upon Saul. See 1 Chron. 10: 13–14. The machinery would not run with that kind of power to do God's work.

The devil has tried many times to go in company, and work wonders by getting some machine that God had turned by his power, and getting the same engineer to try his magic power; but the machinery would always rattle out of gear, and stop, and the engineer would run away or hide.

A majority of the theological books are spiced with this old serpent's wisdom, and the writers think Saul saw Samuel. Such a position gives the power to demons to raise the dead, as they claim; but the machinery of a Bible resurrection will not run with this power. Still every effort is made to work the dead in with the living. Three hundred and forty-seven years later (Isa. 8: 19–20) this class were still trying to get the living to go to the dead for wisdom. God says it is because there is no light in them. To the law and testimony for light. In Isa. 41: 21–24, God gives this same class of knowing gods a challenge to produce their strong reasons, and demonstrate their power to tell things to come.

One hundred and eighteen years later, Ezekiel (20: 8–11) marks this class as possessing the same power to turn the people from serving God as in the days of their fathers, when in Egypt. Read this account, and you will see the track of the old cloven foot. Other places can be found, other passages; but not wishing to be too lengthy, I omit many references, it being the main object to track this devilish wisdom from the gods, or demons, down through the world to our day.

We will call attention to the first king of Babylon. Like the king of Egypt, he was really following this same class, doing the same work, only under a different name. See Dan. 2: 27. Here the machinery had stopped, and God's engineer, Daniel, had to start with another power. Twenty years later, his son Belshazzar relied upon the same class of pretended wise demons, and all stopped until the old engineer started it again. See Dan. 5: 7–12. He lost his kingdom and life. There is death in the pot where it goes.

Thirty-one years later, Daniel's last battle was with this same class that got fat positions with the king of Media and Persia, Darius, who got deceived by them. Dan. 6: 13–15. Still later, the oracle of this same class got Xerxes to go to war with the Grecians, and deceived him, and he lost his army, money and reputation, and was so poor when he died, that he was buried at the public expense. See Rollin. This was the rich king of Persia, spoken of by the angel Gabriel, in Dan. 11: 2. No one ever prospered under the dictation of this class of beings. Still later, we find Darius and Alexander inquiring through their oracles what the spirits of the dead said about going to war. See Rollin's account. They both got deceived, and Darius was killed in battle exactly contrary to what the oracles said. This is the very power that all worldly-wise men have depended upon, and by which all have been deceived.

(To be concluded.)

LOVE IN THE FAMILY;

OR,

Winning the Hearts of Little Folks.

D. F. NEWTON, Author of "Apples of Gold."

"Love is the little golden clasp
 That bindeth up the trust;
Oh, break it not; lest all the leaves
 Shall scatter and be lost."

The heart of a child is easily won. Love begets love. Love children and they will love you. Let children feel that you care for them, that you are interested in all that interests them, that you sympathize with them in all their little sorrows, rejoice with them in all their little joys, that you are their friend, and you have the key to their hearts. Teachers, do you wish to be loved by your pupils? Love them. Children read hearts intuitively.

Smile upon a child—have you not won its heart? Does it not smile in return? Do not its eyes follow you? Does not its face sadden as you disappear, and smile when you come again? Does that smile cost you anything?

It is sweet to have children love us. It is sweet to know that they delight to nestle upon our bosoms, and that their little arms long to clasp about our necks. It is sweet to feel the soft clinging tendrils of their honest hearts intertwining, cosily and trustingly, in among the stouter and chillier tendrils of our own. The cold selfishness of the world is in other hearts than the children's. The deception that lames our faith and saps our trust is in other bosoms than theirs. God bless the children, the rosy, laughing children, the dear, true-hearted children, the beautiful children! The world is ten times brighter for their being here.

"'Tis said that angels walk the earth—
 I'm sure it must be so,
When round our path, scarce seen by us,
 Such bright things come and go."

Happy children—kind, loving, affectionate, obedient,—make happy parents. What blessing to parents, this side heaven, greater than a family of children, meek, mild, gentle—obedient sons and daughters, "polished after the similitude of a palace?"

Not a jar of discord, not a murmuring thought of impatience in the family circle—all is sweet, heavenly, harmonious. It is love in the morning, love at noon, love as the evening shades draw near. It is love lying down, love rising up, love going out, love coming in.

"Love through all their actions run,
 And all their words are mild;
They're like the blessed virgin's Son,
 That sweet and lovely child."

We have not half confidence enough in the power of love to disarm the violent and to reclaim the vicious. The fault begins in our families. Parents lose the confidence of their children, never to be regained by injustice, selfishness, and the absence of love. Love is the grand secret in domestic education. Give your children a genial, loving atmosphere in which to grow. Love precludes not decision or correction, but is prompt in the execution of both.

Deal with your children as God deals with his. Do not meet their anger with your anger, their petulance with your own, or their obstinacy with wilfulness still greater. Overcome evil with good. When God called himself a father, he chose a name which he designed to be significant of overflowing love, tender mercy, and long-continued forbearance.

Parents, "provoke not your children to wrath."

"A word, a look, has crushed to earth
 Full many a budding flower,
Which, had a smile but own'd its birth,
 Would bless life's darkest hour."

A heavenly countenance is the highest commendation, the most conclusive argument for the character of him who earns it. One glimpse of an angel's face would probably do more to impress us with the beauty of holiness than many an eloquent sermon an hour long. Stephen's radiant face was a powerful auxiliary to his discourse. The shining face of Moses when he came down from the mount was proof to the Israelites that he had seen the Lord.

If this is true with an audience of adults, how much more with children! Sensitive as they are, and often affected they cannot tell why or how, and gazing steadfastly as they do, with no sense of impropriety, into the face of their parent or teacher, it is almost unavoidable that his image should be reproduced in them.

"Then deem it not an idle thing
 A pleasant word to speak;
The face you wear, the thoughts you bring,
 A heart may heal or break."

What will not love do? Who can describe its powerful, subduing influences? Who ever accomplished anything by reproaches, or violence, or harsh measures? You gratify a private and dark passion in your own heart, and arouse a darker one in another bosom. Oh, try the mighty efficacy of love. One smile of genuine sympathy is worth all your purse to the beggar. "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." 1 John 3: 7.

Parents, commend your little ones whenever they do right, perform that which is good and praiseworthy. Whenever they are quick to obey cheerfully, express your grateful approbation; tell them how pleased you are at any improvement in well-doing. Your child has been very pleasing and obedient through the day. Just before putting him to sleep for the night, you take his hand and say: "My son, you have been very good to-day. It makes me very happy to see you so kind and obedient. God loves children who are dutiful to their parents, and he promises to make them happy."

This approbation from his mother is to him a great reward. And when, with a more than ordinarily affectionate tone, you say, "Good-night, my dear son," he leaves the room with his little eyes full of feeling. And when he closes his eyes for sleep he is happy, and resolves that he will always try to do his duty.

"Good-night is but a little word,
 Yet beautiful though brief,
And falls upon the gentle heart
 Like dew upon the leaf."

THE SAVIOR.

O. R. FASSETT.

A man "sick of the palsy, which was borne of four," was brought to Christ, and as the press of people was so great in and around the dwelling where Jesus was that he could not reach him, he was let down through the removed roof, in his bed, into his presence. "When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." But there were certain of the Scribes sitting there with stoical indifference, "and reasoning in their hearts, Why doth this man speak blasphemies? Who can forgive sins but God only?" Mark 2. Not to justify this opposition and hostility to Christ's work, still it holds true, "Who can forgive sins but God only?" None can grant pardon to the trespasser of law but the lawfully constituted authorities. A person violating the law of the government of the United States can obtain pardon only from the law-makers of the government—Congress assembled, or the President, who is the Chief Executive of the government. A person violating State law can gain pardon only from the Legislature of the State, or the Governor, who is the chief executive. And an individual who violates city law can obtain pardon only from the municipal authorities. So those who trespass and sin against God's moral government can receive "forgiveness of sins" but from "God only," or his Son, who is "Immanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us" (Matt 1: 28); "Our God" (Isa. 25: 9); "God our Savior" (1 Tim: 2: 3); and who is also the appointed Lawgiver (James 4: 12), Judge, and Executor of the judgment (John 5: 22, 27; Acts 17: 31); and King of the world. Matt. 25. He, being all this, has the prerogative to "forgive sins," and none can dispute or gainsay his rightful authority.

To demonstrate his authority and power beyond all cavil and questioning on the occasion alluded to above, and that they might "know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins," he restored the sick man of his palsy immediately by his word, and to the astonishment and fear of the multitude. Mark 2, and Luke 5: 26.

Sickness, infirmity, sorrow and suffering, mortality and death, are the result of sin in our world; and he who could by authoritative word of command, in his own name, and by his own power, remove these, the curse of the law, can remove the cause as well, and pardon grant to rebels and sinners of the divine law. And Jesus thus demonstrates this as his prerogative beyond all question. Being, since his resurrection from the dead, "made both Lord and Christ," and "exalted at the right hand of God," his Father, "a Prince and Savior," he can and does give "repentance and forgiveness of sins" to all who "call upon him."

CONDITIONS.

There are conditions upon which pardon and forgiveness are granted. These should not be overlooked, nor ignored. The main condition is faith, and that faith which takes hold and draws out the affections of the heart toward him. "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Acts 10: 43. He affirms, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16. Says Paul: "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Rom. 10: 9.

The faith of this poor sick man healed of his malady (Mark 2) is necessary. (1) He believed that Jesus could heal him; and he had such faith as to inspire others with confidence to bear him to the Savior. (2) He had urgent faith. He could not wait even the breaking up of the meeting and the dispersion of the congregation, which would be after a little; but he must urge immediate action, at great labor and trouble, to be let down through the roof into Christ's presence. When Jesus saw this expression of faith on the part of him, and those who bare him, he said to the man, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee"; and he had the condemnation of sin removed, and joy brought to his heart of pardon first, then followed in sequence the removal of his infirmity. (3) He was not ashamed of his Lord, or to have him do this work publicly.

First, the sinner must believe that the Savior can and will cure him of all the effects of the curse; all his sicknesses, infirmities, and redeem him from mortality and death, and raise him up at the last day, "every whit whole," and give him everlasting life; and believing this, he of course will apprehend him as a Savior to grant him forgiveness of all his sins first. The sequence is sure to follow in its time, even "the redemption of the body."

Second, the sinner must be in earnest, and immediately urgent; nothing should hinder, or be an excuse to obstruct, or procrastinate the beginning of this work at once, and without the least delay. Sinner, secure an audience with Jesus, and obtain pardon, that the promised blessings of divine grace may follow in their eternal train.

And third, be not ashamed to let friends and the world know that you want forgiveness of God and his Christ, and life everlasting in his heavenly kingdom, "where the inhabitant shall not say I am sick." Thousands are trying to gain health from sickness and disease without Christ Jesus. Why do they not come to Jesus for pardon and forgiveness, which will insure it forever?

A PREACHER'S CONFESSION.

J. WESTON.

More than fifty years ago, I learned to love tobacco, because my father did. For years I have loved it better than any food. In years past I have many times believed that, though tobacco did me some good, yet it was a great injury to my whole system, and that I was a slave to it. I was satisfied I did not use it to glorify God. I have many times, in twenty-five years past, tried to quit my tobacco, but did not succeed. So strong was my love and desire for it, that it seemed as though I could not live without it. The last day of Dec., 1870, I spent the day in beseeching God, with strong crying and tears, to help me. I told him that I believed that he required me to leave my tobacco, but I had used it so long, and loved it so well, that I never could quit without his assistance. I pleaded as I rarely ever did before. The good Lord heard and answered my prayer. I have used no tobacco since, and I have had very little desire for it. I praise and thank his blessed name. I seem to have a new life.

For more than fifty years, my whole body was so filled with tobacco, that I was not myself, as I am now. For years I could not rest nights. If I retired early, I could not get any sleep before the clock struck eleven, and rarely before twelve; sometimes not until three A. M. Now, I can retire at eight or nine oclock, and immediately fall asleep, and awake in seven or eight hours greatly refreshed, glorifying God for his love to me.

To two classes who may read this, I wish to say a few words. 1. To those who use tobacco. Go to Jesus with your whole heart for strength, and he will hear you, and give you strength to quit. You cannot do it in your own strength. 2. I beg of those who use unkind words to those who use tobacco, to do so no more, but love and pray for them. You do not know the power and strength of the love of tobacco upon the whole man. I pray God that all our bodies may be fit temples for the Holy Spirit.

IMPORTANT TO HOUSE CLEANERS.—As the season of house cleaning is at hand, the following directions for cleaning paint may be found serviceable: "Provide a plate with some of the best whiting to be had, and have ready some clean warm water and a piece of flannel, which dip into the water and squeeze nearly dry; then take as much whiting as will adhere to it, apply it to the painted surface, when a little rubbing will instantly remove any dirt or grease. After which wash well with clean water, rubbing it dry with soft flannels. Paint thus cleaned looks as well as when first laid on, without any injury to the most delicate colors. It is far better than using soap, and does not require more than half the time and labor."

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

LAME JIMMY.—A few days ago I was passing through a pretty, shady street, where some boys were playing at base ball. Among their number was a little lame fellow, seemingly about twelve years old—a pale, sickly-looking child, supported on two crutches, and who evidently found much difficulty in walking, even with such assistance.

The lame boy wished to join the game; for he did not seem to see how much his infirmity would be in his own way, and how much it would hinder the progress of such an active sport as base ball.

His companions good naturedly enough, tried to persuade him to stand at one side and let another take his place, and I was glad to notice that none of them hinted that he would be in the way, but that they all objected for fear he would hurt himself.

"Why, Jimmy," said one at last, "you can't run, you know."

"Oh! hush," said another—the tallest boy in the party—"never mind, I'll run for him and you can count it for him." And he took his place by Jimmy's side prepared to act. "If you were like him," he said aside to the other boys, "you wouldn't want to be told of it all the time."

As I passed on, I thought to myself that there was a true little gentleman.—Child's Paper.

ONLY ONE.—Little Emily was knitting a tidy for her grandmother. The stitch was new to her, and it required strict attention not only at the beginning but all the way through. Emily was doing it very nicely; but she stopped to look at her little brother Eddie playing with his new ball, and she knit one stitch wrong. But it was only one stitch, so Emily thought it would not do any harm, and she would not rip it out; so she kept on knitting. But still she could not make it come out right. She had to take more wrong stitches; but it would not do. That one wrong stitch was at the root of it all. It was almost done; but it must be all ripped out. If Emily had only stopped when she first saw the evil, she would have had but a very little to rip out; and all would have been well. It is just so in life, dear children. "One false step demands another." If you tell one lie, you may be sure it will not stop at that. You must tell another to hide that one. Do not think, "Well, it is only one; it won't harm to tell one." Rip it out at first; or, what is better, "never begin." —Temperance Banner.

THE FIRST STAIN.—Did any of our young readers ever think how little it takes to stain their characters? A single drop of ink seems a very small thing, yet dropped into a tumbler of clear pure water, it blackens the whole. And so the first oath, the first lie, the first glass, may seem very trivial, yet depend upon it, my young friends, they leave a dark stain upon your character. Look out for the first stain. Remember that small vices lead to great crimes, and that every little vice is a stain upon your character: and remember, too, that if you continue to indulge these vices, the stain grows darker until your whole soul is blackened. It is a very easy matter to brush aside the single drop of water, but when drops enough have been united to form a torrent, it sweeps on with irresistible force. So with the little vices: it is a comparatively easy thing to rid ourselves of them at the beginning, but if we allow ourselves to indulge them, they will soon have a mighty power over us.

Young friends, look out for the first stain.

MORNING AND EVENING.

Pray at the morning hour:
 Grace like the light and dew,
Is richest on the spirit shed
 When thoughts are fresh and new.
The rising light lights up the heavens
 Before it shines below;
So first on God, and not on earth,
 Should we our thoughts bestow.

Pray at the evening hour:
 Grace like the golden light
That opens when the sun is set,
 Will smile upon the night.
The light still lingers on the sky
 When all is dark below;
So last on God, and not on earth,
 Should we our thoughts bestow.

TOUCHING.—A little newsboy attempting to jump from a city car, the other day, fell under the car, and was fearfully mangled. As soon as he could speak, he called piteously for his mother, and a messenger was sent at once to bring her to him. When she arrived, she hung over the dying boy in an agony of grief.

"Mother" he whispered, with a painful effort, "I sold four newspapers—and—the money is in my pocket."

With the hand of death upon his brow, the last thought of the suffering child was for the poor, hard-working mother, whose burdens he was striving to lighten when he lost his life.

ONE morning little Dora was busy at the ironing-table smoothing the towels and stockings.

"Isn't it hard work for the little arms?" I asked.

A look of sunshine came into her face as she glanced toward her mother, who was rocking the baby.

"It isn't hard work when I do it for mamma," she said softly.

How true it is that love makes labor sweet!

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

HASTE AND HEALTH.—It is not at all wholesome to be in a hurry. Locomotives have been reported to have moved a mile in a minute for short distances. But locomotives have often come to grief by such great rapidity. Multitudes in their haste to get rich are ruined every year. The men who do things maturely, slowly, deliberately, are the men who oftenest succeed in life. People who are habitually in a hurry generally have to do things twice over. The tortoise beat the hare at last. Slow men seldom knock their brains out against a post. Foot-races are injurious to health, as are all forms of competitive exercises; steady labor in the field is the best gymnasium in the world. Either labor or exercise carried to exhaustion, or prostration, or even to great tiredness, expressed by "fagged out," always does more harm than the previous exercise has done good. All running up stairs, running to catch up with a vehicle or ferry-boat, are extremely injurious to every age, and sex, and condition of life. It ought to be the most pressing necessity which should induce a person over fifty to run twenty yards. Those live longest who are deliberate, whose actions are measured, who never embark in any enterprise without "sleeping over it," and who perform all the every-day acts of life with calmness. Quakers are a proverbially calm, quiet people, and Quakers are a thrifty folk, the world over.—Dr. Hall.

WAISTS.—The waists with bands over the shoulders and buttons for the attachment of the skirts which some ladies wear, are a very useful means of support, and when properly made and fitted to the form, they do much toward taking the weight of the skirts off the waist, and their use is to be strongly recommended; a single waist can be made so as to support all the skirts but that of the dress, and this should be so loose as to be supported by its own waist. Of course, if the under-waist is made so tight at the bottom as to closely compress the abdomen, it will be quite useless for the purpose designed. Woman's taste and ingenuity can devise plans for making them so neatly that they will add to, rather than detract from, the appearance of the form. These waists were much more generally worn formerly than now, and it is a pity that they were ever discarded, as their continued use would have prevented much injury to the health of women.—Dr. Robert White.

VALUE OF EGGS.—During the war many experiments were made by those interested in the subject, to see in how small compass the most nutriment could be got, and after all the experiments of physicians, physiologists, patent rights men, savans and investigators on scientific subjects, they all had to knock under (to use a phrase more expressive than vulgar) to an old hen, or a young one either—for it was found that an egg contained the greatest amount of nutriment or life-preserving food in the compass it occupies, of any other known substance. True, there are essences of meats, etc., that by combination with other articles may be as powerful, but alone the egg is the most nutritious. There is more life-sustaining element in a single soft boiled egg than in twenty times its bulk in bread or food of that kind.—Poultry Standard.

BONE FELON.—Of all painful things, can there be any so excruciatingly painful as a bone felon? We know of none that flesh is heir to, and as this malady is quite frequent and the subject of much earnest consideration, we give the latest recipe for its cure, which is given by that high authority, the London Lancet: "As soon as the disease is felt, put directly over the spot a fly blister, about the size of your thumb nail, and let it remain for six hours, at the expiration of which time, directly under the surface of the blister, may be seen the felon, which can instantly be taken out with the point of a needle or a lancet."

MANY think that a smoke after a meal promotes digestion, but Dr. Morris suggests that, if people whose digestion is not good, will eat slowly and masticate their food well, and not rush off to work at once after a meal, they will not need this aid; indeed, he thinks the aid to digestion attributed to the smoke comes after all from the rest and quiet, and not from the tobacco in any wise.—Herald of Health.

☞ IT is now a well-established fact that intemperance of parents is very liable not only to produce physical degeneracy in their children, but to impart to them a fondness for spiritous liquors. There has just been exhibited, before the London Pathological Society, a case of arrest of development and growth in a child five years of age, who had only the intellectual condition of one of nine months.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

HEART HYMN.

Bear the burden of the present,
Let the morrow bear its own;
If the morning sky be pleasant,
Why the coming night bemoan?

If the darkened heavens lower,
Wrap thy cloak around thy form;
Though the tempest rise in power,
God is mightier than the storm.

Steadfast hope and faith unshaken
Animate the trusting breast;
Step by step the journey's taken,
Nearer to the land of rest.

All unseen, the Master walketh
By the toiling servant's side;
Comfortable words he talketh,
While his hands uphold and guide.

Grief, nor pain, nor any sorrow
Rends thy heart, to him unknown;
He to-day, and he to-morrow,
Grace sufficient gives his own.

Holy strivings nerve and strengthen,
Long endurance wins the crown;
When the evening shadows lengthen,
Thou shalt lay thee gently down.

THE MIND NOT IMMORTAL.

A. N. HITCHCOCK.

(Concluded.)

Heretofore, we have tried to examine this subject in the light of reason; we shall now endeavor to view it in the light of Scripture.

III. The mind of man is not immortal, because a theory to the contrary is both unscriptural and *anti*scriptural. Human reason and philosophy must be bounded by inspiration. Any system of philosophy that goes beyond this is faulty. Yet true reason always accords with divine revelation. But as the mind unchecked is wont to roam to uncertain depths, it is necessary that it should be restrained by the inspired word. So it is not enough to consult reason: we must consult the sacred oracles. "If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished [perfected—margin] unto all good works." 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17. From the above quoted scripture, we learn the all-sufficiency of the Bible. It is represented as being profitable for several things, and the first in the list is "doctrine"; and immediately following, it states in unequivocal terms its sufficiency to render the man of God "perfect." Now if the divine word, strictly adhered to, will render one "perfect" in doctrine, certainly there is no necessity of speculating outside of it, inasmuch as perfection is all that can be desired. So, then, any doctrine not plainly stated in the word of God, is at best merely speculative, and even liable to be false; and even if true, cannot in the least be essential, else the man of God could not be "perfect" without it.

But the doctrine of the mind's immortality, if a truth, being so intimately connected with the destiny of the race, cannot fail to be of much note in the sacred Scriptures. If, however, it be untrue, we shall expect no divine testimony to sustain it. This doctrine certainly bears the latter characteristic. We know that some think differently, but we also know that they have to "read something in," or "read something out," in order for the Bible to read as they would have it. If it says spirit, it means "deathless spirit"; if it says soul, it means "never-dying soul"; if it says mind, it means "immortal mind," etc. Questions: Could not "holy men of God," who "spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," find language adequate to express the ideas intended to be conveyed? If those inspired men of God wished to express the idea that the spirit, or soul, or mind, is immortal, would they not at least once give expression to it? If inspiration has not once connected these terms with such qualifications as are commonly used, will it help the matter any for popular theology to do so? So we repeat in substance what we have before intimated, that there is no passage in the book of God which states, or from which we may justly infer, the mind's immortality.

But, if the doctrine of the mind's immortality were merely unscriptural, it might bear the honor—if it be an honor—of being at least a speculative doctrine; but as it is also antiscriptural, we have no right even to speculate in that direction. But our saying this doctrine is antiscriptural will, in no wise, satisfy the candid mind. So to prove our statement, we cite the reader to the following texts: In Eccl. 9: 10, we read, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." Device, knowledge and wisdom, it is said, are the property of the mind; and without these the mind cannot exist. But the above quoted text says that these have no existence in the grave. Nothing, therefore, entering the portals of sheol or hades possesses mind. "But," says one, "that does not exclude the idea of the independent existence of the mind in heaven." Certainly not, if that is to be the abode of departed human minds. But where are we told that this is the fact? Not in the Bible, surely, unless we "read it in," as is sometimes done.

Let us see, however, what the Bible does say upon this point. We are commonly told that the mind is the man proper. Then, of course, it will be addressed as a man, and the personal pronouns will, with strict propriety, be applied to it. Let us read: "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither THOU goest." All that constitutes man, then, goes into the grave, and while there, is unconscious.

But this is not the only text the Bible contains which refutes this dogma. We quote again from the same chapter: "For the living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything; . . . also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished." vs. 5, 6. All who lay claim to the popular theory under consideration, agree among themselves that the mind alone is the knowing part of man, and cannot die. But this text says, whatever that knows, knows it shall die. If it is the mind, it cannot be immortal. To avoid this dilemma, they will just "read in" a little and say it means—"The living know that their bodies shall die." But the divine record stands the same: "The living know that THEY shall die." And, to cut the matter short, the inspired writer immediately says, "Their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished." Not that these faculties of the mind have accompanied it to some remote realm, but that they "are now perished." If the mind exists at all after the dissolution of the body, it exists without these faculties; and who wants a heaven destitute of "love"!

Another passage of holy writ to which we invite the reader's attention, will be found in Matt. 10: 28, and reads as follows: "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul." "There," says one, "you have taken the sword by the wrong end. We are here told that those who can kill the body are unable to kill the soul; therefore, it is immortal." But stop! Let inspiration tell the whole story. "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." Immortality is inherent deathlessness; and the possessor of this quality exists independently, and cannot be destroyed by any power, human or divine. But this scripture admonishes to fear one who is able to destroy even the soul. Therefore, it is not immortal. Really, the sword does not cut so badly, after all. The trouble is, people looking through the popular theological spectacles—which, by the way, invert everything—in trying to grasp the hilt, really grasp the blade, and, of course, cut their own fingers.

Still another inspired statement, to which we cite the reader, is recorded in Job 14: 21. Job, in speaking of the brevity of man's life, and of the sleep of death, which marks its earthly termination, says: "His sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not." It will do no good to say that the word "he" in this passage means the body; because it is said the body knows nothing even when it is alive, saying nothing of its being dead. Then this word must refer to whatever that knows, which, we are told, is the mind. But Job says, "His sons come to honor and he knoweth it not." "But," says one, "that does not affect the idea of his being conscious of the scenes of heaven, though he may be unconscious of his sons' coming to honor. Very well, but it must be admitted that he is as incapable of knowing one event of earth as another, and if there is one earthly event of which he is unconscious,—and Job plainly declares there is,—he is alike unconscious of every earthly event. So, all this addressing mourners with the comforting assurance that the soul of the deceased, now happy in heaven, is looking down upon the scene, pleased with their last tokens of respect, is no comfort after all, for the deceased knows nothing about it.

But let us see, further, if Job denies the mind's consciousness even in heaven. Says Job, "And they [his sons] are brought low, but he [the father] perceiveth it not of them. The words "brought low," here used, undoubtedly refer to death. But does the departed mind know nothing of the death of its kindred? Each of "his sons," certainly, must have had an "immortal soul" as well as his father, which, at death, must also have taken its flight. But is the soul of the father unconscious of the departed children's presence? Why, I should think that he would be the first at the gate to welcome them in. But no, he is so indifferent that "he perceiveth it not of them"! Really, this does not chime very well with that we often hear sung—

"We shall know each other there."

Nor will it help the matter to infer that the souls of the departed sons went immediately to hell, in which case it might be said, "He perceiveth it not of them"; for, as Job is speaking in a general sense, and makes no reference to one family merely, but to all families, this would involve the absurdity that all the sons of man, good as well as bad, are lost! Well, I prefer to be with Job. If the advocates of popular theology disagree with him, they and he for it, then; only let me remind them that they are dealing with inspiration, and stand a very poor chance.

In conclusion, we will adduce an inspired statement found in Ps. 146: 3–4, reading as follows: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." In view of what we have said, and the scripture passages which we have quoted, it seems needless to make comment upon this. A few words, however, that the reader may readily see the force of the statement. It is commonly conceded that the thoughts of man prove the existence of the mind; and that without thoughts there is no mind. It follows, consequently, that when the thoughts are perished the mind no longer exists. This scripture states that, when man returns to his earth, his thoughts perish. It may be said that as the body possesses the mind, it may also be said to possess the thoughts; and that this text merely means that at death there is a separation; that the thoughts are no longer his (the body's) thoughts. This might look plausible if the text would admit this construction. But it does not say that after death the thoughts exist with the mind separate from the body; it says, "In that very day his thoughts perish." There are no thoughts after death, in the grave, or elsewhere; consequently, no mind to think.

There are many statements of the word of God similar to those already quoted, which teach the same great truth. We might refer to more, but we think we have adduced enough to show that the popular dogma of the mind's immortality is unscriptural, anti-scriptural, and all a myth. We beg the reader to examine this subject, and, like the noble Bereans, search the Scriptures to see whether these things are so. Christian practice is indispensable, but there must be something to practice. The different sects of heathendom have notions peculiar to themselves, and practice accordingly. Let us, who profess to have a theoretical faith, peculiar to the Bible, see that we are theoretically correct; and then we shall be ready for every good word and work.

Finally, may God enlighten our minds to comprehend the great truths of his word, and give us grace to perform a life of practical godliness, which has the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

THE TRUMPETS.

Dr. J. A. Seiss, of Philadelphia, Editor of the "Prophetic Times," is giving a series of interesting discourses on the Apocalypse, from which we take the following:—

THE SOUNDING OF THE SECOND TRUMPET.

"And the second angel sounded; and, as it were, a great mountain burning with fire was cast into the sea; and the third of the sea became blood; and the third of the creatures in the sea, the things which had lives, died; and the third of the ships was destroyed."

Here is one of the hints I speak of as indicating that a thing is not to be literally taken. The image of a burning mountain is before the writer. But it is not literally a mountain; it is only something having the general appearance of a mountain; and he plainly tells us so. He saw as it were a mountain. Of course, then, we are to take it, not as a real mountain, but as something resembling a mountain. A certain writer insists that the plague under this trumpet is not to be taken literally, because a mountain falling into the sea could never turn it into blood. But John does not say it was a mountain. He says that it was something that looked like a burning mountain. Exactly what it was, he could no better tell us, except that its effect upon the waters of the sea was, that it turned them into blood. An ordinary mountain would not do this; but that falling, fiery mass, which had the appearance of a burning mountain, did it.

Some conceive of this fiery mass as a volcano, but neither is this the exact image. John says nothing of a mountain vomiting fire, but as a mountain burning with fire, which might be a volcanic mountain, or it might not. When God descended on Sinai, "the mountain burned with fire unto the heart of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness" (Deut. 4: 11); but there is no evidence that it was a volcanic eruption. The idea of John's language is rather that of a great mountainous matter falling from the sky, clothed in seething, thundering, and flashing flames, and dashing into the ocean. The whole image is meteoric, rather than volcanic.

The plunging of this awful fiery mass into the sea, affects it wonderfully. It turns the waves to blood. And if any are disposed to doubt the possibility of such a thing, let them turn to the account of the exode of Israel from Egypt, where it is written that Moses "lifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants, and "all the waters that were in the river were turned to blood." Ex. 7: 20. In the Psalms also (105: 29) it is written—"He turned their waters into blood;" and again (78: 44) "He turned their rivers into blood, and their floods, that they could not drink." It was fresh water in that case, and it is sea or salt water in this; but if God could work such changes by the staff of Moses, what is to hinder him from producing like changes, even on all the waters of the ocean, by means of this fiery mass, as it were a burning mountain? And if the one was literal, as all admit, why not the other, although upon a mightier scale, corresponding to the momentousness of the great day?

Suppose, however, that we follow the common course of expositors, and say that this whole mater is figurative or symbolical; then what? Some understand the mountain to mean heresy; the sea, the church with its baptismal waters; its change to blood, the effect of deadly error; the death of the fishes of the sea, the perdition of souls; the destruction of the ships, the overthrow of churches. Others say the fiery mountain is Satan; the sea, the nations; its change into blood and the dying of the fishes, the persecution and slaughter of Christians; the wreck of the ships, the extinction of congregations. Others tell us that this fiery mountain was Genseric with his Vandals, forced from their native seat by the Huns, and plunging through France and Spain into Africa, conquering the Carthaginians, settling themselves upon the conquered territory, and thence harassing the neighboring islands and shores of the Mediterranean. Still others affirm that the sea is the sea of Galilee, figuratively considered; the fiery mountain, Vespasian; the fishes, the Jews; the ships, the cities of Palestine. And again others interpret the picture of the overthrow of Jerusalem and the temple, and the dissolution of the Jewish polity; the dying of the fishes, the relapses of men from Christianity to Gentileism; the loss of the ships, the subversion of synagogues and churches. Nor is the list yet exhausted. To some, the sea is pure doctrine; the mountain, aspiring prelates; the fire, their ambition; the discoloration of the waters, the introduction of false doctrine; the fishes, the lower orders of ecclesiastics and monks; the ships, the bearers of the Gospel. To others, the mountain is Rome; its burning, the conflagration of that city by Alaric; the destruction of the ships, the plunder of its wealth. Still others see in the record, a symbol of the ravages by Attila. And I only wonder that no one has discovered that it denotes the settlement of the Mormons in Salt Lake Territory! The simple truth is, that if it does not mean what it says, as men ordinarily use language, no man can tell what it does mean; and the opinion of one is just as good, and just as bad, as that of another.

I, therefore, take it as it is written, because there is no other way of taking it which yields any certain or reliable sense. What do we want with Vespasian, Alaric, Rhadagaisus, Attila, Genseric, Romans, Goths, Vandals, Arians, prelates, or the devil, when the inspired writer tells us it was a fiery meteoric mass,—an aerial mountain,—great and towering, precipitated from the atmosphere into the sea, as one of the great wonders of the day of judgment? Men do but rave and trifle and undertake to make a Bible which God has not made, when they spend their time, and learning, and ingenuity trying to persuade themselves and the world that it was something else than John says it was.

This burning mass is plunged into "the sea." It would seem as if some particular sea was meant. If so, most likely the Mediterranean Sea, around which the greatest recorded events of the world and of the Church have been enacted, and which is the central sea of all history, both sacred and profane. Its very name marks it as the middle of the earth. The result is, that the third of it becomes blood—poisonously bloody—so that a third of the living things in the sea perish.

It would seem, also, as if tempestuous commotion of the elements is to attend this awful precipitation. Both the vastness and the fiery condition of the mass ejected into the sea, naturally suggests such effects. Hence, "the third of the ships was destroyed," burned, sunk, or dashed ashore.

And all this finds place also in some of the plain, old unsymbolic predictions concerning the day of the Lord. Fishes constitute one of God's precious gifts to man. They were among the principal food of Jesus, and were the subjects of some of his most marvellous miracles. And, in punishment for the sins of men, it is but reasonable to expect the fishes of the sea to be smitten, as well as the trees and the fruits of earth. Hence, in foretelling the Divine judgments, Hosea said—"The fishes of the sea also shall be taken away." 4: 1–3. So the Lord, also, said by Zephaniah (1: 3), "I will consume the fowls of heaven, and the fishes of the sea." Isaiah further declares: "The day of the Lord of hosts shall be upon every one that is high and lofty, . . . and upon all the ships of Tarshish." Isa. 2: 16. And here, under the second trumpet, the blessed John beholds exactly how these predictions are to be fulfilled.

THE COMMON SALVATION—WHAT IS IT?

D. N. CHADSEY.

"Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation; it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints."—Jude 3.

This subject was of so much importance, the apostle introduces it by saying, give "all diligence." The diligence we should give to the importance of this subject is to know what the apostle intends to convey, when he discourses so emphatically upon the little word "common." It seems to indicate that there was a time when the common salvation was not known as it is now. What is salvation? I understand it is to be saved—a common, a full, a free and eternal salvation. John, the Revelator, says, chap. 5: 9, "And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation." Truly this was the song of redemption. They were saved, triumphantly saved, entirely saved, in the kingdom of God. This is rendered in the Emphatic Diaglott: thou "didst buy back," or "redeem us to God with thy blood." It would not be reasonable to suppose that they could be redeemed, or bought back, if they had not been in a perishable condition; or, in other words, if they had not been, previously to this, subject to death. This company that John saw, according to the language, was redeemed, or saved from something, and that I understand to be literal death.

Some have been led to reason on this wise: We believe in a common salvation, and certainly all men are not saved, that is eternally. And as this salvation must apply somewhere, they are led to conclude that when all men are resurrected from the grave, that is a general resurrection; and that this must be what the apostle means when he speaks so emphatically of something "common." The apostle says he gave all diligence to make mention of these things.

We believe all will be resurrected from the dead, both the righteous and the wicked; but does the general resurrection of the dead mean salvation? Could you talk salvation to a man whose state was unalterable? Would it be rational? You will answer No, at once.

Let us look at this point for a few moments. Suppose a prison to be filled with both saints and sinners, and that there should come from the judge a pardon for every one, both bad and good. They are all liberated. Then, at that moment they are saved from prison. This may be called a common salvation. But suppose they suffer the reverses of fortune, and every one who was delivered from the prison cells should receive from the judge a sentence to return to their cells. What would you think of a person who should continually affirm that they were all saved, because it was a common salvation? Would you believe it? You would would say No indeed. What is the reason? Think of it a moment. Suppose another one says, I believe a part were saved. But all were in the prison, all came out, and all went back again. We must come to the conclusion that there were none saved.

Let us look at another point. Suppose all men, both bad and good, high and low, rich and poor, were all in their graves. The time comes for the resurreection of the dead. The trumpet sounds, the dead are raised, they come to judgment. The saints are saved in the paradise of God, saved forever from sorrow, from tears, from trials, from sickness, and from death. But where are the wicked? what became of them? Did they not go back to prison? The Lord says, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire." Now I ask you in the name of reason, Were they saved? Is this a common salvation? If you can call this a common salvation, you might as well say it was a common salvation when they were liberated from the prison; but you have acknowledged that there was no salvation in it; neither is this salvation for the wicked.

The Revelator says again, in chap. 12: 10, "And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation and strength." When was that? Verse 11 reads, "And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony." Not till after they were redeemed could they sing the song of redemption. Again, in chap. seven, after the one hundred and forty-four thousand were sealed, and another great multitude were sealed, we hear the same song again: "And cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." Now we understand salvation to be saved; and truly it seems like folly to even try to believe any man can be saved when his state is unalterably fixed, or when his destiny is sealed. While the wicked are in their graves, it is not possible to save them. The summer is past, the harvest is ended to them; and thus it is an impossibility, according to divine arrangement, to save them, for the consistant reason, they are lost.

In bringing the culprit out of prison, it only brings to his understanding what he has lost. And so it is with the wicked. They are brought from the dead, but not saved from death, but to be returned directly to its embrace. He sees what he has lost by rejecting Christ. He sees now he is doomed to everlasting silence. Is that common salvation? The apostle tells us, as I understand it, just what a common salvation is. There was a time that it was not known, or at least understood. You have read in the Acts of the Apostles, in the tenth chapter, that Peter had a trance. A sheet was let down to him while he was on the housetop, and was hungry, having all manner of four-footed beasts and creeping things. A voice came to him saying, "Rise, Peter, kill, and eat. But Peter said, Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean." Now the Lord was about to change Peter's mind in regard to some particulars that Peter did not fully understand. You know the Jews had no dealings with the Gentiles or Samaritans; and at one time when Jesus talked with the woman of Samaria, the disciples marveled that he talked with her. Peter had inculcated this same feeling, and even retained it until that time when Peter saw the sheet. He saw the beasts and creeping things and reptiles. But about that time, Cornelius was remembered by the Lord, and when Peter wondered what the vision should mean, three men that were sent by Cornelius stood before the gate. They called for Simon, whose name was Peter. The Lord told him to go, doubting nothing. Why should he doubt? The reason was, a Gentile had come and called for him. They had no dealings together; what should he think? But the Lord was in it. Peter went up to Cesarea, and what was his experience? He understood that the Lord had sent his angel to strengthen Cornelius; and when he fell down before Peter to worship him, hear what he said—"I am but a man." And he said, "Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath shown me that I should not call any man common or unclean." Do you think Peter's mind had been enlightened? Before, he thought the Gentiles to be unclean; but now understood there was no difference. God had cleansed them both. That is what God meant to convey to Peter by the vision.

When Jesus sent out his disciples at one time, he told them not to go into any of the cities of the Samaritans; but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Was there any difference shown to the Jews? I think there truly was. Did the Gentiles share equally with the Jews? I think so. Then they were not in common with them until that middle wall of partition was broken down, and they were all on the same level. As the apostle says to the Colossians (2: 14), "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances, . . . nailing them to the cross." Also, Eph. 2: 16. We want to find out by Ezekiel who the common people are, and that will settle all difficulty with regard to the subject under consideration. He says, in chap. 23: 42,—"And a voice of a multitude being at ease was with her; and with the men of the common sort were brought Sabeans from the wilderness." So you will not fail to understand that these were the Gentiles, and were called the common people.

Also during the pilgrimage of the Israelites, there were common people with them. Lev. 4: 27. Jeremiah (26: 23) says some were cast into the graves of the common people. Mark says, "The common people heard him gladly." 12: 37.

Thus I understand that "common salvation" is when the Jews and Gentiles are permitted to enjoy full and free salvation on the same terms; when the Gentiles are permitted to partake of the fulness of the same olive tree; and eternal salvation is when they are eternally saved in the kingdom of God.

THEOLOGICAL MACHINERY.

H. MUNGER.

(Concluded.)

The Romans had their oracles to consult. Cæsar caused Christ to die after he had showed up their devilish work, reproving them at different times, and telling them to be still and come out of their oracles, or mediums. He gave the apostles the same power over the unclean spirits, or demons. We have abundance of proof that this same class came down to the gospel dispensation, and was the power of Pagan Rome, until A. D. 519, when it sold out to papal Rome, which put a new dress on the same old deceiver, and introduced it into the church of papal Rome, and gave as a substitute for worshiping the gods made with hands, the souls of Peter, James and John, and other apostles, and Mary, the mother of Christ. Here the transfer was made legally and naturally.

For the benefit of those sympathizing with Spiritualists, who deny the Bible account of demons, we will give facts from a few historians. Dowling and Gavatia, p. 123, say the Pagans believed demons were gods that had power to talk with the dead. Kitto says demons deceived the pagan kings by talking with the dead. Plutarch says demons envy God's people, and by a form of worship have deceived many, and were worshiped for bringing news from the dead to the living.

This heathen doctrine has been popular with the ungodly, and popular class of unbelievers. Zoroaster, Pythagoras, Plato, Socrates, Cicero, and others of the old serpent's school, have had their books and writings accepted and read in the Protestant churches, as well as the Catholic, which is as contrary to the Bible teachings as the teachings of the gods spoken of in the Bible Dictionary, of which I will mention a few: Ashtareth of the Zidonians (1 Kings 11: 33), Baal of Tyre (Judges 2: 13), Baal-peor of the Moabites (Num. 25: 3), Baalzebub of Ekron (2 Kings 1: 2), Bel and Nebo of Babylon (Isa. 46: 1). Dagon of the Philistines (Judges 16: 23), Milcom and Molech of the Amorites (1 Kings 11: 5–7), Nibhaz of the Avites (2 Kings 17: 31), Nisroch of the Assyrians (2 Kings 19: 37.) There are many more not mentioned here, all made with hands for the people to worship. The wise men so called, or demons, had charge of the worship, but some say this was before the gospel day. Yes, but they were brought down to Paul's day. See Jupiter and Mercurius of the Romans (Acts 14: 12); also Diana of the Ephesians. Acts 19: 24; 16: 16–24. Paul and Silas got into trouble for attacking a demon in a soothsayer, who pretended to tell fortunes by talking with the dead. No doubt she was a prostitute, and her master who kept the house lost money in her when the devil was cast out.

This kind of work had maintained its popular and political position from Egypt to A. D. 53, when this class was in sympathy with the magistrates of the law. See Acts 16: 20. That old Pagan machine got into a terrible fix. Paul started God's work that night, and a reformation began in jail. Who don't see that the devil had power up to this time to work in the same way as formerly with the authorities of earth. Seven years after, Paul had another battle. See Acts 19. Here we find a god made with hands was worshiped in A. D. 60. Paul attacked it in the name of God, and made a terrible stir among the craftsmen, and the old Pagan church. The officers accused Paul of coming out against the great goddess Diana, made with hands. They said, "whom all Asia and the world worshipeth"; 27th verse. So we see the same class alive yet. They got perfectly crazy. Some said one thing, and some another. They caught Gaius and others, and cried two hours to their heathen god to deliver them. The town clerk got frightened and ashamed, and interfered, and dismissed the meeting. Please read the nineteenth chapter of Acts, and see if we have not proved that this devilish worship has come down to Gentile times, among the pagans of Rome. But the apostle's preaching had such an effect, that there was a division among the Roman churches, and a confused state of things existed until a reformation was made, and they came into an orderly compact. In 306 Constantine undertook the job. After founding Constantinople, in 306, he took a trip into Italy to regulate things concerning their religion. He pretended to see the signs of the cross † in the heavens. This oracle manifestation was a new era in the Roman church. Some believed his vision, and some did not; and not until 325 was the Romish church united. It yet had its pagan form, until the papacy began to rise into notice. Papacy seized upon that portion of the pagan worship brought about by Constantine's cross †; made a bargain, or compelled the Pagan Romans to give up the gods in their temples, dwellings, and on their persons, making it a crime to worship an idol. They enforced obedience with much trouble. They subdued the Pagans, took the religious throne, and instituted the worshiping of the souls of the apostles, St. Mary, and other saints. Thus Paganism was grafted into Papacy, and bore the same devilish fruit as the old serpent's gods; i. e., hatred to God and his people. See the book of Martyrs. The grafting was in immortal-soulism, as sure as you live; and this devilish fruit will grow as long as this error of the old serpent is kept alive.

Let us see the old serpent dressed up in his new papal suit, running the old pagan machinery, with the new patent cog wheel of papacy—immortal-soulism—which doubled its power. See Tetzel, claiming to do what no other gods had done before, even the God of heaven. See 2 Thess. 2: 4. Here we have the prophetic power exalted, spoken of by Daniel, Christ, and Paul. See his great teeth, ready to devour his opponents. Said he, I can save more souls by my grant of indulgences, than Peter can by his preaching in heaven. So he claimed Peter was then in heaven preaching to save souls. See the old serpent's doctrine. Christ told Peter he could not go there until he came again. The Pope, or serpent, says he is there preaching. Can the Protestants run this cog-wheel in their machinery? Hear him again. Says the Pope, "My red cross," the one he got from Constantine, "has as much efficacy as Christ's." Draw near, and I will give you leave to commit any sin, by paying me so much money. I can remit all sin. Again. My indulgences can save the immortal souls of the dead, as well as the living; and if you have friends in hell, or purgatory, as soon as your money clinks in the bottom of the Pope's chest, the immortal soul flies immediately up to heaven. Pope Hilderbrand claimed the same power. Here is the ripe fruit of the new papal graft into the old Pagan stump. This devilish staff is what opened Martin Luther's eyes, and he came near breaking up the devil's old machinery, and commenced setting God's to work. The reformation began, and the old pulleys and crooked shafts lay scattered all over Germany. This engineer got one man to work that took an old shaft from the Koran of Mahomet, another general of the immortal-soul tribe; i. e. the decrees preached by Calvin. See Buck's Theological Dictionary on decrees. This always was a crooked shaft, and never would run in God's work of free moral agency. That and the pagan and papal geering of immortal-soulism has been rejected by Luther, Wesley, and others. See Wesley's sermon, Luke 16: 31. He says the doctrine of the soul's going to its reward at death has not the least foundation in the oracles of God; and the thief did not go to heaven with Christ that day, if at all. They could not make the machinery run with this gearing of the Catholic church. It has worn their old machinery out, so that it has become almost ineffectual. It has been running down fast since 1798.

In 1840, the Mohammedans' prophetic time had come, spoken of by the Revelator, and the devils, or demons, started on a new and more lenient plan; i. e., we will take in such Protestants, although our enemies, as will let the old immortal-soul machinery come into the building. A new company was formed of Protestant church members, mostly called Spiritualists, and for the last fifteen years they have done much to entice and decoy people to renounce the Bible, for they see their works must run without it, if at all, which is the fact. To run these geers together is as impossible as to run a miter geer with a bevel, and this is the trouble in our days. There is a clashing with the machinery. They cannot get in the Bible resurrection to run with this old pagan shafting.

A preacher said, "Bro. Munger, how do you get hold of the resurrection to make it agree with the Bible? We have had it up in a ministerial class for discussion, and if we admit the thief is safely in heaven, and all saints that have died, we get against a stump. How do your people get along with the clashing?" My Bro., you have got the Devil's old mitre geer in with the Lord's word; i. e., immortal-soulism, which the Devil, through the serpent, presented in the garden; then it was urged by the Pagans, next by the Papists, and now by their descendants, the Spiritualists, who are deceiving the kings, and the whole world; and as you are still trying to use this old geer rather than to throw it away, your theological mill will always clash with it in. "One Spiritualist, or one Second Advent man," said he, "will throw a clog that will stop our whole debate."

This honest confession is a fact in almost every church in the land. Some are trying to get at the true cause of the clashing; while others are full of vanity and pleasure, which take God's power off; and dead formality, with crooked shafting, unmatched geer, cracked pulleys, and worn-out india rubber belting, with so little power, will never run the theological machinery. This is what's the matter. It is becoming popular again among kings. See Napoleon, and Emperor William, and others, who are coming back to the old heathen oracles, trying to talk with the dead. These are our prophetic signs, Paul gave us in 2 Tim. 3: 8. Here we are, expecting the Lord very soon. Other signs are just ahead.

You are Wanted.—In the great battle between truth and falsehood, between sin and holiness, every human being bears his part; is for, or against. There is no neutral position in this war. To do nothing, is to be against; and to be against the right, is to be lost. Idleness is a crime; indifference, a fatuity. There is much to do, and little time to do it in; for, "the night cometh, when no man can work." Work while the day lasts; work hard, work well; these should be the resolves of all the friends of a true Christianity, some of whom can do a great deal; all can do something.

The World's Crisis

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

At a meeting of the committee held on the camp-ground, June 7th, it was voted that our annual meeting this year commence Saturday, Aug. 19th, and continue over the 27th. Particulars hereafter.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

☞ APPOINTMENTS for next week should all be in as early as Monday morning. Our press-men do not work on the 4th of July, consequently we are obliged to send our paper to press on Monday.

WOODSTOCK TENT-MEETING.

The interest in the tent-meeting in Woodstock, Vt., continued to increase as the meeting progressed. All seemed pleased, and expressed much regret that it could not be continued longer. The minister and membership of the various churches manifested a kind spirit, and gave excellent attention to the subjects presented. On Saturday many were unable to get into the tent. Had it not been a very wet day Sabbath, there would have been a great crowd; as it was, we had the tent well filled. A solemn conviction rested upon the people that we are near the end of this dispensation. They wished to hear more on the subject. The christians who attended the meeting were much quickened, comforted and strengthened. The meeting was timely, and promised excellent results, yet undeveloped. Bro. Carpenter is laboring faithfully in that section of Vermont, and waiting paitently for the day of ingathering. Bro. S. Cook, and Bro. Shaw assisted in the meetings. They are true men. Just before we left, on Monday morning, a Congregationalist Sr. came where we were stopping to express her gratitude and joy for the benefits she had received from the meeting.

SHALL IT BE DONE?

Some time since it was proposed to raise three hundred dollars to meet the necessities of Sr. C. B. Turner, on the following conditions: "When two hundred were raised by Sr. Turner's friends, then the other hundred was to be given by the heirs of Sr. Ide. All but about twenty dollars have been raised of the two hundred. Now comes the inquiry, shall the rest be raised, and thus secure the other hundred? Sr. Turner is now dead; but shall not her orphan children receive a share in our sympathies? They need them none the less because they are orphans. Please make up these twenty dollars at once.

SHAKER DOCTRINE.—The Shakers say "the true resurrection" consists in "living above the life of generative lusts." Ann Lee, their founder, taught "that reproduction, in its most pure, elevated condition, was positively unchristian." She claimed to have received her instruction through "spirit agencies." These lying, seducing spirits teach one doctrine to one party, and the opposite to another, in order to avoid detection, and better accomplish their diabolical pursuits. Some they can lead into the Idealism of Swedenborgianism; others into the self-denying system of Shakerism; others into the opposite as taught by the Mormons; others to adopt an obsolete Jewish institution, because a certain one has visions directing such a course; while the great mass of the people are best suited with the manifestations common to Spiritualism.

"DARK DAYS."

Under the above heading, the New York Times, June 17th, says:—

"Late events have so familiarized people with calamity, that they have almost lost the habit of being shocked. The delirium which has covered Paris with blood and fire has surfeited the keenest appetite for horrors. The prophet who predicted only a year ago the fate that has befallen that unhappy city would surely have had little honor in his own or any other country. Yet we have seen the world's most brilliant capital, in the very noonday of civilization, given over to massacres and pillage. A spectacle so fraught with wild and fearful interest must dwarf all lesser misfortunes. Before the awful death agony of the Commune, with its wholesale slaughter of men, women and children, shot and bayoneted like dogs in the kennel, or flung to a more appalling death in the flames of burning palaces, human life and suffering seem to grow so cheap as scarcely to be worth a thought. Even that most painful episode in all the ghastly story, of the prisoners forgotten in the firing of the Hotel de Ville, and left to perish in their dungeons, scarcely moves us so much as, in happier times, the most stereotyped tale of distress. Consciously or not, most people have grown in a measure callous to this excess of misery.

Something of this may be detected in the tone with which the newspapers publish accounts of other less notable events. The time is rife with disaster, and within a few weeks, in different parts of the world, there have been several occurrences of an unusually painful nature any one of which would formerly have earned sensational prominence. That dreadful epidemic at Buenos Ayres, for example, with its thousands of victims, was probably as dramatic in its way as either of those famous plagues in Florence or London which Boccaccio and Defoe have immortalized. The two disastrous earthquakes in China and the East Indies have been no less noteworthy. Yet each of these extraordinary events has been dismissed with the briefest telegraphic mention, and has attracted the least possible public attention—not so much in New York, for instance, as Mr. Weston's walk, for example, or the unexpected attempt of Fisk to say his prayers.

A still more striking example of this general indifference is afforded by the famine in Persia. Such meagre details as have reached us show that a most heart-rending affliction has fallen upon that unfortunate country. In certain districts, the starving inhabitants were trying to subsist on grass, in others they were selling their children into slavery to save their lives. Elsewhere, hunger had driven the people to the still more desperate resort of killing and eating the children, and in one province it is even said the graves have been despoiled to furnish food for the living. The stories of the Ghouls in the Arabian Nights are not more incredible or more revolting. Nor is there anything recorded in the dark romance of the slave-trade more tragic than the burning of the coolie-ship Dolores Uparty, in mid-ocean, with all its living freight of five hundred captive souls. Yet, we venture to say, the majority of newspaper readers have given scarcely a thought to the immeasurable horror of these two situations, or have dismissed them as of less relative importance than the latest street affray, or political murder.

While the secular press can see the signs of the times, the religious press, as a general rule, seems to be asleep, or dreaming of a good time to come. They are not awake to the perils of these last days; if they are, they dare not sound the alarm.

NINETY-NINE.—Charles Cleveland, of Boston, celebrated his ninety-ninth birth-day the 21st of June—the longest day of the year. He has made himself very useful as a preacher and a missionary among the poor. One who visited him on his birth-day, gives the following in the Boston Journal:—

"The conversation turned naturally upon the reasons for his long life, and we said, 'What do you think has made your health so good, and kept you living to such a great age?' Putting his hand upon the writer's knee, he replied, with a great deal of earnestness, 'Early rising, regular habits, and not using tobacco or spirits.' 'Yes,' added his sister, 'and a cheerful disposition.' Father Cleveland nodded assent, and added, 'I am as sound as a nut; no pains or aches, no rheumatism or gout on me.' We asked him if he never used tobacco or spirits. 'Yes,' he replied, 'I was foolish enough when young to use them, and I don't know how long I should have lived if I hadn't touched them.'"

THE POPE'S JUBILEE.

It appears that an unsuccessful plot was laid to assassinate the Pope about the time of his Jubilee, June 16th. The New York Times of June 17th says:—

"Catholics in this city, and elsewhere, throughout the christian world, yesterday celebrated an event which to them was little less than a miracle, since it never occurred but once before, and its repetition had come to be regarded as next to impossible. This was the completion of the twenty-fifth year of the reign of the Pope—the only one of the long line of Roman Pontiffs who, since St. Peter, the founder of the church, has occupied the Papal chair for that length of time. Intelligent Catholics have no special reason to congratulate the church upon Pio Nino surviving the average term of his predecessors. He commenced his career as head of the church, with the congratulations of Christendom, at the liberal views he enunciated and the reforms he promised. He had the enthusiastic support of his own subjects, and the good wishes of all mankind. He completes the twenty-fifth year of his reign as a blind worshiper of the darkness and superstition of the middle ages, whose worst follies and errors he would imitate, both in church and state. He has been instrumental in adding new dogmas to the faith, which have caused schisms in the church, and driven from its ranks hosts of its most eloquent and enlightened disciples. He is hated by his own subjects, and, sitting in his 'dungeon,' as he calls it, issues his feeble anathemas against the spirit of the age in which he lives, and fruitlessly bemoans the loss of the temporal sovereignty of which he has justly been deprived. If there is anything in store for him in the future, except to still further distract, divide, and enfeeble the church of which he is the head, it is not easy to see how it is to be brought about."

"JUST ONCE MORE."

The following from Mrs. Victoria C. Woodhull, the lady broker in Wall St., New York, is quite pointed. She is a Spiritualist, and boldly defends the free love department of Spiritualism. The following article appeared in the Present Age," June 3d, 1871. The Age is a Spiritualist paper, published in Chicago. Let her speak:—

THE RED ALTERNATIVE.

We will have our rights. We say no longer by your leave. We have besought, argued, and convinced, but we have failed, and we will not fail. We will try you just once more. If the very next Congress refuse women all the legitimate results of citizenship; if they, indeed, merely so much as fail by a proper declaratory act to withdraw every obstacle to the most ample exercise of the franchise, then we give here and now deliberate notice of what we will do next. There is one alternative left, and we have resolved on that. This convention is for the purpose of this declaration. As surely as one year passes from this day, and this right is not fully, frankly, and unequivocally considered, we shall proceed to call another convention expressly to frame a new constitution, and to erect a new government, complete in all its parts, and to take measures to maintain it as effectually as men do theirs. If for people to govern themselves is so unimportant a matter as men now assert it to be, they could not justify themselves in interfering. If, on the contrary, it is the important thing we conceive it to be, they can but applaud us for exercising our right. We mean treason; we mean secession, and on a thousand times grander scale than was that of the south. We are plotting revolution; we will overthrow this bogus republic, and plant a government of righteousness in its stead.—Victoria C. Woodhull.

"THE WORLD MOVES."—If the New York Wall Street brokers were as interested to secure eternal life as they are the stocks and gold of this world, no doubt they would all be saved. The following from the New York correspondent of the Boston Journal, June 21st, will give a sample of the scenes that transpire among the Wall-street brokers:

BLACK DAY IN THE STREETS.

NEW YORK, June 21. Not since the terribly famous Black Friday has Wall street seen such a day as this. It is one of the field days of this famed locality. Rock Island has been the favorite stock, and has been going up steadily from day to day, till this mornig it touched 130. Mr. Woodward, the most daring broker on the street, has been the chief operator, and in any thing his name is a tower of strength. The rumor of a scrip dividend has been very common, and sharp operators have said that Rock Island would reach 150. In the hight of the excitement at the high prices, the rumor ran that Woodward had failed, and had carried down several prominent houses. In a moment a panic was created, and the street was in a ferment. At once Rock Island fell 20 per cent., and continued to fall till noon, when it touched 110. The ocean lashed to a fury. The populace, roused to an uncontrolled mob, gives a poor idea of the state of things in Wall street. Men trod on one another in the stock room. The yells were frightful. Many who sold at high prices and sold to the pool, found their stock thrown back on to their hands. Many stout and reliable houses would not own that they had failed, but said they would consider the cases individually as they came up. To say that ten thousand men were ruined in thirty minutes would be putting the disaster at a low figure. Men out of the street do most of stock business. They live up the river; out in New Jersey, and far up in the country. These men come to the city once or twice in a week, leave orders and go away. These men, tempted by the fame of Rock Island, have been cleaned out. It is rumored that Jay Gould is at the bottom of this panic: that, by a combination, he sold short in immense sums, run the stock down, covered his shorts, reaped a golden harvest and ruined thousands."

"BEHOLD THEIR THREATENINGS."

We have received the following from Pittsburgh, Pa. It needs no comments.—ED.

"Bro. Clowes has had formal charges preferred against him by the M. E. Church; but he has protested against their taking such judgment against him, and so they have postponed his trial till the 22d inst. The charges are briefly as follows:—

"The undersigned, consulting wholly the peace and purity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, prefers the following charges against the Rev. Geo. D. Clowes, a local preacher of the M. E. Church, and a member of the quarterly conference of the Butler Street station; to wit: Charge 1st—Heresy. Specification—Stating that man has no immortal soul, and that there is no hell. Charge 2d—Inveighing against the doctrines of the M. E. Church. Specification 1st—Stating that the soul and body will sleep together in the grave. Spec. 2d—Stating that there is no hell. Spec. 3d—Stating that the wicked will be annihilated. Spec. 4th—So expounding the Scriptures to his Sunday School scholars, and to others, as to make them teach doctrines not in harmony with the doctrines of the M. E. Church."

GUIDE TO HOLINESS.—If any of our readers wish for a valuable monthly, they will do well to subscribe for the "Guide to Holiness," edited by Dr. and Mrs. Palmer, and published by W. C. Palmer, Jun., 111 East Ninth St., New York. Price $1.25 a year. We recommend the Guide to all who are seeking the higher life—entire consecration to the Lord. We often find single articles worth more than the price of the periodical.

BIBLICAL QUARTERLY.—Bro. J. T. Walsh, New-Berne, N. C., has just issued the first No. (for July) of "Walsh's Biblical Quarterly, an independent and non-sectarian Review, devoted to New Testament Christianity, and opposed to all secret Jesuitic Societies." Price one dollar a year. In another column will be found his introductory article, headed, "My Position Defined," etc.

SANCTIFICATION.

No doctrine is more clearly taught in the Bible, than the doctrine of sanctification; and sanctification is essential to salvation, as God "hath chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the spirit and belief of the truth"; and "it is the will of God, even your sanctification." And yet the question of sanctification is greatly misunderstood. There are two incorrect views to which we will just refer:

1. One class conjecture that sanctification is a kind of second conversion, or a special operation of the Holy Spirit producing a new change of heart, distinct from conversion. The fallacy of this claim appears when we listen to the statement of Jesus on this topic: "For their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified." John 17: 19. Christ never received either a conversion, or a supplement to conversion. He did not need such a sanctification. The sanctification experienced by Jesus was "also" to be experienced by his followers. What was it?

2. Another class argue that all the sanctification recommended in the Bible comes through a knowledge of truth, quoting in support of this claim these words: "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." It is true that the word of truth is the channel through which sanctification comes—the word of truth obeyed; "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth"—but not independent of the agency of the Holy Spirit, for Paul speaks of "being sanctified by the Holy Ghost." Rom. 15: 16.

When we understand that to be sanctified simply signifies to be set apart to a certain work, or for a certain purpose, we are prepared to appreciate the assurance that Christ was sanctified, or set apart to do the work of God, through obedience to the truth; and truth must be understood and believed before it can be obeyed; "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." So it is God's will that men should be set apart for the Divine service—set apart from the world—through the channel of truth believed and obeyed, and by the agency of the Holy Spirit, for "the spirit and the word agree." A sanctification that leaves out the agency of the Spirit, and relies exclusively upon the theory of the word of truth, lacks an important and consecrating appendage. "Be ye filled with the Spirit." Be sanctified "through the truth," "by the Spirit."

"SPIRITS OF JUST MEN MADE PERFECT."

In Heb. 12: 23, Paul speaks of "spirits of just men made perfect," from which the inference has been deduced that disembodied spirits are meant. But this cannot be, (1) from the fact that they are said to be "made perfect," and if made perfect at death, the resurrection would be needless; and besides this, Paul says of these same just men, "They without us should not be made perfect" (Heb. 11: 40), and if not made perfect till the resurrection, disembodied spirits cannot be meant, for then spirit and body will be together. (2) We are not to reach the spirits of just men made perfect till we reach the heavenly Jerusalem, and the innumerable company of angels, for the connection reads thus: "But ye are come unto Mount Zion [Macknight's translation reads, "But ye shall come to Mount Zion"], and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect." We reach none of these things, except in prospect, till we shall be gathered to Mount Zion, which is not in heaven, but on earth, to which the heavenly Jerusalem and the innumerable company of angels will descend, when "the tabernacle of God shall be with men," and then every just man, like Christ in his resurrected state, will be a material "spirit," or possess a "spiritual body" (1 Cor. 15: 44-45), but there will then be no spirits of just men independent of the body; so this text cannot be pressed into the service of our opponents, in their attempt to prove that spirits of men live as bodiless entities, for this text has no reference to the intermediate state, and proves nothing concerning it.

W. S.

"SPIRITS IN PRISON."

Peter's statement concerning the spirits in prison is as follows: Christ was "put to death in the flesh, but quickened [made alive] by the Spirit; by which [Spirit] he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometimes were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." 1 Pet. 3: 18-20. If reference is here made to preaching to disembodied spirits while in prison, it proves the doctrine of purgatory, and disproves the doctrine of going to hell at death; and as God is not a respecter of persons, it involves the future repetition of the same scene for the benefit of all who have accumulated there since the crucifixion.

We prefer to believe that the term spirits is here used synecdochically—a part being put for the whole—to indicate the intellectual persons who were preached to while alive, but who are now in the prison of death; for the gospel was "preached also to them that are dead" (1 Pet. 4: 6), not to those that were dead at the time of the preaching, but are dead now; and if the preaching was done to disembodied spirits, then those spirits "are dead"; but if the preaching was done to living men, who are now dead, all is plain on this principle: "the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify when it testified beforehand" (1 Pet. 1: 11); so the Spirit of Christ preached to the antediluvians through Noah, and they are now in the prison of death. The term spirit is often used to denote the person, a part being put for the whole, as follows: "Believe not every spirit, . . . because many false prophets are gone out into the world." 1 John 4: 1. Here allusion is made to the personality under the term spirit—a part being put for the whole—as in other cases.

W. S.

"SPIRIT, AND SOUL, AND BODY."

While it is true that the soul and body are spoken of as not being one and the same thing, it is equally as true that the spirit is spoken of as being distinct from the soul. "I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless." 1 Thess. 5: 23. Here the distinction between spirit and soul is as definitely made as between soul and body. But are three personalities here mentioned, or only one personality with a spirit and soul? Two personalities cannot be claimed without admitting three. Then what is the sense of the text?

With the fact before us that spirit sometimes means mind, and soul often means life, the obvious meaning of the text is, "Your whole mind, and life, and physical system be preserved blameless." A mind unstained with sin, a life free from pollution, and a body presented as a living sacrifice, is equivalent to a sanctification of the entire man, and that is all the apostle means. A body without mind, or life, would be of little consequence; but an organism possessing mind and life, all dedicated to christianity, constitutes a servant of the Lord; and if thus preserved blameless, will gain the port of bliss. The mind rightly guided, the life properly occupied, and the body correctly employed, is equal to a surrender of all to the Lord; yet neither mind, nor life, can possess a conscious existence independent of the body.

MECHANIC FALLS CAMPMEETING.

To satisfy all inquiries, we would inform the brethren and sisters in Maine, that the committee have arranged and will prepare for a grand rally to the camp this season, at Mechanic Falls. We have enlarged our ground for many more seats, and purpose to build a stable, and boarding house, and make other necessary improvements for the comfort and convenience of the people. Now what we wish, dear brethren, and especially from you in the ministry, is an effort to make this meeting interesting and profitable. Come, let us spend a little time and money for the spread of gospel truth in western Maine. Those wishing to build seats of wood can purchase material near the ground, and may order it through the committee, if they wish. Suitable notice will be given of the time and other arrangements of the meeting. In behalf of the committee,

—J. ALBERT LIBBY.

LYNDEBORO, N. H.

This meeting is in a decidedly mountainous locality. As we stood in the door-way of some houses, and cast our eyes over cities and villages, some of them many miles away, the view occupying from one quarter to nearly one half of the circle, or horizon, the scene stretched out before us was indeed beautiful to behold; and yet scenes more interesting have been noticed in this "hill country," for here stout hearts have yielded to the influences of the Holy Spirit, and God has thus moved them to obedience and the love of the truth.

Last summer, we held two meetings on the top of Pinnacle Mountain, and over forty came up from all sides of the mount to hear the word; some of whom had never heard about the blessed hope. Great attention was given, and two of the number have come out rejoicing in hope. They were baptized June 4th, and others are deeply interested. The town is stirred by the character of the work, for even infidels stand aghast, when the notoriously wicked "right about" and face a frowning world with a christian life. The enemy has taken more than a passing notice of this place, for "hot shot and shells" have been thrown at short, and even long range, but the work moves along, thank God. This is new ground, but meetings are held quite regularly every two weeks. May the Lord still bless them very much.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 14th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

FROM SAN FRANCISCO.

DEAR CRISIS:—Allow me to give a few items from this city of the Pacific. Having been for the past twenty years upon this coast, I must say in all truth and soberness, that the past few weeks have been fraught with great changes in the christian world (or, I should say, this unchristian world)—at least this portion of it; greater changes than it has ever been my lot to witness. Since Eld. Miles Grant made his appearance here, he has held numerous meetings, and has succeeded admirably well in the cause of Christ. I have attended a great many of his meetings, and I have never seen more fervent outpouring of the pure principle of truth, than has been offered up at the altar of Christianity, under the teaching of that truly christian man. He has stirred up the fountain of this great seat of iniquity, and has sown seed that is bringing forth fruit. He has broken up the soil of hypocrisy and heresy, and all the old deceptive doctrines of Satan. Eternal torment in brimstone fire has nearly got its quietus. He has met the enemy in the forum, and in the pulpit, commencing with Spiritualism, and ending with sectarianism. A few evenings since, I attended a Spiritualist meeting where the lecturer stated that one of the leading christians of a popular church said to him, that he would rather have the works of Tom Paine in his house, than the tracts of Miles Grant. I have heard many persons say that he preaches false doctrines, and that it will take five years for the churches to undo the work that he has done. I think if he continues on awhile longer, it will take fifty years to again destroy the truth of the great doctrine of Christ, that man is mortal. The theory that has been preached concerning the immortality of the soul, prior to the resurrection, has been exposed by him with such powerful reasoning, that it carries conviction with it to the hearts of the people.

The expounding of the prophecies has caused thousands to read the Bible, who for years have paid no heed to its teachings, and who are now anxious to know the truth. They have found that Eld. Grant fears not to preach the whole truth, and expound the Scriptures in their simplicity, so that all may be able to understand.

Some of our noted divines have thought proper to open their batteries of grape and canister upon him, but to little effect. He returns hot shot and shell of such a calibre, that a few more "reviews," and their batteries will be silenced, and truth in all its purity will become like a stream of living water, running through this bog of corruption, clearing and purifying in its course. There is what would be termed a ground swell, which is forcing its way into the innermost recesses of this irreligious city, which is fastening itself upon the heartstrings of the worldly-minded, and they are beginning to turn their thoughts to Him who is the giver of all good. It is well that the great Architect of the universe has thought proper to send his servant to this coast to preach the true doctrine of the Scriptures.

JARED C. BROWN.

OUR TIMES.

BRO. GRANT:—The times in which we live are fraught with the most momentous consequences. All nature is pregnant, and by her universal throes and pains and restlessness portend the speedy dissolution of the present state of things, preparatory to the glorious, final, and eternal restitution of all things. The political world unites her voice in proclaiming the end of all things. Every nation under heaven is clamoring for change. Rulers and subjects are everywhere in opposition to each other, thus giving tokens of their final, certain, and sudden perdition.

And how is it with the church? Many have departed from the faith, "giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." The bride of Christ is married to Cæsar, and hence what belongs to Christ is given to Cæsar. What will Cæsar do? what has Cæsar done? He banished the Lord Jesus Christ from the face of the earth, as the most disgraceful and infamous character that ever lived. And for what? what did the blessed Jesus do to incur all these taunts and reproaches and gibes and insults and pains and crucifixion? It is true he was a poor man. His parents were poor. He was a carpenter. He was of the seed of Abraham, the son of David, a meek and lowly person, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. He did no one any harm. He went about doing good. He loved everybody, and prayed for those who abused him. He spent whole nights in agonizing prayer upon the cold ground. He told the people if they would love and serve him, he would pardon their sins, sanctify their nature, sustain them amid all life's duties and sorrows and cares, and then give them immortality and eternal life with himself amid the splendors of a regenerated universe. And to show them that he could do all this, he was declared to be the Son of God with power. His mighty miracles, the wonders attending his death, his glorious resurrection and triumphal ascension, were all that was necessary to convince the world that he was able to save to the uttermost all that would come to God by him.

Now, my dear Bro., where do you see in all the churches, or any of them, that repentance unto life, that faith which works by love, that all-subduing and consecrating power of God's Holy Spirit, which unites and holds together all the professed followers of the blessed Jesus in one vast army, fighting side by side with the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, for truth and righteousness, against the world, the flesh, and the devil? Alas! alas! private prayer, family and social religion, have almost disappeared from the church of God; and, in their stead, we have drinking and drunkenness, fiddling and dancing, balls and fairs; so that, instead of having one poor, old antichrist (whose doom is at the door), we have a thousand new ones springing up all around us. Surely we have got back again to the days of Noah. O Lord, how long? O Jesus, come quickly; come now. Come like the lightning's flash, put an end to evil, and bring in everlasting righteousness.

THE CURE.

A. A. PHELPS.

10. See how many good traits you can discover in those with whom you differ.—Do not adjudge all to be devils or reprobates, who are compelled to dissent from your views. Their moral character is not to be disparaged because they were not made in the same physical or mental mould with yourselves. But we will suppose that the existing rupture involves more than a difference of sentiment. The opposite party may have committed some serious misdemeanor: (1) You may fix your gaze so intently upon the offense as to exclude all thought of pardon or palliation. The offender's faults are thus magnified, his virtues are ignored, and the breach is widened. (2.) A far better way would be to lay no more stress upon the brother's failure than Justice actually demands; and then let Mercy survey the whole case, and see how many things can be said in commendation of him who has unfortunately stumbled by the way. A single blunder does not necessarily constitute him an incarnate demon. He may have fallen into a petulant fit, and given utterance to unbecoming words. Do not load him with execrations so thick as to shut out hope forever; but consider several points in palliation of the offense committed:

(1) His constitutional infirmity. (2) The trying circumstances of the case. (3) The special provocation to anger (4) His deep regrets over his weakness and folly. (5) The many noble traits of character that remain unsullied. If he is hasty in his disposition, he is also sensible enough to perceive it, and penitent enough to deplore it. He is magnanimous in his views, generous in his impulses, and thoroughly honest in his practical life. He is neither cowardly, nor covetous. He will not shrink responsibility, leaving others to bear the burdens while he enjoys the blessings. No! He walks up like a man and volunteers to do more than his part in rolling on the gospel car. His hand is open to alleviate human suffering. Wretchedness goes from his door with a lighter heart. In many respects he is a noble man and a worthy christian. Do not then cast him off for his occasional stumbling, but think more of the actual excellences of his character. This course will cause the separating walls to sink by imperceptible degrees, till you find yourself admiring the very man whom you had almost determined to strike forever from the page of Christian friendship.

The spirit that rejoices in all the good that can be discovered, and is willing to accord even to an enemy the virtues that belong to him, is certainly heaven-born and heaven-approved. Such a spirit will have no affinity for feuds and factions, but a powerful tendency to assuage the waters of strife, and produce a condition of peace. "I would to God I were the worst minister in England," said the pious Dod; not wishing himself worse than he was, but wishing all others to be far better. This sounds like the ring of the true metal. There was no green-eyed jealousy, or unprincipled ambition, that would drag angels down in order to occupy their position without possessing their purity. There was no Pharisaic assumption of superior piety, coupled with a set determination to depreciate the goodness of all beside. Well would it be if we were all richly imbued with the same spirit. Never again should we rejoice in the iniquity of an enemy, or glory in his distress and ruin. Gospel charity would inspire us with better feelings and furnish us with better employment. Let us learn that while the best people have some weak points, the worst people may have some points to commend. The very persons who have caused us grief possess many worthy traits, which the fog of prejudice and the smoke of contention have hardly allowed us to perceive. Perhaps they have much more to commend than to condemn. When you think of what they were, and then impartially consider what they are, is there not an obvious change for the better? Is it not evident that grace has wrought a wondrous work? What though they may be somewhat deficient in what you might term Christian polish; is there yet no evidence of God's transforming love in the heart and life?

A minister's wife was once reading a lesson of reproof to a woman who had but recently been converted from the rough ranks of sin, for some want of Christian propriety. The sister acknowledged her weakness, but craved the indulgence of the other in these words: "It requires more grace to make me decent, than it would to make angels of some people." We do not always appreciate how much the grace of God has done for men, because we forget the "hole of the pit whence they were digged." Let us be sure to give everybody credit for all the Lord has really accomplished in them by the word of his grace and the power of his Spirit.

DENYING THE RESURRECTION OF THE BODY.—Theodore Tilton, of the Golden Age, is very liberal in his religious views. The Spiritualists say that he "occasionally" "gives expression to ideas" that meet their "approval." No wonder. Hear what he says about the resurrection of the body:—

"The body, once buried, shall rise again. That is, it shall decompose in the earth; it shall mingle with the soil; it shall become part of nature's mold; it shall receive the rain from heaven; it shall quicken and revive—atom by atom; it shall struggle up, reger-minate to the surface; and finally it shall appear again to human eyes—here in a blade of grass, there in a head of clover—here in a trailing vine, there in a spreading oak. This is the only resurrection of the body in which we have any faith."

This extract is taken from a Spiritualist paper (Religio-Physiological Journal), and the editor says "the day is not far distant when Mr. Tilton will admit the truthfulness of spirit communion."—ED.

SALEM CONFERENCE.

BRO. GRANT:—The conference appointed to be held here, is among the things of the past; and although it was not marked by any extraordinary results, such as overflowing and crowded houses, and numberless conversions, still, its result was good. We were favored with preaching through the week by Bros. Laverton, Cotton, Streeter, White, Ross, Thurman, and Higgins.

During one of our afternoon meetings, we were greatly surprised, and overjoyed also, to see the form of our beloved Bro. J. V. Himes come into our midst. To me it seemed and does seem as providential, as he was enabled to remain with us over the last Sabbath, doing the household of faith much good with his words of encouragement and good cheer. Not only were the brethren edified, but also a large congregation that assembled were made to hear the news of Messiah's coming; and as the present state of the nations and of the papacy were dwelt upon, thereby showing that we are nearing the end, our brother was listened to with intense interest, and many were the expressions of satisfaction and approval at the close of the services. While some of the seed fell upon stony ground, perhaps, or among thorns, we also believe that some fell upon good soil, and will yield fruit that will be accepted in the great harvest day.

For the visits of the preaching brethren, and their timely sermons and exhortations, we all feel grateful, and we are all determined, by the grace of God, to be faithful in our several positions, where Providence has placed us, until we hear him say, "Well done, good and faithful servants. Yours in Christ,

Salem, June 19, 1871. C. E. BARNES.

A COUNCIL'S REPORT.

Whereas, T. P. S. Hampson, of Biddeford, Me., was arraigned before the Advent Christian Conference, while in session at Portland, June 14th, 1871, of which he was a member, charged by the Biddeford church with making false statements, unchristian conduct, and starting a separate meeting under false statements; the conference therefore appointed the following brethren as a council to examine his case: C. Good, J. A. Libby, W. H. Mitchell. The council accordingly met at Biddeford, June 16th, and after examination had, came to the following conclusions:

That charge first was unsustained, much of the evidence advanced being mere rumor and street gossip.

That charge second was fully sustained, he (Hampson) having accused some of the members of the church of lying, and speaking reproachfully of the officers and rule of the church, and manifesting a very unchristian spirit while under trial by said church.

That charge third was not sustained, as it regards false statements, but was in respect to a separate meeting being opened against the interest of the church, and contrary to the rules of the conference of which he is a member; he having been notified by the conference to refrain from preaching, appointing, or superintending religious meetings, until the conference should meet, and his case be investigated. With these regulations he had refused to comply.

C. GOOD.
J. A. LIBBY.
W. H. MITCHELL.

The following voluntary confession from the hand of Bro. H. to us is satisfactory, and, we trust, will be to all.

COUNCIL.

Biddeford, June 18th, 1871.

Dear brethren of the Maine Second Advent Christian Conference: Whereas a committee, chosen by you to investigate the charges preferred against me by the Biddeford church, have investigated the same, and bring a verdict pronouncing me guilty of unchristian conduct, by manifesting an unchristian spirit while under trial by said church, and of speaking reproachfully of its officers and members, and their management; also of opening a meeting against the interest of the church, and contrary to the rules of the conference; to these charges I plead, and was proved guilty. Therefore, believing in the gospel principle of confessing our faults one to another, I do feel that a confession is due you from me. This confession, dear brethren, I now make by saying that in a trying hour I did not let the grace of God rule in my heart as I should have done, and did wrong; for which I am sorry, and sincerely repent, and ask your forgiveness, believing that you, who know the weakness of humanity so well, will sympathize with me and forgive me; and I will try, by the help of God's grace, and your prayers, to overcome the evil one more perfectly in the future, hoping that all will work for the glory of God, and his cause which we so much love. I still remain your unworthy, erring brother in Christ,

T. P. S. HAMPSON.

P. S. I take this opportunity of commending my dear brethren on the investigating committee for the christian, gentlemanly, and impartial manner in which they conducted the investigation throughout; also to state that the meeting, which I have been conducting, shall no longer be conducted by me or my influence.

T. P. S. H.

Correspondence.

From Bro. B. Martin.

BRO. GRANT:—I never felt as if I had a duty to perform in the service of the Lord until now, or since Thursday, June 1st, 1871, just after I had read Heb. 6: 1-2. "Leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ," thought I; and I stopped and studied over that awhile. Well, said I, I'll read on: "Let us go on unto perfection." Here was something. Again and again I stopped. "Go on unto perfection"; "go on unto perfection," thought I. "Not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God." Still my mind seemed dull and heavy. I could make no headway. Still slower than ever, I read the second verse: "Of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment." Here I stopped, laid the Bible down, and walked out in the yard. There the light broke in. It was all plain. I came into the house rejoicing. O, brethren and sisters, such sweet peace, such inexpressible joy as I felt in my whole frame, soul, body, and spirit; and I have been rejoicing ever since in the blessed Lord; and I feel as if I ought to tell it to every body; for I want every body to see it and to feel it just as I do. Still, dear brothers and sisters, I have a heaviness of heart, when I turn to you, for God has given you great light, but this is the greatest of all light. Come, take my hand, and "let us go on unto perfection." Yes, hand in hand, until dear Jesus can hold us up to Father, and my Father, these are fit temples for the Holy Ghost to dwell in; then, whether asleep or awake when he comes, we are his. The spotless raiment of the redeemed will be ours; the palms of victory will wave above our heads; the crown of bright glory will sparkle on our immortal brows. Eden restored will be our home, and we will live with the Lord forever.

Still, brothers and sisters, I fear many are only babes in Christ. You need to be fed "with milk." O, would to God that I could "speak unto you as unto spiritual," for are you not carnal? "for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men"? Let me refer you to 1 Cor. 3d chap. Read it all. Then come, brothers and sisters in the Lord, I do ask you to leave "the principles of the doctrine," and "let us go on unto perfection." Let us lead the poor sinner to the foot of the cross. Tell him that it was there you found Jesus. Tell him to believe, and he will forgive; then be baptized, and go on to perfection; then are they Christ's. Why should one say I am of Paul, another I am of Apollos, and another of John? Are not all Christ's? and is not Christ's God's? If so, then, dear brethren and sisters, let us leave the first principles and "go on unto perfection."

No. 851 S. 2d, Philadelphia, Pa.

From Bro. B. P. Manning.

Bro. Grant:—I am yet alive, and trying to serve God with all my heart, but at the same time am in great distress. The 22nd of May I was taken sick with fever. I am now a little better, but do not know how long I may remain so. I had been trying to do a few little chores, but I am done at present. I expected to fall asleep in Jesus, and rest till the morn of the resurrection, but the Lord has saved me yet. Blessed be his holy name. O how good he is to me. I intend to praise him as long as I live here, and then go into the kingdom and live for ever. I have given all for Christ; he is my all, bless his dear name for ever.

Dear brethren in the Lord, how glad I should be to see you once more in this world before I go hence to be here no more. I do thank you all, who have helped me thus far after a godly sort, and I give God all the glory. I have not seen a brother or sister since the last day of Dec., 1870, excepting Bro. E. S. Moulton, who came to see me and prayed with me. God blessed me in the interview. I request the prayers of you all, that God will spare me till Christ comes, if it is his will; if not, let me fall asleep in Jesus.

Dear brethren and sisters, remember the words of Jesus (John 15: 17), "These things I command you, that ye love one another. If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you." This may be the last that you will ever see in the Crisis from my pen. Be faithful to God till Jesus comes. Remember me. Farewell. Thy poor Bro. in Christ, B. P. Manning.

From Bro. Enoch Morrill.

Bro. Grant:—Yesterday was a day long to be remembered by the people of Littleton, on account of the blessed and heavenly meetings that we had under the tent. We had a love-feast at 9½ A. M., followed by preaching. Again a love-feast at one, followed by preaching, after which we went down to the water and administered the ordinance of baptism. Then preaching again at five and eight P. M., which closed our tent-meeting at Littleton. We found warm hearts at L., among whom were Brn. J. & A. Whitcomb and their families, who, although they lived quite a distance from the tent, did all in their power to make us comfortable. Also our young Bro. G. H. Brown. He is a member of the Baptist church, but loves the whole truth, and did nobly in support of the meeting.

We go next to Groton Junction, and we do hope that the brethren in the adjoining towns will make an effort to come and help. To the brethren in Gloucester, Mass., I would say, we expect to get round to them with the tent to commence meetings about the 12th of July. Bro. B. Finney, of Wakefield, was with us yesterday, and the Lord used him as an able instrument in his hands to help in the work. Yours with love to all the scattered flock. Enoch Morrill.

Littleton, June 26th, 1871.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. J. B. Bryant writes from Buckfield, Mass.:—"As I feel that I am under a great obligation to you for many kindnesses received, I feel it my duty to write a few lines. I always had a favorable feeling towards the doctrine you advocate, but never got enlightened enough to believe all the points, until nearly a year ago, when I was led by the Spirit to attend the campmeeting at Mechanic Falls. I was blessed very much, and there I made up my mind to come out, and I can say that it has been the best year of my life. I have had courage to present the truth where I never could say anything before, and am blessed in my efforts to spread it. I want to live just right, and be prepared to meet the Lord when he comes.

Nearly a year ago, I was induced to take the Crisis, with which I have been very much interested and profited."

Bro. N. Reed writes from Honesdale, Pa., June 8th, 1871:—"Do not stop my paper so long as you can possibly help it; for it is all the preaching I can get. I go to meeting to hear preaching, but I hear so much contradiction of the Bible, that I almost think that it is not duty to go any more. They seem to be so attached to their traditionized notions, that they will not read to inform themselves. I have tried to get them to read the papers, but in vain. I almost think it is too late for them. I am very poor, and over seventy years old. I cannot work much, and have a family; so we have to live on a small allowance; but we are perfectly satisfied and contented, looking and longing for Jesus to come and make all things new. Pray for us, that we may all meet where parting will be no more."

For Eld. B. P. Manning.—C. W. Conally, $5.00. Ag't.

Obituaries.

Treadwell. Died in Chicago, Ill., June 18th, 1871, Bro. Stephen B. Treadwell, aged forty-two years.

Bro. Treadwell was formerly from Huron Co., Ohio, where his father now resides. He was a firm believer in Christ as the Life-giver, and his last words were those of trust and confidence in Jesus. In his life he was lovely, and his death is a great grief to many hearts, but there is good hope for him in the future. He leaves a dear companion to tread the vale alone, but her hope "reaches to that within the vail." Text for the funeral sermon, Ps. 116: 15.—"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." F. Burr.

Batchelder. Died in South Deerfield, N. H., May 11th, 1871, John Edmund, son of David S. Batchelder, aged three years, five months, and ten days.

Little Eddie was taken suddenly, like an opening bud plucked by a violent hand from the tender bosom of kind and loving parents, and carried to the "land of the enemy." But he will come again. Words of comfort were spoken to the mourning circle by the writer, from Jer. 31: 15, 16. Enoch Morrill.

Fowler. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Henrietta, Wis., Oct. 20th, 1870, Sr. Mary E. Fowler, daughter of L. and J. Mick.

She was a firm believer in the second coming of Jesus to awake the sleeping dead, and give immortality and eternal life to all his saints. This blessed hope sustained her to the last. B. Greaves.

Sires. Died in Henrietta, Wis., March 23d, 1871, Sr. Rebecca Sires, aged seventy-one years and nine months.

She died in peace, and rests in hope. B. Greaves.

Tebbetts. Died in Dover, N. H., June 15th, 1871, Miss Eldora A. Tebbetts, daughter of John K. and Lucinda F. Tebbetts, aged fifteen years and nine months.

Sermon by the writer. J. Pinkham.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

London, June 20. Instructions have been given from Berlin to stop the return of the German troops from France, and discontinuing the surrender of French prisoners.

The Morning Post says the review at Longchamps has been postponed because the regiments would have cried "Vive L'Empereur!"

Late advices from Teheran, (Persia) says that famine in one district of Persia, has reached such a state, that starving people have killed and eaten fifty people.

A letter from the Archbishop of Cambria and the Bishop of Arras to the Assembly, demanding the resumption of French protection of Rome, has been presented to that body.

The Independence Belge announces that a Bonapartist Congress will soon be held at Brussels, to be presided over by Rouher.

Correspondence from Rome says that the Pope, on the 25th anniversary of his Pontificate, received deputations from all countries, even from Poland. At least 9000 delegates and 800 ladies waited on him during the day.

The Pope, in his replies to the congratulations of the foreign deputations, said that he hoped soon to bear the cross through the streets of Rome without fear of outrage. To the French delegation he spoke feelingly of the situation of France, and congratulated them on her victory over the powers of darkness.

He was gratified at receiving a telegram from the Queen of England, in which wishes for his long life and happiness were expressed. During the day the Pope distributed 15,000 francs among the poor and received magnificent presents from the faithful throughout the word. Notwithstanding the precaution taken by the police, visitors on their way to the Vatican were insulted by the crowd in the streets. Many soldiers, who had served in the Pontifical army were arrested before the day of the festival to prevent a disturbance.

Vienna, June 21. It is said that twenty-two Austrian Bishops have petitioned the Emperor in favor of the re-establishment of the temporal power of the Pope, but received no answer.

Bombay, June 21. A hurricane has destroyed the cotton crop of the country around the town of Banda, in the district of Surat. The loss is estimated at half a million sterling, and it will take years for the planters to recover from the blow.

London, June 22. The Morning Post says there is an understanking between the Governments of Germany, Austria and Russia, for the preservation of the peace of Europe.

Madrid, June 22. In the Cortes, last evening, the Minister of the Colonies declared that Spain would preserve the integrity of Cuba so long as men and arms were forthcoming. He admitted there was a ministerial crisis, and added that the Cabinet would resign after the approval by the Cortes of an address to the Crown. All the amendments to the address were withdrawn and the discussion proceeded.

Florence, June 22. The Chambers will be adjourned before the end of the present week. The idea of holding a short session in Rome has been abandoned.

The Minister of the Interior has ordered the dissolution of all Chapters of the International Society in Italy.

King Victor Emanuel leaves here on the 29th inst. on a visit to Naples.

Berlin, June 23. A serious complication has arisen between Germany and England and severe dispatches are passing between Bismarck and Earl Granville. Bismarck addressed a note to Count Bernstoff, the German representative in London, informing him that the Imperial German Government desired to acquire Heligoland and empowering him to make propositions to the British Government, through Count Bernstoff, declaring that the acquisition of Heligoland was necessary for the protection of the German coast, reciting as an instance the facilities for coaling and immunity from attack which the French fleet enjoyed at Heligoland, by which it was enabled to blockade Hamburg and paralyze the German coast. He looked upon Heligoland, on account of its close proximity, as German teritority, and its possession by any foreign power as a standing menace to Germany.

Earl Granville replied that England was only bound to consider her own interests, and that the wish of the German Government to acquire Heligoland did not constitute her right to it, as the island has never been under German rule.

DOMESTIC.

Kansas, June 20. A terrible tornado swept over South Western Kansas on Friday morning last. The town of Eldorado was nearly destroyed. Over one hundred houses were demolished, involving a loss of $6000. The storm did great damage to the crops. Fences were blown down and houses unroofed in all directions. It was the severest storm on the plains for years.

San Francisco, June 21. A sharp earthquake shock occurred at Calistoga at two o'clock this morning. Brook's Hotel, in Knight's Valley, was burned by the chimney being thrown down by the earthquake.

Matters at Rome. The air of antiquated repose and unchanging ways which has for so many years characterized the Eternal City, will be very generally and beneficially disturbed by the transfer of the Italian seat of Government thither from Florence. A correspondent of the Troy Times writes that large preparations are being made for the reception of the offices and officers of the Government. Convents and palaces are losing their walled and princely looks and taking on the air of business. The post office has been moved into better quarters, and work is pushed forward rapidly on the new railway station. An income tax is decided upon, to foreigners as well as citizens, and the Romans are not well pleased with the certainty of increased taxation for the support of "united Italy." The Government is painfully aware that "Rome for the capital" means money as well as sentiment. For some time there will be a deficit of several millions in the treasury, on account of getting Rome. Besides, there is the task of regulating the necessities of the city. Out of a population of 200,000 souls there were 60,000 who were supported by the Pontifical government in one way or another. Over 40,000 of this number were paupers; the remainder were soldiers, spies, priests, and various other assistants peculiar to the paraphernalia of the late temporal power. With no other possible means of support, these persons have to be provided for. Then there are improvements in buildings, streets, etc., to be looked after. The overflows of the Tiber must be provided against, and a commission of engineers are already devising a plan. Schemes for reclaiming the Campagna and making it fruitful are also under consideration. The public attention is to be directed to higher sites for buildings, and a new city has been begun in the locality of the new station, beginning at the Porta Pia and extending to the church of St. Mary Maggiore. The forum will be entirely cleared of the rubbish that has covered it for centuries. The piles on which the pillars of this famous structure rested have been discovered. The other ruins will be taken care of, and the Pantheon relieved of the houses that have clung to and disfigured it for so many centuries. The ruins of the palace of the Cæsars, late in possession of Napoleon Third, have been bought by the King of Italy, and the excavations go on with increased vigor and interest. A line of forts are to be erected around the city for defensive purposes; and generally there is to be renovation and reawakening in the old home of the Cæsars.—Boston Journal.

☞ The Philadelphia Press states that the Sultan is endeavoring to induce the Jews to immigrate to Palestine, and even offers to sell them the Mosque of Omar, which occupies the site of the ancient Temple on Mount Moriah. Some of the hills around Jerusalem have already become Jewish property.

☞ Twenty-six thousand children are now learning music in the Boston public schools. Fifteen thousand of them are so far advanced as to be competent to take part in a musical festival.

Tent-Meeting.

The Lord willing, the Mass. Mission Tent will be pitched at Groton Junction, Mass., Friday, June 30th, and remain over two Sabbaths. Meetings will be held day and evening. The tent will be on Main street, on land owned by Silas Nutting. It is near a beautiful grove and pond. We wish to have it a family campmeeting. Let the brethren and sisters from abroad come and bring provisions and bedding with them, and stay with us through the meeting. We will try and make it comfortable for lodging for all who come. Especially let all, who can, come on the 4th of July. Come Saturday night, and stop over Sunday and the 4th, if you cannot stop through the meeting.

Fare reduced from Worcester, Clinton and Nashua. Tickets at the several stations good from July 1st till Monday the 10th, for those coming to the meeting. We hope that as many of the faithful laborers in the gospel, as can, will come and help us in this meeting, especially on the 4th.

Enoch Morrill.
L. Boutell.

Alton Bay—Fourth of July.

Meetings will be held at Alton Bay camp-ground July 4th, 1871, commencing at ten o'clock A. M., and continuing through the day. H. L. Hastings and wife, J. G. Smith, and other gospel laborers are invited and expected to attend. Passengers by the Steamer Chocorua will be carried both ways for single fare. Persons will bring their own provision for the day.

J. G. Smith.
H. L. Hastings.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so. For the Committe, J. Couch.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting (at West Wareham, Mass.) will commence on Monday, July 24th, and continue over the following Sabbath. With the blessing of the Lord, we expect an interesting season on this consecrated ground, as in former years; and hope all who can will make arrangements to attend this annual feast.

Henry V. Davis, for the Committee.

Grove Meeting.

The Fourth-of-July grove-meeting, noticed in last week's Crisis, will be held near Great Pond, one mile beyond Kingston Plains. Brethren coming on the B. M. R. R. from the east will stop at East Kingston, which is about two and one half miles from the grove. Those coming from Haverhill and Lawrence will stop at Newton. The writer and others will be there to preach the word. W. C. Stewart.

Grove Meeting.

A meeting will be held in Harmony Grove, South Framingham, Mass., Sunday, July 16th. Brethren from adjoining towns are invited to come and worship with us. Free admittance to the grove. C. Goodrich.

Notice.

The Vermont State Annual Campmeeting will probably be located at or near the village of Bethel, Vt. More soon. E. F. C.

Notice.

The Maine and New Brunswick Advent Christian Conference will hold its first session in Milltown, Me., commencing June 29th, and continuing over the next Lord's day. All are invited to come and help. Preaching brethren are expected to come filled with the blessing of the gospel of peace. For the brethren, M. W. Corliss.

Basket Meeting.

A basket meeting will be held July 4th, in a grove on the farm formerly owned by Luther Bronson, two miles south of Winchester Center, Ct. Sr. M. L. Durand is expected to be present, and others. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Henry Drake.
P. W. Jones.

Notice.

There will be a meeting held in a grove at Emerson's Mills, Levant, Me., on the Fourth of July, and longer, if thought best. All the saints are invited to attend who can make it convenient. Allen Damon.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting held in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday, June 29th, to continue over the following Sabbath, as Brn. James Thorp and H. E. Austin may arrange.

J. W. Taylor.
A. P. Moore.

Maine Mission Tent.

This tent will be ready for meetings in a few days. Brethren wishing it pitched in any localities, will please write to me as soon as possible. Let there be a prompt response to this invitation. For the Tent Committee, R. R. York, Portland, Me.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting at East Lebanon, Me. (Little River Falls), Sundays, Aug. 6th and 13th. Geo. W. Brown, of South Elliott, and others, are expected to preach the word. J. Bickford.

R. I. and East. Ct.

The Rhode Island and Eastern Ct. Conference will hold its next quarterly session with the church at Putnam, Ct., commencing Wednesday, July 5th, at two o'clock P. M. A full attendance is very much desired, and confidently expected. All letters should be directed to the care of H. N. Reed. C. H. Sweet, Clerk.

Family Campmeeting.

This meeting will be held in what is called Casline's neighborhood, at the head of Lewis Valley, commencing July 1st, and hold over Lord's day and the fourth. Bro. Thurber will assist in preaching the word. The big tent will be there. All are invited. Particulars hereafter. Christian Times, please copy. P. W. Hough.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting of the "church of God of Wayland and Loon Lake," will be held at Wallace Station, Steuben Co., N. Y., on July 8th and 9th. All are invited to attend. C. F. Sweet, Pastor.

Notice.

A grove meeting is appointed for Boscawen, N. H., July 4th, near the Gulf school-house. Come, brethren, come to labor for the Lord, and to try and have sinners saved in the kingdom when Jesus comes. If stormy, the meeting will be at the school-house. For the brethren, Simeon Roby.

Quarterly Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting for the northern district of the Advent Christian Conference of Indiana, will meet at four o'clock P. M., on Thursday, before the first Sunday in Aug., 1871, with the church of God at Sand-hill, four miles north of Rochester, on the Michigan road, in Fulton Co. A general invitation is given; and we say come one, come all: come on the first day, and stay till the last. Provision will be made for all who may come. Persons coming on the Michigan road will inquire for Brn. N. Doolittle, or S. S. Cole. Persons coming by R. R. will stop off at Sturgeon, and inquire for Brn. E. Partridge, or I. E. Andrus. By order of conf.,

D. Nash, } Committee.
I. E. Andrus, }

Notice.

The Lord willing, a feast and supper will be given to the poor, maimed, lame and blind, by Lewis Bean, Jay, Bean's Corner, Me., Thursday, June 29th, at six o'clock P. M., in connection with a grove and basket meeting, which will be held at the same place, and onward over the 4th of July. We wish our brethren and sisters to make special effort to help the needy to attend this feast and meeting. A general invitation is given, and provision will be made for all. Come, brethren and sisters, to this meeting, praying the Lord's blessing to strengthen the weak and awaken sinners. Those coming on the cars will stop at Wilton Depot, two miles from the grove. Conveyance will be in readiness by notifying Lewis Bean. The day train is due at five o'clock P. M. Will our brethren bring their tents? Preaching brethren are requested and expected to attend. Come one, come all. Brethren will call on Lewis Bean, A. J. Riggs, Rufus Davis, Arnold Ireland, E. J. Bean, and others. A. A. Abbott, E. M. Haggett, Jesse Gay, Austin Taylor, Mrs. Katie Taylor, and others, will be present.

For order of the church, H. B. Sweet.

Basket Meeting.

There will be a basket meeting July 4th, in Hartshorn's grove, on the Sagamore road, about one mile south from the city of Portsmouth, N. H. Services to commence at 9½ A. M. A cordial invitation is extended to all, especially the churches in Elliot, Kittery, Newcastle, and Rye. May God add his blessing. For the brethren, E. Owen.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, there will be a grove meeting in Barnard, Vt., in Bro. Adams' neighborhood, three miles west of the centre of the town, commencing Sunday, July 2nd, and to hold over the fourth. Free meeting for all to come and worship the living and true God. Z. T. Wood.

Notice.

The grove meeting to be held in Holden, Me., to commence on the 2nd day of July, and continue over the 4th, will be held in the grove on the farm of Lynes Pond, near John Parson's. Friends coming from Bangor and Brewer will keep the telegraph road to Hart's Corner; then turn to the right, and keep the main traveled road. Let each one come prepared to take care of himself, and do something for others as far as practicable. My tent will be pitched for the accommodation of the saints. Hope to see a goodly number of the waiting ones. Israel Damman.

Tent-Meetings.

Those wishing tent-meetings in the State of New York, are requested to write me at South Butler, N. Y., as soon as convenient, in order that early arrangements may be made. Those wishing meetings in the south and west part of the State, will please inform me before the State Campmeeting, so that arrangements can be made at that meeting. It is expected that Bro. Miles Grant will be at some of the meetings. B. P. Stevens.

A New Work.

We have a new work now in press, of about one hundred pages, entitled "The Life beyond Death, in the Home of the Holy: When and where to be enjoyed." By Wm. Sheldon. This work will be ready for circulation in a few weeks. It will be specially adapted to do missionary work in new fields, as well as in older parishes; just the right size and of the right tone to lend to your neighbors, or send to a friend. Probably the price will be: in paper, 25 cents single; $2.00 per dozen, by mail, prepaid; in cloth, 50 cts. single; $4.00 per dozen, by mail, prepaid; and will probably be kept at the Crisis office, Boston; Advent Times office, Buchanan, Mich.; as well as by the author at Brodhead, Wis. Perhaps we may not be able to fill orders before the first of August, but hope to earlier; but the first orders will be filled first. With this understanding, orders may be sent at any time. W. S.

Southern Tract Fund.

At our recent Wisconsin campmeeting, a collection was taken to aid me in scattering gratuitously my forthcoming book (entitled "The Life beyond Death in the Home of the Holy") in the southern field, it having been prepared with reference to missionary or pioneering work. I desire to send at least one thousand copies of this work, with a quantity of my four tracts, into the southern field this coming fall and winter. It will be a pleasure for some to help me raise one hundred dollars for this purpose. Let such direct to Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Green Co., Wis.; or, if more convenient, to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass. W. S.

Notice.

I supplied a number of brethren with works at campmeetings last year, and those who can possibly send me what is due by mail, in June, I wish they would do so, as I am much in debt for printing, and ought to pay up. If any can aid me in throwing off the unpleasant burden of being in debt, it will be thankfully received. Age and health prevent my obtaining means to live and pay debts as formerly. Direct to J. Blain, Buffalo, N. Y.

Meetings at Bonny Eagle, Me.

For the information of friends residing at a distance from Bonny Eagle, Me., who may desire to meet with us occasionally, I will say that Eld. C. H. Sweet, of Rhode Island, having been invited to settle here, has decided to come and remain as long as may seem duty. Preaching every Sunday, at 10½ A. M., and 1 P. M.; Sunday school at 9½ A. M. Prayer meeting at 5 P. M.; also Tuesday and Friday evenings. All these services are held in the Chapel. T. J. Rumery, Ch. Elder.

German Tracts.

I will send my German Tracts gratis (except postage), to any one who wants them for himself, or to distribute. I have a good supply. Send your orders to L. Reimer, 1006 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Notice.

All papers, letters and postal matter of any kind, must be sent to Sandy Hill, N. Y., in order to reach me until further notice. A. W. Sibley.

One of the best ever published on the above subject. Just the thing to scatter widely. Price, 3 cts. single; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail. Ag't.

JUST PUBLISHED.

By the Advent Christian Publication Society, a new Tract, entitled, "The Judgment Impending: Prophecy and Chronology converging to one Grand Culmination." By Bro. L. T. Cunningham. 52 pp. Price, 8 cents per copy. Postage, 2 cts. 75 cts. per dozen. $5.00 per one hundred. Ag't.

NEW TRACTS.

Who are Sadducees? or, Truth Vindicated. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Sadduceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By Geo. Thomson.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A Colporteur's Notes, by John B. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office. Ag't.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. Life and Death Theology: or, The Scriptural Doctrines of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. Immaterialism: or, The Doctrines of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that these errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. Death and the Dead, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single; postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. The Coming Judgment: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred, by express.

It will do much good.

THE CROSS.

Jesus, shall the cross forever
Lay its burden on my heart?
Shall the toil and labor never
From my weary soul depart?
Will it always be temptation?
Always doubt, mistrust and fear?
Dangers, too, and sad vexation?
Is no rest permitted here?

Shall I always pine in sadness,
Grieving o'er my life of sin?
Will my heart ne'er know the gladness
Of my Savior's love within,
And the presence pure and holy
Of the blessed Comforter?
Comes it always thus so slowly?
Can, O can it long defer?

"Come to me, ye lone and dreary,"
Hear the voice of promise speak—
"All ye strickened ones and weary,
Heavy burdened, faint and weak,
Come to me in every sorrow,
Come and I will give you rest;
Come to-day, wait not to-morrow,
And thou surely shalt be blest.

MY POSITION DEFINED.

Consistency—A Radical Reformation.

I oppose all secret societies, moral, religious, and political. I oppose Freemasonry, not Freemasons. Among the latter I number many personal friends; friends in and out of the church of Christ. These understand my position, and not a few of them, though Masons, agree with me on this subject. If I have seemed to make Freemasonry a speciality, it is because as a secret society, it ranks higher than other secret societies; but I am none the less opposed to other societies of the kind, and believe Freemasonry to be the father of all modern secret societies, moral, political, and religious. The history of the world, secular and ecclesiastical, demonstrates that organized secrecy is an element of darkness, corruption, oppression, and despotism. No good cause needs or requires it, and no bad cause should be allowed to have it; and all human legislation which sanctions or allows it, is not only defective but pernicious. Secret societies, with or without design, are conspiracies of the minority against the majority; and should not be sanctioned by any civil or republican government. Secret societies are injurious to society, religious and political. Their influence for evil is felt and seen in church and state; and the sooner they are abolished by the legislative power the better for the church, the state, the nation, and the world.

I have never declined fellowship with any professing christian on account of his belonging to any secret order, and in this regard I claim to have been exceedingly tolerant and very charitable; for it would be an easy matter to prove their Ashdodical and Babylonish character. Those christians, who belong to these secret organizations, are in Babylon, and the divine injunction, "Come out of her, my people," is highly appropriate. They are "unequally yoked" with unbelievers, and the gospel demands that they be divorced. I love my brethren, but I love the truth more, and and will never consent to sacrifice the cause of Christ on the altar of human friendship.

Those disciples of Christ, who have joined and still adhere to these secret orders, have not so learned Christ. They do not understand the requirements of the gospel, or else they are ignorant of the character of the institutions to which they have attached themselves. Thousands of Romanists are ignorant of Romanism. Hundreds of Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and others, are ignorant of their respective systems of faith; and, no doubt, there are many disciples who are ignorant of the great principles which we, as a people, advocate; and there is not the slightest doubt but there are thousands of Masons who know little or nothing of Freemasonry; and hence they see in it nothing inconsistent with the religion of Christ; they are not sufficiently informed to discriminate between light and darkness, truth and error. And hence arises the necessity of a full discussion of this subject in all its relations to the church of Christ, that the people may understand the vast difference between the gospel of Christ, and this spurious system of morality and religion. This discussion should be conducted in a fair, open, and candid manner, pro et con; and, for myself, I am resolved thus to conduct it. Masonry, like all other systems of faith and practice, is a legitimate subject of investigation; and its friends may rest assured that not "one stone" in this "mystic temple," will remain unturned in order to bring to light the hidden things of darkness. The question has been raised, and the investigation began; and our Masonic brethren may rest assured it will not cease until it has swept over church and state, north, south, east, and west.

The disciples of Christ must be consistent if they would win the confidence of truth-seekers, and not stultify themselves before the world. But there is no consistency in opposing open or public abuses and perversions of christianity, and approving, and practicing others equally great if not greater, because they are secret, and in our estimation unknown to our brethren. For some time past a rather bitter controversy has been conducted in our western papers on the subject of instrumental music in churches, and in some cases division and ill feeling among the brethren have been the result. I desire to suggest to these good brethren that the question of music in churches dwindles into insignificance in the presence of secretism among the people of God. Why oppose instrumental music in Christian worship, and practice it in Masonic worship?

Some of the disciples of Christ are terribly afraid of missionary societies and co-operative assemblies, regarding them as anti-scriptural; but they have no scruples about belonging to the "Lodge," "Chapter," or the "Commandery." They have no scruples about paying their money freely and liberally into the treasury of secret societies, but will hold up their hands with holy horror at the idea of paying any thing into the treasury of a missionary society, which, in a subordinate sense, may be regarded as the treasury of the church. We must be consistent, or else give up our distinctive and peculiar plea for primitive christianity.

Let none suppose I intend to make anti-secretism the sum total of effort in this Quarterly. It is only one theme among many, but the times demand that it be made a specialty until fully and thoroughly ventilated. I have been accused of being a hobbyist because I have in the course of my editorial life made a speciality of several themes for the time being; but if this makes one a hobbyist, then every one who writes a book, or a series of articles on a particular subject, is a hobbyist. But I am not anxious to exonerate myself from this charge, and especially so when I find myself in company with such men as the editors of our leading papers, who have made the missionary and music questions specialties for years. In my case, however, the trouble is, I think, that I am riding not my own, but the hobby of some one else. Masonry is the hobby of Masons, and they want no outside company in riding it; and as I persist in ventilating the subject, to many of them, both in and out of the church, it becomes a great annoyance. By some in the church, preachers as well as private members, I have been religiously ostracised, not in the Athenian sense of being banished, but in being placed under the ban, having the "cold-shoulder" turned to me, and in being christianly and ministerially slighted by preachers and members much younger than myself; and who, so far as understanding the gospel and the high claims of original christianity is concerned, need to "tarry at Jericho till their beards be grown."

I have been made to think often and sadly of the words: "And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name." Not to buy of, or sell to, those who differ from us, simply because they do differ from, and are opposed to us, is the thought suggested by this text. I will not buy your books, nor hear you preach, because you are opposed to some system I love and idolize, is both Satanic and Romanish. It is a species of intolreance disgraceful to the age in which we live, and against which every christian and every enlightened citizen should set their faces like a flint. Masonry begets a spirit of intolerance in its members. I do not charge that all Masons are intolerant. Some rise above the spirit of the system, and are as kind and tolerant as other men; but the masses of the Fraternity are exceedingly restive under any attempt to investigate and discuss the subject; and will, if possible, make you feel their influence. And that influence is exerted by Masons of the world through Masons who are members of the church, against their own brethren in Christ, and in favor of Masonry. The writer has been subjected to this influence wielded by Masons over both churches and preachers. A disposition has been manifested to sacrifice me on the altar of Masonry. Starve him out, if he will not otherwise surrender, has been the spirit manifested by some. But I stand firmly, trusting in the living God, and urgently asking all who are "contending for the faith once delivered to the saints;" and all who are opposed to the sinister and wily workings of secretism, to unite with me in opposing the powers of darkness, and establishing the truth as it is in Jesus. I never felt stronger in spirit than now; and while Masonry, like Romanism, may continue until the Lord comes, I shall not fail to labor to sever it, and its baleful influences, from the church of Christ. Success to some extent has attended my humble efforts, and when I shall sleep in the silent grave, the influences and efforts now being made against secret societies, will tell upon the generations to come.

Returning from this slight digression, I will remark that, while some of the "Fraternity" have neither treated me courteously or christianly, there have been some noble exceptions; and I am happy to record the fact that I have a number of choice and beloved friends who are Masons; men who rise above the prejudice and spirit secret societies so frequently engender, and who have treated me with kind christian regard. I appreciate their kindness, and, while I shall ever oppose what I believe to be wrong, I shall always reciprocate that christian affection which has been extended to me.

I plead for a radical reformation, not radical in any party sense, but fundamental, thorough, and scriptural; and nothing short of this will fill my conceptions of christian duty. And if the Lord's people will give me their prayers, their sympathies, and their material aid, I will, with the help of the Lord, continue to labor on for the enlightenment of the world, and the purification of the church, until the great Captain of my salvation shall give me a final discharge from earthly toil. Reformation, and not division, is my object, and for this I shall not cease to plead. Shall I have the co-operation of those who plead professedly for primitive christianity? I hope to have the co-operation of every friend of Jesus the Christ in opposition to Anti-Christ in every form.

EXTRACTS.

SELECTED BY W. KELLAWAY.

If you have taken a wrong position, abandon it; if you have committed an error, correct it. But if your conscience is satisfied with the part you have acted, or the duty you have performed, tranquil and self-possessed, abide the issue. If an enemy revile you, revile not in return; and if that enemy have talents, honor them; if he merits respect, render it unto him. Favor his interests, deal gently with his failings, shield his fame. Do even more than this. If he be in affliction, sympathize with him; if he be poor, feed him; if naked, clothe him, and let his loins be warmed with the fleeces of your flock; and as for the injury you may have suffered, nobly forgive it, and pray God that it may be forgiven. By so doing, you will heap coals of fire upon his head—coals not to consume, but to melt him unto righteousness. This, if I may speak so, is the most effectual and only laudable revenge.—Pres. Nott.

CREEDS.—Long and particular human tests have been the occasion of strife and division without end. Beware of them. If they contain nothing but what is in the Scriptures, they are superfluous; if they contain more, as certainly pernicious. The pure volume of inspiration is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. Its doctrines are definite and explicit, as infinite wisdom saw fit they should be.—Rogers' Sermons.

HAPPINESS.—Upon whatsoever foundation happiness is built, when that foundation fails, happiness must be destroyed; for which reason, it is wisdom to choose such a foundation for it as is not liable to destructive accidents. If happiness be founded upon riches, it lies at the mercy of loss, decay, oppression, war, and tyranny; if upon fine houses and costly furniture, one spark of fire is able to consume it; if upon wife, children, friends, health or life, a thousand diseases, and ten thousand accidents, have power to destroy it; but if it be founded on the infinite bounty and goodness of God, and upon those virtues which are pleasing in his sight, its foundation is immovable, and its duration eternal.—Anon.

[Let all remember this.—ED.

In the conduct of Christ, we see that we are never to go aside either to meet or to miss our cross.

HIS COMING—OUR HOPE.

G. K. GIBSON.

Christ is coming! Oh, what a blessed thought! He who is our dear Savior, who died that we might live, and live forever. He suffered to effect our redemption from the dark charnel house of death. He groaned and bled, and died—gave all he had to purchase the field in which is hid the precious treasure, the jewels; and they are his, and the field too is his. Bless his name! The ransomed ones, like precious diamonds set in gold, shall have a sitting in the beautiful city of God, whose streets are pure gold, sanctified to the great Creator's use. The city of diamonds, set in pearls and precious stones, the glorious signet of the great Father, shall be set in the beautiful restituted earth, the field bought and fitted up, purified, polished, and engraven with his own name, and ready for the setting of those precious jewels, made such by sacrifice. Who can contemplate upon the "blessed hope," the scenes of the future, made known to us by the promises of God, without longing for the appearing of Christ?

He it is who brings his reward with him. 'Tis true, he is to rule with a rod of iron, and destroy his enemies; but christians are his, and why should they not rejoice in every token of his advent? Love him, and not love his appearing! Love him, and not love to be made like him! Love him, and not love to see him as he is! Love him, and not love to be glorified in the body as he is! Love him, and not love his way of perfecting his own work of grace! Love him, and not love the place he loves, prepares and sanctifies! Love him, and not love his jewels (although in the crude state) whom he loves and blesses! Love him, and not love to be a jewel, set as a diadem in the crown of his glory when he shall come to consummate the work of glory to the glory of God the Father, forever and ever!

"WHOSE BUSINESS IS IT?"

E. OWEN.

"Whose business is it," who can tell?
If men prefer the path to hell,
Why, let them go, restrain them not,
Once passed away, they're soon forgot.

"Whose business is it?" eat and drink,
And wake and sleep, nor stop to think
How dying men may license take
From your elastic conscience' sake.

"Whose business is it?" buy and sell,
Get gain, make money, "salt it" well,
Nor question ask, nor thought retain,
If you encourage heavenly gain.

"Whose business is it?" talk it out,
The Lord will come without a doubt;
Yes, talk it everywhere you go,
But do you live it? I would know.

"Whose business is it?" spit around,
Then give the trump the certain sound;
Preach long or loud, preach short or low,
Because some other man does so.

"Whose business is it?" pick and choose,
Where you will tell the heavenly news,
Nor go where pay will be in doubt,
Lest meal and oil should both run out.

Dear gracious Lord, help me to know,
What I can do for thee below;
"Be this my one great business here,"
To follow thee, nor man to fear.

To preach as thou shalt me require,
Both loud and long, if thou inspire;
To eat and drink as in thy fear,
And ever feel thy Spirit near.

MANNA.

[From Bishop Hall's "Meditations."]

— Good may not be refused, because the means are accidentally evil; honey is honey still, though in a dead lion. Those are less wise and more scrupulous than Samson, who abhor the graces of God, because they find them in ill vessels. One cares not for the preacher's true doctrine, because his life is evil; another will not take a good receipt from the hand of a physician, because he is given to unlawful studies; a third will not receive a deserved contribution from the hands of a usurer? It is weak neglect not to take the honey, because we hate the lion. God's children have a right to their father's blessings wheresoever they find them.

— He who made the wilderness comfortable, will make Jordan dry; he will overcome all difficulties for us; and those things, which we most feared, will he make most sovereign and beneficial to us. O God, as we have trusted thee with the beginning, so will we trust thee with the finishing of our glory. Faithful art thou who hast promised, who wilt also do it.

— Injurious actions, healed by free forgiveness, are as not done; and as a bone, once broken, is stronger after well setting, so is love after reconcilement. But as wounds, once healed, leave a scar behind them, so remitted injuries leave commonly in the actors a guilty remembrance.

— Never any man prayed for direction in the duties of God, and was repulsed: rather will God send an angel from heaven to instruct us, than our good desires shall be rendered vain.

— Wheresoever God chastises, there he is, yea, there he is in mercy. Nothing more proves us his, than his stripes; he will not bestow correction where he does not love.

— Miserable is that devotion that troubles us in the performance; nothing is more pleasant than the acts of true piety.

JESUS IS COMING.

M. E. CHUTE.

O how it thrills my heart with joy this morning, the blessed thought that Jesus is soon coming to receive me into his glorious kingdom, where I shall go no more out forever, but shall rest secure with Jesus at home. I once cherished fond hopes for the future in this life; but I have been led to see how vain and transitory are the things of earth. The pleasures soon fade away, and I now look forward to something far more blessed than can be found in this world of sin and sorrow. My heart clings to no earthly object. My affections are placed on Christ, and the rich inheritance that he has in store for me, which he will give me at his coming. O, my heart praises God this morning for his wonderful goodness to me, in bringing me out into the light of this glorious gospel, as it is in Christ Jesus. O glorious, all-glorious! And I want to tell it unto others. As freely as I have received, as freely I will give. It is too blessed to keep to myself. I cannot, I must impart it to others. Although I meet with much opposition, I care not, I will hold Jesus Christ and his blessed truth up high, that all may see it.

There is not much time in which to work, and the more we do for the Master, in what little time that remains, the more glorious will be our reward. And then we should not think of this only, but remember that however much we do, we can never repay the debt of gratitude we owe. So let us be diligent in laboring for Him. Falter not by the way. How much of our precious time has gone to waste while we are standing idly looking on. O how could we be so careless and thoughtless, when so many poor souls were rushing madly down the broad road to ruin and destruction. Let us now bestir ourselves to action; rise up like good soldiers of the cross; buckle on the whole armor of Christ; stand firm on the battle-field, daunted by nothing, until Jesus comes to give us the victory.

REPORT

OF THE MAINE S. A. C. CONFERENCE.

Met in Union Hall, Portland, according to appointment, June 13th, 1871. After prayer, the meeting was called to order by the President, Elder C. Goud. The call for the conference was read, the names of the ministers belonging to the conference reported, credentials of delegates read, as follows: From Biddeford church, Geo. Leach, F. B. Staples, F. M. Gove, J. Hill, Benj. B. Hill, James W. Sands. Hollis Center, Timothy Carle, Simon G. Rumery. Bonny Eagle, Eld. C. F. Sweat. Portland, H. C. Freeman, S. K. Dyer, E. G. Osgood, George Humphrey, Gideon Elden. Elder John Ridley, of Prospect Ferry, was presented for membership, and was received into the conference.

On motion, a committee of three—Elders Jesse Gay, R. R. York, and F. M. Gove, were appointed by the Chair, as business committee. While the committee were preparing business, the time was occupied by the conference in singing and speaking. Business committee reported, which report was accepted. After reading the petition of the church to the conference, and the statements of the church committee addressed to the conference, embodying their view of the cause why certain brethren asked and obtained their dismission from the church, in Dec., 1868, and of their subsequent course in claiming to be the church, and of recently starting a separate meeting under that claim; the business pertaining to these difficulties was laid on the table to be taken up to-morrow, at ten o'clock A. M. Adjourned.

Wednesday, 14th, 8½ o'clock A. M., met as per adjournment. After prayer, some discussion was had in regard to the form of business; after which the case of I. P. S. Hampson was taken up. He being absent, the Secretary stated that Bro. H. had requested him to state to the conference his desire to have his case examined by a council, at Biddeford; and if it was acceptable to the conference, he would like that Elds. C. Goud, W. H. Mitchell, and J. A. Libby be that council. It was voted that the above named brethren be that council, with instructions to make a public report through the Crisis of their decision, which shall be final as far as the conference is concerned.

At ten o'clock, the item which related to troubles in Portland was taken from the table. At this point a committee from the brethren worshiping in "Cushman Hall" came before the conference, in response to the invitation which had been officially extended to them by the church at "Union Hall" through the conference, several weeks previous. The petition of the church was again read, also the declaration and address of their committee. After various statements and relations of former actions, as causes of division, the committee from "Cushman Hall" desired until two o'clock P. M. to prepare their charges against the church, and statement of causes of division, which was granted. Adjourned.

Met at 2 o'clock P. M. After prayer, the committee from the brethren worshiping in "Cushman Hall" presented their statement and charges. Conference voted to entertain the matters of difficulty existing in Portland, as requested by the petition of the church, for investigation. The chairman then put the question to the committee from "Cushman Hall," whether they would mutually enter the investigation, and abide the decision of conference or conference council? After much questioning, they finally consented to submit the whole matter mutually to the conference, and abide the decision of the conference, or its council.

Voted, to choose a council of seven for the investigation.

Voted, that the Chair appoint a committee of three to nominate said council. Bro. W. H. Mitchell, J. A. Libby and E. M. Haggett were appointed. This committee nominated C. Goud, F. A. Baker, Jesse Gay, A. W. Taylor, John Stevens, John Meguire, and J. T. Jordan. The nomination was accepted and adopted. Bro. Taylor wished to be discharged, and have his place supplied by Bro. Wm. H. Mitchell. Bro. Jesse Gay wished to be discharged, and let his place be supplied by Bro. J. A. Libby; both of which were granted.

Voted, to amend the constitution of our conference in Article 4, by inserting after—"The Executive Board shall"—(have power to appoint a council in absence of conference, to investigate any difficulties which may arise between churches or ministers, when petitioned to do so; and report their decisions to the next session of conference for final decision), "and call an extra session of conference, at such time and place as they judge best for its welfare, always previously giving —— weeks' notice. Adjourned.

Thursday, 8½ o'clock A. M., met. After prayer, the Tent and Mission interest was called up, and freely discussed; many remarks were made which showed the tent-mission work to be one of much importance as an instrumentality in publishing the word of life and the salvation of sinners. The conference then passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That whoever takes charge of the Mission Tent hereafter shall make reports of their labors through the Crisis, at proper intervals.

In considering what can be done to awaken the brethren to the importance of contributing funds to sustain the Maine mission work, it was shown that four brethren had solicited and collected over fifty dollars on the plan of "mission membership"; and if there had been an equal effort made by all our Elders, one thousand dollars could have been easily raised. It was

Resolved, That we urge upon the friends of the Advent cause in Maine the importance of practical action upon the resolution adopted at Bangor conference, and thereby raise means for mission and tract work.

That resolution was, "That we ask all our brethren, sisters, children, and friends, to become members of the 'Maine Second Advent Mission Society,' by the payment annually of one dollar, more or less, as they feel able, into its treasury."

Next heard partial reports from the committee, and treasurer, of the tent-mission and tract cause; but as they were not prepared to to report in full, it was deferred till the regular yearly session.

2 o'clock P. M. After prayer, Voted, to dismiss Bro. C. H. Leverton, by his request, from this conference, to join some other State conference. Voted, to receive Bro. Stephen Taylor, of Byron, as member of this conference.

ON CAMPMEETINGS.

Resolved, That we as a conference are in sympathy with campmeetings in Maine, as held at Mechanics Falls, and Pittsfield, and will use our influence to make them interesting and profitable.

Resolved, That we form what shall be called a "Ministerial Bible School," to be held in such localities as shall best accommodate the brethren, as often as once in three months. The first will meet at South Windham the last Tuesday in October next.

Voted, That the Secretary prepare a report of this conference to be published in the World's Crisis. Adjourned.

The three evenings during our conference we had preaching by Elders John Ridley, Wm. H. Mitchell, and J. A. Libby, followed by some warm and stirring exhortations. They were precious seasons in the Lord. Once more we parted to go to our several fields of labor, with the full conviction that Jesus will soon come, and give eternal life and rest to his church.

I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

A TRUE TEST.

In the "Prophetic Times" for June and July, we find the following excellent thoughts, in relation to a preparation for Christ's coming:—

"Try all your employment of time by the test of Christ's second coming. Place in this balance your amusements, your books, your companions, your manner of conversation, your daily behavior in all the relations of life. Measure all by this measure,—'The night is far spent and the day is at hand. Am I living as a child of the night, or as one who looks for the day?' Do this, and you will cast off the works of darkness.

But how are you to put on the armor of light? Listen to me once more, and I will tell you. You ought to aim at every grace and habit which becomes a believer in Christ, and a child of God, and a citizen of a heavenly kingdom. You ought not to leave eminent holiness and spirituality to a few, as if none but a few favored ones could be eminent saints. You ought to labor to wear the armor of light yourself, the girdle of truth, the breastplate of righteousness, the helmet of hope, and the sword of the Spirit. (Ephes. 6: 14–17.) Wherever you may live, and whatever may be your trials—however great your difficulties, and however small your helps—nothing should prevent your aiming at the highest standard, to behave like one who believes that Christ is coming again.

You should resolve, by God's help, so to live, that the day of Christ shall find you needing as little change as possible. You should seek to have tastes so heavenly, affections so spiritual, a will so subdued, a mind so unworldly, that when the Lord appears you may be thoroughly in tune for his kingdom."

SABBATH SCHOOLS.

I. L. LESLIE.

As a people, we have not taken that interest in Sabbath Schools that other classes of Christians have. In many places, where we have regular preaching and worship, there is no effort made for the religious instruction of the children. Some have given as an excuse for not having a Sabbath School, the small number of children in the place or congregation. They say, "We cannot form a Sabbath School, for we have only a dozen or less children who attend our meeting. We have not children enough to make a school." We think this should never be offered as an excuse for the neglect of this work in the church, by those who have children, and profess to be christians. We think if there be but one child in the congregation, it should have instruction, and that kind which children need. But if there does not seem to be a sufficient number of children in the congregation to make up a Sabbath School, then we say take the congregation itself, and let all unite to form the school, and thus include what children there are, and so extend to them the instruction which they need in the word of God.

There are too few Bible classes in our congregations. There is too much leaning upon the ministry and preaching, and too little investigation of the Scriptures by each member of the congregation. Let a Sabbath School, including a Bible class, be formed wherever there is a regular meeting, whether it be every Sabbath or otherwise; and all unite and belong to it. The result will always be good, and the light will be greatly increased thereby. A Sabbath School never hurt the preaching or hindered the truth from being seen, or from spreading. Therefore, don't go without the Sabbath School, though there be but few at first with which to begin it.

HINTS TO PREACHERS.

Make no apologies. If you have the Lord's message declare it; if not, hold your peace. Have short preface and introductions. Say your best things first; and stop before you get prosy. Do not spoil the appetite for dinner by too much thin soup. Leave yourself out of the pulpit and take Jesus in. Defend the gospel, and let the Lord defend you and your character.

Do not get excited too soon. Do not run away from your hearers. Engine driving-wheels whirl fast on an icy track, but when they draw anything they go slower. It takes a cold hammer to bend hot iron. Heat up the people, but keep the hammer wet and cool; do not bawl and scream. Too much water stops mill wheels, and too much noise drowns sense. Powder is not shot. Thunder is harmless. Lightning kills. If you have lightning you can afford to thunder.

Do not repeat sentences, saying, "As I said before;" if you said it before, say something else after. Do not end sentences, passages of Scripture or quotations, with "and so forth;" say what you mean and stop. Leave out all words you cannot define. Stop preaching and talk to folks. Come down from your stilted ways and sacred tones, and "become as a little child." Tell stories; Jesus did, and the common people heard him gladly. Relate your experience; Paul did, and you can hardly do better than he. One fact that you have seen or felt is worth a bushel of moldy ideas dug out of moldier books. Change the subject if it goes hard. Do not preach till the middle of your sermon buries the beginning and is buried by the end. Beware of long prayers, except in your closet. Where weariness begins, devotion ends. Look people in the face, and live as if you are not ashamed of them.

☞ An old negro in the West Indies was very anxious to learn to read the Bible. He lived a long way from the missionary's house, and yet he would come to learn a lesson whenever he had time. It was such hard work, and he made such little progress, that the missionary got tired, and told him one day that he had better give it up. "No, massa," said he, with great earnestness, "me nebber gives it up till me die." And pointing with his finger to the beautiful words which he had just spelled out in John iii., 16, "God so loved the world," etc., he said with tears in his eyes, "It's worth all de trouble, massa, to read dat one verse!"—Sel.

PEWS.—What a sermon might we not preach upon these little boxes!—small abiding-places of earthly satisfaction! Sanctuaries for self-complacency!—in God's own house, the chosen chambers for man's self-glorification! What an instructive colloquy might not the deal bench of the poor church-goer hold with the soft-cushioned seat of the miserable sinners who once a week go through the ceremony of seeming to think themselves dust, and with faces steeped in a two-hours' humility, make up their minds to endure a talk of the judgment!

☞ THE Religious Herald says: We met with this witty and unanswerable retort in a sketch of a short trip through a portion of Ireland. The writer is conversing with his car driver: "You are a Catholic, Jimmy?" "Yes, your honor." "And you pray to the Virgin Mary?" "I do, your honor." "Well, there's no doubt she was a good woman. The Bible says so. But she may have been no better than your mother, or mine." "That's true, your honor. But then you'll allow there's mighty difference in their children."

TRY IT AGAIN.

Every thing should be done to the letter,
And done with might and with main,
And if you think it might have been better,
Try it again.

Never despair, but keep a bright face;—
The little word can't O disdain;
And if you find you don't win the first race,
Try it again.

But the sunshine comes after a rain;
Ah! if you want to have the clouds burst,
Try it again.

Never look on the side that's so dark,
But the storm and the tempest disdain;
If at first you fall short of your mark,
Try it again.

If by two steps behind to one up the steep,
You the height of ambition don't gain;
Only look up, and plant firmer your feet,
And try it again.

LAME JIMMY.

A few days ago I was passing through a pretty, shady street, where some boys were playing at base-ball. Among their number was a little lame fellow, seemingly about twelve years old—a pale, sickly-looking child, supported on two crutches, and who evidently found much difficulty in walking, even with such assistance.

The lame boy wished to join the game; for he did not seem to see how much his infirmity would be in his own way, and how much it would hinder the progress of such an active sport as base-ball.

His companions, good-naturedly enough, tried to persuade him to stand at one side and let another take his place; and I was glad to notice that none of them hinted that he would be in the way, but that they all objected for fear he would hurt himself.

"Why, Jimmy," said one, at last, "you can't run, you know."

"O hush," said another, the tallest boy in the party, "never mind, I'll run for him, and you can count it for him," and he took his place by Jimmy's side, prepared to act. "If you were like him," he said aside to the other boys, "you wouldn't want to be told of it all the time."

As I passed on I thought to myself, that boy is a true gentleman.—Ex.

"THAT YE RESIST NOT EVIL."

Father," said Eustace, "I do not like to kill rabbits as well as I do woodchucks."

"Why, my son," asked the father.

"Because," replied Eustace, "rabbits will not fight back again. They lie right down and die, and look so pitiful and beseeching, and seem to say, 'I forgive you.'"

"How do you feel when you kill woodchucks?" asked the father.

"Oh, they get angry, and bite, and fight back again. They look fierce and savage, and try to keep me from killing them. That makes me angry, and then I can kill them. I never feel bad for killing woodchucks."

This tells the whole story. Children are cut to the heart when they get angry with others, and try to quarrel, and find that they will not get angry, nor fight back again. Never try to fight back is the way to conquer.—Youth's Companion.

LITTLE SINS.—In a California forest of a thousand acres you can scarcely find a tree that is not dead and crumbling to decay. No fire has swept over it, no lightning scathed those naked, bleaching pines. This ruin was wrought by a little insect's larvæ, no larger than a grain of rice. What a hundred axe men could not accomplish by years of hard labor, this seemingly insignificant insect sent its feeble offspring to perform. One alone could have little power, it is true, but millions were marshalled, and all the skill of man could not stay their course.

Such is the power of little sins. Performing the same act over, for even two or three times in succession, and the habit is formed.—Young People's Helper.

ASHAMED TO TELL MOTHER.—Such was a little boy's reply to his comrades who were trying to tempt him to do wrong.

"But you need not tell her, no one will know anything about it."

"I would know all about it myself, and I'd feel mighty mean if I couldn't tell mother."

"It's a pity you wasn't a girl. The idea of a boy running and telling his mother every little thing!"

"You may laugh if you want to," said the noble boy, "but I've made up my mind never, as long as I live, to do anything I would be ashamed to tell my mother."

Noble resolve, and one which will make almost any life true and useful. Let it be the rule of every boy and girl to do nothing of which they would be ashamed to tell mother.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT.—A small boy frequented a carpenter's shop where the workmen were in the habit of taking their grog, as they were ashamed to be seen going to the store for it. They often importuned the boy to go to the groggery and get it for them, but he always refused. When they found persuasion would not answer, they reproached him with being unkind and lazy. "Ask me," said the boy in a tone of noble indignation, "to go on any other errand, and I will go; but I can't nor won't get you rum!"—Temperance Banner.

THE flower of youth never appears more beautiful than when it bends toward the Sun of Righteousness.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

WATER DRINKING IN HOT WEATHER.—A subscriber who has injured himself by drinking too much water on a hot day, while engaged in the harvest-field, asks us if it would not be better to use some other drink, as tea or coffee. We think that there are more persons injured by drinking artificial drinks in the hay-field than by drinking water. It is true that drinking large quantities of cold water, when one is heated and thirsty, is injurious, and should not be allowed. But if people would use a little sense and less salt, butter, meat, fish, cake, and greasy food, they would not suffer so much with thirst, and there would be little occasion to complain of the water's producing injury. Fruits, and the fresh unfermented juices of fruits, too, if more freely used in hot weather, would release the system from the need of so much water, and promote health. We speak from knowledge on this subject, having observed the experiments with all sorts of drinks. Coffee is a favorite drink in the hayfield for many, but it destroys the appetite and corrupts the blood, in the end producing fever and weakness, and should not be used.—Herald of Health.

WHAT THE MICROSCOPE REVEALS, WITH A MORAL.—Lewenhoeck tells us of an insect seen with the microscope of which twenty-seven millions would only equal a mite.

Insects of various kinds may be seen in the cavities of a grain of sand.

Mould is a forest of beautiful trees, with the branches, leaves, and fruit.

Butterflies are fully feathered.

Hairs are hollow tubes.

The surface of our bodies is covered with scales like a fish; a single grain of sand would cover one hundred and fifty of these scales, and yet a scale covers five hundred pores. Through these narrow openings the sweat forces itself like water through a sieve.

The mites make five hundred steps a second.

Each drop of stagnant water contains a world of animated beings, swimming with as much liberty as whales in the sea.

Each leaf has a colony of insects grazing on it, like cows on a meadow.

Moral: Have some care as to the air you breathe, the food you eat, and the water you drink.—Home and Health.

CARPETS, DUST, AND DISEASE.—An atmosphere impregnated with the dust which has been gathered in carpets and remained there for a considerable length of time is positively unhealthy. The dust after being stagnant for some time, especially in warm weather, presents myriads of animalculæ. To prevent the evil the carpets should be cleaned often. The dust should be thoroughly removed every month. The trouble of taking up, shaking, and replacing will be amply repaid, first, in the matter of health, and secondly, in preserving the carpet. We advise the good housewives—there are many—to make a note of this.—Ibid.

A CURE FOR LOW SPIRITS.—Exercise for the body, occupation for the mind; these are the grand constituents of health and happiness, the cardinal points upon which everything turns. Motion seems to be a great preserving principle of nature, to which even inanimate things are subject; for the winds, waves, the earth itself, are restless, and the waving of trees, shrubs, and flowers is known to be an essential part of their economy. A fixed rule of taking several hours' exercise every day, if possible, in the open air, if not, under cover, will be almost certain to secure one exemption from disease, as well as from attacks of low spirits, ennui—that monster who is ever waylaying the rich indolent.—Ex.

SIMPLICITY IN FOOD.—Young persons can hardly overestimate the advantages of plain, simple food, in maintaining health and promoting longevity. Mixed dishes and high seasonings, are the foes of old age, as well as the common causes of rheumatic affections, bilious attacks, dyspepsia, colic, etc. The difference between a simple dietary; and the ordinary compounded and seasoned dishes is just the difference between dying at forty or sixty or at eighty or one hundred. Cornaro, whose health broke down at forty, adopted a very simple and regular plan of diet, by means of which he regained good health; and by adhering rigidly to it he lived to nearly one hundred years of age.—Sel.

TEMPERANCE puts wood on the fire, meal in the tub, money in the purse, credit in the country, contentment in the house, clothes on the children, vigor in the body, intelligence in the brain, and spirit in the whole constitution.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"BLESSED ARE THOSE SERVANTS."

Blessed are the faithful servants,
Who are watching for the Lord;
They shall meet his full approval,
They receive his great reward;
With their Lord shall enter in,
Dwell forever with their King.

Blessed are the faithful servants,
Who are toiling all the day;
Bearing all the heat and burden
Of the earthly pilgrim way;
They shall enter into rest,
With the Lord be ever blest.

Blessed are the faithful servants,
Who are watching unto prayer;
Overcoming fierce temptation,
Casting on the Lord their care;
They shall reach the blessed shore,
Where the tempter tempts no more.

Blessed are the faithful servants,
Who with meekness bear the cross;
For the love that Jesus bears them,
Counting all things else but loss;
Soon their sufferings shall be o'er,
And the cross be felt no more.

Blessed are the faithful servants,
Who the Master's battles fight;
Causing right o'er wrong to triumph,
Chasing darkness with the light;
More than victors they shall be,
Crowned with joy eternally.

Blessed are the faithful servants,
Who the Savior's impress wear;
Soon they shall be wholly like him,
And his perfect image bear;
They shall see him as he is
In the land of light and bliss.

BAPTISM—A GENUINE PARAGRAPH.

WM. KELLAWAY.

> "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned."—MARK.

Nearly everybody knows this text. The Pedo-Baptists know it too. And they know if it is allowed to stay in the Bible unquestioned, which way it looks. And if taken exactly as it reads, believers ought to be baptized, or expose themselves to great risk—the risk of disobedience. No one can assert, if these words are authentic, that immersion is a rite of no importance. The text is one of the strongest and most conclusive in the Bible. It is a very Gibralter, "our enemies being judges." What can they do with it? What they have—tossed it about, trifled with it, played with it, doubted its authenticity. We learn from them that the Cod. Vaticanus MS. does not contain the Greek text from v. 9 to the end of the chapter; and, also, that it is found wanting in some of the other old manuscripts. This omission they avail themselves of, and so reject the passage as spurious. But a little knowledge is sometimes a dangerous thing; whereas, when all the facts of the case are known, we are in a better position to judge of a thing. They also direct us to Griesbach, who marks the passage "of very doubtful authority"; and we learn that Tischendorf rejects it altogether. Granted, readily granted. I hope to grant everything that is true, and never be so blinded by sectarianism as to sacrifice truth to parties. But though it is rejected by those authorities, and found wanting in some of the ancient MSS., I have no doubt existing in my mind with respect to its genuineness. I will offer two reasons why I believe it to be trustworthy:

(1) It reads like Bible. A great deal of the Christian literature of the first centuries reads anything but Bible. Some of it appears quite fabulous. There are the Visions of Hermas, the Acts of Paul and Thecla, etc., etc., which are very visionary and legendary in their character. But the text from v. 9, of Mark 16, to the end of the chapter, has all the reality of Bible about it. We find in it both the apostolic spirit and style. We strike veins of gold as we mine it.

If it had been spurious, would it not have contained internal evidences of the fact? Would not the text be its own judge? But I know of no writer who claims that the text is a witness against itself—that it is inimical to any other part of the word of life—or that in its construction it proves itself to be from another hand than that which wrote the former part of the gospel. The only assigned reason I am aware of, why Mark 16:9 to the end of the chapter is rejected, is because it is not found in some of the earliest MSS.

2. Portions of the text are found in the works of two of the early fathers. Besides originals of the New Testament, there are some Christian writings extant, of even earlier date than they. And the fact is, portions of the very clause in dispute are found in at least two of these writers. Two of the early fathers of the church refer and quote from the latter end of Mark's Gospel. The first is Irenæus. John was a disciple and apostle of Jesus. He instructed Polycarp in the faith, and this Polycarp became bishop of Smyrna. Polycarp, in turn, taught Irenæus the truth, and Irenæus became in turn bishop of Lyons in France. He lived in the second, and beginning of the third centuries of the Christian era, dying as a martyr in the fifth general persecution of the Christians in A. D. 202. He refers in his writings (Adv. Haer. 3:10, 6) to the Gospel of Mark, and to the very part which is considered by some as spurious. He says:—

"Mark says, in the end of his Gospel (Mk. 16:19), 'And indeed the Lord Jesus, after he had spoken to them, was received up into heaven, and sat at the right hand of God.'"

Here we have a quotation from the part considered by some pseudo-baptist as an addition to the original production. This quotation was probably made before the year 200 of the Christian era.

Hippolytus is the next writer of whom I shall speak. He was a Christian essayist of the third century. And in his book "Concerning Spiritual Gifts" (Opp. p. 545), he alludes to Mark 16:17-18. It is true he does not mention his name; he does not say in so many words that he took the passage from Mark's history of Jesus; but then he alludes to a passage that occurs in no other Gospel than Mark's, and this affords strong presumptive evidence that the paragraph questioned was found in the original documents. To my mind, it proves it to have been in existence then. He says:—

"Jesus says to all at the same time, concerning the gifts which shall be given by him through the Holy Spirit, 'And these signs shall follow them that believe; in my name they shall cast out devils, they shall speak with new tongues, they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them, and they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover.'"

I have said the passage occurs in no other gospel than Mark's. I have taken the trouble to verify this statement, and the nearest I can find to it in the other gospels occurs in Luke 10:19, which is nothing like as full as the quotation. From whence then could Hippolytus have culled this saying of Christ's except from where it is written—at the end of Mark's gospel? and if he took it from thence, it is doubtless of apostolic authority, equally with the former treatise. It is also evident that it must have been extant and unquestioned in those days.

Now to say "because it does not appear in the Vatican MS., therefore I reject it as spurious," is simply absurd, if we know that it was believed and quoted before that MS. was written. The best and oldest MS. extant, according to Wilson, is of the fourth and fifth centuries, or about two hundred years later than the works of Irenæus and Hippolytus; so that those who accept the disputed clause as genuine have the start of the rejectors of the same by two hundred years. And though it was left out of some of the ancient MSS., yet the earlier than those must have contained it. And if the 17th, 18th and 19th verses are quoted as genuine, why not the rest from the 9th to the 17th?

If any one should ask for reasons why it was left out, some may be suggested. It may have been an omission. The transcribers may have left it out unintentionally. Or, what to my mind seems more probable, the early church had left the practice, as a rule, of immersing men and women on profession of faith in Christ, and adopted infant sprinkling in its place. The passage putting faith before baptism witnessed against their change of the ordinance, and they consequently dropped it. It condemned them, and they in turn condemned and expunged it. However, though it is missing in some MSS., the testimony of the fathers, and the other copies, retain it; and with the confirmation of these existing texts, the conscientious investigator is compelled to regard the passage as genuine.

OVERCOMERS.

CARRIE C. GREENSLIT.

I find it is a great thing to overcome self. To be an overcomer, or, in other words, to gain the ascendancy over our temper, words, taste, dress; in short, everything that goes to make up the pleasures of this world, is a task (I care not how strong the mind, or willing the heart) that cannot be accomplished, save by divine assistance. When the sinner first sees himself in his fallen situation, without Christ, or a hope in the world; his sins as it were piled mountains high above his head, one deed after another arising in startling brilliancy before his eyes; and when he falls an humble suppliant with outstretched arms to the cross of Christ, the desire of his heart is truly to be an overcomer. But oh! how much grace and strength is needed; and nothing short of being where we can draw sap and nourishment from the living Vine, will enable us to gain the victory. We cannot carry religion and the world along together; for either we will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. We cannot serve God and mammon. While we are of the world, and love the things that are in it, the world will love its own; but when we turn our thoughts from its beggarly elements, and take the Bible for the man of our counsel, desiring to be clothed upon with that righteousness that is from above; it seems that all the fiery darts of the enemy are at once brought to bear upon us. Many a poor wanderer from the fold is there to-day, that has been drawn away by Satan's artful devices.

To those that are contending, daily striving to be overcomers, let me say, be not discouraged. Forty days, at one time, Jesus was tempted, and he was tried in all points like as we are; and is he not able to succor those that are tempted? His word cannot fail, and he has promised to be with us even unto the end. Blessed promise. How we thank thee, thou merciful Redeemer, that thou did'st see fit to take upon thyself our infirmities, and bear our weakness, that thou mightest be a faithful high priest unto us. We know that thou wilt have compassion on us, for thou wast ever merciful when thou didst daily walk, like us, this sin-cursed earth. Cheer up, thou weak and care-worn pilgrim. "Yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come and will not tarry." "The world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." Let us fight on a little longer, and see what the will of the Lord is concerning us. What is there for us to do to be ready for his coming? O let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with meekness the race set before us; remembering it is written, "If any man suffer as a christian, let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God on this behalf."

Warren, Vt.

OBEDIENCE.—No. 1.

O. R. FASSETT.

However important faith is in the christian scheme and plan of salvation,—and it holds the very first place as the Scriptures set forth,—yet it by no means supercedes obedience. In fact, faith and obedience go hand in hand, like two loving sisters, accompanying us all through our pilgrimage journey to "the better land."

Obedience better than sacrifice. The history of king Saul, the first king of Israel, is an illustration. Jehovah had decreed the destruction of the nation of Amalek from under the heavens, because of their provoking and presumptive hostility to Israel in the wilderness, after God had so signally delivered them by judgments from the power of the Egyptians. King Saul was required to "blot out Amalek" utterly, with all appertaining to the nation, making it signally an example as "the first of the nations" to all other kingdoms who are to meet ultimately the same fate.

But Saul disobeyed the commandment of the Lord, sparing Agag, the king, together with others, and also sparing "the best of the sheep and of the oxen, to sacrifice unto the Lord," as was his plea; and maintaining all the while that he had "performed the commandment of the Lord." Samuel, however, was sent thus to rebuke him: "Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. Because thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, he hath also rejected thee from being king." 1 Sam. 15.

King Solomon also was exceedingly disobedient; and of what value in the estimation of God were his thousands and tens of thousands of costly sacrifices so long as he lived in direct disobedience to God's commands, and was thus guilty of rebellion? Hear how God reasons too with the nation of Israel in the days of the prophet Isaiah: "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord; I am full of the burnt offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats. Bring no more vain ablutions; incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting." And why was this all rejected when God demanded these very things under the law? Here is the secret, they were disobedient and rebellious in heart. Hence he pleads with them to repent and return unto him, and adds—"If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land; but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured by the sword; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 1.

Sacrifice is doing well; but obedience is doing better. Obedience first, sacrifice afterwards, is God's order never to be reversed. Obedience and sacrifice are both demanded. Many will neglect plain christian duty time and again, and will procrastinate the same, and yet think to purchase the indulgence and favor of God by doing something else in lieu of the work or duty required. Thus they attempt to barter with God. But God is not to be bartered with as one deals with his fellows. It is to be strait forward deal and honest bargaining with the Most High, or none at all.

What is sacrifice? It is simply doing as did Paul,—offering that upon the altar which is not our own, but which Providence has put us in possession of, and entrusted to our use as "the good stewards of God," and for which we will be held accountable in the day of final reckoning.

What is obedience? It is the heart's sincere service, voluntarily, willingly, cheerfully, and desirously given, of free and grateful choice, which we regard as our most reasonable duty. And this is what God requires above all things else. And where there is a willing and obedient heart, there is always a liberal and benevolent hand. The heart engaged in the work of God, the purse strings are unloosed, and all covetousness and selfishness is swallowed up in great acts of benevolence. "The liberal soul shall be made fat; and he that watereth, shall be watered also himself."

Sacrifice without obedience is rebellion, and "rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft," followed by the withdrawal of the Spirit of God in due time. Neither sacrifice or obedience is a double sin in which many are found, and makes out a case worse than Saul, Solomon, or Israel? What will become of these? It is enough to know that God is the Judge, and will bring them to a fearful and strict account.

Are we making, as a people and as individual persons, the sacrifices demanded of us in the age and times in which we live, and commensurate with our several abilities and responsibilities? And furthermore, are we doing this with first an obedient and willing heart, neglecting to do nothing which God by his Spirit and word distinctly makes known to us?

These questions each person should answer to his own conscience in the sight of the All-seeing One.

THE TRUMPETS.

Dr. J. A. Seiss, of Philadelphia, Editor of the "Prophetic Times," is giving a series of interesting discourses on the Apocalypse, from which we take the following:—

THE SOUNDING OF THE THIRD TRUMPET.

> "And the third angel sounded, and there fell out of the heaven a great star, burning as a torch, and it fell upon the third of the rivers, and upon the springs of the waters; and the name of the star is called Wormwood; and the third of the waters was turned into wormwood; and many of men died from the waters, because they were made bitter."

Here is another marvellous meteoric phenomenon; perhaps a comet striking the earth. But nobody seems to be quite willing to take it for what John says it was. Interpreters tell us, that a star denotes an eminent teacher or angel of the church. They refer us for proof of this, to the first chapter of this book. But there is one important link lacking in this argument, as applied to the case before us. There Christ himself says, that "the seven stars" beheld by the seer, denote "the angels of the seven churches;" but here he says no such thing; nor is there any proof that the church is at all in question. This star falls out of heaven, but there is no evidence whatever that the church is heaven. Besides, so great a star of the church, in such lonely distinction, could only be Christ himself, who never falls out of the church, whose name is not Wormwood, and who does not poison the fountains and rivers of the earth by his teachings. When the Scriptures tell us that a thing is a symbol, we are to take it as such; but when they give no intimation that a thing is other than literal, there is no warrant for making a symbol or figure of it.

But if this star denotes an apostate teacher, who is that teacher? Some say Simon Magus, Menander, Cerinthus; some Manes; some, Novatus; some, Montanus; some, Arius; some, Palagius; some, Origen; some, Mahomet; and one with about as much reason as the other. Some, however, tell us that it does not mean an apostate teacher at all, but a warlike leader. Then, what one? Grotius, Hammond, and Rosenmuller answer: Some actor in the Jewish war, as Eleazar, Josephus, or the like. Others answer, Genseric; others, Attila; others, whole successions of bloody devastators;—and nobody knows who; for, with this mode of interpretation, the vision will fit one as well as the other.

If Attila, king of the Huns, is the star, as the leading modern expositors affirm, then there are some very important questions which yet remain to be solved. What was "the heaven" out of which he fell? What was his fall? How did he burn as a torch? Are the Danube and the Rhine, along which he operated, "the third of the rivers?" How did he embitter the fountains as distinct from the rivers, and make both fountains and rivers bitter like himself? How was his name called Wormwood? Were the deaths under him literal or spiritual deaths? If literal, did they die of the bitterness of the waters? And, if spiritual, did Attila produce any moral mortality among men? O, the sloughs and bogs into which people plunge themselves when they let go the plain and direct sense of what is written? Has not symbol and allegory been tried about long enough on these momentous plagues of the day of judgment?

Apart from his stilted system of symbolization, Lord finds the description of the apostle very plain, and reproduces it in a way which well exhibits its literal import. "The star, obviously, was not a solid globe, but a thin, transparent meteor [or comet], which, as it swept along near the surface and sunk to the ground, still left the objects it enveloped perceptible to the apostle, and was soon absorbed by the waters and the earth. He beheld the rivers and fountains still running, discerned a change wrought in them by the meteor, and saw that it was the new element infused into them that rendered them deadly to many who drank of them."

A name is assigned to this meteor, not as though it had previously been known or should become known by this name, but in a way descriptive of its qualities and effects. Properly designated, "the name of the star is called Wormwood;" or, according to some manuscripts, emphatically, "the wormwood." Wormwood, or absinth, is a bitter, intoxicating, and poisonous herb. Used freely, it produces convulsions, paralysis, and death. And this star is appropriately named "the Absinth," as the embodiment of the very quintessence of all wormwood. It is bitterness itself—the poisonous bitterness of absinth.

And this bitterness is communicated to whatever it touches. It falls upon the third of the rivers, and upon the springs of waters. It sinks into the earth and impregnates the fountains and the wells. Lord suggests that it falls upon the Alps, from whose melting glaciers so many rivers and fountains take their rise. At any rate, it touches the sources of many waters, and turns them into bitterness. Such a thing is by no means impossible. On the 21st of March, 1823, in one of the Aleutian Islands there was a great volcanic explosion, and, as one of the results, the river water assumed the color of beer, and was so extremely bitter as to be unfit for use. God is at no loss for means to effect his ends. And if one meteor could turn the waters of the sea to blood, another may as readily turn the waters of the rivers and wells to the deadly bitterness of absinth. Nay, something of this sort is indicated in the ancient prophecies, where we read: "Because they have forsaken my law which I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, neither walked therein, but have walked after the imagination of their own heart, therefore, thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Behold, I will feed them with wormwood, and give them water of gall to drink." (Jer. 9: 13-15.) Even if this was figuratively fulfilled upon the apostate Jews, we are still warranted in counting on a more literal fulfillment in that great day which is to repeat and bring to their fullest consummation all the judgments that have ever gone before it. The result of this embittering of the waters is fearful distress on account of the absence of wholesome drink, and great mortality among men.

POWER OF THE SPIRIT.

EMMA E. ALEXANDER.

How limited are our ideas of power, and what a low conception have we of it. We hear the terrific sound of the volcano as it sends forth its streams of fire and smoke; or witness the ravages of the tornado extending many miles in its course, over once fertile plains, and we are amazed at the mighty influence at work producing these results. And yet, as we look at the heavens above, at God's great universe, where system upon system revolves around its own centre, deviating not in the slightest degree, year after year, scarcely a thought crosses our mind as to the power exerted. It is true, we listen in vain to catch the faintest sound of these great revolutions, and strive to see the least motion; but who can fathom the vastness of that power which controls them all, making them to fulfill the purpose for which they were created.

Then, again, we watch the progress of a little flower, and see how noiselessly it grows from day to day, scattering its fragrance and beauty around our pathway; yet we cannot tell how it develops from the tiny seed, or trace the power lying beneath this great mystery. So is it with the indwelling of the Holy Spirit in the heart of man. What an all-powerful influence is there, leading to the greatest sacrifice, or bearing the heaviest burdens for the Master's sake. We read of a poor fisherman of Galilee preaching with so much power, that his words seemed to burn, so great was the effect on the heart and conscience, even of those who a short time before were clamoring for the blood of the Son of God; and we ask, Why is this? Is he endowed with the gift of oratory, or the wisdom of this world? Ah! no. It is the power of the Holy Spirit, applying the simple story of the cross, so that thousands were led to cry out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Now we cannot but perceive, as we think of the church of God at the present day, a great difference existing. How dormant are her energies, and how little seems to be accomplished for the cause of the great Redeemer. Many are weak and sickly among us, and many sleep. "Is the Lord's arm shortened that it cannot save, or his ear heavy that it cannot hear?" Did not Jesus promise us the Spirit to abide with us forever? Oh may our daily prayer ever be that we may be filled with his gracious influence; then shall we see sinners pressing into the kingdom, and the work of the Lord prospering in our hands.

"DRAW NEAR TO ME, O LORD."

Draw near to me, O Lord!
And let me lean my head upon thy breast;
'Tis promised in thy Word
That there the troubled soul shall find its rest.

And mine is tempest-tossed;
And, drifting o'er this stormy sea of life,
I fear it will be lost;
O shield me from its dangers—from its strife!

Keep me from every sin
My wayward heart is prone to linger o'er,
That I may enter in
And share thy rest with loved ones "gone before."

I yield to thee, dear Lord,
My earthly hopes, my idols, every one;
I crave but one reward—
The grace to feel and say, "Thy will be done."

WHAT IS MAN?

R. SPAULDING.

BRO. GRANT:—I claim no right, but would be grateful for the privilege, of expressing a few thoughts in the Crisis on the question, "What is man?" I find various opinions about his origin, nature, and destiny. Some think he is a part of God; some think he is of the nature of angels; some think he originated from some animal, the ape, or the baboon, and has improved up to his present state. Some think he is a compound being, partly mortal and partly immortal. Well, if he be a part of God, then he is immortal. If he be of the nature of angels, he may be either mortal or immortal. Sin stamped mortality upon the sinning angels; just so sin has stamped mortality upon sinning man. Man is an organized being, made up of various organs, made by the great Creator of earthy, material matter, and all these organs together make the creature man. These organs being mortal, they are doomed to death. Man shows the great skill, wisdom and workmanship of the great designer. He is fearfully and wonderfully made. Each of these organs contribute to man's happiness. The eye by seeing objects; the ear by hearing sounds; the feet by walking, the lungs by breathing, the nerves by feeling, the mouth by tasting, and the brain by taking knowledge of things around. Thus each organ is designed to add to man's happiness, and would make him happy here if they were not perverted by sin.

The resurrection brings men back to life again from the grave, restores them to their original state, with the same organs and powers they had here. Yes, and

> "All these powers find sweet employ
> In that eternal world of joy."

Their eyes then will see, ears hear, feet walk, lungs breathe, nerves feel, mouth taste, and brain take knowledge of things around. It is through these organs, or by the exercise of them, that all our happiness comes both here and hereafter. Our eyes will see the King in his beauty, even Jesus, whom having not seen we love; and see the saints clothed in white robes, and the New Jerusalem. Our ears will then hear the music of the saints and angels. Our feet shall walk the golden streets; go in and out through the pearly gates, and range over the verdant fields of the restored earth. Our lungs will breathe the pure air of heaven, and with the organs of speech we shall sing the new song, Blessing and honor to him who loved us, and gave his life for us, and redeemed us from the curse of sin, and from the power of the grave.

Then can man sing, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" Then will immortality be stamped upon the saints, and eternal life be their reward; the righteous be their companions, and Jesus Christ be their King, the new earth their country, the New Jerusalem the metropolis. These views inspire my aged and infirm mind and body; they fill my whole soul with raptures of delight. Through the merits of Jesus, I do hope to be a subject of that glorious kingdom.

BEHOLD! THE BRIDEGROOM COMETH!

Awake! shake off thy slumbers! put thee on
Thy beautiful garments, let thy lamp be trimmed,
For lo, the cry, "Behold! the Bridegroom cometh!"
Is ringing in the air. Then come thou forth,
Forth from the world, with all its vanities;
Forth from the world, with all its vileness;
Forth from the world, that hates thy Lord and thee;
Make thyself ready—for lo! he is at hand.

TAKE AWAY THE STONE.

SARAH D. SINCLAIR.

> "Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?"—MARK 16:3.

Thus spake the weeping Marys on their way to the grave of their crucified Lord, bearing the costly spices they had prepared to annoint the precious body of him who would speak to them no more. They were poor, and doubtless made a great sacrifice to obtain the spices; but love delights in sacrifice; and with hearts of grief and tenderness they earnestly press forward, saying "Who shall roll away the stone?" They had witnessed the cruel mocking and scourging; had seen him endure without a murmur the contradiction of his foes; had followed him as he bore the heavy cross, fainting, up Calvary's rugged steep; had seen those precious hands and feet nailed to the wood; hands that never did aught but bless; and precious feet that ever had led in the paths of holiness. They had seen the ruthless spear plunged into his yielding side; had seen the purple gore in gushing streams flow down space, and heard his dying groan of agony, exclaiming "It is finished."

That sweet voice could not bless them then, and they could only perform the last office, by anointing the precious one. They had noticed the place of his interment, and seen the great stone at the door; yet doubtless they pressed on, saying, "Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?" When they came, behold, the stone was rolled away. The angel of the Lord had descended, rolled away the stone, and the crucified had risen. Vain was the new tomb of the rich man of Arimathea to hold the sacred Son of God. He came forth, the mighty conqueror over death and the grave.

The women were astonished. The angel spake, "Fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay." Full of consolation were the words he spake. They entered the tomb, and beheld a young man sitting, clothed in long white raiment. They were affrighted. He spake to them, "Be not afraid. I know whom ye seek, Jesus of Nazareth; he is not here, he is risen; behold the place where they laid him. Go quickly and tell his disciples, and Peter that he is risen, and goeth before you into Galilee; ye shall see him there." With joy they ran to tell the news, and behold Jesus met them, saying, "Be not afraid, go tell my brethren we will meet in Galilee." They held him by the feet and worshiped him. Thus, ofttimes, do we go weeping, as it were, to the grave of our dying Lord, thinking a great stone is at the door; when, behold, it is rolled back by the divine presence, and we rejoice in beholding our living Lord.

Ye weeping, loving Marys, be early at the sepulchre; look in, see where he lies. Tarry not, he goeth before you. Follow his steps, you shall behold him a mighty conqueror. He hath ascended on high, leading a multitude of captives, and is seated at the right hand of his Father, giving gifts to a dying world; an advocate for the righteous, bearing our names before the throne, not worthless now since purchased by the precious blood. Toil on, ye Marys, you shall see him again. The gift of the holy Comforter is thine; but ye shall see him again. Though the stone is rolled away, and he is gone, your sweet spices are valueless; yet you shall see him again, your loving Master. Well may you call him Master, implying your servitude, your affections, your all belongs to him. Loving Marys, follow on. Slacken not your pace; faint not now, for soon ye shall behold him. Ye shall see his face in righteousness, for this mortal shall put on immortality. Ye shall be fashioned like his glorious body, to die no more. His own soft hand shall wipe away all tears; his own potent arm shall place the sparkling crown upon thy brow, the palm of victory within thy hand, and throw around thee the spotless robe. The shout of triumph shall go up higher, and still higher from the heavenly arches; angels, archangels, cherubim, seraphim, all join the holy strain, shouting Alleluia to the Lamb, who hath gotten the victory.

Ye careless, unsaved sinners, for you, too, his precious blood atones, and the stone is rolled away. Hear him, when stretched upon the cruel cross exclaim, "It is finished," bowing his head in confirmation, and died. It was then and there he purchased your salvation. Come to the sacred spot, and see the crimson flood. Believe the sacrifice has been slain; accept the freely offered terms; repent of your past life, turn your steps into the way of holiness; believe the Father accepts the sacrifice in your behalf, which his own bosom freely bestowed. How great his love to thee and to all. Precious blood, forever sprinkling the throne of grace, shall it be shed in vain for thee? Shall his dying agonies, causing the sun to refuse its rays, shrouding the earth in darkness three dreadful hours, be all in vain for thee? The rending of the temple vail, the mighty earthquake, rending the rocks and opening the graves, shall this be all in vain for thee? Hasten, sinner, haste to his outstretched arms and bleeding side; hear his loving accents saying, Come unto me and be saved; "whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely; "whosoever believeth in" me shall "not perish but have eternal life." The precious blood cleanseth from all sin.

Little children and youth, you have not been forgotten in the great atonement, and for you, too, has the stone been rolled away. He that bade thee remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth, speaks to thee now. Heed the inviting voice and escape impending wrath. Little children, the same loving Jesus, who took little children in his arms and blessed them when on earth, saying, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven," still has arms of affection for thee; a heart of love, a bosom of tenderness for the little one. He knows all thy woes. When that little heart is swelling with grief because you remember God, and are troubled, and would fain speak to mother and ask her if she thinks you will be saved, but you dare not, and creep away and weep, Jesus knows your grief, loves you still, and bids you come to his bosom, giving him all your heart. He will make it white as snow; give joy and peace, making all thy ways perfect. Mothers, watch the moving of the Spirit on the heart of thy child. You may speak a few appropriate words at such a time (not too many), that will help them to Christ, and thus prevent years of darkness and grief, by not being instructed how to come to Jesus.

And finally, for all nations and kindreds of the earth has the stone been rolled away. The risen, ascended Lord is pouring forth the streams of salvation, freely giving life to a dying world. Accept the offer thus freely given, and thine is an eternal salvation, and an everlasting inheritance in the kingdom of glory.

PATIENCE.

JAS. H. BROWN.

> "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us; looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

We are living in a time when we need "to run with patience;" when we need to "watch" and "pray." "Watch, . . . lest coming suddenly, he find you sleeping;" and "pray that ye enter not into temptation." Does the way abound with trials and temptations? Dost thou sometimes feel depressed and weary? Art thou despised, because thou lookest for "that blessed hope? Yet still press on. Jesus "the way" was "despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." Yea, the time came that even his disciples "forsook him and fled." Behold our Lord! Is the disciple above him? Do we not ask to be like him? He was made "perfect through sufferings," and is even now "able to succor them that are tempted." O, then, rejoice and "count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." Or, as saith the apostle Paul, "glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us."

But the trial of our faith sometimes comes from sources from whence it is hardest to bear. Our looking for "that blessed hope" displeases and grieves friends, sincere christian friends. Ministers of the gospel declare this truth pernicious in its effects, and hold up their hands in holy horror. Yet the trials and doubts arising from these sources cause us to again examine the word of truth, and the blessed book sheds forth the "light" brighter and brighter. We are comforted by the assurance that he whom our soul loves is soon coming down, and those loved ones that sleep in him he will bring. No more sorrow then, no more crying or pain; "former things are passed away."

If we are like him, and bear reproach for him here, we shall be like him, and share his glory there, having a body "fashioned like unto his glorious body," seeing him "as he is," be "joint heirs" with him, he himself having prepared things for us that "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man;" yet "God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit."

Beloved, "let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised." His grace is sufficient for us. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." Let us fight the good fight; keep the faith, that we may have the assurance that there is laid up for us "a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give . . . at that day . . . ; unto all them . . . that love his appearing.

To the sick and suffering ones, to the weary waiting ones; to those on whom the storms and tempests rage, hear it said, "yet a little while, and he that shall come will come and will not tarry."

"The faithful sure promise the fathers believed,
Shall then be fulfilled, and the glory received;
The hand that was pierced for me wipe my tears dry,
For to reign with the one that is higher than I."

Littleton Common, Mass.

— He that has the peace of God in his soul cannot be rendered unhappy, though all men call him a demon; but he that is unreconciled in heart will be wretched, though all men call him a saint.

TENT-MEETING AT GROTON JUNCTION.—The fare will be reduced on the Worcester and Nashua road. Fare $1.50 both ways from Boston, on the Fitchburg road. Get tickets of Bro. GEO. T. ADAMS.

SAN FRANCISCO.

In the San Francisco Daily Chronicle, June 16th, we find the following:—

"ANOTHER SERIES OF TENT MEETINGS.

A sect styling themselves the Second Adventists have determined to hold a series of meetings under canvas, with the view of advancing their peculiar theory of religion. A commodious tent has been erected on a vacant lot on the south side of Market street, between Fifth and Sixth, in which place their doctrines, setting forth the theme of man's nature and destiny and the tendency of modern Spiritualism, will be expounded. Elders J. M. Loughborough and M. E. Cornell of Michigan, as well as other well-known Second Advent preachers, will address the meetings, which will commence this evening at 7:45 o'clock, and will continue every evening, and the usual Sunday services, for several weeks."

It will be noticed that these meetings are to be conducted by those who hold that Saturday—the Jewish Sabbath—should be observed now as a rest-day; and that those who keep the first day of the week as a Sabbath, have taken upon them "the mark of the beast," referred to in Rev. 14: 9-11. If this position were correct, then all christians, who do not keep Saturday for a Sabbath, "shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb."

They further teach that they are fulfilling the proclamation of "the third angel" (Rev. 14: 9) declaring that men should keep Saturday as the Sabbath. It is further claimed that "the third angel" has been uttering his proclamation since 1844; but events show that they have located the third angel's message more than twenty-five years before that of the second.

The second angel (Rev. 14: 8) does not begin his proclamation till the fall of Babylon takes place, because he commences by saying, "Babylon has fallen." "Babylon," in this Scripture, is a name applied to the "woman" on the scarlet-colored beast, described in the seventeenth chapter of Revelation. That the "woman" represents the church at Rome, we see no room for doubt. It could not have been said in truth that the Papal power fell in 1744, or in any of the following twenty-five years, more than during any of the twenty-five years preceding 1844. Consequently, if those who teach that the third angel's message began about 1844, and consisted in teaching that those who wish to be saved must refuse to observe the first day of the week in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ, and keep Saturday instead for their Sabbath, are the ones to do that third angel's work, they have certainly made a great mistake as to the time, for they commenced sounding more than a quarter of a century before the events would allow the second angel to begin his proclamation.

NEW POLITICAL PARTY.

There is a deep undercurrent in political circles at the present day, that indicates terrible scenes just in the future. It is the outworking of the politics of Spiritualism, as set forth some years since by certain noted mediums, who had received their principles from the demons. Like deep smoldering fires, this spirit of a most radical revolution has been burning in the hearts of multitudes, developing itself more and more by the "strikes" among the laboring classes in the whole civilized world; and more especially by the Communists in Paris, during the past few months, where it has been exhibited in its true dress. Their great leading motto reads; "LIBERTY, EQUALITY, FRATERNITY." This party is now becoming strong, and is growing rapidly on both continents.

Robinet, the Positvist, residing in Paris, has sent a letter to Professor Beesley of London, giving some facts in relation to the programme of the new party. Though Robinet is not identified with the Communists, yet he sympathizes with them in many things. He says:—

"Their philosophy is atheism, materialism, the negation of all religion. Their political programme is absolute individual liberty, by means of the suppression of governments, and the division of nationalities into Communes more or less federated. Their political economy consists essentially in the dispossession, with compensation, of the present holders of capital, and in assigning the coin, instruments of labor, and land, to associations of workmen. And their historical theory is, the nobility and and the bourgeois have each had their reign, and that the turn of the proletariat* has now come. They exclude all that is outside of the working class from society, considering it as socially and even physiologically effete."

This new political party are in earnest, and ready for action. We may expect to see them making soon a strong demonstration in Italy. They are bitter enemies to the Pope and his ecclesiastical system, as well as to all other religious organizations. As the Spiritualists express the matter, they intend to bring about "a new social order," in which there will be no distinction of color or sex.

* The proletariat are the common people, the laboring classes.

DARK OMENS FOR ROME.

The Boston Pilot is a prominent Catholic paper, published in Boston. In the issue for July 1st, 1871, is a letter from its "own special Roman correspondent," from which we take the following, in relation to "Rome in the future":—

"The city of Rome is given over to quiet robbery and secret murder; the occasion for bold, noisy, and unblushing crime, has not yet arrived. It is coming, however. Already people are beginning to draw comparisons between the fate of the Colonne Vendome and that which awaits St. Peter's! The treatment bestowed upon the Tuileries is expected to be rivalled and outdone by that to be bestowed on the Vatican! There is no exaggeration in these anticipations; they are sagely considered in the republican journals of the kingdom of Italy and the city of Rome. The government is well aware of the coming crisis, but, if it has the will, it has not the power, to prevent this, its certain doom. Good Romans see no other future than a future which will, in all probability, outstrip in horror and bloodshed the work of destruction now in process of accomplishment in Paris. As soon as France interferes, and it is expected that for her own sake, as well as for the great Catholic feeling that is predominant there, the work of demolition will begin. Looking at the affairs of Italy closely, no one can see any other way out of the difficulties that surround her but the way of revolution. Hence the Italian government have refused to pay the pension of the Pontifical soldiers until the problematical condition of the Roman possession is more assured than it is at present. One thing is certain: if wholesale destruction does come, instead of the piecemeal devastation now going on, the church will rise above the storm, and the peace of heaven will again descend upon the city of the Vicar of God."

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books, tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at WHITE & BAUER'S.

NEW YORK CENTRAL PARK.—This famous Park contains eight hundred and sixty-two acres. It has nine and a half miles of carriage road, five and a half miles of bridle road, and twenty-seven and a half miles of walks, with a variety of scenery. The Croton reservoir is in it, and covers ninety-six acres. It is thirty-eight feet deep, and contains one thousand million gallons of water. Besides the reservoir, it has "The Lake," of twenty acres; "Harlem Lake," of thirteen acres; and "The Pond," of five acres. The Park extends from Fifty-ninth to One hundred and Tenth Street, and from Fifth to Eighth Avenue. It is two and a half miles long, and half a mile wide. Bro. J. T. Howland, a skillful engraver, has just issued a fine "Guide Map" to this "Central Park," which will be found very convenient for visitors. It can be had at 74 Maiden Lane, New York. Price ten cents.

ELD. FASSETT intends a visit East, and will be at the Springfield campmeeting. All churches on the route, as far as Boston, Mass., wishing him to spend an evening, or Sabbath, will immediately correspond with him, so that he may make due arrangements, and give out his appointments on his way, or return. He intends to start near the first of August. Letters may be sent to him at Minneapolis, Minn., until the second week in Aug.

ROWELL'S NEWSPAPER REPORTER AND ADVERTISER'S GAZETTE is a valuable weekly journal of newspaper intelligence, ably edited, and executed in superior taste and style. It is just what every publisher needs, and fills a vacuum long felt by the press. It is neatly printed on tinted paper, and contains thirty-two pages of information specially adapted to printers, publishers, and newspaper men. It is published at 41 Park Row, New York. $2.00 a year.

HEALTH.—In this paper our readers will find a common-sense article from Bro. Barnes, on "health." The subject demands special attention, and we are glad to find some are waking up to its importance.

SIGNS AND PORTENTS.

Under the above heading, we find the following editorial remarks in the New York Times for June 14th. When speaking of the events of the past few months, the editor says:

"Certainly, rarely before in so brief a period have been crowded together such a multitude of signs and portents. Not to speak of the battle of Armageddon and the fate of the horned beast—which long looked-for events many first-class modern prophets find agreeably realized in the war just ended—we have had of late all over the world an abundance of rather startling physical phenomena. Whether or not there is any soundness in the theory first advanced by French savans, and renewed by the English electrician, Mr. Varley, that earthquakes are the result of the action of adverse subterranean currents of electricity, there has been for some time past unusual activity in these forces. From time to time nearly the whole surface of the globe has been upheaved in the most unaccountable manner, and this, too, in places and climates where earthquakes were previously thought to be impossible. From South America, unstable always, one expects nothing better. But San Francisco is now shaken so often and so regularly that it can scarcely be regarded as resting on terra firma at all. Even here, in New-York, we have had a perceptible shock, and a day or two since we heard that Quebec was similarly treated.

To be sure, these were the merest baby earthquakes, the play of that mysterious and terrible power whose wrath vented itself so awfully in China, when the town of Bathang, in the province of Se-chuen, was destroyed. The ground yawned in deep fissures, and rocked like the sea in storms; the buildings were everywhere flung down, and nearly twenty-five hundred of the luckless inhabitants perished in the ruins. One of the South American republics, within a comparatively recent period, was the scene of a similar, and quite as appalling, disaster, with the dreadful addition that the victims were literally swallowed up in the earth. Nor have the other elements displayed less abnormal violence. Across almost the entire breadth of our Continent, from south-west to north-east, there has swept a tornado, the like of which for fury and destructiveness has seldom been known. St. Louis, at least, will long remember it, as well as the many other towns lying in the broad swathe of devastation it has made from the Mississippi to the ocean. The little town of Windham, in Massachusetts, is its most recent victim, and let us hope its last, before it blows itself out in vain fury on the sea.

The waters, too, have been, in their turn, quite as reckless and uncontrolled. Everywhere is the same story of unexampled floods, with here and there a submerged city, like New Orleans or Vienna, to count among their unusual trophies. Lesser signs have not been wanting. Boiling springs, that have gone on placidly simmering for centuries, suddenly stop, and volcanoes, as long extinct, burst all at once into unreasonable eruption. Meteors trouble every quarter of the heavens, and no doubt people of the proper texture of imagination can detect those cloudy battles that were wont of old to prefigure all momentous changes."

THE SHAKERS.

The Shakers have commenced publishing a monthly at Albany, N. Y., called "The Shaker." Their origin is given in the first No., issued Jan. 1st, 1871. They sprang from the French prophets, who dissented from the Catholic and Protestant churches in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. About 1706 some of these new lights went from France to England; and about 1747 a society was formed in the neighborhood of Manchester, Eng., under the ministration of James and Jane Wardly. "Ann Lee became the acknowledged, divinely inspired leader, and a spiritual mother, and the Eldress of this infant church." This was in the year 1770. She left England the 19th of May, 1774, and landed in America, Aug. 6th, 1774. We find the following in "The Shaker:"—"In 1793, the Gentile Pentecostal church of 'all things common'—the Shaker Order—was founded in New Lebanon, N. Y." She was the founder of the Shakers in this county. She died Sept 8th, 1784, aged forty-nine years.

We copy the following expressions from "The Shaker:"—"The Shakers accept Jesus after he was baptized with the Christ, as the first born of God, the elder brother of a large family of sons and daughters of God; . . . but only the Elder of a large class of 'Saviors' that 'shall come up on Mount Zion.' . . . By "Mount Zion," we understand them to mean the Shaker village at New Lebanon. They say, "This kingdom is Christ's church of the latter day." They further say: "Religiously considered, the Shakers are Revolutionists, Reformers, Come-outers, Revivalists, New-lights, Second Adventists, and Spiritualists." "Two great principles united constitute Deity; . . . viz., male and female."

When speaking of Swedenborg, "The Shaker" says:—

"John the Baptist never approximated nearer to Jesus, than did Swedenborg to Ann; for this is simple Shakerism in its rudimentals, that God is dual—male and female; that the Christs are dual; and that the second manifestation of the Christ was in a woman, for the reason above assigned—difference of sex." "The higher classes of society were converted to Spiritualism through Swedenborg's agency; while his daughters, the Fox girls, were ministers to the 'common people, who have heard them gladly;' they having been the mediums of great power in converting materialists, skeptics, infidels, in and out of the churches, to a belief in the realities of the unseen world; and thus has the spirit of Spiritualism been 'poured out upon all flesh.' Even handmaids and servants see visions, as did Swedenborg; and men prophesy, as nominal Christians and the followers of the Swedish seer have never done; for actually and practically, the Swedenborgians have no more spirituality than have the average of common Spiritualists.

Yet, while the followers of Ann Lee are also undoubted Spiritualists—believing in spiritual manifestations, the immortality of the human soul, the intercommunication between the visible and invisible worlds—they 'have no confidence in the flesh.'"

"The Shaker" says Swedenborg "was the angel of Spiritualism, and the true prototype of Spiritualists."

"The resurrection order, founded by Ann is raising sex up from the physical plane to the Christ, spiritual plane, where there is no 'marrying nor giving in marriage.' And, while Mother Ann appreciated Swedenborg, and his mission better than he did himself, Ann and her mission were not at all apprehended by Swedenborg. He acknowledged that he daily saw thousands of the angels (human souls) descending and ascending to and from the earth. We say they visited Mother Ann, to whom many of them confessed their sins. For she affirmed just as did Swedenborg, that she was 'more familiar with the souls of men and women out of the body than she was with those in the body; and that she frequently heard them confess their sins.'"

"At an early age, she began to have visions, having found an entrance into the spirit world. After some nine years of great spiritual suffering of soul, in 1770 occurred the great event of her life, and of the age in which she lived. Jesus appeared to her in person, and baptized her into and with the Christ Spirit, as John had baptized him."

It is further stated that "she was instructed by heavenly visions and divine revelations," being a "medium of the Christ Spirit." At one time she was imprisoned in Manchester, Eng. Says "The Shaker:"—

"After her imprisonment in Manchester, she was acknowledged as a leader in spiritual things, and was ever after known as Mother Ann. The religious exercises of her band were singing, dancing, shaking, and shouting, speaking in strange tongues, and prophesying after the manner of the primitive Christian Church."

It will be seen from the foregoing testimony that her "revelations," "visions," "tongues," and "prophesying," evidently proceeded from the same source as those given to Swedenborg, the Spiritualists, the Mormons, and Ellen White, the oracle of the Seventh-day Adventists. If one is from demons, they all are. To our mind, this is a clear case. The fact that the visions and revelations of the latter are so contradictory, affords positive proof that they do not come from the Lord. In the case of Spiritualism, we have known several cases where the demons have been successful in making their mediums believe that Jesus, or our heavenly Father, was speaking to them. The advice given was excellent on moral, social and physical subjects. These demons would take particular pains to expound the Scriptures; making a special effort to form a new party or sect, so as to divide the flock of God. They would also give excellent advice in relation to dress, food, and other matters relating to our social and spiritual welfare. We have known these "seducing spirits" thus to secure the confidence of their victims for weeks, months, and even years, before they were detected in their deception. When persons are under their influence, they seem to be charmed, spell-bound, infatuated, so that they are incapable of detecting the seducer in his wily snares. The spirits take much pains to flatter their mediums, by telling them that some wonderful developments are to be brought about by their mediumship. This flatters, and praise is well adapted to please and blind poor, human nature, and prevent the seduced from seeing the dark, diabolical character of the seducer.

In order to get an influence over the professed children of the Lord they will pretend to great sanctity, and require their followers to practice much self-denial, bear heavy crosses and teach them something special in relation to the doctrine of the Bible, which at first sight may seem plausible, and yet is truly only a fable, most cunningly devised, and admirably calculated to gain the confidence of the unsuspecting, who are anxious to be and do just right. It is a sad fact that these seducers very often get the confidence of some of the most sincere men and women; just as a counterfeiter, or a seducer has best success among honest and virtuous people, who are unsuspecting. This is true in relation to the systems we have previously named in this article.

The following are more of the sayings found in "The Shaker:"—

"The Shakers do not worship Ann Lee; never did. They do not worship Jesus; never did. Jesus was a man—a Jew; Ann was a woman—a Gentile; they were both baptized with the Christ Spirit—this Spirit we worship."

"Was the God of the Jews, the Creator of heaven and earth? The Shakers say not. The God that directed the Jews was a tutelar divinity; not the Father of the Christ. . . . 'The God of the Christian is not the God of the Jews.'"

The Shakers claim that "the second appearance of Christ . . . began in the year . . . 1747," when the first Shaker society was formed in the neighborhood of Manchester, Eng. Afterwards, "Ann Lee became the acknowledged, divinely inspired leader, and a spiritual mother." The Shakers, like the Mormons, claim to have all those spiritual gifts that were administered to the apostles at the day of Pentecost. By means of the counterfeit gifts practiced by the demons, through their mediums, they are able to seduce many into their artful snares. They call it a "display of the work and power of God."

"THE MIDNIGHT CRY" is the title of a pamphlet published by Nelson H. Barbour. He endeavors to show that Christ will come in 1873. Price of the work 25 cents, $1.80 per dozen. For sale at the Crisis office, and by David T. Cooper, 72 Mount Hope Avenue, Rochester, N. Y.

HEALTH.—Those who wish to preserve their health, will do well to take some health journal. Among the best may be named: "The Health Reformer," Battle Creek, Mich.; "Good Health," Boston; "Herald of Health," 15 Laight Street, New York; and "Laws of Life," Dansville, N. Y.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—According to the official report, the Suez canal has been doing a good business during the past year. The report stands as follows:

"From the opening of the canal to the end of 1870, the total number of vessels of all kinds was 513, of an aggregate of 447,665 tons.

THE FORBIDDEN TREE.

It is a conceded fact that the "tree of life" contained an ingredient that could lengthen the life of the eater; but did the forbidden tree contain an ingredient that would shorten the life of the eater? Or was Adam doomed to death simply as a punishment for disobedience? That Adam sinned in eating of the forbidden tree is certain; but was he to die as a punishment for that sin, or as a result of eating of a tree that produced death, by imparting to the physical system the elements of death? We find nothing in the prohibition intimating that God threatened to kill Adam for eating, but simply cautioned him against eating of a tree that would cause him to die. "But of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it [why?]; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," or "dying thou shalt die." There was a reason why God forbade Adam to eat of this tree; it was because it would impart to him a dying nature, as really as the tree of life would impart a deathless nature. God knowing that the fruit of that tree would make him a dying man, cautioned him against eating it, and forbade the act, telling him the result that would follow if he should eat of it; namely, death; but he says not a word about what his punishment should be for disobeying. When I say to my child, You must not put your hand into this dish of aquafortis; if you do, it will ruin your hand; if he disobeys, he incurs the result, besides being guilty of the crime of disobedience, for which I may punish him. Or, if I point out a poisonous tree to my little son, and forbid his eating its fruit; if he disobeys, he imbibes the poison, besides being guilty of disobedience. So Adam was forbidden to eat of the tree that would produce death, because of the result. By disobedience he not only incurred the result, but became a sinner by transgression.

When God called Adam to an account for his disobedience, he pronounced a "curse" upon all his surrounding: "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it; cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, TILL thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Here Jehovah specifies a curse that should be visited upon him for his act of disobedience "TILL" he should die; but not a hint is given that death was a part of the penalty for that transgression; but just the reverse; only "till" death was the punishment to last; death was contracted by the eating of the forbidden tree; and the crime of disobedience incurred a "curse" reaching "till" the poison of the forbidden tree should culminate in death. Thus we see how "sin entered into the world, and death by sin"; not death as a punishment, but as a result of eating of the forbidden tree. As death could not have entered without transgression, death is the result of sin. Adam's posterity inherit from him the nature imparted to him by eating of the forbidden tree; and thus "death passed upon all," and it was "appointed unto men once to die."

This leads us to consider the nature of Adam prior to eating of the forbidden tree. If he became a dying man by eating the forbidden fruit, what was his nature previously? We reply, (1) he was not in a deathless condition, else the tree of life would have been a superfluous appendage, for why need man eat of its fruit to become deathless, if he was already deathless? (2) He was not already in a dying condition, else God would not have informed him that death would be incurred by eating of the forbidden tree. We cannot accuse God of such deception as to charge him with saying to a deathless man, You can escape death, or "live forever," by eating of the tree of life; or saying to a man already in a dying condition, You shall die if you eat of the forbidden tree. God meant to convey the impression that man would be sure not to die if he should eat of the tree of life; and be sure to die if he should partake of the forbidden tree. If this is so, man did not possess a nature which required that he must live forever; nor yet a nature which required that he must die whether he should eat or not; yet he did possess a nature capable of living unlimitedly as the result of a perfect organization, provided he should not plant the seeds of decay in his system by eating of the death-producing tree; and he also possessed a nature capable of dying, provided he should eat of the tree that would cause the system to decay, by deranging the organism, and finally culminating in death. In other words, Adam's organization was so perfect that he could have lived unlimitedly, if he had never eaten of the tree that produced death; but his nature would have been so changed by eating of the tree of life that he must live perpetually, being made deathless; thus, firstly, without the tree of life, he could have lived on unlimitedly as the result of a perfect organism; and secondly, he must live on as the result of securing a new element from the tree of life, rendering him incapable of dying, or making him death-proof.

If he had been created with this deathless nature, it would have been folly to have talked about his dying in case he should eat the forbidden fruit; and if he had been created in possession of a nature demanding death, instead of a nature that was merely capable of imbibing the elements that would produce death, it would have been folly also to have said to such a dying being, Do not do this, lest you die, when in fact he would just as surely die without doing the deed. A nature that might live on uninterruptedly, if not interfered with, is one thing; and a nature that must live on uninterruptedly in spite of interferences, is quite another thing. The former was Adam's nature at creation, before disobedience; the latter would have been Adam's nature if he had eaten of the tree of life. A nature that might die by having a change wrought in it, by eating a powerful death-producing preparation, is one thing; but a nature that must die, as the result of a change produced by partaking of an infallible death-producing preparation, is quite another thing. The former was Adam's nature before transgression; the latter was his condition after partaking of the forbidden fruit.

The principle on which Adam might have lived on unceasingly, without reaching a point where by virtue of immortality he must live on in spite of any contingency, is well illustrated in the history of the fallen angels, who are not immortal, from the fact that they are finally to be destroyed; and yet they have lived on without having death enter their ranks for over six thousand years, and they might thus live on, if not destroyed, and live endlessly, as the result of a perfect organization. But the good angels, having stood the trial, are immortal—cannot die. Lingering proofs of man's ability to live a long, long life, as a result of a perfect organization, before eating of the tree of life, are seen in the long lives of those who dwelt on earth soon after the forbidden fruit began to derange the organism of man, many of them living nearly a thousand years. Nor can this be justly claimed as a proof that man had previously eaten of the tree of life; for if eating of that tree after the transgression would have caused man to "live forever," the same result would have followed the eating of it before the fall. And it is no more unreasonable to suppose that the forbidden tree contained a principle that would cause death, than to suppose that the tree of life contained a principle that would make man death-proof. These considerations show the fallacy of the claim that Adam possessed either a dying or a deathless nature. He possessed, not a dying nature, but one liable to become such by eating of the forbidden tree; not a deathless nature, but one capable of becoming such by eating of the tree of life.

THE PRE-EXISTENT NATURE OF CHRIST.

We insert these questions and answers for the benefit of others:

"Bro. Sheldon:—Was Christ immortal before he came into this world? I suppose you hold he was not, or else how could he die? If not immortal, in what form or manner, before he came into the world, did he exist, and how was the change made to an earthly babe? Was he a mortal being, liable to be overcome, and thus fail to provide salvation? These inquiries arise in the mind of one who has but lately come to a knowledge of the many truths of which I believe you to be an advocate. Please answer soon, either by mail or through the Crisis. Your Bro. in Christ,

H. A. OLMSTED.

REPLY.

1. We believe the Son of God was immortal prior to being connected with humanity, because (1) his "goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting"; (2) he was "equal with God" in nature; and (3) as a personality bearing the name of "WORD" he "was God"—God the Son—being "with God" the Father. This name he still retains. "There are three that bare record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost." "His name is called the Word of God." A son partakes of the nature of the father, unless merely an adopted son.

2. How could he die? This was made possible by the miraculous power of Jehovah, in blending humanity and divinity, without which mysterious miracle it would not have been possible for him to have died. Shall we deny a miracle simply because we cannot see through it, or explain it? Who can explain any miracle, except on the principle of the unlimited power of Deity? And here we have the greatest miracle of God, as the basis of the great atonement. Shall we reject it simply because we cannot explain it?

3. In what form did he exist? Paul says, "in the form of God" (Phil. 2: 6), being "the express image of his person." Heb. 1: 3.

4. How was the change made? By Infinite power. "The Word was made flesh"—"a body hast thou prepared me"; and thus "we are reconciled to God by the death of his Son," as well as the death of Mary's son; thus furnishing a divine sacrifice. The sacrifice of one human being for millions of human beings, would not have been acceptable, but one Divine being is more than an equivalent for a world of human beings; thus Christ has purchased us by his death.

NOTES ON PROPHECY.—No. 1.

ENOCH'S PROPHECY.

The first prophecy uttered by a divinely inspired mortal, that we have any record of, pointed forward to the solemn judgment scene, at the coming of the Lord from heaven. That holy man, Enoch, the seventh from Adam, was moved upon by the Holy Spirit to make the thrilling declaration, "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints [or holy ones—hagion], to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds." Jude 14-15. This prophecy presents several points for consideration.

1. It announces the coming of the Lord, accompanied with a retinue of holy ones, agreeing with the Savior's statement, "The Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him." Matt. 25: 31.

2. It connects the execution of judgment with this event, not upon a part of the human family merely, but "upon all"; hence, any theory which affirms that judgment has already been executed in favor of millions of saints, or executed against millions of sinners, is out of harmony with this prophecy; for not till the Lord comes will he execute judgment, and then he will "execute judgment upon all."

3. And this involves a resurrection of all, for the Lord will then "convince all that are ungodly"; and men cannot be convinced while dead. "They that have done evil," now dead, "shall live."

TO SOUTHERN FRIENDS.

Friends of truth in all parts of the South, where I am not acquainted, who may wish to scatter my new work—"The Life Beyond Death, in the Home of the Holy," will please write me before the first of August, stating how many copies they think they can scatter to advantage in their region, and where they wish them sent; and as far as funds will warrant, we will try to supply them. Write within the time specified, that I may know how to equalize, and give all a few, if the calls are not too numerous. Direct to Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Green Co., Wis. I may possibly not be able to fill all orders without sending to some fewer than called for.

TRUTH ADVANCING.—A minister belonging to another denomination, living in another State, thus writes me:—

"We have in our conference a ministerial association. One of our members is going to attempt, at that meeting, to prove the immortality of the soul. I propose to take up the negative of the question, and try to prove that man is wholly mortal. Please send me some tracts treating on that subject," etc.

The tracts are sent willingly. We are glad to see ministers of different denominations giving attention to this theme. We recognize this clergyman as one who attended several of our meetings some years ago. Glad he has received the truth, and is now ready to defend it.

SPIRIT MANIFESTATION.

HENRY F. WADE.

We often hear it said by those that believe in modern Spiritualism, that the Scriptures, as well as experiments and facts, prove that spirits in all ages have appeared to and held converse with men. But how and for what purpose? The answer is this: they appeared to men in dignified and visible splendor. Real, literal, tangible beings spoke with an audible voice, in broad daylight, the messages from God for our instruction and best good. They walked and talked, eat and tarried all night; could be seen and heard by the natural eye and ear.

But how is it to-day with modern spirit manifestations, where, perhaps, a dozen, mostly women (silly at that, led away with divers lusts), with two or three men (of corrupt minds) get into a room, and put out the lights, and wait for the spirit of some long-buried hero or grandmother to tip the table, and by the help of the a b c's spell out some marvelous, unessential nonsense, to the wonder and admiration of all those present. They then go away and talk of progression.

Have the spirits of the Scriptures progressed so much that they are ashamed to appear in daylight; and have become dumb so that they cannot speak, and hence have to use tables and stands, and the a b c's to communicate their messages? It is claimed that not over twenty per cent of the communications can be relied upon as true. Is this progression? Strange kind indeed. Lord, save us from such progression. "In the latter times, . . . some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, speaking lies in hypocrisy." 1 Tim. 4: 1-2 "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." Jas. 4: 7. "And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep and that mutter; should not a people seek unto their God? For the living to the dead?" "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. 8: 19-20.

ADAM CLARKE, the commentator and eminent oriental scholar, says: "Too many irons in the fire! you can't have too many,—shovel, tongs, poker, keep them all moving." This is the way to live. Up and be doing. If you wish to know whether the blood circulates, give it a trial. Breast the northern blast; lay hold of the axe, the saw, the hoe, and you will soon find the blood circulating, the lungs playing, the heart beating.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 24th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

BEGINNING TO SEE IT.

I. I. LESLIE.

For years we have believed and maintained that education and civilization did not necessarily carry with them morality and virtue; that while the former two might be advancing, the two latter might be retrograding and becoming less. The history of nations and the world has shown us that there is really no connection between what is called civilization and morality; that the latter does not follow the former, nor the former produce the latter.

But while this has been a simple, plain lesson before us, strange to say, it has been a most difficult one for our great men, political and religious, to learn; for everywhere, in all the schools, in all the churches and the halls of legislation, has the doctrine been taught and promulgated, that education and civilization (including in these the new discoveries in the sciences and arts) bring the masses up to a higher plane of morality and virtue, thus preparing the way for Christianity to take a firmer hold upon the hearts of men everywhere.

Whenever we have endeavored to show the untruthfulness of this doctrine, and point out the fallacy in such reasoning, we have been regarded as the enemies of education and improvement, and also of mankind. While we have always admitted that there was throughout the world a great advancement in education, of every kind, and an unprecedented progress made in science and art, and at the same time have shown that moral corruption and crime was everywhere steadily increasing, we have been met with a flat denial of this fact, and looked upon as wild, visionary, and wanting charity and a love for the truth.

But the time has at length come when this simple lesson is being learned by men, standing higher in the estimation of the world than ourselves, and who, we hope, will teach it to the people; that even at this late hour, this false hope of the world's conversion by education and civilization preparing the way for Christianity, may be given up, and all prepare for another universal judgment, to which the world is tending.

The above has been written in consequence of reading the following paragraph, taken from the Saturday Review:—

"The supposed connection between advancement in civilization and improvement in morals, has by this time come to be recognized as nothing more than rhetorical commonplace. It is only wonderful that the patent contradiction between this theory and the facts of history should ever have escaped notice."

The Boston Daily News remarks upon the above statement of the Review as follows:—

"Substitute education in the place of civilization in the above, and the expression would be equally true, and correct a popular error. Education and morals may move on distinct lines, and in opposite directions."

Thus, through the secular papers at least, the truth is coming out, and we hope the religious press will not refuse to see it and admit it.

PREACHERS' WIVES.

BRO. GRANT:—I have read with interest Bro. Geo. Thomson's letter concerning preachers' wives and widows. I have often thought that something might be done to better their circumstances, as well as advance the cause of our great Master. In the first place, there should be one or two central points of action, such as Boston and Buchanan, at which places committees of reliable men, not easily imposed upon, whom the apostle denominates as "discerners of spirits," should be appointed to send preachers where they are most needed; men who will gather into the garner of God; for it is a lamentable fact that some go out preaching who at the same time present some hobby calculated to divide the small flocks wherever they go, and thereby lessen their strength and usefulness in the cause of the Lord. Now, we all know that, in order to carry this out, money is needed; and I would humbly suggest that a subscription list be started for that purpose, so that all may mutually share both the expenses and benefits. The apostle says, "Let all things be done decently and in order."

MAINE CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Maine Westerly Quarterly Conference, according to notice, was held in the Methodist meeting-house, near the Stetson school-house, in Hartford. It commenced Thursday, June 8th, at 5 P. M., and closed the following Sunday. The order of the meetings was as follows: Thursday evening, social meeting. Friday A. M., social meeting; afternoon and evening, preaching by Bro. Jesse Gay, of Norway, on the signs of the times, from Matt. 24th chapter.

Saturday A. M., met for business. After prayer, Bro. Gay stated the object of the meeting was to encourage a more systematic, orderly, and harmonious effort in the work of God. He also spoke of the necessity and benefit of Sunday schools, and urged the importance of greater effort in this direction. He also stated that in many cases our children were left to idle away their time, when they should have been in Sunday school, or read ing and committing to memory portions of the Bible.

Bro. Gay was chosen chairman. It was then voted that the officers of this conference be a President and Secretary, to be chosen yearly. Bro. Jesse Gay was chosen President, and A. W. Taylor Secretary.

Voted, That it be the duty of the President and Secretary to call these quarterly conferences. The conference

Resolved, That there be an effort made to sustain these conferences. Adjourned. After business meeting we spent a short season in prayer and social meeting. At one P. M., preaching by Bro. H. B. Sevey, from 1 John 2: 2-5. At five P. M., preaching by Bro. Gay, from 2 Tim 3: 1.

Sunday, at 9 o'clock A. M., social meeting. Preaching at 10 30 by Sr. S. K. Taylor, from Rom. 12: 1. Bro. Gay preached in the afternoon from Mark 12: 26-27, showing from the Scriptures that in order for God to fulfill the promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, there must be a literal resurrection of the dead, when Abraham and all who are Christ's will possess the promised inheritance, the earth renewed, through Christ the promised seed (Gal. 3: 16), who is heir of all things; to whom be glory and dominion forever. Amen. Bro. Abbott of Peru preached at five P. M.

This conference was one of the best ever enjoyed by those who attended it. The Lord blessed us with the Holy Spirit, and the brethren and sisters present were refreshed and encouraged, and felt that it had indeed been a profitable season. The preachers present were—E. M. Haggett, Jesse Gay, H. B. Sevey, — Abbott, A. W. Taylor, and Sr. S. K. Taylor. A. W. TAYLOR, Sec.

"AWFUL TIMES."—So says the New York correspondent of the Boston Pilot under date of June 21st, 1871. He writes as follows:—

"Under all circumstances it cannot be denied but that we live in awful times. The present transition of the world proves very conclusively that the material blessings of the present age are too much for men to bear. The development of nature, and the blessed results therefrom, show that men and nations soon lose their balance, hence disastrous revolutions, which are but the result of men's pride and lust. The higher order of life in mankind is seldom worth caring for, and this is precisely the very thing the Church will not give up to the devil or to the world. Hence this terrible battle of principle going on just now—a battle between morality and immortality; between good and evil; between light and darkness; between truth and falsehood; all, doubtlessly, permitted for a wise end, and with a view to the greater and more brilliant triumphs of the Church. Where it will end, any one who chooses may see, and that we are near the end—for the next century or two—few who know will dispute. Pardon this expression of a passing thought. It just occurred to me when writing the above."

Correspondence.

From Bro. O. W. Kimball.

BRO. GRANT:—As it has been some time since I wrote anything for the Crisis, and as it has been a duty and a cross which I have for some time neglected to do, I will now take this time to say a few words. As some of my brethren and friends wish to know how I am getting along, and how I like in N. H., I will say that I like here very much. I came here last Dec., somewhat a stranger. Those looking for the coming of Christ seem to be in earnest in the work of God, and determined to gain the kingdom. I have found friends here whom I expect to meet in the kingdom of God's dear Son.

Well, I am still trying to win a bride for the Master. I find here an open door. People want to hear, and my prayer is, Lord, save. It will soon be too late. I believe with all my heart we are down close to the judgment day. What is done must be done quickly. This is no time for God's people to be asleep or listening to the scandal and other false reports that are going the rounds in these days. O let us face the storm a little longer, and then it will all be over.

Some of my friends heard me say, about two and a half years ago, that by the help of the Lord, I never intend to speak evil of any one. Well, he has helped me to keep my promise, bless his name. O it is good to keep God's commands. There is peace in so doing. Let the storm come, we will suffer long and be kind. We will pour our sorrows and complaints into Jesus' ears, and he will give us grace to stand, and love our enemies. It is one thing to suffer long, and it is quite another thing to be kind all the time. O these are "perilous times." Let us keep on the whole armor. We have visited a number of places, among which are Sutton, Fisherville, Chichester, and Loudon Ridge. In all these places some are holding on, and waiting for the King. We do not go from place to place to inquire into personal troubles and difficulties, but to preach Jesus and his coming close at hand. Pray that this duty may be discharged with an eye single to God's glory.

Concord, N. H.

From Bro. S. L. Hubbard.

DEAR BRN. IN CHRIST:—Although I have never written for the Crisis, I take the liberty of writing a few lines for our much loved paper. I am with you in this blessed hope, although I have not the privilege of meeting with those of like precious faith. I am striving to walk the narrow way that leadeth unto life eternal. O it is blessed when we can have the presence of Jesus from day to day, and feel that we are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ to that inheritance that is "incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away." I believe we are near the closing scenes of this world's history, and that soon the stone will smite the image and dash it to pieces. What solemn scenes are before us. I never have longed so much for Jesus to come as I have of late. I long for the time to come when sorrow and sighing shall cease; when there shall be no more death; when tears shall be wiped from off all faces. That will be a glorious time when we shall meet the loved of earth, and never part again; when our loved ones who are locked in death's embrace shall come forth clothed with immortality and eternal life.

Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that would so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us. Let us be conformed to the will of God in all things. "Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Let us be bold soldiers of the cross, and let our light shine upon a world lying in darkness, and do what we can to arouse the people to a sense of their condition. I pray God that his Spirit may be poured out, that some more may be saved before the day of wrath shall come.

Dear friends in Jesus, let us have on "the whole armor of God." You that are on beds of sickness, I would say, cheer up. The King is coming. Let us be faithful a little while longer, and we shall see the King in his beauty, and say, "Lo this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us."

Chester, Vt.

From Bro. H. W. Park.

EDITOR CRISIS:—Thinking you might be pleased to hear from this part of the country, I take the liberty of writing you. I do so only for the purpose of informing you regarding the spread of that particular doctrine which you advocate. There has been in this vicinity for some years a few faithful and zealous believers in this doctrine. The number has been gradually increasing, until it has many adherents. Since the latter part of the winter, we have had preaching as often as once in two weeks, and have engaged the services of Bro. Alonzo Abbott for one year, half of the time.

Bro. Abbott is a true follower of Christ, a faithful minister of the gospel, and a man regarded with favor by people of all denominations. He is very felicitous in manner, clear in exposition, and, withal, a powerful laborer in his Master's vineyard. His efforts cannot, we believe, fail to work much good. His sermons are strong in the enforcement of God's word, and are weighty in moral tone and teachings; and we look for great good to result from his teachings here. We have full attendance at all his meetings, and a visible interest is manifested by many not fully made known by verbal tokens.

Bro. Jordan preached here last Sabbath to a full house. He left food for thought, and undoubtedly some conviction of the truth of his position in many minds heretofore unwilling to acknowledge even the possibility of truth in such a religious theory.

Mexico.

From Bro. J. Carr.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say to the brethren and sisters, that I am no longer able to travel and preach as I have done. I have done what I could, for the last ten years, in laboring in the vineyard. I have tried to feed the flock of God with meat in due season, and to warn sinners to flee to Christ for life eternal. I have seen some good done in the name Jesus. All praise to God, who loved us and gave his dear Son to die, that we through him might have eternal life. Many have been the infirmities which it has been my lot to share while preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God at hand; but the hope of immortality in the soon coming kingdom of Christ has sustained me in doing what I could for Christ, who has done so much for us. But the time has come when I must stop preaching, for the present at least. My trouble is nervous and physical prostration, caused by a deep-seated rheumatic trouble of thirty-four years standing, which threatens to terminate in a white swelling on the left elbow joint.

Now, dear Brn. and Srs., I ask the prayers of all that can get hold of faith in my behalf, that God may bless with returning health, if it can be for his glory and my best good, so that I may be able to still labor in the cause of Christ. Your brother in tribulation.

So. Albion, Me., June 24th, 1871.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—When at the compmeeting in New York State, I met with quite a number of brethren and sisters that I became acquainted with in bygone days, when acting as tent-master with Bro. J. C. Bywater and others, who were anxious to have me come and visit them and preach the word. I have made arrangements accordingly, by getting others to fill my appointments. I should be glad to hear from those who wish me to call on them in Western N. Y., as I propose to start in about four weeks. Address ELD. JOHN T. ONGLEY, Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa.

Extracts from Letters.

DR. C. W. BURINGER writes from Pittsburgh, Pa., June 1st, 1871:—"The Fortieth Street M. E. Church here is in a 'perfect ferment' (so says their preacher) in regard to the truths we hold; and the determination of the preacher in charge to oust Bro. Clowes, of whom I wrote you last week, is only affording a splendid opportunity for the circulation of tracts. The people want to know what Bro. Clowes' 'peculiar views' are. The preacher preached two Sabbaths ago on the resurrection; text, Job 14: 14. Last Sabbath, from Eccl. 12: 7. I heard neither sermon, but Bro. Clowes said he 'fought like one who beateth the air'; and another member told me last night that he could have done better himself. I believe it is the determination to arraign Bro. Clowes for trial on the 12th inst., at the next quarterly conference; but the great trouble is they can't hatch up any charges or specifications; for Bro. C. has never openly taught his views, and they, I suppose, are going to put him out, if possible, for simply entertaining them, fearing that at some future time he might teach them. Surely one can chase a thousand of such brave (?) fellows, and two put ten thousand to flight. Let us pray for Bro. Clowes. He is an excellent man."

SR. H. CURTIS writes from Kingfield, Me.: "How sweet, how cheering to the lonely pilgrim is the blessed promise, 'Lo, I am with you alway.' Though we may be away from friends, with none to care or sympathize with us, how sweet to hear Jesus say, 'Lo, I am with you alway.' I love to claim that promise as mine. I love to feel that Jesus is my best friend. Amid the trials of the last days, how sweet to know that Jesus not only is with us by his Spirit, but in a little from this, and we shall see him coming in the clouds. May we be prepared to say, Lo, this is our Lord; we have waited for him. Then this old earth will be cleansed and made to bloom again; and those who really love the Lord, and are ready, have the blessed promise that the meek 'shall inherit the earth,' and 'shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace.'

I am glad, glory to Jesus, that I ever learned to believe in the blessed hope. One year ago to-day, I believed just what the minister preached, when he taught that the soul was immortal, and that at death the saints go to glory, and receive a crown of life. How is it that the Bible says that 'many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake?' How can they awake out of the earth, if they are now in heaven? Let us not pin our faith on any man's sleeve, but take the Bible for our guide, and believe it because the Lord has spoken it."

BRO. H. B. SEVEY writes:—"Bro. Weeks has been laboring in Chelsea, Me., to good acceptance. He has baptized eight. More are to go forward soon. Praise the Lord for his goodness to us."

Obituaries.

SIMONS. Died at Waterbury, Ct., May 29th, Herbert A., only child of Bro. Kendrick and Sr. Nettie Simons, and grandson of Ira T. Neal, of Winsted, aged three years and nine months.

Herbert "sleeps, but not forever." The promise of the Eternal reaches lower than the dear little one has been buried; and if the parents will but obey the Lord in all things, they with their loved boy,

"Shall meet to part, no, never,
On the resurrection morn."

ROGERS. Died in Bartlett, N. H., May 30th, 1871, Annie Eliza Rogers, daughter of Bro. Levi and Sr. Mary B. Rogers, aged sixteen years, ten months, and two days.

Annie loved the cause of God and the ministers of his word. When the last hour came, it found her ready. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

VERSAILLES, June 27. The Pope in his reply to an address of sympathy from French Catholics, praises the zeal they exhibit in the cause of the Church and of himself, and denounce liberal Catholicism as an evil as formidable as a revolution or the Commune.

BERLIN, June 27. Emperor William has decreed the dissolution of the present army combinations in France, and the formation of all the German troops in that country into one combination, called the "Army of Occupation of France," of which General Manteuffel is appointed commander.

LONDON, June 27. The miners on a strike in South Wales now number 9000, and there is no present prospect of a settlement of their difficulties with the companies. A subterranean fire is known to be raging at Sheffield, and fears are entertained that it is in an old colliery, which extends to the very centre of the town.

PESTH, June 27. In the Hungarian delegation to-day one of the ministers, in replying to some criticisms upon Count Beust's foreign policy, said that there was no such reconciliation between Prussia and Turkey as should occasion any disquietude on the part of Austria.

FLORENCE, June 27. The King will not go to Rome on the 1st of July, nor will the promised transfer of the Capital occur on that date. October 1 is now named as the earliest date of the transfer. In diplomatic circles it is believed that the transfer will never be made.

Victor Emmanuel leaves to-morrow for Naples, and thence will proceed to Rome and enter that city on the second of July. While in Rome he is to join Prince Humbert in the inauguration of the rifle practice meeting.

PARIS, June 28. It is hoped that in the elections on Sunday next as many as 80 of the 113 Deputies to be chosen to the Assembly will be supporters of the Government. The Bonapartists are very active in the distribution of pamphlets intended for effect upon the electors. A coalition of the principal electoral committees of Paris is considered probable.

VERSAILLES, June 20.—The Military Committee propose that immediate steps be taken by the Government towards the organization of an active army of 360,000 troops, and also recommend the formation of a reserve force of 900,000, to be called into the field only when necessity arises, or in time of war.

The review of 100,000 men, fixed to take place at Longchamps on Thursday, 22d, has again been postponed. Apprehensions were entertained by the Government that the strong Bonapartist feeling, which still lives in a large portion of the army, might be manifested at the review, and lead to dangerous results. In order, therefore, to guard against the effect which a Bonapartist display and cries of Vive l'Empereur by the troops might have upon the large assembly which would doubtless witness the review, it has been postponed. Persigny has not been absent from London since the decheance of the Emperor was proclaimed. The Assembly will remove to Paris at an early date.

The workmen of Paris are almost unanimously Communists. They are very bitter because their cause has been defeated, and hate both Thiers and the Bonapartes. Many of them will emigrate to America.

PARIS, June 28. The Bonapartist pamphlets are mainly addressed to and intended for effect among the ignorant electors, and are to a great extent devoted to praise of the Imperial generosity to the Catholic Church. The Democrats are hopelessly divided.

LONDON, June 29. Emperor Napoleon has visited London, and has been re-elected a member of the Army and Navy club.

FLORENCE, July 1. Prince Humbert passed through the city to-day, on his way to meet the King in Rome. Several senators, deputies and mayors of the principal cities of Northern Italy have also gone to Rome to be present at the reception of the King, who is to arrive there Monday from Naples. Dispatches from Rome report visitors coming in all directions in large numbers.

Tent-Meeting.

The Lord willing, the Mass. Mission Tent will be pitched at Groton Junction, Mass., Friday, June 30th, and remain over two Sabbaths. Meetings will be held day and evening. The tent will be on Main street, on land owned by Silas Nutting. It is near a beautiful grove and pond. We wish to have it a family campmeeting. Let the brethren and sisters from abroad come and bring provisions and bedding with them, and stay with us through the meeting. We will try and make it comfortable for lodging for all who come. Especially let all, who can, come on the 4th of July. Come Saturday night, and stop over Sunday and the 4th, if you cannot stop through the meeting.

Fare reduced from Worcester, Clinton and Nashua. Tickets at the several stations good from July 1st till Monday the 10th, for those coming to the meeting. We hope that as many of the faithful laborers in the gospel, as can, will come and help us in this meeting, especially on the 4th. ENOCH MORRILL.
L. BOUTELL.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so. For the Committe, J. COUCH.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting (at West Wareham, Mass.) will commence on Monday, July 24th, and continue over the following Sabbath. With the blessing of the Lord, we expect an interesting season on this consecrated ground, as in former years; and hope all who can will make arrangements to attend this annual feast.

HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

Grove Meeting.

A meeting will be held in Harmony Grove, South Framingham, Mass., Sunday, July 16th. Brethren from adjoining towns are invited to come and worship with us. Free admittance to the grove. C. GOODRICH.

Notice.

The Vermont State Annual Campmeeting will probably be located at or near the village of Bethel, Vt. More soon. H. F. C.

Notice.

The Maine and New Brunswick Advent Christian Conference will hold its first session in Milltown, Me., commencing June 29th, and continuing over the next Lord's day. All are invited to come and help. Preaching brethren are expected to come filled with the blessing of the gospel of peace. For the brethren, M. W. CORLISS.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting held in Ripley, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., commencing Thursday, June 29th, to continue over the following Sabbath, as Brn. James Thorp and H. E. Austin may arrange. J. W. TAYLOR.
A. P. MOORE.

Maine Mission Tent.

This tent will be ready for meetings in a few days. Brethren wishing it pitched in any localities, will please write to me as soon as possible. Let there be a prompt response to this invitation.

For the Tent Committee,
R. R. YORK, Portland, Me.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting at East Lebanon, Me. (Little River Falls), Sundays, Aug. 6th and 13th. Geo. W. Brown, of South Elliott, and others, are expected to preach the word.

J. BICKFORD.

Quarterly Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting for the northern district of the Advent Christian Conference of Indiana, will meet at four o'clock P. M., on Thursday, before the first Sunday in Aug., 1871, with the church of God at Sand-hill, four miles north of Rochester, on the Michigan road, in Fulton Co. A general invitation is given; and we say come one, come all; come on the first day, and stay till the last. Provision will be made for all who may come. Persons coming on the Michigan road will inquire for Brn. N. Doolittle, or S. S. Cole. Persons coming by R. R. will stop off at Sturgeon, and inquire for Brn. E. Partridge, or I. E. Andrus. By order of conf.,

D. NAFE,
I. E. ANDRUS, } Committee.

Tent-Meetings.

Those wishing tent-meetings in the State of New York, are requested to write me at South Butler, N. Y., as soon as convenient, in order that early arrangements may be made. Those wishing meetings in the south and west part of the State, will please inform me before the State Campmeeting, so that arrangements can be made at that meeting. It is expected that Bro. Miles Grant will be at some of the meetings. B. P. STEVENS.

R. I. and East. Ct.

The Rhode Island and Eastern Ct. Conference will hold its next quarterly session with the church at Putnam, Ct., commencing Wednesday, July 5th, at two o'clock P. M. A full attendance is very much desired, and confidently expected. All letters should be directed to the care of H. N. Reed. C. H. SWEET, Clerk.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting of the "church of God of Wayland and Loan Lake," will be held at Wallace Station, Steuben Co., N. Y., on July 8th and 9th. All are invited to attend.

C. F. SWEET, Pastor.

Notice.

I am about to remove from Northwood Narrows, N. H., to Lewiston, Me. My wife being lame (not having been able to walk but a few steps at a time for the last ten weeks), I shall be compelled to withdraw all of my appointments for July. Shall not be able to leave home for some time to come. My P. O. address after this will be Lewiston, Me. H. M. BRYANT.

Notice.

There will be preaching in Belchertown (Dark Corner school district), the second and fourth Sundays in July. M. L. CURTIS.

A New Work.

We have a new work now in press, of about one hundred pages, entitled "The Life beyond Death, in the Home of the Holy: When and where to be enjoyed." By WM. SHELDON. This work will be ready for circulation in a few weeks. It will be specially adapted to do missionary work in new fields, as well as in older parishes; just the right size and of the right tone to lend to your neighbors, or send to a friend. Probably the price will be: in paper, 25 cents single; $2.00 per dozen, by mail, prepaid; in cloth, 50 cts. single; $4.00 per dozen, by mail, prepaid; and will probably be kept at the Crisis office, Boston; Advent Times office, Buchanan, Mich.; as well as by the author at Brodhead, Wis. Perhaps we may not be able to fill orders before the first of August, but hope to earlier; but the first orders will be filled first. With this understanding, orders may be sent at any time. W. S.

Southern Tract Fund.

At our recent Wisconsin campmeeting, a collection was taken to aid me in scattering gratuitously my forthcoming book (entitled "The Life beyond Death in the Home of the Holy") in the southern field, it having been prepared with reference to missionary or pioneering work. I desire to send at least one thousand copies of this work, with a quantity of my four tracts, into the southern field this coming fall and winter. It will be a pleasure for some to help me raise one hundred dollars for this purpose. Let such direct to WM. SHELDON, Brodhead, Green Co., Wis.; or, if more convenient, to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass. W. S.

Notice.

I supplied a number of brethren with works at campmeetings last year, and those who can possibly send me what is due by mail, in June, I wish they would do so, as I am much in debt for printing, and ought to pay up. If any can aid me in throwing off the unpleasant burden of being in debt, it will be thankfully received. Age and health prevent my obtaining means to live and pay debts as formerly. Direct to J. BLAIN, Buffalo, N. Y.

Meetings at Bonny Eagle, Me.

For the information of friends residing at a distance from Bonny Eagle, Me., who may desire to meet with us occasionally, I will say that Eld. C. H. Sweet, of Rhode Island, having been invited to settle here, has decided to come and remain as long as may seem duty. Preaching every Sunday, at 10½ A. M., and 1 P. M.; Sunday school at 9¼ A. M. Prayer meeting at 5 P. M.; also Tuesday and Friday evenings. All these services are held in the Chapel. T. J. RUMERY, Ch. Elder.

German Tracts.

I will send my German Tracts gratis (except postage), to any one who wants them for himself, or to distribute. I have a good supply. Send your orders to L. REIMER, 1006 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Rochester, N. Y.

The Second Advent Christian Church will meet hereafter for the worship of God over 102 State Street, at the head of the second flight of stairs. It is a new hall. It is one block south of the New York Central Depot. Will be a permanent place. Meetings Tuesday and Friday evenings, and three times on the Lord's day. Preaching afternoon and evening. Preaching brethren will find a home at Bro. D. T. Cooper's, No. 72 Mount Hope Avenue. J. PHELAN, Secretary.

Grove Meeting.

There will be preaching at Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., on Sunday, July 30th, by Eld. J. G. Smith. If stormy, the meeting will be held in the Hall at the grove. Refreshments, and stabling for horses for all who wish.

Notice.

The Maine Mission Tent will be pitched at Buckfield Village, Me., July 6th, and remain over the following Sunday, and as much longer as thought best. Bro. R. R. York and others will be present to preach the word. A. W. TAYLOR.

☞ A short poem, "The Blissful Vision," may be had for 30 cts. per dozen, of the author, J. Albert Libby, West Poland, Me.

THE BEAUTIFUL LAND.

E. R. LIBBY.

AIR—Lilla Dale.

There's a good old Book of ancient lore,
And its every word is true;
It tells of a beautiful, beautiful shore,
Of a world made fair and new.

CHORUS.

O Eden, fair Eden,
Land of the blest,
Where no sorrow comes, and no tears are shed,
And the weary saint finds rest.

In that beautiful land the fields are green,
And the sear leaf falls no more;
The flowers ne'er fade, and eternal spring
Crowns that beautiful, beautiful shore.

In that land of light, there's no hurtful thing,
There death comes never more;
Fair Eden's birds wave a deathless wing
On that beautiful, beautiful shore.

There's a city bright in that beautiful land,
A city that's fairer than day;
And its clear crystal light, like a jasper stone,
Drives the darkness far away.

In that beautiful land is the river of life,
With its clear sweet musical flow;
And all who drink of its healing stream,
With immortal beauties glow.

All nations, kindreds, tongues and tribes
Bow low before the throne;
And hallelujah's rend the air—
Thy kingdom, Lord, has come.

Hail, glorious day; hail, mighty Prince;
Hail, God's beloved Son;
All hail to him who died that we Might share that Eden home.

CHORUS.

O, Jesus, dear Jesus,
Hasten to come;
Thou wilt dry our tears and banish our fears,
In our beautiful Eden home.

Rochester, N. H.

HEALTH.

G. E. BARNES.

Everybody, except the Atheist, will admit that where there is an effect there must be an adequate cause to produce that effect. Where an effect is produced, the cause of which may be unknown, he is content to account (?) for it by saying "it happened so;" but others, who believe in God and his providence, say that there are no happen so's" at all; that everything is regulated by laws, which cannot be broken with impunity, and that therefore, if from any cause serious results come upon the children of men, it is not to be credited to mere chance, but more properly to the violation of a law or laws, which our wise Creator has given us for an observance and for our well-being.

One cause of the great amount of suffering and sickness that is now in the world is to be found in this one thing: a neglect of heeding and a violating of those laws which God has laid down for the government of our physical being. And plain as this ought to be, it is, notwithstanding, common to hear people talk about "mysterious Providences;" as though there was anything "mysterious" in the deaths of more than half that die.

In our town, we have a wicked man. He swears, he drinks to excess, smokes and chews tobacco, engages in physical excesses, is irregular in his hours of eating and sleeping, and this course of life is kept up for a number of years; when suddenly we hear that he is dead, and then it is remarked, "God removed him;" "its the judgment of God," etc., as though there had been a special interposition of Providence in his death; when the only real wonder is, that the man lived so long as he did, while daily violating those laws, the observance of which is necessary to good health.

Just consider it a moment. A man takes fiery liquor into his stomach to an excessive degree, thus disarranging and prostrating his nervous system, poisoning his blood and prostrating his mental powers by the juices and fumes of tobacco; is totally regardless of the demands of his whole being for rest; and then, when at last weary, worn, and overburdened nature gives out and expires, we hear it said in solemn undertones, "a mysterious providence." "Mysterious providence!" the only mystery in the case is that his constitution should have held out so long, in the midst of such treatment.

Sometimes a careless mother, for the purpose of making a show of her child, permits it to be dressed with insufficient clothing, whereby it catches cold, sickens and dies; and then kind-hearted friends endeavor to console the parents by alluding to the "mysterious ways of Providence."

Girls and women, for the sake of being in style, clothe themselves in such a manner as to leave their shoulders, chest and neck bearly or thinly covered; they cause their waists to be pressed out of proper shape by wearing tight corsets, thus hindering digestion, and preventing a free circulation; and then when such an one grows thin and pale, and has the dyspepsia and headache, all terminating in an untimely death, it is said, "How sorely Providence has afflicted that family." But Providence had nothing to do with it. It is a slander upon God tos peak thus! As if he caused his creatures to be sickly, weak and consumptive? No! he does not manifest himself in that way; he has given man a complete organization, and has appointed means whereby its strength and life can be sustained, and wherever, and by whom, we see these means properly used, there we see health and strength and long life; but when they are wholly set at defiance, and an injurious mode of living and dressing is indulged in, there we see sickness, weakness, and early deaths. Call it not Providence; call it by its proper name: murder and suicide.

It may be pleasant and profitable perhaps to notice some of the different methods of living, by men and nations, and then to notice their effects upon the people, mentally and physically. Among the names of antiquity, that of Lycurgus is among the foremost. He was a king of Sparta, in Greece. Being a remarkable man, he saw certain features in the regulations of his countrymen, that needed reforming, and by his wonderful sagacity he was enabled to bring them under a code of laws, the observance of which caused them to rank first among the nations of antiquity for possessing courage, endurance, and health. And among his institutions was one in which eating was regulated. By this, all the citizens, rich and poor, were required to eat at one common, public table; none were permitted to be absent, and none were permitted to eat elsewhere. Indeed, so strict were they, that on a certain occasion, a King Agis, at his return from a glorious expedition, having taken the liberty to dispense with the law, in order to eat with the queen, his wife was reprimanded and punished." Whatever we may see in this institution objectionable, we at least see this idea recognized, that a regular, temperate diet, promotes health, strength, and, consequently, longevity. But in after times, when they have outgrown their primitive customs, and have indulged their caprices, giving way to their passions and indulging in luxurious living, we see them begin to degenerate, until at last they are a feeble, effeminate people, as different from their ancestors as darkness is from light.

The history of that one city, is but the history of all the ancient cities. Beginning life in enduring hardships, living frugally, they possessed courage and health; but when in time they became rich and powerful, and began to depart from their simplicity, by indulging in the luxuries of life; at that same time their glory began to depart, and they themselves to sink back into the pit from whence they had been digged.

Here, then, we see these features: in the early part of their history they are strong, robust and healthy; at this time they are temperate and frugal in their habits. Later, we see them a weak, effeminate, inefficient people; and at the same time we see them indulging in all kinds of licentiousness and extravagance. Does it require more than ordinary wisdom and penetration to determine the cause of this effect? We have drawn instances from ancient times; we can find them also in more modern days. To go not far from home, look at the aborigines of our own America. Who ever heard of an Indian dying of consumption, of suffering from dyspepsia, and the hundred and one ills that afflict the inhabitants of our cities? In truth, if such a thing was to happen, Barnum would not rest until he had him exhumed, and his skeleton on exhibition in his museum, so that the public might gratify their curiosity by gazing upon the remains of an Indian that was troubled with dyspepsia, and who finally died of consumption. What a phenomenon that would be!

But why is the Red Man free from these disorders, while his pale-faced brother is subject to them? The only correct answer, the only true solution of the problem, is found in the fact that his habits of living are different; thus leading to different results. From infancy he is accustomed to hardship and exposure; his articles of diet are all wholesome, and living a great portion of his time in the open air, with his person free from the useless incumbrances of civilization, he strengthens his frame; and so, when old age comes upon him, his step is yet firm, his form erect, his eye bright and piercing, and all because he has not been running through a course of dissoluteness, the powers and energies with which the Great Spirit had endowed him.

But from the child of nature turn to our cities and look upon the surging sea of humanity as it floats by and beyond us, and how different! Instead of a multitude enjoying health, and bright, buoyant spirits, perhaps not more than one out of fifty knows what it is to really enjoy good health. Some are wasted and thin; others are stout and bloated; one dark and sallow; another is flushed and red; all or nearly all, lacking good sound health, because they are daily and hourly neglecting to obey those laws, obedience to which would insure them almost perfect health.

Now, I contend that to live so as to injure our system, to destroy the workmanship of God, and to bring sickness and distress upon ourselves, and thus hasten the day of our dissolution, is wrong in the extreme. And if I am right in saying it is wrong, then how many wrong-doers there are! Who among us is innocent? Who of us can cast the first stone? Occasionally we see or hear of a man who makes the preservation of his health a practical question, and who practices self-denial, refraining from many things that are pleasant to the taste and the eye; but when we see one doing thus, how often is he the sub ject f some cutting remark. He is called "singular," "old maidish," "an old Betty," etc., for doing those things which our own judgment, if we permitted it to be exercised, would tell us was the very best that could be done.

I am not making an exaggerated statement, when I assert that nine-tenths of the complaints of the present day are caused by an injurious mode of living, and all the doctors in Christendom will never effect a cure while such habits are indulged.

Now, I have no pet theory to advance, nothing of the kind; neither do I expect to produce a marvellous revolution in this respect; but I do protest against men and women ruining themselves and their posterity by neglecting the laws of life and health, and thus subjecting themselves to distress, to despondency and untimely graves.

From the foregoing let us learn this lesson; that as by obeying in spiritual things, we derive spiritual health and enjoyment; even so, by obeying these physical laws, we shall also derive physical health and enjoyment. Therefore, in the words of Paul, "whether ye eat, or drink, or whatever ye do, do all to the glory of God." (1 Cor. 10: 31.)

Salem, Mass.

THE DIAMOND RULE.

GEO. THOMSON.

Of how much greater value is a diamond than a wedge of gold of the same size and weight? What a singular question, exclaims one; what can be its import? Gold is good; gold is very valuable; but a pound weight of diamonds would far transcend in value a pound weight of gold. The metals and jewels are precious, and of greater or less intrinsic value in proportion to their scarcity; and so things, or principles bearing the appellatives of those precious metals, or gems, have a relative value, or importance. "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Prov. 25: 11. And we have "golden moments," "golden hours," "golden opportunities," "silver speech," "the pearl of great price," and the world-renowned "golden rule," which is—As ye would that others should do unto you, so do ye unto them. This is a blessed rule, and if it were universally practised, would be productive of grand results. Men would live together in peace and harmony; all strife among men would cease; law-courts and prisons would be abolished; we should have no more beggars, nor almshouses; no more wars, nor bloody battle-fields.

O what a glorious era would dawn upon the world, if all would adopt the Golden Rule. But, then, there are many things which it cannot accomplish. It cannot exempt us from the calamities and casualties of life. It could not prevent the inroads of disease and death. It would be powerless to arrest the progress of famine or pestilence. Unable to grapple with the grim monster Death, it gives no promise of a future life. In a word, it is confined solely to the present life, and only in man's dealings with his fellow man. And yet it is grand, and worthy to be called "golden." But if we can find a rule that will be equally applicable in our relation to God and man, and that will take hold upon the future, as well as the present life, will it not be something better, grander, and consequently of more value? All will respond in the affirmative. Now we see the import of the question at the commencement of this article. If the above rule, which only stands related to our dealings with our fellow men and the present life, is worthy of being called "golden," what shall we call that rule which stands related to our dealings with man and God, and to the future as well as the present life? Ah, you begin to anticipate. Well, we will name it

THE DIAMOND RULE.

We found it in the "Treasure House," glittering among innumerable precious gems. We hope our dear brethren will pass it along.

We presume that if brother Beecher had made the discovery, the entire press of the country would herald it forth; but let the little ones have it, it may do them good. But you are getting impatient for the "rule." I trust that we all may be as anxious to adopt it; and furthermore, before I give you the rule, I want to exact a promise from all who read this, that they will never reverse the rule. A reversion of the rule has brought thousands to the grave impenitent. It has made churches cold, formal, and useless; it has made christians lifeless, loveless, and backslidden; in fact, it has almost effected a matrimonial union between the church and the world.

One more request, dear brethren and sisters. Inscribe it on your banners in characters as brilliant and sparkling as the diamond; wear the motto on your breast and in your heart; and when Jesus comes to make up his jewels, it will be found that the DIAMOND RULE has had a wonderfully transforming power in preparing us as gems to deck the Redeemer's crown. Here is the rule:—

"BUT SEEK YE FIRST THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND HIS RIGHTEOUSNESS"; promise—"and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. 6: 33. Alas, alas, how many seek everything else first, thus reversing the Diamond Rule to their own loss of peace and ultimate destruction.

LONGINGS.

E. OWEN.

Dear gracious Lord, must my life pass
Like transient dewdrops on the grass;
Exhaled by the uncoming sun,
Ere I one worthy deed have done?

'Tis true I have a mission here,
But do I fill it? Lord, I fear.
I often think, would I was dead,
I leave so much undone, unsaid.

I fain would benefit the race,
And show the power of saving grace;
I would my life-work here might tell
That love to God my acts impel.

I would help on the fainting saint,
Induce to praise, who make complaint;
I would the wanderer bring home,
And show poor sinners how to come.

But, oh! dear Lord, I am so weak,
For grace I constantly would seek;
Permit me, Lord, to hear thee say,
"My grace" is equal to the day.

THE ALBION CAMPMEETING.

The first general campmeeting of the Adventists of New York State closed June 14th, with quite encouraging prospects of good results accruing, and of a healthy impetus being imparted to the cause of Christ in this State.

The grove is about two miles from Albion depot, and is one of the most beautiful for shade that can be found. A lovely place indeed to worship in, as quiet as the woods can be, and as cheerful as any, with songful nightingales to lend additional cheer and inspiration. But unfortunately the weather was very unfavorable during the entire week. There was considerable rain, in showers, and it was very cold for the season, especially nights, when few made themselves entirely comfortable; all of which detracted materially from the interest of the meeting, and diminished the general attendance probably one-third. And yet we had a good meeting, and were thankful for what we had. The cold did not chill all our zeal, nor did the rain dampen all our joys. It was very good to be there despite the adverse circumstances, as many can and did testify.

Besides the two large mission tents, there were nine (mostly 16 × 24 feet in size) representing various localities, encircling the seats and main speaker's stand, a boarding tent and cooking house in the rear. These were quite densely populated, and altogether made a very pleasant forest city. There were about a thousand in the Sunday morning audience, and probably fifteen hundred in the afternoon, both being disturbed and more or less broken up by showers.

The order maintained upon the ground, without any special police force, was excellent; and the general respect shown the place and the meeting was highly commendable on the part of all who came. Nothing was stolen, no ropes were cut, or tents disturbed; there was no hooting, prowling about, nor angry discussions of religious zealots.

Ministers present from this State: C. F. Sweet, Wm. A. Fenn, B. P. Stevens, M. R. Miles, J. H. Whitmore, E. Cowles, C. W. Snow, E. F. Sergisson, S. C. Gove, A. C. Newell, D. Cogswell, C. P. Greenman, W. J. Hobbs, Wm. Ingmire, J. H. Luttenton, J. E. Wells, A. P. Moore, Wm. J. Morrell, W. Vreeland, A. A. Phelps, Jacob Blain, and Mrs. E. S. Jennings. From abroad: Mrs. L. M. Stoddard, J. W. Taylor, J. Wendell, H. L. Hastings, and J. T. Ougley.

Social meetings. Prayer and social meetings were held regularly at seven o'clock P. M. each day, and in some instances at other times. These were all excellent, well attended, and truly "heavenly places." One had nearly always to make several attempts before speaking. Often three or four were up at once, and to sing was only to sing some one down for another trial. The prayers were usually short and expressive, and the testimonies mostly cheering utterances of faith. The soon coming of Christ was the most interesting theme; a proper preparation of heart, and holiness of life, the most important work; the resurrection of the dead the undoubted time of reward; and immortality unquestionably the gift of God through our Lord Jesus Christ. In all these important gospel truths there was great unity of sentiment, and an almost universal desire expressed to learn more of the Bible, and be more nearly moulded into the image of the Son of God.

The preaching. Bro. C. W. Low, on very short notice, responded to the call on Thursday evening, and gave the first sermon. Subject—the relationship of Christ and the Father. Bro. Fenn followed with remarks.

Friday A. M., J. W. Taylor. Text—"And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." P. M. Bro. W. A. Fenn gave the annual address before the N. Y. A. C. Conference. "See that ye walk circumspectly; not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil." Eve., M. R. Miles.—"And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment," etc.

Saturday, A. M. was set apart for the dedication of the new State Mission Tent—size, 45 × 66 feet. Bro. Stevens read the 25th Psalm. Song—

"In expectation sweet."

Prayer by C. W. Low, and dedication sermon by J. H. Whitmore. Text—"I will come again." Pres. Cogswell then formally presented the tent to the conference, on the part of the committee, and Bro. Fenn made the dedicating prayer. The whole was an impressive service—pleasing to God we have no doubt, and encouraging to all interested in mission tents. P. M. Prayer by Mrs. E. S. Jennings. Sermon by Mrs. L. M. Stoddard. Text—"Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me." Eve., Bro. W. J. Hobbs. "For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them; but the word did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.

Sunday A. M., A. A. Phelps.—"Occupy till I come." Song—

"We are living, we are dwelling
In a grand and awful time," etc.

At half past twelve, in the large tent, Dr. N. H. Barbour—"The Ten Virgins." P. M., H. L. Hastings—"We preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord." Eve., Mrs. E. S. Jennings—"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Mrs. Stoddard followed with remarks.

Monday A. M., A. C. Newell—"Behold I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." P. M., H. L. Hastings—"For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry; but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil." Eve., C. F. Sweet—"Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live; turn ye, turn ye, from your evil ways, for why will ye die, O house of Israel?"

Tuesday A. M., A. P. Moore—"And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." P. M., H. L. Hastings—The Lord's Prayer. Subject, The Kingdom. Eve., Wm. A. Fenn—"And I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Wednesday A. M. Prayer by Jacob Blain. Sermon by J. Wendell—"For the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?" P. M. At two o'clock Dr. Barbour occupied thirty minutes on Rev. 17; then after singing

"Glad tidings, glad tidings, the kingdom is near,"

Sr. Stoddard took the regular hour—"This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness; then shall the end come." Eve., H. L. Hastings—"I write unto thee, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God."

Sunday, at noon, Bro. Fenn baptized four young ladies; one the daughter of Bro. C. F. Sweet. At six o'clock Sunday evening, Bro. Wm. J. Morrell of New London, J. E. Wells of Rochester, and S. C. Gove of Fairport, were presented at the stand for ordination. Song—

"Ho! reapers of life's harvest," etc.

Prayer by B. P. Stevens; charge by H. L. Hastings; right hand of fellowship by W. A. Fenn; after which each candidate made a short address to the audience.

FINANCES.

The meeting was self-sustaining. One hundred and fifty-six dollars and fifty cents were raised in two collections, and disbursed as follows—

Use of ground and fixtures	$64.37
Freight of the tents	7.63
Twelve ministers (expenses) $4 each	48.00
Four " $3 each	12.00
One minister, expenses	13.50
" " "	5.00
" " "	3.50
" " "	2.00
A Sister	.50
Total	$156.50

BREAKING UP.

Bro. Wm. L. Himes arrived on the ground Wednesday evening, but too late to preach; also Bro. J. V. Himes the next morning, as we were striking tents,—supposing the meeting was to continue another day. These late arrivals were much regretted, as all would have been glad to hear them. But we saw their faces, took their hands, and were sad to part. "Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend"—especially so pilgrims on the way to the heavenly kingdom. Bro. Himes' gray hairs led the mind back to his early labors with Bro. Miller in '43, awakening reminiscences akin to those that Sr. Stoddard stirred in her touching reference to the dear old chart of that memorable date. Vividly the venerable relic rose, and like a canceled contract there seemed traced across it—just as Habakkuk saw it two thousand years ago—words that stayed five "virgins'" souls, at least, and stays them still—"The vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak and not lie: though it [seem to] tarry, WAIT FOR IT; because it will surely come, it will not tarry."

Another parting is past; a few more, and we shall meet "where congregations ne'er break up." Till then we "wait." For the committee, WM. E. BROWN, Sec.

REST.

THERIA E. WEAVER.

How sweet, when weary and tired from the busy toils of this life, to know we can find rest. When tossed with tempests on either hand, when weighed down with the trials and sorrows of life, we feel almost like saying, O that I was laid in the grave, free from anxious toils, cares, and afflictions. But list! I seem to hear a sweet voice saying, "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest." How it soothes our sorrows, calms our fears, and speaks peace to our weary, drooping hearts. Truly rest does look good to us, as we are racked with pain and distress constantly.

We long for the glad day to come when that rest will be given. Ofttimes it seems as if to sleep in Jesus would be blessed; yet, when we think of the home beyond this vale of tears, and the sweet, undisturbed rest that we shall have, if faithful, it is enough to stimulate us to do anything for Jesus, if we can only be saved. The day hasteth, the hours fly swiftly on. Soon, soon it will be heard from the lips of Jehovah, Time shall be no more. Then our rest will be given, and we can enjoy it forever, if we are only good now. God help us all to be good, that we may enter into that rest that remaineth for thy people, is my earnest prayer.

Gems.

— All aping of simplicity or pretensions to a childish state, which it is impossible we should really possess, is so far either from simplicity or humility, that it is downright duplicity.

— If you act from the base motive of obtaining the praise of men, disappointment is the best thing that could befall you. "How can you believe, who receive honor one of another?"

Wide is God's great world around us,
Room enough for all to live;
Mar no creature's brief enjoyment—
Take not what you cannot give.

— That which we love best, will form the subject of our happiest thoughts; we will give it the preference of all other themes in our conversation; it will have the largest influence in forming our resolutions, and of putting them into execution.

— Men may condemn and contemn, but he that has a pure conscience will not be disturbed, unless he be still under the influence of that vile affection which cannot be satisfied with "the honor that cometh from God only," but earnestly craves the honor of mortal worms like himself.

— In proportion as any one is dead to self, and to the desire of the honors of men, in the same proportion is he regardless of the unjust censures of mortals.

— Of what can I boast? What can I claim for my services? When I have done all that is commanded, what can I say, but that I am an unprofitable servant! I have only occupied the talents that were given me.

Little to me it matters
Whither my feet are led,
If in the burning desert
Or the pastures green I'm fed,—
Whether the storm or sunshine
Be in the path I take;
For my hand is in thine, my Father,
Thou wilt not thy child forsake.

— You say you was equally faithful with your brother, yet he was praised, while you was neglected. Be thankful it was so. You desire to be humble. Praise might puff you up. How happy was your escape!

— It is a greater blessing to be censured when innocent than to be praised when undeserving.

— A good character is not merely a good name in the mouths of others, but a good nature in ourselves.

— Suffering rightly borne weakens that part of us that should be weak, and strengthens what should be strong.

LIVING WITHOUT SIN.

C. F. SERGISSON.

This is an important question, and the truth is of very great value to the friends of truth, and more especially to the child of God, whose heart is always open to let the true light shine therein. I am well aware that the counterfeit children, which have the form of godliness, but deny the power of Jesus' blood to make the foulest clean, and keep them so, are the ones who will venture to take the negative of this question. The children of the light hate sin and its author, the devil, who is directly opposed to God and all good. Dear reader, which of the two will you obey? If Satan, then you must die; "for the wages of sin is death." The devil cannot save you from sin and death, but Jesus can. Then choose him, and you shall live.

But "to the law and to the testimony"; what saith the word of God? what is truth? Search the Scriptures, if you would know the truth of the matter. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Matt. 5: 5. Can a pure heart be filled with sin? Neither can a sinful heart see God. "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Heb. 12; 14. "But if we walk in the light [how?] as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1: 7. How much sin remains when we are cleansed from all sin? "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Ver. 9. Where, now, are our sins, if we have complied with the conditions to repent and confess? Who dare say that the Lord is not faithful and just, and will not forgive us all our sins? "If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar." Ver. 10. Mark, it is not put in the present tense, but in the past; not that we do sin now, but have not sinned in the past; because if we did not sin then, we need no Savior; for the law has no claim upon us. "Sin is the transgression of the law." Sin is of the devil, but righteousness comes by faith in God, and obedience to his law. "He that doeth righteousness is righteous." "He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning." 1 John 3: 8. "Whosoever abideth in him [Christ] sinneth not; whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him." 1 John 3: 6. To obey is not to sin; but to disobey is to sin, and obey the devil. To be a sinner is to be out of Christ; to be in Christ is not to sin, but to be a new creature. To know Christ is to live without sin, for whosoever sinneth "is of the devil."

Question. How is the world to know you from those of the world, if you must sin? May they know the saint from the sinner? We answer, Yes. Do you inquire how? By sinning and not sinning. One sins, and the other does not sin. "In this [sinning and not sinning] the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil." 1 John 3: 10. Here are two kinds of children brought to view; they are going two ways. One way is very broad, where the many tread; the other is very narrow, and straight. Few go that way. The broad way leads to death; the narrow way leads to life eternal. Dear reader, upon which of these are you journeying? Are you found with the few, who are crying, Life, eternal life? or are you going down to certain destruction and death? The way to life eternal is full of good works, charity, faith, hope, meekness, patience, gentleness, and temperance; and if these be in us and abound, they make us that we are neither barren nor unfruitful. The pure in heart are happy all the way, always rejoicing, and in everything giving thanks, making melody in their hearts by psalms and hymns. How often we hear the pure ones sing,

"Jesus all the day long
Is my joy and my song."

"Is my joy," not was. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God"; not when we are sinners, but when we are pure in heart and life, and have the Spirit whereby we cry, Abba, Father, my Lord and my God. "Whosoever is born [more properly rendered begotten] of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin." 1 John 3: 9. The children of the devil do all the sinning. How are we to know when we do sin? John says, "If our hearts condemn us, God is greater than our hearts, and knoweth all things. Beloved, if our hearts condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God, . . . because we keep his commandments, and do those things which are pleasing in his sight." Does sin please God? We must believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, as he gave us commandment; "and hereby we know that he abideth in us, by his Spirit which he hath given us." Evermore give us thy Spirit, as a seal of adoption, whereby we may know that we are "sealed unto the day of redemption," by the Spirit which thou hast given unto us.

Dear brethren and sisters, shall we not follow the advice of the Son of God, and have him say to us, Thy sins, which were many, are all forgiven; go in peace, and sin no more? God grant that both reader and writer may soon meet all the pure in heart on the ever-green shore, in God's everlasting kingdom.

LONG SERMONS.

J. W. BENTLEY.

BRO. GRANT:—I was glad (as doubtless were many others) when I read yours and Bro. Munger's pieces on long sermons and meetings, and I feel moved to write a few words on the subject, now the ice is broken.

We certainly do need a reform in this particular, for the brethren and the churches are not the only sufferers. The cause of truth suffers also, for there have probably been many honest, earnest seekers after Bible truth and light, that have been driven away from God's light and truth by these long sermonizers; for they could not digest an hour and a half or two-hour discourse. Now that a reform is needed in this direction is evident to all (except these long-warp preachers); and the question is, how can it be brought about? I think it the duty of the lay brethren to take hold of this matter with the preachers who favor short sermons and short exercises; for so long as we procure these notoriously long-sermon preachers, it will do no good for Bro. Grant, Bro. Munger, or anybody else to preach, practice, or write against these long sermons and exercises.

Bro. Munger proposes in his article that we raise a few hundred dollars and buy them off. Allow me to suggest an amendment to his proposition; raise the money, if you please, but in room of hiring these preachers to preach short sermons, pay it to those preachers that not only know when to begin, but where to leave off; and thus compel these long-warp preachers to either lay a shorter warp, or take two sermons to put in the filling.

TRUST IN JESUS.

A doctor who was once visiting a christian patient had himself been anxious to feel that he was at peace with God. The Spirit of God had convicted him of sin and need, and he longed to possess "that peace which the world cannot give." On this occasion, addressing himself to the sick one he said:

"I want you just to tell me what it is, this believing and getting happiness—faith in Jesus, and all that sort of thing, that brings peace."

His patient replied: "Doctor, I have felt that I could do nothing, and I have put my case in your hands—I am trusting in you. This is exactly what every poor sinner must do in the Lord Jesus."

This reply greatly awakened the doctor's surprise, and a new light broke on his soul.

"Is that all?" he exclaimed, "simply trusting in the Lord Jesus? I see it as I never did before. He has done the work."

Yes, Jesus said on the cross, "It is finished." And "whosoever believeth in him shall not perish but have everlasting life." From that sick bed the doctor went a happy man, rejoicing that his sins were washed away in the blood of the Lamb.—Christian Advocate.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

HOW TO KEEP COOL.

The majority of people experience a great deal of discomfort every summer from the heat, which they might in a great degree, if not wholly, avoid. A careful attention paid to the following rules will amply repay any one, not only in additional personal comfort, but in increased health and strength:

1. The diet [should consist of fruits, vegetables, bread and other preparations of whole wheat-meal, oatmeal, or southern corn-meal. Northern corn contains more oil, starch, and sugar than any other grain, while Southern corn contains less than any other, consequently Southern is one of the best grains for summer use, and Northern corn decidedly the worst. Avoid all heating and stimulating articles of food, as meats, especially fat and salted meats, butter, sugar, gravies, and starchy and oily food of all kinds. Also, avoid pepper, salt, spices, and condiments. They all cause more or less irritation and feverishness of the system. Other things being equal, the less meat and more fruit eaten during hot weather, the less will be the discomfort experienced from the heat. Do not eat hot food, nor drink hot drinks. A less quantity of food is required in summer than in winter, and care should be taken not to overload the stomach with more than the system requires. An excess in quantity of even the best kinds of food will clog up the system, and produce the very result you are striving to avoid.

2. Drink nothing but water, or the unfermented juices of fruits. Avoid drinking large quantities at a time. Of course, this precludes the use of tea, coffee, beer, wines, liquors, etc.

3. A moderate amount of exercise is essential to good digestion, and the healthful action of the skin, kidneys, and bowels, without which comfort and health cannot be obtained.

4. The clothing should be light, light colored, loose fitting, porous, and changed often.

5. The entire body should be bathed every day, either in the morning or at night. Tepid, cool, or cold water may be used, according to the strength of the bather. Farmers, machinists, and others who perspire freely, and are exposed to dust, should bathe at night. They will rest and sleep better for doing so. If immersion of the body is not practicable, a basin of water and a towel will suggest the mode of procedure. The whole body can be cooled in a short time by holding pieces of ice in the hands, or by letting a stream of cold water fall upon the wrists or ankles. The cold sitz or hip-bath is also an excellent and quick method of reducing the temperature of the body to the degree of comfort. Another mode of accomplishing the same result is to immerse the soles of the feet in cold water.

6. Avoid all undue mental or physical excitement.—Herald of Health.

SLEEP.—A proper amount of sound, refreshing sleep, is indispensable to the enjoyment of good health. The man who deprives himself of a portion of the sleep which he naturally requires, deprives himself also of a portion of the health he might otherwise enjoy, and is also deficient in muscular and intellectual strength. Nature has chosen the hours of sleep for the assimilation of food, and if a person is deprived of a portion of the sleep which nature requires, his system is deprived of so much time which is allotted to it for the growth of its tissues, and consequently there must be a corresponding deficiency in all the faculties, both of body and mind.

TO REMOVE WARTS.—Pass a pin through the wart; apply one end of the pin to the flame of a lamp; hold it there until the wart fries under the action of the heat. A wart so treated will leave. If the wart is hard, a good method is to cut it off with a knife or scissors, and apply a little caustic to the roots. If the wart have a narrow neck, tie a silk thread or horse-hair around it, and it will soon drop off. A little caustic applied to the roots will prevent it from growing again.

CURE FOR THE BITE OF A MAD DOG.—A medical writer says: "Spirits of hartshorn is an excellent remedy. The wound should be bathed constantly with it, and three or four doses taken inwardly during the day. The hartshorn decomposes chemically the virus insinuated into the wound, and immediately alters and destroys its deleteriousness.

OPEN YOUR WINDOW AT NIGHT.—Florence Nightingale wisely urged that none of the patients in the hospitals which she visited should dread the air from the window. "Keep the doors of the hospital closed, and the windows open," was her advice. This is true of the night as well as the day. Keep out of the current, but let in the fresh air, day or night, and enjoy it.

A WORD TO LITTLE MARY.

"Jesus loves a little child;
He was lowly, meek and mild."

How sweet it is, dear Mary, to be a little one, whom Jesus loves; and how happy you would be to know his love and prize it! Your heart would leap for joy, and your lips would open wide in his praise. How happy a thing it would be if every little one were a lamb of the great and good Shepherd. And why should it not be so? Each one is invited to come to Jesus. If you would be happy, come to this great and loving Shepherd, who carries the lambs in his arms. Seek now your Savior in the days of your childhood; you will then be happy for life and prepared for death. This would not be the mere delight of the moment as your pleasures now are; it would be eternal happiness, eternal joy.

Will you not come to the good Shepherd? He loves the lambs as well as the sheep of his flock. He is the door as well as the Shepherd. Hear what he says: "I am the door of the sheep; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture." Blessed Jesus, draw the little ones to thyself.

Dear little niece, can you not say with the poet:

"Jesus from heaven came down to die
For little children young as I;
So great his love, his life he gave,
Our guilty souls from death to save.

Oh, may I love and praise his name,
Who once for me a child became;
Help me, O Lord, thy will to do,
My sins forgive, my heart renew."

"He will feed his flock like a shepherd; he will gather the lambs with his arms, and carry them in his bosom." It is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish. The good shepherd watches over his flock by day and by night, and if a single lamb wanders from the fold into by-paths or quagmires, he is off, off instantly, in search of the lost one. Nor does he rest till it is safely in the fold—the bosom of love.

"Feed my lambs." How great the love of the good Shepherd for the sheep! Not only a life of toil, but a cruel death bears witness to his love. When about to ascend, to a chosen apostle he addressed the question, "Lovest thou me?" Then to an affirmative answer responds, "Feed my sheep;" thus showing that the work of the preacher was a work of love, and that the great and controlling motive-power in this work, was love to the Master. It was this that prompted the early disciples to endure great hardships and privations, and enabled them to rejoice that they were suffering for Christ's sake. "Feed my lambs, feed my sheep."

"The Shepherd sought his sheep,
The Father sought his child;
They followed me o'er vale and hill,
O'er deserts waste and wild."

THE GOLDEN PENNIES.

A little boy who had plenty of pennies, dropped one into the missionary-box, laughing as he did so. He had no thought in his heart about Jesus, the heathen, or the missionary. His was a tin penny. It was as light as a scrap of tin.

Another boy put a penny in, and as he did so, looked round with self-applauding gaze, as if he had done some great thing. His was a brass penny. It was not the gift of a "lowly heart," but a proud spirit.

A third boy gave a penny, saying to himself, "I suppose I must because all others do." That was an iron penny. It was the gift of a cold, hard heart.

As a fourth boy dropped his penny in the box he shed a tear, and his heart said, "Poor heathens! I'm sorry they are so poor, so ignorant, and so miserable." That was a silver penny. It was the gift of a heart full of pity.

But there was one scholar who gave his penny with a throbbing heart, saying to himself, "For thy sake, O loving Jesus, I give this penny, hoping that the poor heathen, whom thou lovest, will believe in thee, and become thy disciples." That was a golden penny, because it was the gift of love.

TEACH US TO WAIT.

Why are we so impatient of delay,
Longing forever for the time to be;
For thus we live to-morrow in to-day,
Yea, sad to-morrows we may never see.

We are too hasty; are not reconciled
To let kind nature do her work alone;
We plant our seed, and like a foolish child
We dig it up to see if it has grown.

The good that is to be we covet now,
We cannot wait for the appointed hour;
Before the fruit is ripe we shake the bough,
And seize the bud that folds away the flower.

When midnight darkness reigns we do not see
That the sad night is mother of the morn;
We cannot think our own sharp agony
May be the birth-pang of a joy unborn.

Into the dust we see our idols cast,
And cry, that death has triumphed, life is void;
We do not trust the promise, that the last
Of all our enemies shall be destroyed!

With rest almost in sight the spirit faints,
And heart and flesh grow weary at the last;
Our feet would walk the city of the saints,
Even before the silent gate is passed.

Teach us to wait until thou shalt appear—
To know that all thy ways and times are just;
Thou seest that we do believe and fear,
Lord, make us to believe and trust.

THE TRUMPETS.

Dr. J. A. Seiss, of Philadelphia, Editor of the "Prophetic Times," is giving a series of interesting discourses on the Apocalypse, from which we take the following:—

THE SOUNDING OF THE FOURTH TRUMPET.

"And the fourth angel sounded, and the third of the sun was smitten, and the third of the moon, and the third of the stars, so that the third of them should be darkened, and the day should not shine the third of it, and the night likewise."

We have seen the judgments of God going forth on the land, with its trees and herbage—on the sea with its fishes and its ships—on the rivers and springs—and everywhere spreading disaster, suffering, and death. This trumpet carries us above, to portents and afflictions from the heavenly bodies. Jesus has told us "there shall be signs in the sun, and in the stars" (Luke 21: 25;) and here John beholds some of them. We have had some of them before, but they increase and intensify as the end draws near. We shall see more of them hereafter.

But what are we to understand by the sun, moon, and stars? Ask a child, and it will tell you; but ask our Apocalyptic interpreters, and their answers are as various as their names, and all they have to say is nothing but loose conjecture and uncertainty. Grotius says they are the cities of Galilee, and the people of the Jews, destroyed by Vespasian. Hammond says the sun is the Jewish temple; the moon, Jerusalem; the stars, its population; their obscuration, the taking of the city by Titus. Brightman says the sun is the Bible; the moon, its doctrine; the stars, the ministers of the church; their obscuration, the persecution of the African church by the Vandals. Vitringa says the obscuration of the sun is the decay of the imperial government from Valens to the fall of Augustulus; of the moon and stars, the false doctrines and corrupt manners of the patriarchs and bishops after the time of Constantine. Wordsworth sees in it "a prophecy of a great prevalence of errors, defections, apostasies, and confusions in christendom, such as abounded in the seventh century." And Daubuz, Elliott, Lord, Cumming, Barnes, etc., consider it a picture of the subversion of the western imperial government and its dependencies, and the setting up of the new rule of the Heruli under Odoacer. Will any one in his senses allow that all these can be true? or that that can be a just way of dealing with the word of God, which gives us such wide-ranging diversity, and about equal reason for either theory?

The application of this trumpet to Odoacer is the favorite modern way of disposing of it. Yet Barnes confessedly adopts it, only because the system on which he interprets the foregoing trumpets leaves him no other alternative, notwithstanding he cannot make the events and the prophecy correspond, except in the vaguest and most general manner. Lord embraces it because "there is no other event that in the slightest degree meets the conditions of the symbol." And so with the rest; though, even as a symbol, this trumpet no more fits the case of Odoacer and the Heruli, than it fits the case of Vespasian or Titus, Napoleon Bonaparte or George Washington. Look at it. John beheld the third of the sun, moon, and stars smitten, and their light one-third diminished, whilst they retained their places, and for two-thirds continued the same as before; but Odoacer made an utter end of the old imperial government of the west, and of all its dependencies, and set up an entirely new sun, moon, and stars in the political heavens. Here is a discrepancy which is eternally irreconcilable with the record, and which, without noting others, is fatal to the theory. And if the system of symbolic interpretation forces us to accept as the fulfillment of holy prediction what is so fundamentally at variance with it, then there remains but one rational alternative: either to surrender our warfare with rationalism and infidelity, or to renounce and denounce that symbolic system as inadequate and false, which it really is, even from foundation to summit. With all the great names by which it is adorned, I charge it, before God and men, with having obscured and sealed up from the view of the church, some of the plainest and most important revelations from heaven, and hold it responsible for nearly all the uncertainty, doubt, and darkness which hang over this sublime and awful Apocalypse. And as surely as this book is what God says it is, and as certainly as sun, moon, and stars mean sun, moon, and stars, just so surely this fourth trumpet no more refers to Odoacer, or any other men, events, or disasters of the past, than it does to the writers who have so applied it.

It is a judgment scene of the great day that is foreshown, and it is a fearful and disastrous obscuration of the sources of light and heat to our world, so that sun, moon, and stars will shine with only the third of their force, disturbing the seasons, hindering the ripening of fruits and harvests, and filling the world with chilliness and sickening gloom. The same was prophesied by Isaiah (13: 9,) where it is said: "Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the earth desolate; and He shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it. For the stars of heaven and the constellations thereof shall not give their light, the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine. And I will punish the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; and I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible." (Compare Jer. 4. 23, 28; Ezek. 32: 7, 8; Joel 2: 10, 30, 31: 3: 15: Amos 5: 20; Zeph. 1: 14-16; Matt. 24: 29.) Nor can we consider this unlikely or improbable, when we call to mind the plague of "thick darkness," for three days, which attended God's judgments, upon Egypt.

Thus, then, we have the significance of the first four trumpets. The first angel sounds, and a fearful tempest of hail and fire mingled with blood, follows. The third of the land is burned, and the third of the trees, and all green grass;—a judgment upon the world for its wickedness.

The second angel sounds, and a great meteoric mass, like unto a mountain burning with fire, is plunged into the sea, turning the third of its waters to blood, killing the third of all living things in the sea, and utterly destroying the third of the shipping on the sea;—another sore judgment upon the guilty and God-defying children of men.

The third angel sounds, and a great starlike meteor falls out of the sky, blazing like a torch, and is absorbed by the earth and waters, embittering the third of the rivers, and the wells, and fountains, so that large portions of mankind die because of the poison it imparts to the waters;—another sore judgment upon the earth.

The fourth angel sounds, and calamity befalls the luminaries of the sky. The sun, moon, and stars are one-third obscured, making the days gloominess and the darkness of the nights still darker, with all the attendant distresses of such a beclouded and chilly state of things;—a further judgment upon the generations of the unsanctified.

And yet these are only the preliminaries and preludes of still intenser woes to follow. Ah, yes; sin has a voice that is heard in heaven. Though sentence against an evil work be not executed speedily, it will be executed at last. Jezebel may flourish in her iniquities for many years, but, finally, the horses trample her body in the streets, and the dogs of Jezreel gnaw and crunch her royal bones. Long was the old world left to drive its crimes, jeer at Noah's odd notions, and fling defiance into the face of God; but presently the earth broke down beneath their feet, and their lifeless bodies dashed upon each other amid the waves of an ocean world! The trampled law will assert its rightful honor, and Christ will not endure the smiting, taunts, and wrongs of Pilate's hall forever. And when these trumpets once give out their clangor, the vibrations will run through the universe, and everything treated for human blessedness shall turn into a source of disaster and trouble to them that know not God and obey not the gospel of Christ.

Day of anger, day of wonder!
When the world is driven asunder,
Smote with fire, and blood, and thunder!

And will any one who hears these solemn things go away from the contemplation of them, not caring whether he is involved in these plagues or not? There is now a free salvation from all of them offered through faith in Christ Jesus. Hid and housed in him and his redeeming grace, not one of these calamities shall ever touch us. Who, then, can reconcile himself to retire from the exhibitions of this hour, without having his heart and mind made up, God being his helper, never more to neglect or give over his devout endeavors to find the only shelter from the miseries of that terrible day?

King of Majesty tremendous,
Who dost free salvation send us!
Well of mercy, O befriend us!

"LEAD ME, LEAD ME."

What does this prayer teach us? Why, that the more mature Christian, if he judges aright, feels that he wants as much to be led in the right way as if he were only beginning the spiritual life. The word seems to be almost humiliating, "Lead me." It is a little child, saying, "Lead me, mother, lead me." It is more than that; it is a blind man putting out his hand. He cannot see; he cannot find his way; and he is begging, "Lead me." Such babes are we, such blind men are we, apart from the guiding grace of God.

If we have faith in a living God, a Father and Friend of man, who does not only interpose once in a while, but is present always in human affairs, then every man is sent to do a work; every man has a mission; a mission determined by his capacities and opportunities; a mission which no one can fulfill but himself, since every man has his proper gift from the Lord. The mission of Jesus differed from that of other men in these two points: that it was the greatest work ever given man to do, and that he saw more clearly what it was than other men see theirs.

Give the mariner a stout ship, a skillful captain, deep water, and plenty of sea-room, and he will be steady through any tempest; because the permanent outbalances the transient. So give the man, on this great sea of life, trustworthy reliance on God, let him know that he can trust in the depth and sweep of this divine nature, in the trustiness of these things that are about him; let him see the eternal anchor ready to grapple and hold fast when all else fails, and he will cheerfully face any tempest that can ever come.—Robert Collyer.

THE WORD OF CHRIST.

John Chrysostom, an early Father, and Archbishop of Constantinople, says, among other good things, in his Homily on Col. 3: 16—"Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly; that is, the teaching, the doctrines, the exhortation, wherein he says that the present life is nothing, nor yet its good things. . . . Let it dwell in you, he saith, richly; not simply dwell, but with great abundance. Hearken ye, as many as are worldly, and have the charge of wife and children; how to you too he commits especially the reading of the Scriptures; and that not to be done lightly, ... but with much earnestness. . . . And mark the wisdom of this blessed man. He said not let the word of Christ be in you, simply. But what? DWELL in you, and richly. And tarry not for another to teach thee, for thou hast the oracles of God. No man teacheth thee as they; for he indeed oft concealeth much for vain-glory's sake and envy. Hearken, I entreat you, all ye that are careful for this life, and procure books that will be medicine for the soul. If ye will not any other, yet get you at least the New Testament, the Acts of the apostles, the gospels, for your constant teachers. If grief befall thee, dive into them as into a chest of medicines; take thence comfort of thy trouble, be it loss, or death, or bereavement of relations; or rather dive not into them merely, but take them wholly to thee; keep them in thy mind. This is the cause of all evils, the not knowing the Scriptures. We go into battle without arms, and how should we come off safe? Well contented should we be if we can be safe with them, let alone without them. Throw not the whole upon us. Sheep ye are, still not without reason, but rational; Paul committeth much to you also.

They that are under instruction are not for ever learning; for then they are not taught. If thou art for ever learning, thou wilt never learn. Do not so come as meaning to be always learning (for so thou wilt never know); but so as to finish learning, and to teach others. Tell me, do not all persons continue for set times at sciences, and in a word at all arts? Thus we all fix definitely a certain known time; but if thou art ever learning, it is a certain proof thou hast learned nothing. This reproach God spake against the Jews. Borne from the belly, and instructed unto old age. If ye had not always been expecting this, all things would not have gone backward in this way. Had it been so, that some had finished learning, and others were about to have finished, our work would have been forward; ye would both have given place to others, and would have helped others as well. Tell me, were some to go to a grammarian and continue always learning their letters, would they not give their master much trouble? How long shall I have to discourse to you concerning life? In the apostles' times it was not thus, but they continually passed rapidly on, appointing those who first learned to be the teachers of any others that were under instruction. Thus they were enabled to circle the world, though not being bound to one place. How much instruction, think ye, do your brethren in the country stand in need of [they] and their teachers? But ye hold me riveted fast here. For, before the head is set rightly, it is superfluous to proceed to the rest of the body. Ye throw every thing upon us. Ye alone ought to learn from us, and your wives and your children from you; but ye leave all to us. Therefore our toil is excessive.

Teaching, he saith, and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs. Mark also the considerateness of Paul. Seeing that reading is toilsome, and its irksomeness great, he led them not to narratives, but to psalms, that thou mightest at once delight thy soul with singing, and gently beguile thy labors. Hymns, he saith, and spiritual songs. But now your children choose themselves songs and dances of Satan, like cooks and caterers, and musicians; but no one knoweth any psalm, but it seems a thing to be ashamed of even, and a mockery, and a joke. This is the treasury house of all these evils. For whatsoever soil the plant stands in, such is the fruit it bears; if in a sandy and salty soil, of like nature is its fruit; if in a sweet and rich one, it is again similar. So the matter of instruction is a sort of fountain. Teach him to sing those psalms which are so full of the love of wisdom; as at once concerning chastity, or rather, before all, of not companying with the wicked, immediately with the very beginning of the book (for therefore also it was that the prophet began on this wise, 'Blessed is the man that hath not walked in the counsel of the ungodly'; and again, 'I have not sat in the council of saints'; and again, 'In his sight a wicked doer is contemned, but he honoreth those that fear the Lord'); of companying with the good (and these subjects thou wilt find there, and many others), of keeping the belly in subjection, of restraining the hands, of not over-reaching; that money is nothing, nor glory, and other things such like.

When in these thou hast led him on from childhood by little and little, thou wilt lead him forward to the higher things. The psalms contain all things, but the hymns again have nothing human. When he has been instructed out of the Psalms, he will then know hymns also, as a diviner thing. For the powers above chant hymns, not psalms. For a hymn, saith one, is not comely in the mouth of a sinner. . . . What is the hymn of those above, what the cherubim say? The faithful know. What said those angels below? Glory to God in the highest. Therefore after the psalmody come the hymns, as a thing of more perfection. In psalms, he saith, in hymns, in spiritual songs, with grace singing in your hearts to God. He means either this, that God because of grace hath given us these things; or, songs in grace; or, admonishing and teaching one another in grace; or, that they had these gifts in grace; and he means from the grace of the Spirit singing in your hearts to God. Not simply with the mouth he means, but with heedfulness. For this is to sing to God, but that to the air; for the voice is scattered without result. Not for display, he means. And even if thou be in the market place, thou canst collect thyself, and sing unto God, no one hearing thee. For Moses also in this way prayed, and was heard, for he saith, Why criest thou unto me? Albeit he said nothing, but cried in thought with a contrite heart; wherefore also God alone heard him. For it is not forbidden one even when walking to pray in his heart, and to dwell above.

TO-MORROW.

Let to-morrow take care of to-morrow,
Leave things of the future to fate;
What's the use to anticipate sorrow,
Life's troubles come never too late.

If to hope overmuch be an error,
'Tis one that the wise have preferred;
For how oft have hearts been in terror
Of evils that never occurred.

Have faith, and thy faith shall sustain thee;
Permit not suspicion and care
With invincible bonds to enchain thee,
But bear what God gives thee to bear.

By his Spirit supported and gladdened,
Be ne'er by forebodings deterred;
But think how oft hearts have been saddened
Through fear of what never occurred.

Let to-morrow take care of to-morrow;
Short and dark as our life may appear,
We may make it still darker by sorrow,
Still shorter by folly and fear.

Half our troubles are our own invention,
And often, from blessings conferred,
Have we shrunk in the wild apprehension
Of evils that never occurred.

OBEDIENCE.—No. 2.

C. R. FASSETT.

Obedience is better than prayer. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Matt. 7: 21. "And why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Many will pray earnestly, statedly, long, and loud, while they live in continued neglect of known duties, private and public, and in their own families; and in violation of the instructions which are given in the Scriptures to govern christians in the church and in the world. All who have named the name of Christ, and who have become christians by profession, have taken upon themselves the most solemn covenant vow to do all the will of God made known to them, at all times, to the best of their knowledge and ability. They have said virtually,

"Whate'er I'm bid to do or say,
When Christ commands I will obey."

1. They have promised to observe the ordinances of Christ's church, yet sometimes both are neglected. They refuse for months and years to be baptized, and neglect the Lord's table habitually, when both should have been observed.

2. They have promised to devote their whole lives to the prosperity of the church of God, for its edification, increase, and upbuilding; and to this end that they would attend upon the stated means of grace, "not forsaking the assembling" with the people of God; and that they would sit in fellowship and have communion with the saints, endeavoring to promote the union of believers against all schism, as the Lord has ordained. But how little have they kept their word or covenant, and how oft rebelled against their better judgment as well as the word of God.

3. They have covenanted with the Lord in their hearts that they would strive to save the perishing from their sins, and from the burnings of the great day; and fulfill all the christian obligations devolving upon them at home, and abroad in the community.

These covenant vows (with others not mentioned) every christian voluntarily and solemnly has taken upon himself or herself, in their first espousals of the cause of their Redeemer, and yet are they guilty every day of the sin of covenant breaking, while still they hope God hears their prayers! Will he hear?

The Mohammedan call to prayer is three times a day—"Come to prayer. Prayer is better than work. Come to prayer." So do these praying professors—hypocrites, shall I call them? praying sinners?—say virtually every time they go to prayer: "My soul, come to prayer. Prayer is better than obedience. Come to prayer." But is it?

It was said of Saul of Tarsus on his conversion, "Behold he prayeth." But this was accompanied with obedience, for he had earnestly inquired, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" And when he was told what the will of God was, he was "not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." Let us have prayer and obedience henceforth conjoined forever, till the Lord come. See to it, christian brother or sister. Cease to pray until you do, or make up your mind to do, that which the Bible and your conscience tell you is your duty. "The willing and the obedient shall eat the good of the land."

Long, frequent, or loud prayers, either in secret or public, unaccompanied by obedience, will avail nothing. God abhors it. Stop it, and do better.

SOLEMN MEDITATIONS.

N. J. LUCAS.

Dear ones in the Lord, while meditating upon the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, the prayer of my heart is, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly; take thy waiting church to thyself; restore the earth to its Eden beauty; raise thy sleeping jewels, give them immortality and eternal life. What a day of gladness that will be to the dear saints of God; but a sad one to those who have no hope in Christ. What a solemn scene it will be, when the dear Son of God descends from heaven with all the holy angels. The more we study the Holy Scriptures, the more convinced we are that the end of all things is surely at hand. O what a solemn time in which we are living. In view of the shortness of time, and a coming judgment, how active we should be in the service of the Lord.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us be up and doing. Should we not labor to the best of our ability to persuade men and women to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ? Even now, while I write, a feeling of sadness steals over me as I look upon the mass that are in the broad way to destruction, and think of the few that will be saved, in comparison with the great multitude that will be lost. O how terribly solemn the thought! O for more faith in Jesus. Let us drink deeper from that fountain that flows from the Savior's wounded side. Let us arouse ourselves from the seeming lethargy that has come over many of us, and work for Jesus like good soldiers of the cross. It is too late in the world's history to sleep. Let us rally around the blood-stained banner of King Jesus. Let us cry mightily to the Lord, "What wilt thou have me to do?" Let us not sleep as do others; but let us watch and be sober; and "let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." If we lack wisdom, let us "ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."

There are many ways in which we can work for the Lord; but how much heavenly wisdom is needed in these last days. What persevering efforts are needed to keep alive in the Lord. We can well afford to pray and toil, suffer and bear persecution, if we can but at last obtain that far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. O Lord, keep us humble, is my prayer.

Brethren and sisters, let us be of good cheer; the kingdom is coming. We are nearing the port of endless rest, and oh, what glory awaits us. By faith we can almost see the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem opened wide for us, and hear the sweet voices of the blood-washed throng chanting the joyful song of Moses and the Lamb. Again we say, let us be of good cheer. Earth's stormy voyage of sorrow is almost over. God's everlasting kingdom is at hand. A few more aches and pains of this mortal life, a few more death-bed scenes, a few more tears, ere we hear the voice of the archangel and the tramp of God summoning the sleeping ones from their dusty graves. How sweet the thought of soon seeing our loved ones, whom we have laid away in deep sadness, made immortal, to die no more. May the Lord help us so to live here, that when that glad morning dawns, we may hear the welcome news from the lips of Jesus, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

Hartford, Me.

TESTIMONY FOR JESUS.

CATHARINE WISE.

"The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy."—Rev. 19: 10.

My brother, I must be a witness for Jesus to-day. It has been a number of weeks since I have felt drawn to write to you, to witness for Jesus; but to-day I believe to be the acceptable time with God for me to write, because I feel more firmly established in some points of doctrine than I did a few months back. I speak concerning the destruction of the wicked, the sleep of the dead, immortality only through Christ to the believer, and the near coming of Christ to reign here upon this earth, when purified, with his saints. For a number of years past, I have believed in the near coming of Christ; and it has been, and is, a delightful, blissful thought to me, that my Savior is soon to come and deliver his people. The teachings of the Holy Spirit taught me this, by drawing my mind almost continually, night and day, for nearly five years past, to contemplate and write upon this precious doctrine—"the marriage of the Lamb." With the Christians, this will be the summing up of the whole thing, from the beginning of the world down to the end thereof,—the resurrection of the just, their being born into the kingdom, and their actual, literal marriage with the Son of God. Here, in this life, we are married to him by faith, which creates bright hopes within us that reach from the crucifixion, when Christ said "It is finished" (that is, the work he had to do for the salvation of man before his death), to the resurrection of the just, when the reward will be given, which is immortality—eternal life. The crown of the reward will be the actual, literal marriage of the saints with Jesus Christ, the Son of God. O, what a crown of rejoicing this will be to the weary, way-worn pilgrims of earth. Our sorrows then will all be turned into joy, and we shall never know sorrow or pain or weeping any more. Then let us be faithful a few more days, till Jesus comes to deliver and honor his people with an unfading diadem, such as earthly monarch never knew.

I am glad to-day that I can see that life means life, and that death means death. I now wonder why I have not seen it before. I thought I was willing to see any point of God's truth; but the Lord knew about me much better than I knew myself, and he has led me gently on, until I can and do embrace his precious truth as it is in Jesus. I will not push at any truth, God being my helper; but will look to see what good thing can come out of Nazareth yet, for me to embrace and love for Jesus' sake. O, how full of prejudice I have been. There was a time when I thought that no one but Methodists were just right. And though I have to show myself before you in a very foolish light, I feel to humble myself and acknowledge it, and also to tell how glad I am to-day that the light shines so clearly. O, what a merciful, forbearing, loving Savior I have, to send his Holy Spirit to teach me in my ignorance, and open up such a glorious way before me to the kingdom, where I hope to meet all of my dear brothers and sisters in Christ; and I know that I shall if I am faithful to the end. Although there are thousands who can not meet in this life; yet this will not allay their meeting in the kingdom. There we will know each other, because we will all belong to the family of God. No partition walls, no divisions, but one broad foundation of righteousness and peace. I am glad indeed that such a rest remains for the people of God. I claim no name now but the name of Christian, which shows my relationship to Christ. He alone is able to keep me. This I have proved for nearly three years.

Hallelujah to God and the Lamb forever, for "blessed are ye, when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake; rejoice and be exceeding glad." The servant is not above his Lord. I expect to meet with greater reproach and persecutions yet for Jesus' sake; but, thank God, his grace is sufficient. I will trust him, and go forward, as I am trying to do to-day. When the cloud was lifted from the ark, anciently, the people went forward. And by God's grace I will do the same, until I get home. Praise God, I have ventured all on Jesus; all of my temptations, doubts, fears, reproaches, persecutions, and everything else; and have received instead, a hundred-fold in this life, and in the world to come hope for everlasting life.

OUR POSITION AND OUR DUTY.

P. ALLING.

The crack of a pistol, the squawking of a flock of geese, or the holding up of a handful of fresh figs in the Roman senate, are all, in themselves, unimportant things; but when we learn that the crack of that pistol laid low the President of the United States in the midst of his usefulness, and made a nation weep; that the squawking of the geese roused the sleeping sentinels, and saved Rome from impending ruin; and that the holding up of those figs was a signal of a war that eventuated in the overthrow and destruction of the opulent city of Carthage; we may learn not to estimate things by their apparent insignificance, at the time of their occurrence, but by their results.

As a people, we are small in numbers and in influence, and are looked upon by the world as too insignificant to merit a passing notice; but is it so in the sight of the Almighty? I trow not. Because his unerring word most clearly teaches that thus it will be in the last days. But where are we standing in the great prophetic stream of time and events, as revealed in the prophetic Scriptures? What is the work assigned us, and what are we doing?

Answer. We are standing on a narrow isthmus of time, washed on one side by the receding waters of "the second heavens and the second earth," and on the other by the flood-tide of the new heavens and the new earth (2 Pet. 3), so exceedingly narrow that it cannot be measured or marked by any of the great prophetic periods, neither by any clearly defined events yet necessarily to occur. This narrow belt is the great battle-ground; not as to whether these United States shall be preserved for a brief period from being broken by rebellion; neither is it to preserve a single city from an ambush of its enemies. Nor yet is it for the conquest of a single rival city; but it is the ground on which is to be fought the final battle of the great day of God Almighty, which is to decide two questions: (1), whether the devil shall continue longer to hold the saints—the bride, the Lamb's wife—locked up in his prison-house of death; or whether the strong man armed shall be bound, and his captives released by resurrection life. (2). Who shall have the dominion of earth? Christ, the seed of the woman, with his immortalized saints; or the devil and his serpentine seed? The latter has long borne rule, and all the principalities and powers of earth have been and still are his willing subjects. These are the two opposing parties now marshaling on this atom of time, and the ends to be obtained by the victors. The resurrection of Christ the first-fruits, is an assurance that he himself alone will achieve for "his bride" the promised victory over death and the grave, when they (the resurrected ones, and the living saints, changed from mortality to immortality) will be united with him in the final battle of the great day.

Now if the ground on which Moses stood "at the burning bush" was "holy," why is not the ground now occupied by the true church equally holy? If the work assigned to Moses was exalted when Jehovah announced that he was "the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," thereby assuring him of the great fact that the dead would be raised; is not this work of preparation assigned us equally high and exalted in the sight of Him who hath declared the end from the beginning? Let the annals of eternity answer.

Now the Master himself has left us the work that will insure to us individually the promised victory; viz., to "watch and pray," to "keep" ourselves "in the love of God, and in a patient waiting for Christ"; to "cry aloud and spare not," "The hour of his judgment is come," and do what we can, that others may be saved from impending wrath. O that those golden vials, filled "with the prayers of all saints," may be open, and that we may add our prayers to theirs for the long promised deliverance. Then let us pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." May not this be the sweet incense that comes up with acceptance before the Throne? May it not be our privilege to cry unto the Lord in behalf of his sleeping ones, that he will remember their prayers and groans, and their labors of love, and, above all, the promises that caused them to hope and to suffer, and avenge the blood of his martyred saints upon their persecutors?

O to be in unison with Christ in his great work for the redemption of the world, and to stand in this niche of time, which separates us from those ancient worthies, and then to have our hearts in unison with their hearts, and with God's great purposes of love and mercy, is sufficient to reconcile us to the apparent smallness of our work. Who can be ashamed and wish to draw back? None, except those whose hearts are like Esau's, who sold his "birthright for a mess of pottage." Let us be faithful yet a little longer, and eternal life, and the kingdom, and the dominion under the whole heavens, will be ours.

FAIRS.

CYRUS MENDENHALL.

The church of to-day in its vain, hopeless endeavor to convert the world before the second advent of Christ, has lost sight of the admonition contained in these words: "Abstain from all appearance of evil." Having failed to bring the worldly ones up to the proper standard, she stoops to conquer by striving to make religion as attractive as unrighteousness. For this end we have fairs, festivals, suppers, bazars, concerts, lotteries, exhibitions; and among other follies, dancing has been resorted to, in order to raise money to pay the minister. A writer in the New York Observer says (speaking of what he saw at a fair):

"We passed on. There was gambling to the right of us. There was gambling to the left of us. There was gambling before us, and gambling behind us. The atmosphere was full of it. Sweet, pretty girls, with book and pencil, would put their faces into the faces of strangers, and with winning smiles, would say, 'Take a chance?' O! do now, please, take a chance for this beautiful thing.' Aside from the nature of the business, it seemed to me that this was a bad school for the girls, and that their morals and manners would not be improved by such an experience. Soon we came to a picture of Jesus, the man of sorrows, the Savior of sinners, our blessed Lord. The picture was neatly framed, and over the head of the Savior, where Pilate put the inscription,—'The King of the Jews,'—was now written 'A dollar a chance.' A painting of Jesus Christ set up in a lottery, by religious people, in a charity fair in the city of New York."

Surely, this is not being a peculiar people By such conformity, it is impossible to tell who are the followers of our Lord. These evils are tolerated, encouraged, and defended by their upholders for two reasons; first, because (they say) we must draw the young men from the haunts of vice by making our churches inviting; and, again, we must have money, or the church will go down. Now we ask, will members so added, be of such as shall be saved? James tells us: "Pure religion, and undefiled before God and the Father, is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." As to pecuniary support, if it be of God truly, it can be sustained without going to the devil's congregation of worldlings for help. John says "all unrighteousness is sin." Who will claim that "grab-bags," "chances," "guess cakes," humbug art galleries," "comic dialogues," and a host of other frauds used to raise funds for fine temples, are not unrighteous? Verily, if Jesus was living among men in our day, he would have much work for his scourge of small cords; for men have forgotten that he said, "Make not my Father's house a house of merchandise." Again he says, "My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves." Matt. 12: 13.

Be ye separate, unspotted from the world, without blemish, is the divine command; consequently, we are sinning against God's law by running to the same excess and vanity with those who patronize religious swindles. Then at the risk of being termed 'old fogies,' 'over nice,' etc., etc., let us all, who really revere the house of God, and love its work, raise our voices and use our influence to put down this abomination, which is bringing scandal and ridicule upon all things sacred. It is true, we will be in the minority. Truth and right ever have been, since the majority cried, "Crucify him, crucify him." God grant that we may be wise as serpents, keeping clear from the devil's snares, however cunningly baited they may be. May we not despise the church, nor come together for the worse, or unto condemnation; but rather may the Lord help us to be ever watchful of our conduct, that we may not become a reproach to his cause; and give us of his Spirit to help our infirmities, so that we may have abundant grace to forego all that is amiss, waiting patiently for his coming.

Create my nature pure within,
And form my soul averse to sin;
Let thy good Spirit ne'er depart,
Nor hide thy presence from my heart.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

At a meeting of the committee held on the camp-ground, June 7th, it was voted that our annual meeting this year commence Saturday, Aug. 19th, and continue over the 27th. Particulars hereafter.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The theological world is as uneasy as the political. The feeling that causes "strikes" among mechanics is operating in churches also. It bodes more of evil than good. Human nature is inclined to enter extremes, rather than occupy the more secure medium. The time was when the people set too high an estimate on what the minister said, and did not search the Scriptures for themselves; but now people are rejecting every thing sacred, and turning to infidelity. They wish to make it appear that the text book of the minister is no more reliable than the minister's opinion, which has too often been at variance with the Scriptures.

The following shows the current of things in the church of England:—

> "The Rev. C. Voysey lectured recently at Edinburg on 'Twenty-five years in the Church of England.' In the course of his remarks he said that if the Thirty-nine Articles were not soon decently buried, the church must be disestablished. It must be reformed or die. 'I have only now' he said, 'to let it be known to those who care to know it, what course I have resolved to take. Theologically I shall endeavor to do as I have hitherto, only with no restraint whatever upon my language—namely, to proclaim what I believe to be the the highest truth about God and man; to teach, or rather, to try to persuade my hearers to forswear, as I have hitherto done, authoritative and dogmatic positions, and to lead every one to think for himself. Politically I shall still strive, as before, to promote religious liberty, aiming to secure that end first for the church established in this realm by the abolition of dogmatic standards of belief.' Mr. Voysey was both cheered and hissed during the lecture."

We admire the independent spirit of Mr. Voysey. We think he has expressed the convictions of many others. It is high time that unscriptural, "dogmatic standards of belief" were abolished, and the people allowed to believe the Bible in its simplicity.

THIS PROGRESSIVE AGE.

It is well known that there are certain popular lecturers who are quite enthusiastic in their speeches about the great progress which is being made in the present generation. They would have us believe that the millenium is about to begin, because mankind are advancing so rapidly. Yet, some begin to see that the boasted progress is only a deparparture from the Bible, Christ and Christianity. And when we find that those who have been making earnest efforts to lead men away from the old landmarks into a kind of semi-christianity, that had no power to save people, becoming alarmed at the state of things which is being developed at the present day, is it not time for christians to awake from sleep?

In an able article on the "Decay of Theology," the Liberal Christian says:—

> "Unless the interest in christian theology is revived; unless opinions are more respected; unless faith is more cultivated and understood; unless God is more known and worshiped and felt; unless sin is more dreaded; unless man's moral position is regarded with more concern; unless Christ's work is more profoundly studied and understood, not only liberal christianity, but orthodox christianity, will soon be in ruins, and the gospel have to begin its work anew in a demoralized and atheistic world."

BEECHER AND THE RESURRECTION.

In the Present Age, June 24th, we find an extract from one of H. W. Beecher's sermons, relative to the resurrection of the dead. "The Present Age" is a Spiritualist paper, published in Chicago. It will be seen from the comments on the sermon, that the Spiritualists are rejoicing over the aid they are receiving from Mr. Beecher, in opposing the resurrection of the dead. According to Mr. Beecher and the Spiritualists, the soul is immortal and cannot die; hence it cannot rise from the dead; and as they claim the body cannot be raised from the dead, it follows that there is no resurrection of the dead, provided Mr. Beecher and the Spiritualists are right. Said Paul:—

> "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. 1 Cor. 15: 12–18.

Now read the following, and compare it with the Bible. What a contrast:—

> "In a recent sermon Henry Ward Beecher says of this fundamental article of creed faith:
>
> Some believe that this mortal body rises again. Thank God! not I. I have had enough of it. And when once the earth takes it, let it keep it. The tree is welcome to what of me it can get, so far as the body is concerned. Says the apostle: 'There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God.'
>
> 'Good-bye, old flesh and blood! I am bound for God's kingdom without flesh and blood! and what it will be to be without them, I cannot tell; but I know it will be magnificent; never tiring any more, unwearied and unweariable, with nothing to hinder, and everything to help. Is it needful that one should sleep and wake? Is it needful that one should waste half his precious time in sleeping and eating? Is it needful that more than one-half of our being should be dedicated to the animal life? Is it needful that there should be but half or a third of our time available for the immortal? However it may be in the present, 'in the ages to come,' over the mountains, across the valleys, behind the clouds, beyond all calculable periods, there will be a state in which we shall have dropped this natural body, and in which we shall be endued with our spiritual body, whatever that is, and shall be free from the circumscription and weariness of this mortal condition. Who can tell how he will seem or how he will be then? Besides there will be the presence of things which are not known now and here. He shall be surrounded with influences of which we know nothing, but which grow out of the perfected state. We shall be surrounded by a society such as the Apostle speaks of: 'Ye are come . . . . to the general assembly and the church of the first born which are written in heaven . . . . and to the spirits of just men made perfect.'
>
> How coolly and refreshingly Beecher walks into the old creedal systems of faith from time to time, at one fell swoop demolishing some fundamental principles thereof. Precious little of the great orthodox scheme of salvation finds lodgment in the great brain or greater heart of this live preacher of a living gospel. We frequently hear it said: 'What a pity it is that Beecher does not come out entirely from his church, and work as a Spiritualist or a free religionist.' But not so. He is wielding a far mightier influence where he is. Standing inside the limits of a sect, a Spiritualist at heart, a Free-religionist in his speech, he is uttering the grandest truths just sufficiently draped in good old-fashioned orthodox phraseology to make them acceptable to thousands who would never listen to them if presented in the uncompromising speech of the radical, the come-outer.
>
> Beecher is a magnificent Avant Courier of Spiritualism—a John the Baptist preparing the way for a power mightier than he. It is a very easy thing to make Spiritualists of Beecherites, and they make admirable Spiritualists too. Very many years ago, Beecher declared that scores of his best church members were Spiritualists. If scores then, doubtless he would find those scores doubled now; and so the truth goes marching on, and we should be ever ready to recognize those who are at work for us, even though they stand in orthodox or so-styled evangelical pulpits, for every brave noble word that is uttered from a Baptist or Methodist, or Congregational pulpit that is in advance of the creedal belief of the denomination to which the utterer thereof belongs, is a word spoken for us, and we should not underestimate the influences that are at work in all directions, aiding the triumph of the very truths that are dear to the heart of the true Spiritualist, who should be a true reformer in the broadest sense of the term. And one of our noblest co-workers is Henry Ward Beecher, of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, New York."

TO WHAT ARE WE COMING?

It is heart-sickening, shocking, enough to make one's blood run chill, to witness the mock christianity that is now taking the place of the true worship of God. Truly, the devil and his followers have stolen the livery of heaven to cover up their hideous deformity. The "Free Religionists," or the "Liberal Christians," have recently held a meeting in Boston, which so shocked even the Universalists, that they made comments on it in their paper, which caused the following to appear in the supplement of the Boston Journal, Saturday, June 24th:—

> "The Universalist speaks of the recent meeting of the Free Religionists in this city as 'the most remarkable, and in one of its features, saddest sight imaginable.' It has seen infidel organizations before; but 'never before, we think, has there been in this country, or elsewhere, an association clearly, consciously infidel, which was organized, headed and practically managed by professed Christian ministers, in good standing in the denomination to which they belonged.'"

SHALL WE AVENGE?

ELD. M. GRANT:—Dear Sir:—Will you, or some other good Bro., give us your views through the Crisis on avenging ourselves for injuries done us, and how far we are justified in punishing those who trespass against us, and spoil our goods; and how we are to understand the following passages of Scripture: "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." Matt. 6: 15. "Recompense to no man evil for evil." Rom. 12: 17. "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Rom. 12: 21. "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." Matt. 26: 52. We hear the apostle exhorting his brethren not to avenge themselves, for it is written, Vengeance belongs to the Lord, and he will repay.

Our Savior says: "Behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves." Luke 10: 3. I have known wolves to catch and kill lambs, but I have never known lambs to catch wolves. I think it would be a singular sight to see a flock of innocent lambs in full chase after a flock of wolves. There is such a difference of opinion on these points, that many christians are at a loss to know what is right. A very great portion of the clergy in this country are advocates for war and bloodshed, if necessary, in resisting evil doers. I think it very important that we should believe right and act right in relation to the requirements of the gospel.

I should be much pleased if Eld. J. Couch, W. Sheldon, A. A. Phelps, and Eld. M. Grant, would give us their views on these Scriptures named. It is said in a multitude of counsellors there is safety.

WILLIAM GILMAN.

The foregoing involves very important points, that most materially affect our temporal and eternal interests. The principles of christianity are simple, and easy to comprehend. Man enjoying the light of the gospel will not be lost because they did not know their duty, but for refusing to do what they knew the Lord had commanded. We are fully convinced that one great cause of the vast amount of backsliding at the present time is owing to a careless neglect of the passages to which reference has been made. The Savior is very emphatic on this point when he says: "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." He makes no exceptions. There is no variation from this law. No man can love God with all his heart, so long as he allows hatred or variance to abide there. When referring to this matter, the apostle says that those who have "hatred, variance," or "wrath," "shall not inherit the kingdom of God." On this account it is the policy of Satan to get "hatred" and "variance" into every heart if possible. Instead of forgiving the one who trespassed against us, the devil says hate him. He would have us believe that there is no difference between abhorring sin and the sinner. While we abhor the evil, we must forgive and love the evil doer.

Christianity forbids all retaliation. It is perfectly non-resistant. Christ does not allow his followers to avenge themselves under any circumstances. So long as we desire to avenge an injury, so long we are in the gall of bitterness, and destitute of the wedding garment which is essential for an admittance to "the marriage of the Lamb."

MR. HOME, the noted Spiritualist medium, whom Napoleon III. and the Empress have consulted so freely, has been operating with the noted people in Russia. Some one reported that he made a failure; but the following tells another story:—

> "It is denied that Mr. Home, the Spiritualist, failed to demonstrate before a committee of scientific gentlemen, at St. Petersburg, the reality of manifestation of his communication with the spirits of those who have departed this life. And so far from his having experienced any discomfiture in the Russian capital, a friend of his writes that his visit was a splendid success, financially, and that he left the city under an engagement of marriage to a Russian lady of rank, a sister of Prof. Boutlerboff, of the University of St. Petersburg, one of the scientific gentlemen before whom it has been alleged that he failed to demonstrate the reality of Spiritualism. The marriage is to take place in London this summer."

PENCIL WRITING.—Those who write with a pencil for the paper, should use a soft one, in order to make a plain letter, and write coarsely, so that the compositor can read it easily. A coarse pen and good black ink produce the best looking manuscript for our use. Always write coarsely.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books, tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at WHITE & BAUER'S.

CRIME IN NEW YORK.

New York appears to be the headquarters of the leading rascals on the continent, The regular New York Correspondent of the Boston Journal, under date of June 9th, writes:—

> "The most talented criminals in the country make New York their headquarters. The ingenuity they display in accomplishing their ends is worthy of a better cause. The tricks of the trade are innumerable and ingenious. The officers of banks have to be wide awake, for they are in constant peril. Borrowing a check is a constant mode of swindling. This is altered from $20 to $200; from $19 to $1900. It is offered at three o'clock, when the rush is the greatest. The check is right; the signature and number are right, and it is rushed through in the hurry. An account is opened in a bank; a few checks drawn; a certificate taken that the depositor has had a creditable standing in that bank for some time. With that certificate an account will be opened with half a dozen banks, bogus checks presented, draw against the same day, and, with several thousand dollars profit, the rogues decamp. Desk room is taken in a respectable office. Goods are purchased at half a dozen different stores, all delivered on the same day, paid for in forged checks, and when sought for the next day the party cannot be found. A favorite spot is a store opening on two streets. Jewelry, clothes and costly wares, in small packages, are delivered, and the messenger waits while the party steps into a back room to draw a check, and of course escapes by another street. Telegraphic messages are delivered and a heavy tariff collected. Two well-dressed gentlemen go to look at a house. Through fatigue one sits in the parlor while the other is shown through, and he pockets the valuables before the other returns. Tame pigeons are thrown into a yard; and while the owner goes in through the basement to get his bird, his accomplice robs the house.
>
> TRADEMARK OF CRIME.
>
> There are few first class painters, singers or musicians, artists, inventors, orators or preachers. Certain men as sculptors, engravers and painters, leave their mark distinctly on their work. Powers' busts can be detected the world over by their peculiar finish. But crime is as distinctly marked. The mode of committing a burglary indicates at once to the detective from what section the rogues come. The Chicago thieves do their work in one way; Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston have each a method of their own, which is as distinct as a man's handwriting. When a hole is broken in a wall, a floor cut through into a bank, or a safe broken into, the style of work indicates the hand that did it. Detectives are more expert in getting property back than in punishing rogues. Merchants robbed are more anxious to get their property than to have the perpetrators put into the State Prison. As perfect honor is kept with thieves, any engagement made by the officers with burglars is strictly fulfilled. Millions are restored annually and the thieves allowed to go at large. A silk house was robbed not long since. The detectives went directly to Philadelphia, entered a graveyard, removed the stone slab from the top of an old-fashioned altar tomb, took out the entire stock of goods and returned them to the owner. No questions asked. Had the detectives hidden the goods they would not have gone more directly to their place of concealment."

THE SOUL OF WOMAN.—Has woman a soul? That sounds like a ridiculous question, and yet from the so-called orthodox standpoint it is a reasonable question, for claim is made that "the breath of life" which God breathed into Adam was his soul; and nothing is said about God's breathing the breath of life into the woman; and when we proceed to prove that the beasts also possess the "breath of life," we are met with the assurance that God did not "breathe" it into them, as the record does not mention such an occurrence in this case; and if that breath of life possessed by the beasts is not a soul simply because it is not said to have been breathed into them, the same is true of woman. Has she not a soul? Eve derived life from some quarter. Was it a part of Adam's life? Was a part of Adam's soul detached and given to Eve? Or did God make a new soul for Eve? Where is the proof?

When we learn that the "breath of life," instead of being a personality, is merely a vitalising element connected with the human organism, to be transmitted to posterity, only leaving man at death, then we can see how Eve derived both her life and body from Adam, without involving the creation of a new soul, or the divisibility of an indivisible soul. This life principle, called "breath of life," is possessed by all living creatures, in earth, water, or buried in the ground like the embryo locust, forty feet deep. W. S.

THE CURSE OF THE LAW.

By sin we incur "the curse of the law," for "sin is the transgression of the law"; and without interposition in our favor, the "curse of the law" would take the life of every transgressor, for "the wages of sin is death"; hence death is the "curse" incurred by the transgression of the law; and this law, being of divine origin, is a perfect law, and consequently God cannot allow its claims to be set aside. If its claims are perfect and just, it would be an imperfect and unjust act upon the part of Deity to repudiate such a law for the sake of exempting any man from its claims. When God enacts an infallible law, he will not himself belittle it by rescinding the "curse," to save any transgressor. The penalty, or "curse" of that law cannot be set aside by repentance. The violated law demands death, and that demand must be met. Christ devised a scheme whereby the demands of the law might be met, and the transgressor be saved from its "curse": "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us." Gal. 3: 13. "He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." Heb. 9: 26. "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." Isa. 53: 6. "Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God." 1 Pet. 3: 18. "Christ died for our sins." 1 Cor. 15: 3. "Christ died for the ungodly. . . . We were reconciled to God by the death of his Son." Rom. 5: 6, 10.

Thus Christ honored the law, and "gave his life a ransom for many—his valuable life being equivalent to many human lives—and we were thus "purchased" from the claims of the law. The stroke our sins had called for fell on him, and "he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities." Not till thus meeting the demands of the law could he offer pardon to transgressors; but having met the demands of the law, he does not propose to unconditionally exempt the transgressor from its claims. To illustrate: A prisoner having transgressed a law for which a fine of banishment and a million dollars is incurred, or death to be inflicted if not paid, is doomed to die. A man of wealth comes along, and feels a sympathy for him, and wishes to relieve him from the penalty. He cannot do it by offering him pardon, for he is under the sentence of a law that is like the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not. Finally he offers to meet the demand of the law by paying the million dollars, and so set the man free from its claims, provided the man would become his servant for life, and leave that country where the deed was committed; and provided, further, that the penalty might still be executed against him if he should ever desert his master and re-enter that land. The contract is made, and the money is paid. But if he refuses to leave that country, he must die; or if he does leave it for a time, and then deserts his master and returns, he must die.

Having thus arranged to satisfy the law, the rich man stands as a mediator, offering pardon to the criminal, but not by repudiating the claims of the law. So it is with Christ, who has suffered and died for sinners. Having met the demands of the divine law, the Father raised him from the dead, and now he officiates as "mediator," having made this contract: the sinner can be exempt from the curse of the law, Christ having met its claims in his own person, provided he will become a servant of Christ, and provided, further, if he ever deserts Christ, the law shall still have its claims upon him: thus if the sinner refuses to become a servant of Christ, he must die as really as though Christ never died for him; or if he deserts the service of Christ, he must die. Only by being allied to Christ can his death avail for us, or exempt us from the penalty or "curse of the law," which is death. Christ's death relieves us from the penalty of the law, provided we accept pardon at his hand, and thus gain a spotless character, and remain obedient in his service, being thus rendered fit to live; otherwise the penalty will be visited upon us at the judgment.

As Christ saves men by redeeming them from "the curse of the law," on the principle of dying for their crimes, and thus exempting them from the punishment of death due them; on what principle can immortal sinners be saved, if such sinners exist? Can a class of deathless beings be saved from death? Could Christ die for the purpose of exempting from death a class of sinners incapable of dying? Would it not be an exhibition of folly to die for the purpose of saving from death a being not liable to die? Who will charge Christ with such folly? How then can Christ's death save immortal sinners from death? Echo repeats the question. The point cannot be evaded by assuming that the penalty death is not literal, as Christ met the demand with literal death. The plain truth is, Christ's death cannot save immortal sinners, nor can immortal sinners be punished with the penalty-death which Christ died to ward off, they being deathless, and the penalty-death being literal, as is proved by the literality of Christ's death—his death being accepted in place of the sinner's. In view of the impossibility of an infliction of the death penalty upon immortal sinners, and the impossibility of their being saved from the penalty by the death of Christ, God wisely guarded the tree of life at the fall, lest man should live forever in a sinful state.

If Christ could save by the power of pardon independent of his death, his death was superfluous. He could not pardon till the claims of the law were met, only in view of his approaching death. W. S.

DESIGN OF THE FIRST ADVENT.

John informs us that "many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh"; but in our day many who admit that he came in the flesh, do not understand the necessity of his thus coming. Paul affirms, "God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh" (Rom. 8: 3); he having "appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself" (Heb. 9: 26); all of which is meaningless unless there is such a thing as "SINFUL FLESH," for which a "sacrifice" is necessary; and Jesus Christ, instead of coming into the world to save a race of immaterial beings, came "in the flesh," to save "sinful flesh," "by the sacrifice of himself." If his object had been to save a race of immaterial beings, why need he have come "in the flesh"?

In what way could immaterial beings be affected by a material sacrifice? "God so loved the world [of perishable beings] that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16. Thus Christ came to save a race of perishing beings, and as we "are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death." Heb. 2: 14. Thus he laid down his own life as a ransom for our forfeited lives, and "suffered for sin, the just for the unjust"; and having met the demands of a broken law, in behalf of others, the Father raised him from the dead by the power of an endless life, and now he stands as the "first fruits" of immortalized humanity, offering to save men from the penalty of a broken law, and to redeem them from the power of sin and death! NOTES ON PROPHECY.—No. 2.

BALAAM'S PROPHECY.

In one instance God saw fit to speak through an unholy man concerning the coming King." "I shall see him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh. . . . . Out of Jacob shall come He that shall have dominion." Num. 24: 17. From this prophecy we learn the following truths:—

1. Balaam, who died without beholding the personage here prophesied of, and died a condemned and wicked "soothsayer" (Josh. 13: 22), must hereafter live again, or the prophecy must fail. If one wicked man is to live again to see the Lord, why will not all wicked men live again? Thus prophecy recognizes a resurrection to life for the wicked, for Balaam cannot see Messiah while dead. But that resurrection will be unto damnation and "shame."

2. This predicted personage, to come out of Jacob, must be a ruler—"shall have dominion"—agreeing with another prediction—"He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." Ps. 72: 8. Then sin and death will be obliterated by divine power, and the good time predicted by Isaiah (25: 8) will be here—"He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall be take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it." Then God's people, redeemed from death, immortalized and glorified, will spend eternity in the renewed earth, free from sin and sorrow. W. S.

FISHERS OF MEN."—As Jesus promised to make his disciples "fishers of men," we may safely conclude that all ministers of the gospel should be "fishers of men;" and as such, they should use as much wisdom in catching men, as fishers do in catching fish. Different kinds of fish can be caught with different kinds of bait.

So with men; some can be baited with sympathy, and others with reason. Paul's method was to "reason out of the Scriptures;" and men who will stop to swallow the bait of reason, will get the gospel hook so firmly fastened, that it will be hard to break loose from its power. There are always more nibbles around the hook baited with sympathy, and the fisher that uses this bait will get a great many bites, but they are constantly slipping off the hook. A better kind of bait would catch a better kind of fish; however, this kind of bait is not to be repudiated, for it often gives an opportunity of using the hook baited with reason, by congregating the fish.

God's method of reaching men is by an appeal to their reason: "Come and let us reason together." Those who are moved without reason, are not so securely reached; for "when any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart." The understanding must be reached, or it will be like having the fish holding the hook without having the hook hold him, ready to let go at any time. "He that receiveth seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it." The understanding must be enlightened to hold men; the emotional element may often pave the way for this, but cannot take its place. W. S.

In response to the last call for about $20, to make up the $200, Bro. Wm. Nichols, of Albany, N. Y., writes as follows:—"If it is not in part or wholly made up by the 10th of July, write me, and I will pay it." So the sum called for ($200) is provided for. The friends will please accept the thanks of all concerned. AG'T.

WE WANT MORE SUCH.

BRO. GRANT:—We had one of the most enjoyable days yesterday I ever passed; the occasion being the gathering of the S. S. children from this city, So. Elliot, and Newcastle, at the latter place, for a children's meeting and chowder. We met at Point Lookout; had a large sail spread, which proved ample protection for the two to three hundred estimated present. Sister Wood conducted the children's meetings, which were intensely interesting and instructive to both parents and children. She is living and laboring for the present at N. Bro. H. L. Hastings preached in the afternoon, while Brn. J. W. White, G. W. Brown, and others, made remarks. Altogether it was both pleasant and profitable.

Why cannot we have more such seasons? They need not be made other than profitable. Children and parents need some recreation; Advent children and parents, as well as others. Many a mother returned, I doubt not, last night to her home invigorated, both physically and mentally, from the day's relaxation; and our dear Sunday School children were given to feel we cared for them, and felt an interest in their enjoyment so deeply as to afford them an opportunity to cultivate the social element of their natures, which they ever improve when permitted the chance. We need not run "to the same excess of riot" that some do, but can preserve a judicious mean. For one, I say, emphatically, Give the children and the people more such seasons as the one at Newcastle last Wednesday, June 28th.

— The physician sometimes applies caustics when the patient would prefer an anodyne. But the sufferer submits silently to superior wisdom. So God may send us blight where we looked for plenty; he may permit us to meet with failure where we felt confident of success; he may send bereavement where we anticipated the greatest comfort; but shall we repine? We know that all things work together for good, to them that love God.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 24th, 1870, voted to raise Ten Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

MAN MADE IN THE IMAGE OF GOD, BUT NOT IMMORTAL.

ALBA BELLOWS.

In Gen. 1: 26–27, we find the first announcement given in the Bible of the creation of man, which reads thus: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. . . . So God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him." It is claimed by those who believe in the immortality of the soul, that these scriptures prove that man, by virtue of his being created in the divine image, is possessed of a never-dying principle in his nature, which is designated as "our immortal soul"; "never-dying soul," or spirit. Will a critical examination of this scripture, and a fair, literal exegesis of its meaning, sustain the doctrine of the soul's inherent immortality?

1. These scriptures do not assert that man is immortal, nor that he is possessed of any such thing as an immortal soul, or spirit. No such phraseology is to be found in the texts, and this fact alone is fatal to the claim. A fair exposition of any Bible truth demands that it must be literally expressed somewhere in the Bible; but we fail to find the soul's immortality here expressed, or even hinted at.

2. If the doctrine of the soul's immortality is taught in these scriptures, it is only taught by inference. Have we a right to infer the soul's immortality from this scripture? An inference, in order to be valid, must be drawn from some well-authenticated fact, or statement, bearing upon the same object under consideration. Now we ask the advocates of immortal-soulism from what fact they infer that these scriptures teach the soul's deathless nature? The only answer which can be given is based upon the fact that God made man in his own image; therefore man must be immortal. Does this kind of reasoning satisfy the learned advocates of immortal-soulism? Doubtless it does not; but it is the best that can be done. Is there reason in the above inference? Will it stand the test of criticism? Are we to take for granted the soul's inherent immortality, because man is made in the image of his God? If being created in the image of his Maker makes him an immortal being, does it not make him omnipotent, omniscient, and omnipresent also? And why not give to man all the moral attributes of God? Do you say that he once possessed all the attributes of his divine Maker, but lost them, all but one, in the fall, and that one retained was the power of an endless life? If this be so, and man lost all of his resemblance to the divine image of his Maker, when he fell, except his right to live forever; we are ready to believe it, when the advocates of immortal-soulism can bring a "thus saith the Lord" that the soul that sinneth shall never die, in opposition to his own declaration, reiterated over and over again, that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die." Sin when it is finished bringeth forth death." "The wages of sin is death." For since "by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." In the face of such plain, literal declarations of God own words, how dare we reiterate and defend the devil's lie, by teaching poor, lost, ruined, dying men that they shall never die?

TRIFLES.

How apt we are to consider many things which we say or do, to be too small to be noticed. We call them trifles. But what may be the consequence of such trifles? It is not so much the words we speak, or the deeds we do, that should be criticised; but, what will be the result? How many times have we heard people say of something, What harm will it do? That question is very appropriate in its place, but there is another which should come before it—What good will it do? We may be sure that if it does not do some good, it may result in harm to ourselves or to others. Christ says, "He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad"; "He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much." Let us, therefore, be faithful in the trifles of this world, that the Lord may give us a crown of glory when he comes.

How often words spoken thoughtlessly cause hearts to ache. How often do they open afresh wounds which we thought were healed long, long ago. How often, too, has one little example led to the ruin of bright hopes. How often has the drunkard in the gutter had to date his experience to the first glass. It was only a trifle. How often has the ruined gambler to regret his first stake. It was only a trifle. And how often do we excuse ourselves for doing things which we know do no good, by saying, It is only a trifle. And how often do we defend pride in wearing needless ornaments, which we say cost but a trifle. According to our estimation this world is but a trifle with the mighty God. How should we feel if at the judgment he should say, They are but trifles, let them die?

Dear reader, this world is made of trifles. A grain of sand is but a trifle, yet it helps make the earth. A drop of water is but a trifle, yet it helps fill the mighty ocean. Every action or word, however trifling it may seem, helps fill up the history of our lives. Let us, then, mind these trifles. See that we cast all our mites into the treasury of the Lord, and remember that "for every idle word that a man shall speak, he shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." Therefore, let our curses change to blessings, our anger to love. Our trifles should never be given to Satan, but to the Lord.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

Last November Bro. Seymour gave an interesting account of a visit to Hesperia, Mich. His letter has just emerged from a buried condition. We are sorry for its delay.—ED.

BRO. GRANT:—May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to you, and to all the friends of truth and righteousness everywhere. Some six weeks since I left my own dear home for Hesperia, Newaygo Co., Mich., about two hundred miles north. I went there by the urgent solicitation of our dear brother, D. Weaver, who was the first to pioneer the way into this northern new country, some fifteen years ago. He is now the principal merchant in the place, and is doing quite an extensive business. The people here are generally enterprising, and the resources of the country are being rapidly developed. God has a dear devoted people in this place, who are swaying a strong influence in favor of the one faith and hope of the gospel. Sectarianism has spent its strength in opposing their onward progress, yet they stand firm. Their intelligence, devotion, and earnest christian zeal, override all hindrances, and God is wonderfully blessing this people. I have just closed a series of meetings in the place, and the result has been truly blessed. Conviction deep and thorough seemed to rest upon all who came to the meeting. Eleven have put on Christ in baptism, and more will soon follow. Elder Scott is located here, and is a good, devoted christian brother, and much esteemed by the church. Some two years ago he was converted to God, from being a fiddler, and is now an acceptable minister of the new testament.

Two circumstances in this meeting I must mention, as they are so deeply interesting. Bro. D. Weaver's son, who is a young married man, and in company with his father in the mercantile business, said to his wife one night, after retiring to rest (she having arisen that evening in meeting and said, "I am not ashamed to own my Savior"), "Suppose I was thrown upon a bed of sickness, with no hope of my recovery; would you, in order to save my life (if there could be such a thing), renounce your faith and return back into the world and become a sinner again?" She burst into tears and wept freely, and for a moment gave him no reply. Said he, "I would like to have you answer me that question, if you will." Said she, "I should have to go forward." Said he, "I am glad you have given me such an answer. I am fully resolved to go with you." The next morning, with arms around each other, they went down into the water, and both were buried at once in the likeness of Christ's death, and raised to a new life in Christ Jesus. Praise the Lord.

The other circumstance was this: Two brothers, by the name of Robinson, and their wives, met after evening meeting, and read the Scriptures, talked, prayed and sung, till one or two o'clock next morning, and then all four fully resolved to put on the yoke of Christ; and last Lord's day were buried together beneath the watery element, and raised in hope of a glorious resurrection. The cause of Christ has many strong and devoted adherents all through this section of country, and many more are coming into the faith.

Our late quarterly meeting in Denver, seven miles from Hesperia, was a most blessed season. All hearts seemed thrilled with the cheering prospect of soon getting into their everlasting home. I have spent some six weeks in Newaygo county, preaching in five different localities, and received invitations to preach in six other places. The door is very widely open here for doing good, and laborers are wanted to enter this extensive field.

Thank God the truth of no immortality except through our Lord Jesus Christ is driving everything before it, and the blessed hope is shining out gloriously. Sure I am, that this truth, together with the truth of the speedy coming of Christ, is just what the church and the world need to prepare them for the great day of the Lord. Blessed be God, it is the meat in due season, or present truth, and the crowning truth of revelation. May all come to Christ and live.

From Bro. D. D. Reed.

To the saints scattered abroad, Greeting: We left home the last of May, by invitation of the brethren of Vallejo to "come over and help" them. They had secured a hall for six months free of charge, owned by a gentleman not professing religion. The brethren fitted it up and seated it in good order. We commenced meetings, dedicating it to the preaching of the glorious gospel of the Son of God. The Lord deigned to smile upon us, and his blessing and presence were with us in all our meetings. We staid five weeks, and the congregation and interest steadily increased, and the last day the hall was filled with attentive listeners.

We organized a church of seventeen members, and quite a number more will join soon. Baptized one in the likeness of Christ's death and resurrection. One man reclaimed had been in a backslidden state for twenty years, and came out happy in the Lord. The little church was greatly encouraged and strengthened in the truth, and felt like pressing the battle to the gates. We broke bread together around the table of our Lord; some forty or fifty partaking of the emblems of our blessed Lord's death and sufferings, and in remembrance of his soon coming again in power and great glory. God is doing a great work there, glory to his holy name. The truth is spreading, and a number were deeply convicted of the truth and of their sins, and almost persuaded to be christians. There is a prospect of a great harvest there, and the brethren will soon make a move to secure some one to settle with them, and labor in preaching the truth. There are other large towns and cities adjoining and easy of access, where a door is open for preaching the truth.

There is a blessed band at Vallejo, strong in the faith, and wholly consecrated to the Lord. The Lord add to their numbers such as shall be saved. We have now commenced meetings in Petaluma. The Lord is with us, and we hope for a glorious triumph in this place. Brethren, pray for us, that the word of God may run and be glorified. We believe in preaching all the great truths, just as God has revealed them in the Bible, and not be ashamed to call it Second Advent doctrine, for the advent is what we are looking for at this time—Christ's personal coming. And this is the message that God has given us to deliver to this generation. Let us see to it that we shun not to declare the whole truth with reverence and godly fear. But who is sufficient for these things? None except those whom God has sanctified and set apart for his service.

The truth is, the people are in the dark as it regards the great plan of redemption. They have been so long taught that death does so much for them—introducing them through the pearly gates into the New Jerusalem; that the resurrection takes place, and eternal life is given—all at death; hence Christ is out of the question, and nothing for him to accomplish at his coming. The Lord help us to show the people that death is an enemy, and that Christ our life must come again, or we shall all perish. And in order to meet him in peace, we must be pure in heart. I will by the grace of God do my best to preach the word, and the whole truth, as I understand it, and that fearlessly too. There is danger of our fearing what men will think of us, or that we may lose our popularity. God help us to "cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils."

Extracts from Letters.

A Letter from Fairport, N. Y., July 7th, says:—"Our tent meetings are in progress here, and quite an interest among some has been established. The laborers (Brn. B. P. Stevens, J. H. Whitmore, E. F. Sergisson, and S. C. Gove, together with Sisters L. M. Stoddard and E. S. Jennings) have preached the word faithfully. We may not see the effects of preaching immediately, but we pray that the Lord may attend the effort made in Fairport, and much good as the result be finally accomplished. Bro. Wm. A. Fenn will be with us July 9th, which will close our meetings here. Bro. William E. Brown has been with us and assisted both by prayer and singing, together with good and timely exhortations. The people, we believe, have gone to reading for themselves, as quite a number of books were sold and tracts freely distributed. We feel that the Lord has a work to do, and it will be accomplished. Pray for us, brethren and sisters, that the effort made here may not be lost, but prove a blessing to many."

Bro. A. W. Taylor writes:—"We are now at Buckfield Village, Me., with the Tent, and expect to remain here over Sunday, July 16th, if the Lord will. It is a very busy season of the year, among farmers especially; but notwithstanding this, the attendance has been good. Those who have attended have listened with candor. We pray that the word spoken may profit some who hear. Bro. York has not been able to be with me, as expected and announced. Bro. E. M. Haggett and wife have been with us till now. Brn. H. B. Sevey and S. Taylor also have been with us since yesterday. We expect Bro. J. A. Libby will be with us some the present week. We have no tent-master, though it seems to me that one is needed; and if there are those who have money to invest, perhaps they would do well to put out some in this direction, and thus help forward the work, and 'lay up treasures in heaven,' and hear the 'well done' when our Lord shall come."

Bro. J. G. Hook writes from Philadelphia: "We are having very interesting meetings at the Bethany Mission on Brandywine St., below Sixteenth. I found the church alive and well engaged, though the great enemy of God and man is busy here, as in every place on earth, trying to ruin mankind and lead them all to eternal death. Some are endeavoring to overcome through the blood of the Lamb and the word of their testimony.

I have just been feasting on various articles in our precious paper, the Crisis. One article in particular, from Bro. A. A. Phelps, on Church Divisions: The Cure. I hope it will be read and re-read by every friend of Jesus. Brethren, let us gird on the whole armor of God, and face our common foe. 'Let brotherly love continue.' Pray that my labors may be owned and blessed of God in this city."

Bro. C. C. Marston writes:—"The work of the Lord in Amory, Ill., is still prospering. There is an increasing interest among the people to hear the great truths of the Bible as held by Adventists. The Baptist minister has been delivering a course of lectures in opposition to Adventism. His lectures coming two weeks apart, gave me a favorable opportunity to review them, which I have done. The turnouts to our reviews have been large beyond our expectations. I rejoice in the 'present truth.' My peace has been like a river since I became associated with the Adventists. I have seen and realized much to cause my heart to be glad."

Bro. E. Morrill writes:—"Yesterday we closed up our tent meeting at Groton Junction, which has been a good meeting. Sinners were converted, backsliders reclaimed, the brethren strengthened, and the truth has got hold of some of the people so fast that they will have hard work to get away from it. A good number from Worcester were with us yesterday to help in the work. We commence at Gloucester, Mass., Friday, July 14th, and we hope that those in adjoining towns will come out and help us. Those who cannot come, pray for us."

COME, WELL FILLED.

I see by the Crisis that the Tremont campmeeting commences Monday, July 24. Now, brothers and sisters, shall we have a profitable campmeeting this year? or shall our meeting be a tiresome, monotonous, sing-song drag? If we would have a good, soul-stirring meeting, come filled with the Spirit of God. Come to do good. Bring your own fire with you to warm others by. Do not neglect the knee-work. Get your hearts filled with that holy, burning, godly zeal, before you start, and you will be in prime working order. Then the meetings will be alive with the power of God; souls will be saved, we blessed, God's name honored, and we shall feel as if one week had been well spent to the glory of God, and to our furtherance in the gospel.

J. R. Boynton.

ORDINATION.

Not the least among much of interest connected with our late tent meeting at Woodstock, Vt., was the ordination to the Christian ministry of Bro. Oscar Beckwith, of W. Fairlee, Vt. Those who know Bro. B. feel that by the grace of God his life promises much to the church of Christ. His services have proved a signal benefit to the church at West Fairlee, with whom he was as it were "begotten of God" of "incorruptible seed." He is not without honor in his own country. The charge given him by Bro. Couch at his ordination made a deep impression upon all, and moved many hearts to tears. May the Lord continue to "send forth laborers into his harvest."

Obituaries.

Sherman. Died in Northampton, Mass., July 3d, 1871, Sr. Charlotte L. Sherman, wife of Carlos S. Sherman, of Castleton, Vt., aged thirty-eight years.

The death of Sr. Sherman is a sad stroke to the church and society in Castleton, while her happy family is overwhelmed with grief. She has been very sick much of the time for some four months. By the advice of her physician and friends, and in harmony with her own feelings, on the 3d of July she went to Dr. E. E. Denniston's Water-cure, at Northampton, leaving home about eleven A. M., accompanied by her devoted husband and nurse, arriving at the Cure at six P. M. She endured her journey nicely, ate her usual supper, and retired. At nine o'clock, the same evening, she was asleep in death. Her's is a "blessed sleep." For some time she has been living very near to Jesus. The world affords but few women who could fill her place as a wife, a mother, and as an active member of the church of Christ. She was also noted for her deeds of kindness to the poor, the afflicted, and the tempted.

The funeral was attended by the Editor, assisted by Bro. S. G. Mathewson.

Whitman. Sweetly fell asleep in Jamaica, Vt., in the triumphs of faith, June 27th, 1871, Mrs. Mary E., wife of Myron H. Whitman, and daughter of Elijah Farr, aged nineteen years, eleven months, and one day.

She gave her heart to the Savior in the fall of 1864, and united with the Baptist church in Londonderry, Vt., and has ever since, by her faithful christian deportment, exemplified the principles of that religion inculcated in the word of God. She was a dutiful child, a loving sister, and a kind and affectionate wife.

In her last lingering moments she called her friends around her bed, and conversed with them freely upon the subject of religion, expressing a perfect trust in the power of Jesus' blood.

Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. C. P. Trenyear, assisted by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 13, 14.

Orris Pike.

Wheeler. Fell sweetly asleep in Jesus, at Waterbury, Vt., June 16th, 1871, of consumption, Sr. Rosetta T. Wheeler, aged thirty-six years, ten months, and nine days.

The death of this dear child of God was one of those which, like her life, magnify the grace of Christ and glorify God. Rejoicing that her rest in the grave was to be short, she anticipated with great delight the beauties and unfading glories of the new earth home. "I shall be there, glory to God, forever," from her heart she said as death's shadows gathered. Bro. Wheeler and children, with a large circle of loving friends, mourn deeply, but not without hope. Words of comfort were attempted by the writer from Rev. 14: 13.

Gilmore. Died in Chester, Vt., May 7th, 1871, Jane L. Gilmore, aged twenty-eight years and six months.

Her disease was consumption. For two years she wasted under her infirmities, until she fell asleep in hope of life beyond the grave.

"Where sickness, sorrow, pain and death,
Are felt and feared no more."

Words of comfort were spoken to the bereaved family from Rev. 14: 13.

S. Cook.

Judd. Died at Fish Creek, Wis., June 17th, 1871, Sylvester Judd (formerly of North Canton, Conn.), aged sixty-one years.

Father Judd was looking for the coming of Christ near at hand. We believe he sleeps in Jesus, and the promise is that such God will bring with him.

C. P. Fairchild.

Dillabaugh. Died, in Seneca Falls, N. Y., July 1st, 1871, Bro. Geo. Dillabaugh, in the fifty-second year of his age.

He died in the faith of our soon coming King and a glorious resurrection to immortality in the kingdom of God.

W. C. Day.

Hall. Died, in Bridgeport, Ct., July 7th, Sr. Sarah, wife of Calvin Hall, and daughter of Bro. and Sr. Porter, aged thirty years.

She left a bright hope of living again in the paradise of God. She leaves a husband, daughter, and parents, to mourn their loss. May the Lord sanctify this loss to the bereaved, and to the little church in this place.

A. A.

Shattuck. Died at New Britain, Ct., Adaline L. Shattuck, daughter of William Allen, aged forty-three years.

She sleeps in Jesus.

C. M. B.

Married.

DANVILLE—CHENETTE. In Castleton, June 26th, by Eld. S. G. Mathewson, Mr. L. E. A. Danville, of Poultney, Vt., and Miss Jennie M. Chenette, of Castleton, Vt.

MUNSON—HUDSON. At Fort Edward, N. Y., June 28th, 1871, by Eld. C. Pike, Miss Celia Munson and Mr. Charles I. Hudson, both of Hebron, N. Y.

HOPKINS—DEAN. At Cabot, Vt., June 20th, by Eld. A. A. Hoyt, Mr. Orpheus D. Hopkins, and Mrs. Laurestine E. Dean, of St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

Paris, July 5. The Cloche Provencale has a bitter article against Germany, saying: "We shall not forget our disaster until the grass grows high over the graves of the slain, and that bird of ill omen, the Prussian eagle ceases to hover over the last of France. We have discovered the secret of victory—revenge. Let the Germans cease to tender the hand of friendship. When we stretch our arms toward Germany let her tremble, because it will be to strike those who taught us fate."

The Gazette de France pronounces the Republican triumph a real misfortune for the country. Encouraged by their success, the "Left" will become more daring and more dangerous.

The Liberte rejoices over the victory, and urges the new deputies to leave behind them all mere partisan feeling when they enter the Chambers.

The Avenir, a liberal Bonapartist journal, awaits the achievements of the daring innovators who, hitherto mere critics, are now masters of the field, and believes they will not be held excusable by their supporters if they outdo their predecessors against whom they were so pitiless.

Brussels, July 5. The Belgium Chambers have passed a measure for the supression of gaming tables and gaming houses throughout Belgium. The authorities are directed to carry out the new law to its fulfillment, and to energetically suppress all gambling resorts and haunts coming within their knowledge and observation.

Berlin, July 6. The ultramontane party in both Prussia and Austria are making a united and violent attack upon Prince Bismarck, charging him with direct misrepresentation of the contents of a letter recently addressed him by Cardinal Antonnelli on the Roman question. The ultramontanists threaten that unless a policy more favorable to the Holy See is adopted by Bismarck, his anti-Catholicism will cost him all his well-won laurels and successes.

London, July 7. Great freshets have occurred in the Derwent, Wye, Severn and Costa Rivers, and have caused a heavy loss to farmers by the destruction of buildings and crops.

Unusually severe thunder storms have visited the suburbs of London, and many churches were set on fire by lightning and destroyed. A number of lives were lost.

Napoleon will soon leave England for Geneva, and Eugenie will simultaneously pay a visit to her mother in Spain.

Paris, July 7. The Count de Chambord has issued a proclamation announcing that he is about to leave France in order that his presence in the country may no longer give countenance to agitation. He adds: "Though absent we shall not be separated from our countrymen. When Frenchmen are willing we shall found a Government with decentralization, liberty and universal suffrage as our mottoes." He praises the army, and declares his unfaltering adherence to the white flag of Henri the IVth and Joan of Arc, which conquered Alsace and Lorraine.

London, July 8. The Count Chambord is now at Chateau Chambord. He refuses to see the Orleans Princes until he consults the people of France. A proclamation calling upon the people to Rally Around the Bourbon Throne,

Causes great excitement. Unless the authorities interfere, there will be an imitation of Napoleon's Strasbourg programme.

The Hague, July 9. The Second Chamber of the Parliament of Netherlands has ratified the treaty for the cession of the island of New Guinea, in the Pacific ocean, to England.

The deaths in Paris are rapidly decreasing.

President Thiers has written a letter to the Pope, inviting him to take up his residence in France. M. Thiers makes an humble apology to the Holy Father for the inability of France to interfere in behalf of the temporal power in the Roman States, but declares it to be his earnest conviction that Italian unity is impossible.

The Persian Famine.—Continued accounts of the horrible sufferings of the Persian population from famine, show that something must be done to relieve them, if, indeed, it be not too late already. The Times of India of May 18th, says: "The famine in some parts of Persia is severe beyond comprehension. Rain was long hopefully expected, but it came in very measured quantity, and too late to turn away the foe that was already at the door. Thousands are said to have died by the wayside of sheer starvation, or of starvation coupled with the diseases it invariably brings in its train. Most of the dead lie unburied—a fact which may be regarded as the sure precursor of pestilence. At first, when self-preservation by any means whatever, became a question to be decided, yea or nay, the former alternative prevailed with the Mussulmans, and more than one human being is said to have been killed and eaten by them. It is stated that the sights to be seen, and not to be avoided in the neighborhood of Shiraz, are such that European residents will not leave their own houses. Also, beyond Shiraz and Bushire, thousands of dead bodies lie unburied."

Ventilation Wanted.—An unforeseen difficulty was encountered during the first passage of a locomotive through the Mont Cenis tunnel through the Alps. From its extreme length there is no draft of air and the engineers were nearly suffocated by the smoke. Locomotives to consume the smoke have been ordered and may be a partial remedy. The use of compressed air as a motive power is also suggested. It has been a matter of speculation as to whether the Hoosac tunnel will be found to be subject to the same disadvantage.

In Brief.

—— The Florentine peasants are flocking in crowds to the grand manifestation in favor of the temporal power, which is to be held in Rome in honour of the Pope, the only one who for eighteen hundred years has held his temporal power more than a quarter of a century. It is feared that troubles may ensue, as the ultra Catholic peasantry are flocking there in great numbers to give their adhesion to the Pope.——Gambetta is called the French one-eyed man of destiny.——The Pope has written to Thiers that he will remain in Rome.——New York and Brooklyn are each to have a Roman Catholic Cathedral costing ten millions of dollars.——The largest rope in the world has been completed in Birmingham, England. It is about six miles long, five and a quarter inches in circumference, and weighs over sixty tons.——At Madrid and Barcelona there are signs of a coming revolution, which the government is taking all measures to suppress.——In the course of a year the pin factories in the United States, eight in number, produce 6,720,000,000 pins.——The house in Geneva in which Calvin lived and died is now occupied as a Roman Catholic school-house.——"Through tickets" to go "round the world" are for sale in London for $1250.——It is announced that the city of Paris will issue a loan to the amount of 600,000,000 francs, to be expended in the repair and the rebuilding of the monuments and public works damaged or destroyed during the siege.——It is reported that two thousand people of color are asking help from the American Colonization Society to emigrate to Liberia.——The reorganization of the French army has been completed. Its effective strength is 320,000.——Sylvanus Cobb has perpetrated seventy-five miles of novels.——Prince De Joinville having declared for the Republic, will undoubtedly succeed in the Department of Lamanche.——Miss J. F. Ripley of Missouri has taken the first prize for Greek scholarship in the State University at Columbia, and is the first young lady who has ever attained an honor of the kind.——The wife of Secretary Gorham, of the United States Senate, whose life was lately despaired of, has been healed of a virulent cancer by the use of the new South American remedy—the cundurango.——The Japanese have abandoned the old method of printing from wood-cuts alone, as learned from China, and are establishing type foundries, electrotyping and stereotyping establishments.——The statue of the Empress Josephine, which was removed from its pedestal in Paris Sept. 4th, 1870, is to be replaced.——California has 2307 miles of railway, far more than some of the older States. The State with the greatest railroad mileage is Illinois, which has 7186 miles.——The Augsburg Gazette announces that the Prussian military law will be speedily enforced in Alsace and Lorraine.——The Levant Herald, of May 12th, publishes an account of the remarkable conversion to Mohammedanism of Rev. Antonio Tien, a Syrian by birth, originally a Maronite Catholic, and then an Episcopalian missionary.——A correspondent of the New York Observer, writing from Rome, speaks of a service conducted by Rev. Dr. Breed of Philadelphia, as "the first American service held within the walls since it has ceased to be a penal offence to pray to our God together in 'holy Rome.'"——It is estimated that there are fifteen thousand colored voters in Ohio.——There are 240,000 persons dependent upon charity in the city of Paris.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so.

The campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 9th, and hold over the Sabbath, the 17th.

For the Committe, J. Couch.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, the Mass. Advent Mission Tent will be pitched at Gloucester, Mass., Friday, July 14th, and remain there as duty may require. Meetings day and evenings. We hope to see the brethren and sisters in from the surrounding towns, to labor for the spread of the truth and the salvation of perishing men. Those wishing to stop through the meeting will bring provision and clothing, and we can furnish them with comfortable lodging. Let all pray for the success of the meeting.

Enoch Morrill.
Luther Boutell.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting (at West Wareham, Mass.) will commence on Monday, July 24th, and continue over the following Sabbath. With the blessing of the Lord, we expect an interesting season on this consecrated ground, as in former years; and hope all who can will make arrangements to attend this annual feast.

Henry V. Davis, for the Committee.

North Dana, Mass.

There will be a grove meeting in North Dana, Mass., commencing on Thursday, August 3d, and hold over Sunday the 6th. Bro. J. Hemenway and others are expected to help preach the word. All preaching brethren and sisters, come and help us, and all others come. Provide for yourselves as far as convenient. Provision for man and beast can be obtained near by. We wish to make one more effort for Christ and his cause in No. Dana. Pray for the meeting.

Geo. A. Streeter.

Gloucester, Mass.

Our tent meeting commences Friday eve., July 14th, and we desire the help of all the brethren who can attend during the meeting. Come to our help. Make the sacrifice. Come and get the blessing. It is a new place for our faith.

L. Boutell.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in North Holderness, in Bro. Amos G. Carr's grove, near my place, Sunday, July 30th. Brethren and sisters are invited to come to work for the Lord.

John H. Evans.

Southern Kansas Grove Meeting.

We commence Sat., July 22nd, at two o'clock P. M., at Crawfordville, Crawford Co., Kansas. Any who shall see this notice are invited to come. Ministering brethren, of "like precious faith," we desire your acquaintance and co-operation. There is a large and open field of labor here. Any coming by rail will take the Gulf R. R., step off at Girard, and inquire for us or Bro. A. M. Sidwell. The grove is two and a half miles west of Girard.

H. J. Munson.

Notice.

The campmeeting committee who were chosen at the New Milford, Ct., campmeeting last Sept., are requested to meet upon the old ground, New Milford, Tuesday, July 18th, at three o'clock P. M., and if decided to have another meeting this coming season, to fix upon a time, and make such other arrangements as are needed for the same. Brethren, if possible, and the Lord willing, come. In behalf of the committee,

H. K. Plass.

Connecticut Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting in the beautiful grove occupied for that purpose last year, near Plainville, Ct., commencing Sept. 2nd, 1871, and holding till the 11th inst.

The fare is reduced one half on the N. H. and N. R. R., same as last year. Regular tickets must be bought to Plainville, and free return passes will be furnished on the camp-ground. The committee have been unable to effect a reduction of fare on the H. P. and F. R. R. Mr. T. F. Clark will convey passengers from Plainville to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. Provision will be made for those coming with horses. It is desirable that all who can, bring tents and bedding, especially the latter.

We shall endeavor to provide wholesome food for all who may wish, at reasonable rates, and trust that, together with our brethren and sisters, we may exercise sufficient faith in God, coupled with good works, to dispel the fear of financial embarrassment, which so cripples the religious enterprises of the day, that their votaries are withering from spiritual drouth, the result of too much anxiety for money, and too little knowledge of faith in God. The Lord is soon coming, and we feel the need of a higher standard of holiness, and the deep inwrought work of the Holy Spirit. Let us walk humbly before the Lord, making this meeting the subject of prayer, beseeching our heavenly Father to breathe the Holy Spirit upon the entire encampment, that wanderers may be reclaimed, and sinners converted.

B. Hitchcock,
Geo. L. White,
Wm. J. Ripley,
O. D. Woodruff, } Committee.

Quarterly Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting for the northern district of the Advent Christian Conference of Indiana, will meet at four o'clock P. M., on Thursday, before the first Sunday in Aug., 1871, with the church of God at Sand-hill, four miles north of Rochester, on the Michigan road, in Fulton Co. A general invitation is given; and we say come one, come all; come on the first day, and stay till the last. Provision will be made for all who may come. Persons coming on the Michigan road will inquire for Brn. N. Doolittle, or S. S. Cole. Persons coming by R. R. will stop off at Sturgeon, and inquire for Brn. E. Partridge, or I. E. Andrus. By order of conf.,

D. Nafe,
I. E. Andrus, } Committee.

Grove Meeting.

A meeting will be held in Harmony Grove, South Framingham, Mass., Sunday, July 16th. Brethren from adjoining towns are invited to come and worship with us. Free admittance to the grove.

C. Goodrich.

Annual Meeting.

The Women's Christian Association will hold its annual meeting at Springfield, Mass., August 23d, 1871. It is desirable that all members of the Association should be present.

E. S. Jennings, President.

Grove Meeting.

There will be preaching at Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., on Sunday, July 30th, by Eld. J. G. Smith. If stormy, the meeting will be held in the Hall at the grove. Refreshments, and stabling for horses for all who wish.

Notice.

There will be a monthly conference held in Albion, Me., at the Friends' meeting-house, on the second Saturday of each month, at two o'clock P. M. Also preaching every Sunday A. M. (except the last Sunday in each month), commencing at ten o'clock. Meetings free for all to come and worship the true and living God in spirit and in truth, without respect to sect or creed. Come all who can, and work for the salvation of sinners.

Jas. Carr.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting at Old Point, on Sodus Bay, Wayne Co., N. Y., July 22d and 23d. Come, brethren and sisters, with your hearts full of the love of Jesus, and your baskets well filled with provision.

M. R. Miles.

Notice for Ohio.

Bro. Grant:—Permit me to say through the Crisis to all interested, that circumstances have transpired since the last quarterly session of the Ohio S. A. Conference, at Norwalk, Ohio, which render it impracticable for me to act as Evangelist, as previously announced in the published minutes of said conference. All communications on this subject will therefore be addressed to W. Jefferson, Wyandotte Co., Ohio, instead of G. W. Stetson, Olena, Ohio.

Notice.

The Vermont State Annual Campmeeting will probably be located at or near the village of Bethel, Vt. More soon.

H. F. C.

Tent-Meetings.

Those wishing tent-meetings in the State of New York, are requested to write me at South Butler, N. Y., as soon as convenient, in order that early arrangements may be made. Those wishing meetings in the south and west part of the State, will please inform me before the State Campmeeting, so that arrangements can be made at that meeting. It is expected that Bro. Miles Grant will be at some of the meetings.

B. P. Stevens.

Maine Mission Tent.

This tent will be ready for meetings in a few days. Brethren wishing it pitched in any localities, will please write to me as soon as possible. Let there be a prompt response to this invitation.

For the Tent Committee,
R. R. York, Portland, Me.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting at East Lebanon, Me. (Little River Falls), Sundays, Aug. 6th and 13th. Geo. W. Brown, of South Elliott, and others, are expected to preach the word.

J. Bickford.

Thanks.—We very thankfully acknowledge the following amounts received anonymously:—A gold ring and chain left at the Crisis office (received Dec. 2d, 1870), sold for $3. From "a Brother," $5. Cohoes, N. Y., $1. J. B. M., Peacedale, R. I., $2. Miss G. C. P., $1. "Present," $5. "Right Hand," $2.

We have replied to all letters received containing the name and address of the writers. Several have requested us to make no public acknowledgment, but all may be assured of an abundant reward. Pray for us. Your Bro. and Sister,

Oxford, Mass. F. H. & S. S. Chamberlain.

Southern Tract Fund.

At our recent Wisconsin campmeeting, a collection was taken to aid me in scattering gratuitously my forthcoming book (entitled "The Life beyond Death in the Home of the Holy") in the southern field, it having been prepared with reference to missionary or pioneering work. I desire to send at least one thousand copies of this work, with a quantity of my four tracts, into the southern field this coming fall and winter. It will be a pleasure for some to help me raise one hundred dollars for this purpose. Let such direct to Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Green Co., Wis.; or, if more convenient, to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

W. S.

Notice.

I supplied a number of brethren with works at campmeetings last year, and those who can possibly send me what is due by mail, in June, I wish they would do so, as I am much in debt for printing, and ought to pay up. If any can aid me in throwing off the unpleasant burden of being in debt, it will be thankfully received. Age and health prevent my obtaining means to live and pay debts as formerly. Direct to J. Blain, Buffalo, N. Y.

Meetings at Bonny Eagle, Me.

For the information of friends residing at a distance from Bonny Eagle, Me., who may desire to meet with us occasionally, I will say that Eld. C. H. Sweet, of Rhode Island, having been invited to settle here, has decided to come and remain as long as may seem duty. Preaching every Sunday, at 10½ A. M. and 1 P. M.; Sunday school at 9½ A. M. Prayer meeting at 5 P. M.; also Tuesday and Friday evenings. All these services are held in the Chapel.

T. J. Rumery, Ch. Elder.

German Tracts.

I will send my German Tracts gratis (except postage), to any one who wants them for himself, or to distribute. I have a good supply. Send your orders to L. Reimer, 1008 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Rochester, N. Y.

The Second Advent Christian Church will meet hereafter for the worship of God over 102 State Street, at the head of the second flight of stairs. It is a new hall. It is one block south of the New York Central Depot. Will be a permanent place. Meetings Tuesday and Friday evenings, and three times on the Lord's day. Preaching afternoon and evening. Preaching brethren will find a home at Bro. D. T. Cooper's, No. 72 Mount Hope Avenue.

J. Pelham, Secretary.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR.

A work that thoroughly ventilates Spiritualism.

276 pages. Price by mail, $1.25.

The above works for sale at this office.

THE CHRISTIAN'S INHERITANCE.

EMMA B. ALEXANDER.

Ah! no, it is not here, the home for which we sigh,
Where many piercing thorns around our pathway lie;
Where we witness scenes of sorrow till we weary of the sight,
And dwell midst deeds of darkness, which are daily brought to light.

How numerous are the trials which meet us day by day,
As we journey on towards heaven in the strait and narrow way;
How the tempter's power assails us, to lure our feet aside
From the strictest path of duty, and the Bible as our guide.

The world with its allurements is striving all the while
From better thoughts and purer joys our spirits to beguile;
And many a one has fallen through this enticing snare,
Who left the christian's armor of watchfulness and prayer.

But we're looking for a city whose maker is the Lord,
Where we'll walk the golden pavements of paradise restored;
There sin can never enter, and death no more shall come,—
'Tis this for which we're longing, our peaceful, happy home.

Those gates of pearl are open, for there shall be no night,
And strains of sweetest music fill us ever with delight;
With the friends we've loved so dearly we'll meet no more to part—
How the rapturous contemplation inspires each waiting heart.

Though faint and oft discouraged we'll ever onward move,
Until we reach the haven of perfect rest and love;
Where toils and cares are ended, and all our wanderings o'er,
We'll chant God's praise forever on that bright, eternal shore.

Philadelphia, Pa.

A WORD TO EDITORS ON PUFFING.

D. T. NEWTON, Author of "Home Thrusts."

"Speak thou the truth. Let others fence
And trim their words for pay;
In pleasant sunshine or pretence
Let others bask their day."

Speak well of it? Of what? a bad book or periodical? No, you needn't, brother, shouldn't. Speak as you think, as you believe, in the fear of God, and as God directs, and as God would have you, by pen and by word of mouth. Speak of a book or periodical as it is in good faith, without exaggeration, flattery, or fear of man. Swear to your own heart and change not. Psa. 15: 4. Speak the truth from the heart; lie not. The puffing this, the puffing that, for the loaves and fishes, or because somebody else is silly enough, and wicked enough to puff it; or because its popular to do so, is the curse of the land, and what rejoices the enemy of all good.

Persons of discernment and good common sense have lost all confidence in "book tables," or "literary notices"; for they know, from sad experience, they are generally a pack of lies, barefaced; puffs, and nothing but puffs; inflations, bags of wind, puffy. Very many religious editors (we regret to say) puff trifles or nonsense, or what is worse, because another simpleton in high standing does the same. Only a short time since, we said to a religious editor, "How could you, 'in all good conscience,' puff such a work; give it favorable publicity when you knew it tended to evil and only evil?" He replied cheerily, "Why, it was merely a compliment; every body puffs it, why not I?" What! curse the world, little and big, for compliment's sake, and for the sake of being popular? Because one editor chooses to help Satan do his dingy, dirty work, will you, forsooth, tread in his steps, put shoulder to his infernal wheels? "Wo to them that followeth a multitude to do evil." "Such is the way of an adulterous woman; she eateth, and wipeth her mouth, and saith, I have done no wickedness." Prov. 30: 20.

Serve the devil for "compliments"! So it is; so it goes. You see whole columns of puffs in very many of our religious weeklies and monthlies to help on the work of darkness, death and damnation. Its puff, puff, puff. "We go it, sink or swim, kill or cure. "It's popular to puff, and puff we will, come life or come death." To be unpopular or out of the "ring" is death. Professedly christian editors and publishers know its "death in the pot"; sin, outrageous, heaven-daring, to puff (as many of them do) trashy things, froth and fiction, novels and romances of Harper, Godey, Leslie, Peterson, Arthur, Dickens, Beecher, "fashion plates," "comicals," a thousand publications, serpents coiled, and yet they do it. "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil."—Eccl. 8: 11.

"Who sows to winds, the whirlwind reaps,
And life's great end confounds!
Then be, ye stewards, wise to escape
The wrath that knows no bounds."

It is sinning by proxy, partaking of other men's sins. The partaker is as bad as the thief. "Woe to them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter."

"Woe, woe to him on safety bent,
Who creeps to age from youth;
Failing to grasp his life's intent,
Because he fears the truth."

"Neither be ye partakers of other men's sins."

Who, in his right mind, does not see and know that this writing, publishing, puffing, selling and reading these works of fiction, whether religious or otherwise, is diabolism from first to last; the entering wedge to every rascality, every thing villainous, "earthly, sensual, devilish"? And yet this same diabolism will go on increasingly till judgments come, and come they will. "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness." Rom. 1: 18.

Who has not reviewed the past few years with fear; and who can look forward without forebodings? Can you look at this age, and see the great mass of mind moved, agitated, and troubled, without fearing that shortly the agonized cry of nations, forsaken by God, will rend the heavens? The foundation of society already shakes, and nothing but the raising up of generations, who, from their very cradles, shall have the fear of God planted in their hearts, can anchor this, or any other nation, so that there shall not be a shipwreck of hopes.

"Just as the broadest rivers run
From small and distant springs,
The greatest crimes that men have done
Have grown from little things."

What man in the pulpit, or in the editorial chair, has not lauded Dickens to the skies, a man whose god was his "belly," and whose glory was his shame, and who minded earthly things?"—Phil. 3: 19. And what Christian publisher or bookseller has not scattered his works over the land more numerously than the leaves of autumn, to [illegible] generations yet unborn? What religious editor has not testified to the world, saying: "It is the voice of god and not of a man?"

And who is this same Charles Dickens? where is he? how did he live? how did he die? Of his daily walk, we give the items of one day, leaving you, beloved, to judge of the rest. If one day is devoted to the god Bacchus, how many more? We clip the following from Appleton's Journal:

Mr. Franklin Philip, a Washington bookseller, who was well acquainted with Dickens, publishes the following extract from a diary, which he kept while in England last year, and which gives some details of the home-life of the great author:

"July 25, 1860. Went to Charing-cross station at 10.40, met Dickens there (by appointment), accompanied Mr. Dickens, his daughter, sister-in-law, Miss Stone (sister of Marcus Stone, the artist), J. M. Kent, editor of the Sun, to Higham by rail; gentlemen walked up to Gad's Hill; ladies sent on in a carriage. On arrival (half-past twelve), commenced with 'cider-cup,' which had previously been ordered to be ready for us—delicious cooling drink—cider, soda-water, sherry, brandy, lemon-peel, sugar and ice, flavored with an herb called barrage, all judiciously mixed. Lunch at one o'clock (completed by a liqueur which Dickens said was 'peculiar to the house.' From two to half-past five we were engaged in 'a large, open meadow at the back of the house, in the healthful and intellectual sport of 'Aunt Sally,' and rolling balls on the grass; at half-past six o'clock we dined—young Charles Dickens, a still younger Charles Dickens (making three generations), having arrived in the meantime—dinner faultless, wines irreproachable; nine to ten, billiards; ten to eleven, music in the drawing-room; eleven, 'hot and rebellious liquors,' delightfully compounded into punches; twelve, bed."

"Voluptuous meal! seated with nature's boons,
With dishes tortured from their native taste
And mad variety; to spur beyond
Its wiser will the jaded appetite!
Is this for pleasure? Learn a juster taste,
And know true temperance is luxury."

Make any pretentions to Bible Christianity? How could he, while living a life of constant bacchanalianism? "They that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh." "To be carnally minded is death." "And yet who worshiped him not on both sides of the big waters?—made a god of a man who caused such an immense waste of time, talent, and property, in "sowing tares among the wheat" "while men slept"?

Were faculties ever more shamefully and wickedly abused?—were talents, almost angelic, ever buried more deeply down? And what saith the Lord of the man who hid his talent in the earth, instead of putting it to the exchangers?

"Take, therefore, the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents. For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but from him that not, shall be taken away, even that which he hath. And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Matt. 25: 28, 29, 30.

Was there ever presented a more shameful, disgusting spectacle than the frantic ado made ove this sensualist, an open foe to temperance —a caricaturist of God's faithful ministers, and who fell at last a victim to loathsome gluttony! "He dug his grave with his own teeth." *

Intemperance is a crime heaven-daring! It's a crime against ourselves, against others, against God! "Be not amongst wine-bibbers; amongst riotous eaters of flesh. For the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty, and drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags." Prov. 23: 20–21. (See also 1 Cor. 6: 10.)

With all these startling facts staring us full in the face (and the half is not told,) both religious editors and ministers are indignant, fly in a passion, bristle up porcupinely, if man, woman, or child, has the temerity or moral courage to question the piety of this suicide or self-murderer. Indeed we are looked upon with an eye of suspicion, counted offenders if we do not bow the knee to this prince of novel-writers. Whom shall we obey, God or man? When John fell down at the feet of an angel in the isle called Patmos, what said the angel? "See thou do it not; worship God." Rev. 22: 9.

Mark well, also, how terribly the Almighty frowns upon this idolatry or man-worshiping.

The most fearful judgments have come upon those who attempt to rob God of his glory. "Is not this great Babylon that I have built?" said Nebudnezzar, in a spirit of self-exaltation. What now? He was driven from men to dwell among the beasts of the field, and made to eat grass as oxen. Dan. 4: 30–32. Mark that wicked Herod also, who took glory to himself, and immediately the angel of the Lord smote him, because he gave not God the glory, and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost. Acts 12: 21–23.

"I am the Lord; that is my name; and my glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images." Isa. 42: 8. "Whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted."

"Oh that our God would raise up men
Whose hearts, unmoved by popular sin,
Could bear reproach, and grief, and pain,
In serving God;
Not pride nor wealth their heart could sway,
Not learned nor great should badge their way,
They would not fear the face of day,
But fear their God."

And yet, notwithstanding, may we not hope there are more than seven thousand who have not bowed the knee to this Baal, this Nebuchadnezzar's golden image, this Diana of the Ephesians?

Praise the Lord. One blessed Christian brother, in the editorial chair, speaks thus in the fear and love of God: "It is unblushing impudence to ask a Christian editor, wholly devoted to God's service, as he should be, to lend his paper for the purpose of aiding the circulation of froth and fiction. Shall we, through editorial courtesy, comply with what has become almost a universal custom among editors? Far from it. When we lift our pen to widen the waves of pollution and moral death, sent over the country by these light frivolous and satanic publications, we will take down our significant motto, and throw off with it the profession of religion. We will profess devotion to 'to truth and holiness,' and so directly assist the devil in his work of destruction. Such courtesy belongs to the school of Christ."

Were all religious editors and publishers to stand thus nobly for the truth as it is in Jesus, instead of assisting Satan to do his dirty work, what an avalanche of misery, ruin, desolation and damnation it would save!

"Truth is earnest, truth is fearless,
Ever dwelling in the light;
Still by error's frowns undaunted,
Striving only for the right.
Truth is strong and noble ever,
And no power its course may stay;
No dark mists of persecution
Long can veil its blessed ray."

NEW YORK CONFERENCE.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The New York State Advent Christian Conference met in connection with the Albion campmeeting, Thursday, June 8th, 1871. The first session was an informal one (in consequence of the hurry of pitching tents), in which it was voted to delay the annual address until Friday P. M.

Friday, 8 o'clock A. M. Pres. Stevens in the chair. Opened by prayer and singing. Certificates of delegates were called for, and the following names, with annexed quarterly collections, reported:—C. Boothe, Fremont, $5.05; A. C. West, South Butler, $4.50; Knowlesville (no delegate), $2.00; E. F. Sergisson, Rochester, $2.20; A. Riggs, Lockport, $6.55; Buffalo (no delegate), $4.00; B. C. Simonds, Darien, $5.00; Henry Hey, East Shelby; A. W. Silvers, Alton; S. H. Withington, Springwater, $1.00.

Voted, To delay the election of officers till Saturday morning. All brethren present sympathizing and co-operating with conference, were invited to participate in its deliberations.

COMMITTEES.

Devotional exercises—A. C. West, P. M. Grinnell, C. Andrews, A. Riggs, N. McCullock.

Business—C. W. Lyon, W. A. Fenn, M. R. Miles, J. H. Whitmore, J. W. Taylor.

Reading of the Secretary's report waived.

B. C. SIMONDS, Treasurer.
Darien, June 8th, 1871.

The report was accepted.

Reports were then listened to from the following preachers: Brn. Newell, Gove, Taylor, Whitmore, Miles, Fenn, Wendell, Low, Sergisson. Adjourned.

Friday, 2 o'clock P. M. At this hour Bro. Wm. A. Fenn gave the annual address before a large and attentive audience. To Adventists especially it was both interesting and encouraging. We are increasing rapidly in numbers and influence, and therefore we need much grace to keep us humble. This must be our aim; and "O Lord, give us heavenly wisdom," must be our oft and earnest prayer. From five ordained ministers and five exhorters at organization, five years ago, we have now thirty-three ordained ministers, one exhorter, one lecturer, and one colporteur. Nineteen of these were ordained either by conference, or at the campmeetings; the rest were received from other States and churches —some acting with conference, a few independently. Six houses of worship have been built, three are building, and rising of thirty halls and churches have been bought or rented for regular meetings. One minister has been lost by death, and one house by fire. Five hundred are known to have been baptized by the ministers of conference, and probably the number is even greater. Two mission tents have been worn out in this time, and two new ones are in operation. One monthly paper is being published in New York City, and a large number of books and tracts have been published and circulated.

Saturday, 8 o'clock A. M., President in the chair. Session opened by prayer and singing. Election of officers the special order. After the balloting, the following officers were declared unanimously elected: D. Cogswell, President; B. P. Stevens, Vice President; Wm. E. Brown, Secretary, and R. C. Brown, Treasurer. The Board of Trustees were re-elected in body, with one exception, and are as follows: D. Cogswell, Dansville; Aaron Riggs, Lockport; John F. Westcott, So. Butler; John S. Beaman, Honeoye; N. T. Withington, Springwater; B. C. Simonds, Darien; and N. McCullock, Rochester.

The chairman of the committee on new constitution submitted a draft which was accepted, taken up article by article, discussed, amended and adopted. Adjourned.

Four o'clock P. M. Tent matters made the special order. Bro. B. P. Stevens placed "The Lord's Tent" under the supervision of the conference, the same being accepted by vote. Also, by vote, Brn. B. P. Stevens and A. A. Phelps were invited to labor with the tents, one with each, each to secure a suitable co-laborer. Time was asked for consideration. Bro. C. Boothe, of Fremont, and Wm. E. Brown, were requested to go with the tents as directors, or tent-masters. The positions were accepted.

Voted, That the directors be required to keep an accurate account of all receipts and expenses, and report the same at each quarterly session of the conference. Bro. J. T. Ongley presented certificates from churches in Blooming Valley and Rootville, Pa., and was received to membership; also J. H. Luttenton. Adjourned.

Monday, 8 o'clock A. M. Called to order by the Pres., and after prayer and singing, the resolution proposing the division of conference territory for quarterly meetings was taken up, and after much discussion left upon the table. Bro. A. A. Phelps accepted the invitation to labor with one of the mission tents. Bro. Stevens declined, and afterward asked the re-lease of "The Lord's Tent" for his own private use, which was granted by vote. Four resolutions were then passed, and filed with the Secretary, called "Whitmore's Nos. 1 and 2," "Low's No. 1," and "Brown's No. 1." Adjourned.

Tuesday, 8 o'clock A. M. Vice President in the chair. Meeting opened with prayer as usual. A letter was read from Bro. E. A. Bowe, containing his report as colporteur. Accepted. Some other amendments were made to the constitution proposed, when it was by unanimous vote adopted as a whole. The following is a copy *:—

Constitution of the A. C. Conf. of N. Y.

TITLE.

ART. I. This organization shall be called the Advent Christian Conference of the State of New York and vicinity.

MEMBERSHIP.

ART. II. Sec. 1.—This conference shall be composed of all A. C. preachers in good standing and full fellowship, laboring within the bounds of this conference, and the A. C. churches included within the same limits.

Sec. 2.—Any person may hereafter become a member of this conference on receiving a two-thirds vote of all the members present at any regular meeting.

DELEGATES.

ART. III. This conference shall recognise any body of believers, who sustain regular meetings, as a church entitled to one delegate, and an additional delegate for every twenty-five members above the first twenty-five or fractional part thereof.

OFFICERS.

ART. IV. The officers of this conference shall be a President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer.

BUSINESS BOARD.

ART. V. The above-named officers, together with the Board of Trustees, as regulated by statute law, shall constitute an executive board to take charge of all legitimate business belonging to this conference, not otherwise disposed of.

ART. VI. Sec. 1.—The officers of this conference shall be elected annually by ballot,—the executive board having power to fill any vacancy that may occur.

QUORUMS. Sec. 2.—Five members of this executive board shall constitute a quorum. Sec. 3.—Three members of the Board of Trustees shall constitute a quorum.

MEETINGS.

ART. VII. Sec. 1.—The annual meeting shall be held in the month of June.

Sec. 2.—Three quarterly meetings shall be held during the year, as conference may appoint.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

ART. VIII. 1. Appoint a business committee of three to devise, arrange and present business for the consideration of conference. 2. Reception of members and delegates. 3. Reports of the Boards. 4. Election of officers. 5. Reports of ministers and churches. 6. Report of quarterly conference. 7. Examination of the standing of members. 8. Report of business committee. 9. Unfinished and new business.

LEGISLATION.

ART. IX. This conference shall have no legislative power over the churches, but be only advisory to them.

REPORTS.

ART. X. Sec. 1.—All preachers belonging to this conference shall be required to report personally, or by letter, at each annual session. Sec. 2.—All churches belonging to this conference shall be required to report by delegate, or letter, at each annual meeting.

AMENDMENT.

ART. XI. Sec. 1.—This constitution may be altered or amended at any regularly called annual meeting, by vote of two-thirds of the members present.

Sec. 2.—A standing committee of three on ordination shall be appointed at each annual meeting.

Sec. 3.—Each member in good standing in this conference shall receive annually a certificate of the same.

By vote, the executive board were constituted a standing campmeeting committee. The remaining time was spent in listening to the following preachers' reports: Brn. Ongley, Morrell, Walls, Blain, Hobbs, and Mrs. Jennings. A. C. West, delegate from So. Butler, also reported, when the time expired. Adjourned to private session.

Tuesday, four o'clock P. M. In private session—Vice President in the chair, the case of Bro. J. Wendell, as charged by the Associated Press, was investigated, himself being present. Bro. W. was unanimously exonerated from the specific charge, and received the following certificate, properly endorsed:

"To whom it may concern: The Advent Christian Conference of New York State, after examining the sworn evidence produced on the charge published by the Associated Press against Eld. Jonas Wendell, are happy to announce that the said charge utterly fails to be sustained. And, further, upon the confession of Bro. W. of a possible, though unintentional impropriety, or 'appearance of evil,' that we most freely forgive him, and trust that God forgives him.

Done at Albion, June 13th, 1871."

Wednesday, 8 o'clock A. M. Vice President in the chair. Applications were made by Springwater, Fremont and So. Butler, for the next quarterly meeting. It was voted to answer the call of So. Butler. W. J. Hobbs accepted the invitation to make the opening address; W. A. Fenn his alternate.

On motion, Mrs. L. M. Stoddard was unanimously invited to labor in this State. She was also received into membership, and received a preacher's certificate. W. A. Fenn and J. H. Whitmore were elected delegates to the National Ministerial Convention. Alternates: M. R. Miles and J. W. Taylor.

Voted, to supply the mission tent with boat lamps, lantern, and oil can. Voted, to allow A. A. Phelps to draw from the conference fund twenty dollars, with which to start the mission tent; after which it is expected the tent will be self-sustaining. Also voted ten dollars for tracts.

The ministers attending this conference have already been mentioned in the report of the Albion campmeeting. WM. E. BROWN, Sec.

Gems.

— As a very little dust will disorder a clock, and the least sand will obscure our sight, so the least grain of sin which is upon the heart will hinder its right motion toward God.

— Better it is to be careful to live well, than desirous to live long.

— Nothing is more contrary to the spirit of charity than rash and hasty censures.

— Humility and patience are the surest proofs of the increase of love.

The present, the present is all thou hast
For thy sure possessing;
Like the patriarch's angel, hold it fast
Till it gives its blessing.

— The calmness and cheerfulness of a bed-ridden christian have been made the means of carrying conviction to the heart shut against all the eloquence and appeals of the pulpit.

— If he who causes a blade of grass to spring up where none grew before is a blessing to the world, what praise shall be given him who creates a smile where flowed a tear?

— We have but one life to live, and we should be careful to make the very best possible use of it, seizing hold of every opportunity to find out the true objects and ends of our earthly existence, that we may secure those objects and ends, and so secure to ourselves the supreme good.

Since thy Father's hand sustains thee,
Peaceful be;
When a chastening hand restrains thee,
It is He.
Know his love in full completeness
Fills the measure of thy weakness;
If he wound the spirit sore,
Trust him more.

— When the heart is broken up by affliction, plant then the germinating seeds of holy comfort, and water them with the warm gushing sympathies of pure affection.

— He that speaks, sows; he that hears, reaps; hence we should be guarded as to how we speak, as to what we hear. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear;" but take heed how ye hear!"

— As a golden vase full of the most beautiful and fragrant flowers, so is a human heart when emptied of sin, and filled with the fruits of the Holy Spirit.

— The flock is not made for the shepherd, but the shepherd for the flock.

Go to the heart with sin oppressed,
And dry the sorrowing tear;
Extract the thorn that wounds the breast,
The drooping spirit cheer.

— Assist and relieve the wretched, for misfortunes may happen to yourself.

— Raise the fallen, that in case you should fall you may be raised.

— He must walk steadily who can walk safely on the brink of a precipice.

DANCING.

AS VIEWED BY THE WALDENSES WHO INHABITED PIEDMONT.

Dancing is the devil's procession, and he that enters into a dance, enters into his procession. The devil is the guide, the middle, and the end of the dance. As many paces as a man maketh in dancing, so many paces doth he make to go to hell. A man sinneth in dancing divers ways, for all his ways are numbered; in his touch, in his ornaments, in his hearing, sight, speech, and other vanities. And therefore we will prove, first by the Scripture, and afterwards by divers other reasons, how wicked a thing it is to dance.

The first testimony that we will produce, is that which we read in the gospel, where it is said it pleased Herod so well, that it cost John Baptist his life. The second is in Exodus, when Moses coming near to the congregation, saw the calf, he cast the tables from him, and broke them at the foot of the mountain; and afterwards it cost three thousand their lives. Besides, the ornaments which women wear in their dances are as crowns for many victories, which the devil hath got against the children of God; for the devil hath not only one sword in the dance, but as many as there are beautiful and well adorned persons in the dance; for the sword of a woman is a glittering sword. And therefore that place is much to be feared, wherein the enemy hath so many swords, since that only one sword may be justly feared.

Again, "The devil in this place strikes with a sharpened sword; for the women, who make it acceptable, come not willingly to the dance, if they be not painted and adorned; which painting and ornament is as a whetstone, on which the devil sharpeneth his sword. They that deck and adorn their daughters are like those that put dry wood to the fire, to the end it may burn the better; for such women kindle the fire of luxury in the hearts of men. As Sampson's foxes fired the Philistines' corn, so these women have fire in their faces, and in their gestures and actions, their glances and wanton words, by which they consume the goods of men." They proceed: "The devil in the dance, useth the strongest armor that he hath; for his most powerful arms are women; which is made plain unto us, in that the devil made choice of woman to deceive the first man; so did Balaam that the children of Israel might be rejected of God. By a woman he made Samson, David and Absolom to sin. The devil tempteth men by women in three manner of ways; that is, by the touch, by the eye, by the ear. By these three means he tempteth foolish men to dancing, by touching their hands, beholding their beauty, hearing their songs and music."

Again, "They that dance break that promise and agreement they made with God in baptism, when . . . they promised to renounce the devil and all his pomp; for dancing is the pomp of the devil; and he that danceth maintaineth his pomp, and singeth his praise. For the woman that singeth in the dance, is the prioress or chiefess of the devil; and those that answer are the clerks, and the beholders are the parishioners, and the music are the bells, and the fiddlers the ministers of the devil. For, as when hogs are strayed, if the hogherd calls one, all assemble themselves together; so the devil causeth one woman to sing in the dance, or to play on some instrument, and presently gather all the dancers together."

Again, "In a dance, a man breaks the ten commandments of God: as first, Thou shalt have no other Gods but me, etc., for in dancing a man serves that person whom he most desires to serve, after whom goes his heart; and therefore Jerome saith, 'Every man's God is that he loves best, which his thoughts wander and gad most after.' He sins against the second commandment when he makes an idol of that he loves. Against the third, in that oaths and frivolously using God's name, are frequently amongst dancers. Against the fourth, for that by dancing the Sabbath day is profaned. Against the fifth, for in the dance parents are many times dishonored, since thereby many bargains are made without their counsel. Against the sixth, a man kills in dancing; for every one that sets about to please another, he kills the soul as oft as he persuadeth unto lust. Against the seventh, for the party that danceth, be it male or female, committeth adultery with the party they lust after; for he that looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her in his heart. Against the eighth; a man sins in dancing when he withdraweth the heart of another from God. Against the ninth, when in dancing he speaks falsely against the truth, and for some little honor or secret lascivious end, denies what is true, or affirms what is false. Against the tenth, when women affect the ornaments of others, and men covet the wives, daughters, and servants of their neighbors, which undeniably attends all such plays and sports."

Again, "A man may prove how great an evil dancing is by the multitude of sins that accompany those who dance, for they dance without measure or number; and therefore saith Augustine, 'the miserable dancer knows not that as many paces as he makes in dancing, so many leaps he makes to hell.' They sin in their ornaments in a five-fold manner. First, by being proud thereof; secondly, by inflaming the hearts of men that behold them; thirdly, when they make those ashamed who have not the like ornaments, by giving them occasion to covet the like; fourthly, by making women importunate in demanding the like ornaments of their husbands; and fifthly, when they cannot obtain them of their husbands, they seek to get them elsewhere by sin. They sin by singing and playing on instruments; for their songs bewitch the hearts of men that hear them with temporal delight, forgetting God; uttering nothing in their their songs but lies and vanities; and the very motion of the body which is used in dancing, gives testimony enough of evil.

Thus you see, that dancing is the devil's procession; and he that enters into a dance, enters into his procession of dancing. The devil is the guide, the middle, and the end; and he that entereth into the dance a good and wise man, if it can be that such an one is either wise or good, cometh forth a corrupt and a wicked man. Sarah, that holy woman, was none of them."—Selected by Nelson H. Reed.

SHAKER THEOLOGY.—"Millions rely for their salvation upon the merits of Jesus. . . . In the death of Jesus there is no hope, only as he died unto sin; in his life there is endless progression for all who will pattern it."—"The Shaker."

All can see that on this point the Shakers and Spiritualists are one.—ED.

ONE DAY AT A TIME.—"Take no thought for the morrow," that is, no anxious, fretful thought. Walk through to-day as well as you can, and God will undertake for your future. When you go forward out of to-day, to worry about it, you are over the fence, you are trespassing, and God will scourge you back into your own lot. When I have been fishing in a mountain stream, I have always found that so long as I kept a short line I could manage my fishing very well; but when I let my line run out, the stream took it down, and there I was, at the mercy of every stick that stuck up in the stream, and every rock that jutted out from the banks. I lost my fish and I tangled my line; very likely I lost my footing also, and got over head and ears in the stream. Now, most men have cast out their line into life forty years long, when it ought to be but one day long. In consequence, they are not able to manage their tackle at all; but are pulled after it, stumbling first into this hole, and then into that; slipping up here, and slipping down there, struggling and splashing about in far more distressed fashion than the fish at the other end of the line—and, as a general thing, there is no fish there. Haul in your line!—Living Words.

THE LAMBS.—A gentleman was walking over his farm with a friend, exhibiting his crops, herds of cattle and flocks of sheep, with all of which his friend was highly pleased, but with nothing so much as his splendid sheep. He had seen the same breed frequently before, but had never seen such noble specimens—and with great earnestness he asked how he had succeeded in rearing such flocks. His simple answer was, "I take care of my lambs, sir." Here was all the secret. He took care of his lambs! Parent, teacher, do you take care of the lambs?

☞ GOD knows what keys in the human soul to touch, in order to draw out its sweeter and most perfect harmonies. They may be the minor strains of sadness and sorrow; they may be the loftier notes of joy and gladness. God knows where the melodies of our nature are, and what discipline will call them forth. Some with plaintive song must walk in the lowly vales of life's weary way; others in loftier hymns shall sing of nothing but joy, as they tread the mountain-tops of life; but they all unite without a discord or jar as the ascending anthem of loving and believing hearts finds its way into the chorus of the redeemed in heaven.

— THE great secret of christian usefulness is to be awake to opportunities, and intent on doing what we can, rather than bewailing that it is in our power to do so little; and, in this respect, he who faithfully improves the one talent, bids fair to be entrusted with the five or the ten talents.

RICH BOTH WAYS.

One day I was sitting in a large meeting of people, who had come together to promote a pious object. A father and his little girl sat near me. She was a bright looking, curly-headed girl, about nine years old, and seemed much interested in all about her.

"O, father!" I heard her say, "there's Carrie Morton!" and she looked in his face with an arch and knowing smile, "O, she's so good," she continued, "she's rich both ways."

What could the child mean? I wished to know. Her father seemed also in doubt what kind of riches she had in mind as belonging to Carrie, and I listened for the answer, when he asked, "How is that, Katie? what do you mean by being 'rich both ways?'"

"Why, father, she has nice clothes, and her parents have plenty of money, and live in a large house, so she's rich one way; and the girls at the school all love her, for she is always so gentle and kind, so she is rich in another way."

Her father smiled, and so did I; but the proceedings of the meeting now began, and the conversation ended.

Would you not rather be rich in the love of those who know you, and most of all in the love of God, than rich in money, but poor in all the rest? Dear children, if God has given you a home, where your every wish is gratified, remember that at last you must give an account to him for such a home, and ask him to make you rich in both ways—rich in the love of Jesus, and in the hope of heaven. But if you are not rich in clothes and money, remember that a meek and quiet spirit, and a loving, trusting heart, are ornaments more precious than diamonds and pearls.

DO YOU HAPPEN TO KNOW?

Do you happen to know?—
Somebody surely told me so—
That some one was angry in school to-day,
And sulked, and pouted, and turned away
When asked to "make up" and come back to play;
Somebody said, but I don't know who,
That little some one was certainly you.
I really wonder if it was so?
Do you happen to know?

And somebody told
Of a little girl, just seven years old,
Who wanted to roll her hoop and play
Out in the garden one sunny day;
But when her sick little brother said,
"Nellie, please read to me instead,"
Gave up her wish with a cheerful look,
And instantly ran for her story-book.
Somebody said they certainly knew
That good little sister was none but you,
And I believe it was really so;
Do you happen to know?

ALPHABET OF PROVERBS.—A grain of prudence is worth a pound of craft.

Boasters are cousins to liars.

Confession of faults makes half amends.

Denying a fault doubles it.

Envy shooteth at others and woundeth herself. Foolish fears double dangers.

God reaches us good things by our hands.

He has hard work who has nothing to do.

It costs more to avenge wrongs than to bear them.

Knavery is the worst trade.

Learning makes a man fit company for himself.

Modesty is a guard to virtue.

Not to hear conscience is the way to silence it.

One hour to-day is worth two to morrow.

Proud looks make foul work on fair faces.

Quiet conscience gives sweet sleep.

Richest is he that wants least.

Small faults indulged are little thieves that let in greater.

The boughs that bear most bend lowest.

Virtue and happiness are mother and daughter.

Wise men make more opportunities than they find.

You never lose by doing a good turn.

Zeal without knowledge is fire without light.

THE RIGHT IDEA OF PRAYER.—A little boy once heard a clergyman preach from the text, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." After reading the text, he stopped a minute, and asked his hearers to consider what it was they should like most, and then to ask for it in Jesus' name, trusting to his promise that it would be given to them. At the end of the service, the little boy asked his aunt if she had asked for anything. Then she asked him what he had asked God to give him; and he said, "I thought first of one thing I should like, and then another; but I did not know which would be best to ask; and so I said, 'Father, thy will be done.'"

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

DRINKING ICE-WATER.

"Drink ice-water sparingly," is an important maxim to every person in summer. Experience shows that in order to quench the thirst, a little cool drink accomplishes quite as much as a large quantity. The hotter the day, the less should the stomach be loaded either with food or drink. A little observation will show the rule to be a good one both in respect of comfort and health. Let any one who doubts this try the following experiments, each for the six working days of a week of hot weather:

1. Every other day eat largely and drink moderately, and on the alternate days eat and drink sparingly.

2. Every other day drink largely and eat moderately, and on alternate days, as before, eat and drink sparingly.

3. Every other day eat and drink largely, and on the alternate days do both sparingly. The result of the experiments will show that in each case the alternate days when the stomach is least burdened the comfort is greatest, and the days when the stomach is loaded with the full meal and the largest amount of drink, the greatest discomfort is experienced.

"But what shall be done to quench the thirst in the hot days?" Drink only a little at a time. If the water is cold, a swallow or two will generally prove sufficient. When the sense of thirst returns take another swallow, and so on. Bits of ice kept in the mouth or chewed until they melt, are much better than copious draughts of water. When the sensation of thirst is felt, delay quenching it as long as may be conveniently done. Try all this and test it for yourselves.—Home and Health.

SUNSTROKE.

The usual exciting cause of sunstroke is exposure to the direct rays of the sun, generally in connection with great exhaustion of the bodily powers. It sometimes occurs without the direct agency of the sun. The principal predisposing cause is the use of alcoholic stimulants. Enfeebled, poorly fed, over-worked, and irritable persons are also somewhat liable to it. I never yet have known of a single instance of sunstroke occurring to a person who neither used alcoholic stimulants or tobacco, and who was regular and temperate in his habits. As special precautions during hot weather, the entire body, including the head, should be bathed daily in cool or cold water; great care should be taken not to wear anything around the neck so as to impede the circulation in the least, and the covering of the head should be light and porous, so that the air can circulate freely through it. Those who obey the laws of health, need have no fear of sunstroke. The treatment of sunstroke should vary somewhat according to the condition of the patient. In all cases he should be removed to a cool and shady place, and the clothing stripped from his body. If the head is hot, cold water or ice should be kept constantly applied to the head and neck, and hot water to the hands and feet. If the skin is cool and moist, the entire surface of the body should be vigorously and continuously rubbed until reaction takes place. If the skin is hot and dry, then the whole body should be rubbed with cloths wet in the coldest water that can be obtained, or with pieces of ice, until recovery takes place, as it almost invariably will under this treatment. Bleeding in such cases, as practised by many, is almost certain death.—Herald of Health.

HOW ONE GIRL IMPROVED HER HEALTH.—And not one only, but thousands are to-day growing healthy by reading the Laws, and trying to live out the ideas therein taught. This letter is but a specimen of such as we are constantly receiving; but this one is enough to encourage one other to try.

"ALBANY, N. Y., April 22, 1871.

Miss Austin:—I prize the Laws so much, that I look forward eagerly to the time when it will come. I am much pleased with the hand-mill I obtained from you, also with the books. I have changed my manner of living; have given up tea and coffee, meat, pastry, butter, spices, and every other article of food which you disapprove, and which I formerly indulged in largely. I now eat Graham gems with fruit, and simply cooked vegetables, and my health is very much improved. I can hardly realize that I am the same girl who was so sick and miserable one short year ago. My friends have laughed at me, and many laugh yet; but I do not mind, for I am proving to them every day that my way is the best way. Yours truly, JENNIE H."

THE EAR-ACHE.—Generally heat is the best remedy. Apply a warm poultice or warm oil to the ear. Rub the back of the ear with warm laudanum. In case of a foeted discharge, carefully syringe the ear with warm milk and water. In all cases keep the ear thoroughly cleansed. Relief is often given by rubbing the back of the ear with a little hartshorn and water.

A HINT TO CONSUMPTIVES.—A physician of no little experience says he has known several consumptive patients cured by observing the following rule: Live temperately, avoid spirituous liquors, wear flannel next the skin, and take every morning half a pint of new milk, mixed with a wine-glassful of expressed juice of green hoarhound.

HOW TO TREAT A STY.—The sty is a small boil protruding from the eyelid. It will usually pass away of itself, but its cure may be hastened by applying a warm poultice of bread and water in a small linen bag. Apply three or four times a day, and each time foment the eye with warm milk and water.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth: especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

MORNING HYMN.

Like this sweet sunshine let thy love
Shine down on me to-day,
Shelter my soul, thou brooding Dove,
Like these warm skies, I pray.

There is no brightness in the earth,
No glory in the sky,
No peace in rest, no joy in mirth,
Except when thou art nigh.

Then, Lord, all day be near my soul,
And look me through and through,
Till every wish owns thy control,
And every thought is true.

As earth turns blossoming towards the sun,
So seeks my soul Thy light;
This day be heaven in me begun,
Where there is no more night.

SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

The coming of Christ will be the greatest event that the world has ever witnessed. The awful grandeur and glory of that day, will infinitely surpass anything that the finite mind is capable of conceiving. Prophets, apostles, and saints in all ages, have looked forward to that day with the profoundest interest. At the present day, the children of God are waiting patiently for their Lord and King.

Though it is not essential to our salvation to know the time of his coming, yet the Lord has told us to "watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come... Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh."—Matt. 24: 42, 44. These words are very applicable to us, who are now living in this wonderful and eventful age. "But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night."—1 Thess. 5; 1, 2. "Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition."—2 Thess. 2: 3. These words of the apostle have been literally fulfilled in this nineteenth century. Jesus did not reprove his disciples for asking the question with regard to the signs of his coming, and the end of the world; but said, "Take heed that no man deceive you."—Matt. 24: 4. He cautioned them, and then told them the awful state the world would be in before his coming, and said, "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only. But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."—Matt. 24: 36, 37.

He never said one word about the millennium, as modern professors do at the present day, who are waiting for the world to be converted, and imagine they are living on the eve of that day; but said, "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" Here is where the Gentile world will be deceived in the second coming of Christ, as the Jews were in his first coming. Christ will find a few that are waiting and living for him when he comes; but oh, how precious few they will be in comparison with the masses that are unsaved!

Christ saw the awful state the world would be in just before his coming. He saw that they would be covetous, grasping, and seeking for position and honor; connecting themselves with secret societies and organizations of various kinds, so that he was led to ask the question, "Shall he find faith?" There is no room for faith to work, where men and ministers are trusting in secret societies, wealth and position; faith is dead, with nothing but skin and bones hanging to it. Why! it does not even compare with the faith of the devils; for they "believe and tremble." It means something to have faith in God. A man who is trusting in God is not trusting in anything else. Take property, friends, reputation, and all that he has, from him—yes, and his life—and he is trusting in God, and is like "Mount Zion that cannot be removed." God can do as he pleases with him; he is living for God and doing all the good he possibly can. His life is a life of faith on the Son of God; and when "Christ who is his life shall appear, then shall he also appear with him in glory."

The Lord let the beloved Paul have a view of the awful state of things that should be on the earth just before his coming. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy; without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away."—2 Tim. 3: 1–5.

This is a correct representation of the present day. There never was a time when people loved worldly pleasures more than they do now, especially professors of religion. Talk to them about the power, and they will scout at the idea. Talk money to them—they know what that means; talk theatre, tea-meetings, festivals and fashions, and they are right at home with you on that subject. But the power—the real life of God in the soul—they are strangers to. And the real child of God is as much of a wonder to-day as ever. It requires as much grace and courage to live for God, as in the days when the bloody ax and the torturing wheel were the test of every man's religion.

Yes, Christ is coming very soon; for he says, "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give to every man according as his work shall be."—Rev. 22: 12. He is coming to take his children home. "Then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. 24: 30, 31. This will be the end of their sorrows, and the beginning of their eternal joys. "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all the kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen."—Rev. 1: 7.

Children of the Most High, look up and regulate your life in view of this glorious day! Worldly professors do not like to hear much about the coming of Christ; but God's children do, and so did the apostles; for they referred to it in almost all their epistles,—they kept it fresh in their minds, and it was a glorious incentive to a holy and useful life. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself." 1 John 3: 2, 3. Oh, glorious hope! big with immortality.

Christ is coming quickly, to avenge his children who call on him day and night. "Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day." 2 Thess 1: 6–10.

He is coming soon—much sooner than many of us expect. He told John to "seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book; for the time is at hand." Rev. 22: 10. The world is growing old with age, and ripe for the judgment fires. The armies of heaven are preparing for this great and glorious day:

"Great triumph day of God's incarnate Son—
Great day of glory to the Almighty God;
Day whence the everlasting years begun
Their date, new era in eternity,
And oft referred to in the songs of heaven."

Christ is coming as a mighty conqueror. He has conquered death, hell, and the grave, and ascended up on high and led captivity captive. "Behold, he cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him." The busy world will be suddenly startled at the unexpected appearance of Jesus Christ in the clouds. Behold, he cometh; not as the once despised Nazarene, and the man of sorrows acquainted with grief, but as the "King of kings, and the Lord of Lords," and as the "Judge of the quick and the dead." "Our God shall come and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people." Psalm 1: 3, 4.

Stop, dear reader, just a moment. Are you living and regulating your life in view of this "great and terrible day of the Lord"? This will be the day that is to end the affairs of this world, and to determine the destiny of all mankind. Have you a living faith in God and not in circumstances, but a faith that overcomes the world, the devil and the flesh? Are you kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation? Are you living a holy, useful life, and doing all you can to win souls to Christ, and to help on the cause of God? "He that winneth souls is wise." Death will surely overtake us soon, and this will be the coming of Christ to us. And should we fall asleep in death, it will not be long before the trump of God will sound, and we must all march to the "judgment-seat of Christ." "And every eye shall see him." "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17. "Behold, I show you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52.

Oh, glorious and happy change! Behold him, ye followers of the Lamb, and wonder and love. This is he, who bore all your iniquities on the ignominious cross. This is he, who fulfilled all righteousness for your justification. Behold him, ye despisers of his grace, and perish. This is he, whose merciful overtures you have contemned, and on whose precious blood you have trampled. You would not give Christ the pre-eminence in your heart, but now he comes to gain it by conquest. Christ will come with a shout, and every living creature will hear it, and the trump of God will sound, and that will shake the pillars of heaven and startle the dungeon of hell; and the sleeping millions will hear that sound and understand what it means, and come forth—"they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation."

The world moves on, and has for several thousand years, and the coming of Christ to many has become an old fable; and the apostle Peter says, "Beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance: . . . knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation... But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." 2 Peter 3: 1, 3, 10.

Dear reader, what a dreadful day this will be for you if you are unsaved! And oh, what consternation and excitement will seize the guilty world then! All business, of every description, stops at once; every establishment closes for the last time; no more buying and selling; all the busy marts have closed. No idle spectators looking on now, but every living soul that God has made is tremendously interested. They had no time for these things once, but now they must take time. Every thing of an earthly nature sinks into insignificance. The children of God have been living for this day, and they are prepared to meet it with triumph and joy. All earthly pomp and display sink into contempt. The rich and noble—where are they now? They, with the multitudes, are trembling and frantic with fear, and rushing here and there in wild amazement, looking for escape. But, alas! alas! escape is hopeless. "And the heavens departed as a scroll when it is rolled together, and every mountain and island were moved out of their places. And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every freeman, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb. For the great day of his wrath hath come, and who shall be able to stand?" Rev. 6: 14–16.

The uprisings of nations, and the downfall of kingdoms and empires; the dethronement of the man of sin, the Pope, and his right-hand man, Napoleon, and the turbulent state that mankind are in, and the dreadful corruption of both church and state,—are fulfillments of the word of God. Lastly, but not least, that long looked for and expected day, the gathering of the Jews to Jerusalem, is another blessed event in the world's history, and is a forerunner of that great and glorious day which is about to dawn upon us. "He which testifieth these things saith, Surely, I come quickly: Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen." Rev. 22: 20, 21.—W. Fell, in Earnest Christian.

"OCCUPY TILL I COME."

E. L. SITLER.

Time is passing rapidly, and soon the angel will proclaim it shall be no longer. And he whose name is Faithful and True, shall reward every man, and woman, too, according to their works.

It is not required of all to be pastors, but all may preach the gospel by their lives. It is the duty of some to go to heathen lands to tell of Jesus' power to save the lost. It is the duty of others to stand up and preach the word to assembled multitudes, while others are required to go out into the highways and hedges, and tell of Jesus' love. Others are not required to do this, but they are surrounded by their families, and should be faithful to them by living lives consistent with their prayers. A good example furnishes an unanswerable argument, and an irresistible appeal. Happy they whose lives give power to their words, and speak even without words.

"No act falls fruitless; none can tell
How vast its power may be,
For what results unfolded dwell
Within it silently."

Many think because they have not the talents of some gifted brother or sister, they can do nothing. We have frequently heard persons say, "If I could talk like such an one, I would not hesitate to do my duty; but it is such a cross, and others can talk with so much more power than I." From whence came that power? It is the gift of God. Without him we can do nothing. Open your mouth, and the Lord will speak through you, and sinners will be brought to Christ through your faithfulness.

We heard of a sister who at one time took a brother aside and began to talk to him tenderly. For a time he steeled his heart, and all her appeal seemed vain, till at last she burst into tears and told him he might go. In relating his experience afterwards, said he, "Those tears touched my heart. I was too proud to let her know she had made any impression, but I went from her presence fully resolved to abandon my evil course."

We have gifts differing. Some have much of this world's goods, and can advance the cause of Christ by contributing of their means. The minister of Christ must be supported, for "the laborer is worthy of his hire." We would not be understood to say that one who preaches a sermon once or twice on the Sabbath should be encouraged to sit down in idleness the remainder of the time. But one who is actively engaged in the service of Christ, spends his time, his talents, and all his energies in trying to win sinners to Christ. Such should have the sympathies of the church. We have known some poor people to give one-half of their hard-earned money to the Lord, and they did it cheerfully, while others whom we know, who have many broad acres, and much merchandise, and gold and silver, give grudgingly and sparingly; while others give nothing at all; and yet they profess to be the Lord's children. "Go to now; ye rich men, weep and howl for the miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days."

May we all be faithful, that when He shall come we may hear the welcome plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

AT THE SUPPER.

Over my spirit stealing,
So gently, softly healing,
Come the riches of His precious grace;
Like the softened light on the weary sight,
Watching the dawning break after the night,
Falls the pure beam of his righteousness.

Tenderly He enters in,
Easing all the pains of sin,
Freely forgiving the wayward past;
All the wearing ill now yields to his will,
And its waves at his voice grow calm and still;
While not a cloud o'er my sky is cast.

I love to remember Him,
Even though my sight is dim,
And sin has beclouded my vision.
Remember He died, for me crucified,
The thorns, the blood, and the riven side,
And the bars of death's gloomy prison.

Remember the Son of God,
How he passed under the rod,
Bearing the sin and shame of my life;
How sweet is the thought, to me he has brought
The love of my Father, the home where naught
Can enter in of sorrow or strife.

Remember Him with the wine
And the bread; Savior divine,
These are the symbols to memory dear,
Thy loving hand blessed, are to thy lips pressed
The cup of God's wrath, 'mid the scorn and jest
Of the crowd, and the penitent's tear.

HE WILL BE KING.

C. PIKE.

Hundreds of years have passed since that holy prophet of God was moved by the spirit of prophecy to utter the following language, which has so often cheered the faithful watchman on the walls of Zion, and comforted the weary pilgrim on his way to the celestial city. It was from the sacred pen of Isaiah that these words came, filled with the power of the holy One, energizing all those who might read—"Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty; they shall behold the land that is very far off." Doubtless the prophet was anticipating a glorious time, when all the righteous nation should arise in regal beauty, and bursting the bands of mortality join in crowning the Babe of Bethlehem "King of kings and Lord of lords."

To the prophet this event was far in the distance, but to many who are living to-day it appears to be very near. The prophet no doubt expected to sleep the sleep of death ere that event transpired; yet he was not without hope, as we shall see by reading the nineteenth verse of the twenty-sixth chapter of his prophecy—"Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell [or sleep] in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out her dead." This same prophet had uttered another prophecy which must have its fulfillment as truly as the the above. Isa. 9: 6—"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder. . . . . Of the increase of his government there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform it." The child has been born (a literal child, not a spiritual one); the son has been given (a literal son, not spiritual); but the government has not yet been upon his shoulder, nor has he reigned upon the throne of his father David.

Many may be ready to dispute this assertion, but we think we can convince you of this fact, as we glance at a few instances in the life of Christ. We will first look at him in the stable. "Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the king, behold there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east and are come to worship him." It was doubtless the design of Herod in sending these men of the east to search for Christ, to put him to death, as he had become convinced by the miraculous appearance of the star, that some great personage was born into the world, and probably would be king. Being moved with envy, he strove with all his powers to take the life of the babe. But God thwarted all his plans, and kept the spotless Christ under the angel's care. Egypt must be his dwelling-place till after the death of Herod, which was revealed to Joseph by an angel sent from the heavenly courts above. Archelaus reigns in his stead. Joseph is aware of the fact, and dares not return to Judea lest the same spirit should be manifested by Archelaus as by Herod.

So leaving Egypt, that father and mother, who carried the destiny of the human family, wander over in the country of Galilee, and dwell in a certain city called Nazareth, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled which were spoken by the prophets, "He shall be called a Nazarene." The child waxed strong in spirit, and at the age of twelve years is found asking and answering questions which astonished the wise men with whom he conversed. There is but little said of Christ from the age of twelve, until we hear John saying to those who were standing by, "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world." John 1: 29. "Then came Jesus to John to be baptized"; but John forbade him, on the ground that he was not worthy to baptize a person so much greater than himself. "I have need to be baptized of thee; and comest thou to me? Suffer it to be so now," was Christ's reply, that he might fulfill all righteousness and keep the law, thus making the law honorable, showing to those living under the law that it was a schoolmaster to bring them to him. He kept the law, even the law of Cæsar. He made no laws, and signed none. He passed no edicts, and executed none up to this date; thus we conclude he could not have been king, nor could he have been filling the office of a king.

We now find him filling the office of a servant, a preacher of the word of God, and, as many said of Paul, a setter forth of strange doctrine, which was nothing else than the gospel of the kingdom to which he was heir. It was a strange doctrine to be teaching the people, that his kingdom was not of this world of sin and sorrow, but when he appears in his beauty, then his kingdom is to begin; then he is to sit upon the throne of his father David on the renewed earth. A strange doctrine indeed to preach, that "when the Son of man shall come in his glory, . . . then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Matt. 25: 31.

So, many who believe at the present day that Christ is reigning in the hearts of his children, and that he is now crowned king, think it a strange doctrine to teach, that Christ is to have the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, in connection with his saints. But, taking this view of the subject, we can fully understand the following language—"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Matt. 25: 31. And again Paul, in giving his charge to Timothy, advances the same idea: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom; preach the word." 1 Tim. 4: 1. Christ will appear in his beauty at the end of this age, when the saints shall behold him in glory arrayed.

We will now call your attention to the fact that Christ has not yet appeared in his beauty, as was predicted by Isaiah. And this you will see by comparing the following with the birth, life, and death of Christ—"For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of dry ground. He hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him." Isa. 53: 2. But the same prophet says—"Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty." Hence as the King has not come in his beauty, but in his humility, as "a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief," he must yet come. "He was oppressed, and he was afflicted. . . . He was brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth." Isa. 53: 7.

Look at him in the garden of Gethsemane, bowed down by the sins of the whole world, sweating as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground. Follow him from there to that upper chamber with his disciples. Hear him as he declares unto them that he will not drink henceforth of the fruit of the vine, until he drink with them in his Father's kingdom, which will be the time he will appear to reign on David's throne. Behold Judas betraying him with a kiss, while the wicked rabble lay hold on him and take him away to Caiaphas the high priest, where the Scribes and elders were assembled, ready to give their voice against the Son of God. He is brought to trial and condemned to die, but this is not enough; he must be tantalized. They spit in his face, and buffeted him; and others smote him with the palms of their hands, saying, "Prophesy who smote thee, if thou be the Christ." What king would suffer this without some one to take his part? He is taken into the common hall; the whole band of ruffians gather around; they strip him, and put on a scarlet robe. And when they have platted a crown of thorns they put it upon his head, and in his right hand a reed. They bow the knee before him, saying, "Hail, king of the Jews." This comes the nearest to being crowned king of anything we have seen yet. Thus all the robe of royalty he ever wore was a mock robe. His crown was a crown of thorns pressed down upon his brow, until the blood ran down his sacred face. His reed is not such a reed as he shall one day sway over the nations of earth; but it shall be a rod of iron by which he shall dash the wicked nations in pieces as a potter's vessel. Ps. 2. This will be when he appears in his beauty, and when he shall sit upon his father David's throne, which has never been done up to this time. It will be when the kingdoms of this world, not of heaven, or of some other world, shall become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ.

Christ is our high priest at present, and until his work as a high priest is accomplished, he will not be crowned king. He could not have begun his reign at the pouring out of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost; for we read that when the saints take the kingdom, with Christ at their head, all dominions shall serve and obey him. Dan. 7: 27. It is plain to be seen that all dominions do not serve and obey him now; therefore he is not reigning. The stone has not smitten the image upon its feet yet (Dan. 2: 34), nor has the God of heaven set up a kingdom on the ruins of these earthly kingdoms, as recorded in Daniel 2: 44.

Although the King has been crucified and buried, yet he lives. Death could not hold him, for he was to be king. Soon he will come and claim his purchased possession; heaven will retain him but a little while, when upon his vesture and on his thigh will be seen written — KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.

OBEDIENCE.—No. 3.

O. R. FASSETT.

Obedience is better than good, great, and meritorious deeds. "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Many a preacher of the gospel, many a successful pastor and powerful evangelist, an expounder of the word and prophecies, possessed of magnetic powers, irresistible will, great faculties, or commanding talent and attractive eloquence, has done many wonders, and been the means of convincing and saving many by the truth they preached, and yet they themselves will be "castaways," being weighed in the balances and found wanting in the true allegiance of their own stubborn hearts. Many a private professor, who may have prided himself in some great things which he has done,—how he has battled for the truth, exposed heresy, confounded in argument the gainsayers, and done many wonderful and benevolent deeds,—may be found at last to have had but a mere heated, boastful, bigoted, sectarian, and unsanctified zeal, without one particle of the love of Christ in his heart, or an obedient will to the Supreme; and to whom Christ will say at the last great day—"I never knew you; depart from me." Alas! how many will be surprised at the issues of that day. See Luke 13: 24–27. With all our good deeds and works, there must be humble obedience, glorying only in the Lord. And let me add—

Obedience is better than knowledge, or the hearing of the word of God. "Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth." 1 Cor. 8: 1. "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock." Matt. 7: 24–27. "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." James 1: 22–26. Thousands, yea, tens of thousands in this age of "the form of godliness," are in the constant and regular attendance on the appointed means of grace. Sunday after Sunday they go to church, and hear the word more or less faithfully preached, and their duties made known to them. This is well. None should stay away from religious service, or let pass the opportunities for obtaining religious good. But these "hearers of the word" go no further, and therein is their great sin. They hear, but they do not obey. And they finally perish and go down to destruction, from the very gate of heaven! It is fearful to trifle thus with christian privileges. The danger is in being "hardened through unbelief," until at last they are disposed to "change the truth of God into a lie." Rom. 1: 25. Or "because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." 2 Thess. 2: 10, 11.

The steps of disobedience are downward in moral obliquity, degradation, vice, and crime often, and are sure death in the end! "Be doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Rev. 22: 14.

PRAYER AND SUBMISSION.

The safety and well being of the world lies in God's will being sovereign in all things. He requires of us, that in all our praying we shall humbly and sincerely say, "Not my will, but thine, be done." If we do not, there are many cases in which our prayers cannot possibly be answered, since they run counter to God's purposes. But they can every one be answered, if we will accept as an ample return whatever God may be pleased to give or do.

Paul prayed that his "thorn" might be taken away; but instead of taking it away, God gave him grace sufficient to enable him to endure and profit by it. David prayed that his child's life might be spared; but God took it. Yet neither Paul nor David was not answered; for they both got an equivalent, more than an equivalent, for the things ungranted; the one in God's gift, and the other in God's act. So they both felt. If, however, their hearts had been too stubborn to accept these as an answer, they could have had none.

These cases illustrate the constant occurrences of God's dealing with his people. We desire health, and God enables us cheerfully to endure sickness. We want comfortable circumstances, and he teaches us to trust him in need. We want prosperity, and he sustains us in adversity. If we would learn how not to lose any of our prayers, we must learn heartily to ask, not for the thing we wish, but for the thing we need. If we are not able to rejoice in God's way, we are not fit to have our own. The height of grace is to make God's choice ours.—Advance.

— One of the principal rules of religion is, to lose no occasion of serving God. And, since he is invisible to our eyes, we are to serve him in our neighbor; which he receives as if done to himself in person, standing visibly before us.

THE FAMILY MEETING.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

In the course of time the children of one family often become widely separated, and only meet at long intervals—perhaps at a funeral, or on some chance occasion. The father and mother may remain at the old homestead, while their children have gone, some in one direction, some in another; most of them having families of their own, bound by new ties and new interests to new localities. How pleasant and desirable, under such circumstances, for all the scattered members to come together in a family meeting, around the ancient fireside, and unite in friendly converse, and all that goes to make up the highest and purest joys of social reunion. But usually these family gatherings are incomplete, and the enjoyment is marred by sad and bitter reflections. Death has made a breach in the circle, or some are detained by sickness, or something still worse may have covered one with disgrace and infamy.

But we are looking forward to a family meeting at which every member will be present, and where there will be nothing to mar the perfect bliss and complete felicity of the occasion. Our Father is the great King, and his royal mandate has gone forth, saying "to the north Give up, and to the south, Keep not back; bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth; even every one that is called by my name; for I have created him for my glory." Isa. 43: 6, 7.

Yes, every son and daughter, every brother and sister, every friend of Jesus will be there. Not one of the obedient and faithful loving band will be absent. Reader, will you be there? The invitation is general; "whosoever will" let him come. Yet not every one who is "called" will accept the invitation. Will you come? Then get ready without delay. The time for the great meeting is near. Jesus and all his friends will be there. Then we shall ——"stand secure on the glorified shore,

Glory to God! we shall shout evermore,
We're home at last, home at last."

DENYING CHRIST.

S. C. GOVE.

"But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." Matt. 10: 33.

We expect, dear brethren, that men of the world, and some even who have professed to be followers of Jesus, and have got entangled with the affairs of this life, will to a great extent deny their Lord, and thereby bring a reproach upon his cause. It is lamentable to see any who have professed the blessed cause we love so dearly, assemble in public worship and not feel any desire to witness a word for their Master. Of such we feel to say they are denying the Lord instead of denying themselves. I do not write this to censure any, but to urge the simple duty of self-examination, in order that we may exhibit the spirit of our Master, and "not to forget the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but to exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching."

It is a sin to deny the Lord, but not a sin to deny Satan. We should deny all worldly lusts, in order to have the approval of God's dear Son, and not be ashamed to testify to the world, which is watching us continually, that our hope is in Jesus and the resurrection from the dead. Whenever we have opportunity let us keep in mind the words of the blessed Savior, as recorded in Mark 8: 38—"Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels."

Some deny their Lord by neglecting family worship; some by encouraging the sinful practice of only speaking when they are in meeting; and then by their daily walk and conversation of light and airy talk while out of meeting. Such is the case I find with very many, and no wonder the professor wonders why the sinner and backslider will not come to God. "Why, where is their pattern?" they say; "you profess and deny, and therefore we cannot see as we shall be any better by professing." This we hear almost every day, at least when we try to encourage sinners to seek the "pearl of great price."

When one of our brethren will not do duty, but stands a bold, unflinching drone, inactive in the service of God, it causes grief and discourages the active ones. Some deny by excuses, such as—"I cannot talk like Bro. A or Sr. S; I have not the influence they have." This ought not to hinder any, because you cannot do as well as some others; does not lessen your duties you owe to God—not in the least. Let your voice be always heard in the congregation praising the Lord. Be not afraid to speak because some may not like to hear, or for fear some may laugh and scorn you. "For they who would live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution"; but, bless his name, his promise is—"If we suffer, we shall also reign with him; but if we deny him, he also will deny us."

Let us not be a rock of stumbling to any, but study to show ourselves worthy of the profession whereby we are called, always speaking words of comfort, and pointing sinners to the Lamb of God that taketh away our sins, and live so that we shall win precious souls into the fold of God, knowing that "he which converteth a sinner from the error of his ways shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." Jas. 5: 20.

— God is known by loving him; for the heart that loves him, will obey him, and receive him into itself; and it is infinitely pleasing to the divine Being to communicate as much of his own knowledge and bliss to all of his loving and obedient creatures as they are capacitated to receive.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

At a meeting of the committee held on the camp-ground, June 7th, it was voted that our annual meeting this year commence Saturday, Aug. 19th, and continue over the 27th. Particulars hereafter.

Geo. T. Adams, Secretary.

TREMONT CAMPMEETING.

FARE REDUCED.

Tickets for this meeting at reduced rates, to be had of Geo. T. Adams, at this office. Fare to go and return, $1.90,—good July 24th to 31st.

ROUND LAKE CAMPMEETING.

The location of the Round Lake campmeeting is very fine. It is about midway between Troy and Saratoga, N. Y. The ground contains sixty acres, and is owned by an Association of Christian men. The grove is a very pleasant one, nicely shaded with pine, hemlock, beach, chestnut and maple trees. The placid Round Lake on the border of the ground adds much to the charms of the charming spot. We have never seen before a campground which, in all respects, pleased us so well. The arrangements for supplying the camp with water are the best we have ever seen. In the heart of the camp is a fountain some fifteen feet in diameter, surrounded by a chain and eight posts, with cups attached, from which is constantly flowing pure, cool drinking water. At other localities are water tanks, from which water is drawn for the use of the encampment. The ground is laid out quite regularly, with avenues encircling it, and streets radiating from the centre. There are over forty very neat cottages, and a bookstore, in which is a post office, and over which is the office of the Trustees. A watchman lives on the ground to take care of the property. The Troy Methodist Conference holds its annual campmeeting at this place.

The National campmeeting for those interested in the doctrine of holiness met at this place in 1869, and again this year, beginning July 4th, and ending July 14th. The first meeting of the kind was held in Vineland, N. J., in 1867. Seeing the low state of religious interest, some earnest, bold soldiers of the cross, met and prayed together in Philadelphia, and resolved to have a campmeeting expressly for the purpose of arousing the church to a consideration of the solemn fact, that without holiness "no man shall see the Lord." Greater interest was manifested in the first meeting than was expected, and has rapidly increased, so that it required some five hundred tents to accommodate the people this year. The campmeeting association, which owns and controls the grounds, at Round Lake, gave the free use of it for this national meeting, which was one of special interest. We spent July 6th, 7th, 11th, 12th and 13th on the ground, as a close observer, and feel it duty to say that we received much benefit. Indeed, we do not see how any one who loves Christ, could be in that meeting long, without being refreshed. It was not confined to the Methodist, but Baptist, Presbyterian, Dutch Reformed and Advent preachers shared in the exercises and blessings. There was a oneness of spirit in the meeting like what we enjoyed in campmeetings twenty-eight years ago, when members of the various churches first received the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus. Then, the expected event led to entire consecration to Christ; but during the long waiting, many have grown cold, worldly-minded, and have left their first love. While this has been true in relation to those who have been looking and waiting for the coming of our Savior, those who have been opposed to the doctrine have gone into the spirit of the world much more rapidly, until many have become alarmed at the state of things, and being prompted by the Spirit of God, they have been led to consecrate all to the Lord by an everlasting covenant. As a result, they have been filled with perfect love and peace. At the Round Lake meeting, we found a large number in this happy condition. Their conversation, their spirit, their manners, their dress, and the expression of their countenances, all testify to the fact, so sweetly expressed in their testimonies, that they had truly given all for Jesus. The work of consecration was not merely on the surface, but down deep in the heart. We were rejoiced to see and hear what we did at Round Lake. We have rarely seen men and women so fully devoted to Christ.

THE MEETINGS.

At five every morning, a prayer-meeting was held in the tabernacle tent, which is one hundred and forty feet long, and eighty feet wide, which will hold three thousand people. This tent was hired of Bro. Fields, of Rochester. The National campmeeting committee have a tent one hundred and thirty-five feet long and ninety feet wide, covering about a thousand more square feet. Their tabernacle used last spring and early summer in California, and Salt Lake City, did not arrive in season to be used at Round Lake. It It was made in Philadelphia, and cost about two thousand dollars.

At these morning prayer-meetings might be seen from one thousand to fifteen thousand devout worshipers. We think it is very rare that any one has the privilege of attending better meetings than those. The testimonies, prayers and experiences came from hearts warm with the love of God. It was old-fashioned Methodism in earnest. These meetings continued till breakfast, at 7 o'clock.

In some of their meetings there was a remarkable manifestation of the power of the Holy Spirit, such as is seldom witnessed. A large number consecrated themselves entirely to Christ, and received great peace. Many were converted, besides between sixty and seventy children. We have never seen christian men and women more engaged in the service of the Lord. Holiness of heart is their leading, and all-absorbing theme. It is a movement in the right direction. When the heart is clean, and filled with the Spirit of God, love for the appearing of Jesus necessarily follows. We met there several preachers who are very much interested in the speedy coming of Christ. These meetings afford bright omens. It looks like getting ready for "the marriage of the Lamb." For some years we have been expecting some movement that would unite all the true children of the Lord. Holiness of heart will do it. If the heart is pure, then all hatred and variance must be taken away, and nothing but love remain, which is the only true bond of union. When we love God with all the heart, we are sure to love one another. The meeting closed Thursday evening, with the communion, when, as estimated, some fifteen hundred came to the sacrament. It was a heavenly season. Bro. J. Inskip, the President of the National campmeeting, invited everybody to the communion who loved the Savior. Of course we went. The occasion will be long remembered by those present. Bro. Inskip is the best leader in a campmeeting we ever saw. He is the right man in the right place.

The singing surpassed anything we ever heard before. It was truly heavenly and heart-stirring. Many eyes were wet with tears at its melting strains. It was an overwhelming power, that made stout hearts melt. It was really enchanting.

Another national campmeeting of the same kind is to be held at Urbana, O., commencing Aug. 1st. We would recommend all to go who can. There is talk of having one in Philadelphia, and one on Boston Common. At this meeting we learned that some three hundred ministers were present; among whom we were glad to see Bro. J. B. Potter, Bro. J. W. Britton, and Bro. Childs. We all felt like thanking God for the precious privilege.

Steps are already taken towards having a "union campmeeting" next year, composed of christians from all denominations who are interested in holiness. This is proposed by Presbyterians, Baptists, and others who love Christ. Thank the Lord that sectarian walls, which have so long separated his children, are now falling to the ground, before the all-subduing power of christian holiness and brotherly love. Let us never attempt to build these walls again; but do all in our power to bring them so low that there shall not be left one stone upon another, that the children of Christ may all be one, as he and the Father are one.

Rutland.—We spent July 2nd and 9th at Rutland, Vt. While the enemy has gained the advantage over some, others are resting sweetly in Jesus, having a bright hope of of eternal life, with strong faith that the time is at hand when this mortal will put on immortality. The meetings were a season of great refreshing from the Lord. The second Sabbath was one of the most precious days we have ever enjoyed in R. The Lord poured his Spirit upon us in a signal manner, to the great comfort of his saints. One was baptized. A large number expressed their desire to live nearer to to Jesus.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

Dark clouds are rising in the political horizon. Men are getting angry, and are plotting terrible things against the present political and social arrangements. It is proposed that the laboring classes shall take the reins of government, cause the rich to distribute their property, crush out aristocracy, lords, kings and emperors; and completely reverse the order of things; and thus introduce "the good time coming."

The following extract from a sermon by Henry Ward Beecher, Sunday evening, May 28th, will give some idea of the new political movement, which is now agitating the minds of the people. He says:

> The extraordinary part of this is, that it is not merely the upburst of a rabble which we have seen in Paris, that it is not merely the fury of men suffering physical wretchedness, as has been supposed. Such brutal civil wars all ages have seen. With paroxysms of cruelty from men that wreak their vengeance without discrimination or intelligence the world is not unacquainted. But this is a crusade in favor of certain distinct, moral, political, and social ideas. The working men of Paris have been studying government. They have read, talked, lectured, and listened. Doubtless they have had educated leaders. Men of ability, and of science, and of philosophy, have indoctrinated them. And these are their pupils. The vast mass of the working population of Paris have been studiously, silently, consecutively educated in a distinct scheme of government, a distinct scheme of morality; and the bottom has broken up; and this mighty revolution has taken place—this terrible war in Paris for the purpose of gaining certain great definite ends. It is an insurrection not more against political government than against social organization; and it is proposed to make an experiment on a magnificent scale of the reconstruction of men's relations to each other, and of those ideas which have been slowly accreted through the experience of ages. And all the maxims and social laws that have gradually accumulated by the trials of men in every possible conjunction and circumstance, through thousands of years, are to be overturned. A new theory is to be set in motion by these men. It is only just to say that in seeking these ends this under class of Paris have evinced an energy, a patience, an indifference to personal suffering, a perfect willingness to die for what they believe,—yea, and an eager refusal to live, which, if they had developed them in a truly just cause, would have been pre-eminently heroic. We look upon these terrific scenes in Paris, and see that if they were enacted for a righteous purpose, the men who are engaged in them might be added to the calendar of men who have not counted their lives dear unto them, so that they might achieve a higher development and a nobler liberty. . . .
>
> If you look at the purpose of the working men of France, you will find that they are almost universally without religious faith. It is not to me so very important that men should belong in this church or that church, in this creed or that creed (although I have a profound conviction that it makes a great deal of difference what creed a man believes in;) but that men should be without religious inspirations of any kind is simply shocking. It remits them again to the catalogue of animals. It takes from them that which has been productive of almost every single element or progress in human life. If you annihilate the faith of the future; if you destroy the belief of a superintending Providence; if you destroy all faith in a personal God; if you sweep the horizon with your compass, and say, "That is the only eternity which men have;" if within this narrow circle, men are to live for the greatest amount of physical enjoyment, spirituality being disowned, then you have but a cage of unclean beasts. And I do not believe it is possible to rear up a system of industry—certainly not a nation of households—still less the fair fabric of a powerful and organized people—where there is no radically religious control; where there is no inspiration of humanity; where there is no sense of brotherhood, except that which is begotten of pure interest. . . .
>
> That Communistic faith which has made this contest, and which is to be heard from again and again in the history of Europe, is revolutionary in its nature—radically revolutionary. It proposes not to make anything better, not to modify anything, not to stimulate new growths and new developments—nothing of the kind. It does not mean progress. It means revolution. It means absolute reconstruction from the foundation. And as soon as it can be done, force will be applied to carry out these philosophical notions. It is organized and organizing. It is no longer a nameless rush. It has patience in it. It has learned to wait. It has also learned to act. It has learned to act by combination. And it is imparting its ideas to other cities and other nations.
>
> The question now naturally comes home, To what extent are we, on this side, in danger of similar insurrections? If one should take the account that is given of New York (and perhaps it is not much exaggerated;) if one consider what receptacle it is of nationalities; if one considers how vast is the number of those who do not speak our language, and cannot therefore be in affinity with American ideas; if one considers what use has been made of this great underlying population; if one considers what corruption is attributed to it, or to those that manage it; if one call to mind the violations of public safety which have taken place, and the various corruptions which have been proclaimed, he will be apt to suppose that we are in imminent danger, and that we, too, may have a Paris, if not from our own population, from that which has been grafted upon us, but has not had time to grow to the parent stock.

"HEIRS OF THE KINGDOM."

It is an undisputed truth that the saints are "heirs of the kingdom." But when we inquire to what kingdom they are heirs, conflicting replies are given. But the apostle James affirms that they are heirs to that particular kingdom which God "hath promised to them that love him"; and upon a careful examination of all the promises of God, we fail to find a single promise of a kingdom for disembodied men at death, but easily find numerous promises of a kingdom for real men after the resurrection and judgment.

This theory of a kingdom for disembodied men has passed through several revisions, and is now passing through another important revision. We will briefly notice the different phases of this theory:

1. The heathen coined the theory of the existence of the "shades of the dead," and finally gave them personal forms, and assigned them a home in the bowels of the earth.

2. A part of the Jews received this heathen notion while in captivity, and tried to make it synchronize with the sheol of the Hebrew scriptures, and gave the centre of the earth as its location,—a kingdom of ghosts shut up in the ground, with a gulf between the good and bad, so narrow that they could talk from shore to shore, but so deep that a ghost could not fly over it.

3. When the Christian church first received the theory of the disembodied existence of men, they also received the theory of a sheol kingdom called hades by the Greeks; and they also assigned it a location in the heart of the earth; but the testimony of Inspiration is—"There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in sheol" (Eccl. 9:10); so if sheol is really a receptacle for disembodied men, instead of corporeal men, its inhabitants are destitute of knowledge and wisdom.

4. At a later date, after much contention, the impression gained ascendancy that Christ went into sheol in a disembodied state, and liberated all the good souls, and took them up to heaven, after which time all truly good men at death go straight to heaven, and all naughty good ones go to the same place where good souls used to go, now called purgatory; thus a part go to the old sheol to be prayed out, and a part go to heaven.

5. Another class, not liking to give up the sheol kingdom, still insisted that all souls went to sheol at death, and none went to heaven, but changed the location of sheol, and all the light they could give about its new location was, It is not in the bowels of the earth, nor is it in heaven; but unfortunately they could never reconcile this idea with Jacob's language—"Then shall ye bring down [not up] my gray hairs with sorrow unto sheol"—as this statement indicates (1) that sheol is not up, but "down," and (2) that it is a realm for the corporeal man, as disembodied men do not wear gray hairs.

6. Another class, not liking this purgatory appendage, and not seeing any authority for changing the location of sheol, denied that any went to sheol except the wicked, and converted sheol into hell; and claimed that all saints go to heaven at death. Thus the underground home of heathen souls, Jewish souls, and semi-Catholic souls, was all converted into hell.

7. At a later date, this sheol-hell has been taken out of the bowels of the earth, and put somewhere else, but nobody can tell where; and sheol has been tossed from pillar to post, till it is lost, like a play-boy's ball. It is a kingdom having no certain dwelling-place. At one time it was an underground kingdom for "the shades of the dead" in general, then it took the name of sheol, being somewhat improved by having a great gulf dug through it, to keep the good and bad ghosts from mixing up, but leaving them within sight and hearing of each other; then one part was converted into hell, and the other part recognized as paradise; then all the inmates of the good part were transported to the skies, and this good department changed into purgatory; then sheol entire was taken out of the ground, and in an attempt to locate it elsewhere, it has got lost, and can't be found.

Poor sheol kingdom! It must be tired enough to rest awhile, having gone through as many changes as the "Zion" of the Mormons, which was first established at Kirtland, Ohio, then moved to Jackson Co., Mo., then Far-West, then to Nauvoo, Ill., then to Salt Lake. But sheol is lost, though the advocates of a sheol kingdom insist that it is not lost, on the principle the cook denied that the tea-kettle was lost that had fallen overboard, because it was somewhere in the bottom of the sea, though he could not tell where: so it is said sheol is somewhere, and therefore not lost; but whether it is lost or not, theologians have so fully lost track of it, they dare not say it is here or there.

8. Recently, in opposition to the old theory of a sheol kingdom, and the more modern theory of a sky kingdom for immaterial men, a new version of the matter is being presented, setting aside hell and heaven, and introducing spheres in their stead, consisting not in locality, but in grades of development by progression. And this new view of a future existence of disembodied men, is rapidly gaining ground.

Against this system of changeable speculation, we present the following arguments:

1. The "heirs" to this promised kingdom, instead of being a class of deathless spirit-men, are a class of material men, once in possession of a dying nature, to be exchanged for immortality before they enter the kingdom; for Jesus says, "They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, ... neither can they die any more." Luke 20:35–36. These heirs could once die, which is not true of deathless souls.

2. The promised kingdom is not due till the judgment; for Christ "shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." 2 Tim. 4:1. A sheol kingdom of unjudged spirit-men would be an undesirable locality. "O sheol, I will be thy destruction." Hosea 13:13.

3. John informs us that the saints shall "reign on the earth," and "they shall reign forever and ever" (Rev. 5:10; Rev. 22:5), agreeing with the promise made through the Psalmist—"Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off thou shalt see it" (Ps. 37:34); "and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth." Isa. 25:8. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. 5:5.

W. S.

SALVATION.

No theme of inspiration is more completely enveloped in the fogs of mysticism than the question of salvation. Theologians preach about salvation, but they constantly refer to the salvation of a spirit-man, instead of the physical man; so the popular impression is, that each man possesses an invisible personality within, which is either to be saved or lost. We pronounce this a perversion of the gospel. The Bible nowhere proffers salvation to an immortal and immaterial personality, but to perishable man; for God "gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life, . . . that the world through him might be saved." John 3:16, 17. Thus instead of proposing to save imperishable beings already in possession of everlasting life, God has offered to rescue a race of beings of a perishable nature, destitute of everlasting life; to save a perishing race from their approaching doom, or to save sinners from sin, and the result of sin; for "sin when it is finished bringeth forth death," unless the gospel antidote is accepted by the sinner.

When we come to notice how Christ proposes to save men, and what he proposes to save them from, the utter impossibility of the salvation of an immortal soul by the plan of the gospel will be apparent to every investigator. What must the sinner be saved from? From the claims of a violated law, as well as from an unholy character incurred by violating that law; and as infinite wisdom has made the decree—"The soul that sinneth, it shall die," this just law will be satisfied with nothing short of death; hence Christ, in order to save us from the penalty, "died for us," "the just for the unjust," and the Father "laid on him the iniquity of us all," and he "bare our sins in his own body on the tree." He paid the debt, and thus "purchased us," not by evading the law, but by meeting its demands in his own person, after which the Father raised him from the dead.

Here is double proof that the gospel plan does not contemplate the salvation of an immortal soul, (1) from the fact that the demand of the violated law is death, and that cannot be inflicted on immortality, and therefore immortality does not need a salvation from such a penalty; and (2) Christ paid the demand of a literal death, thus establishing the fact that the law demanded the literal death of the offender. How can that be saved from death that is incapable of dying? And how could Christ's death save a deathless being from death? If the class to be saved are to be saved in consideration of the fact that Christ in his own person received the death-stroke that the sinner's sins had called for, thus saving them from the penalty, how can the death of Christ save deathless beings? That the death-penalty demanded by the violated law is literal death, is abundantly proved from the fact that when "Christ died for us," he died a literal death.

Thus it is an established truth that the salvation proclaimed in the Scriptures is (1) the salvation of perishing men, who by sin have forfeited their claim to life, and have merited the death-penalty by transgressing Jehovah's law, and (2) this salvation is secured, not by having the demands of the law rescinded, but met in the person of one who volunteers to save us from the penalty, by dying for us. When these facts are understood, the fallacy of the supposition that Christ died to save immortal souls, is made apparent; for Christ could not die in the place of those who were deathless, nor could those who were unexposed to death need to have Christ die for them, to relieve them of this doom. The repeated allusions to salvation through the blood of Christ, express the same as being saved by the death of Christ, since the shedding of blood is only another method of expressing the loss of life, as "the life is in the blood."

In view of the admitted fact that Christ died to save transgressors from the death incurred by breaking the divine law, by dying for the transgressor, it will sorely puzzle theologians to tell how the death of Christ can save immortal souls. Certainly not by offering them pardon, for this he could not do till he had first met the claims of the law in their behalf, except in view of his death; if he could, his death was superfluous.

NOTES ON PROPHECY.—No. 3.

While under the influence of the prophetic spirit Job took a look into futurity, but he could see nothing after the stroke of death worthy of admiration, till the dawn of a new era, when the shadows of death shall flee away. "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Job 19:25–27.

The Douay version reads—"I know that my Redeemer liveth, and in the last day I shall rise out of the earth. And I shall be clothed again with my skin, and in my flesh I shall see my God. Whom I myself shall see, and my eyes shall behold, and not another: this my hope is laid up in my bosom."

This hope of a release from death and dust is founded on prophecy. Without prophecy, futurity would be black with darkness, and death would be shrouded with impenetrable gloom. But prophecy points to a morning of glory to the saint after the sleep of death shall come to an end. But Job, while taking a prophetic look into the future, not only saw a morn of glory for sleeping saints, but also a day of wrath for slumbering sinners. "They shall be brought forth to the day of wrath." Job 21:30. Death will deliver up all its captives, irrespective of character, and then the great Judge will open the unerring books, and the fate of all men will be made known. Death shuts man up in a dark prison; "after this the judgment" for saint and sinner. Death's prisoners must all come to judgment.

The Cure.

A. A. PHELPS.

11. Mind your own business! This pointed proverb is not likely to become obsolete while human nature remains essentially what it has been for six thousand years. Certain it is that the saying was never in greater demand than now. Unsanctified curiosity turns multitudes into medlers. By obtrusively prying into other men's matters, they soon earn the unenviable title of "busy-bodies." When a plentiful crop of busy-bodies is produced, there is no want of tale-bearing, mischief-making, and piety-killing contention. If you would steer clear of these ruinous rocks, learn to suppress your troublesome inquisitiveness, and live in blissful ignorance of what is peculiarly the property of others. Allow people to keep their own secrets. Do not think it essential that you should peer into every project, or volunteer your advice on every occasion. A certain individual was once curious enough to ask a neighbor how he succeeded in obtaining two thousand dollars which he had in possession. The neighbor replied: "I made one thousand by minding my own business, and the other thousand by letting other people's business alone!" We would recommend the rule, not only for making money, but also for making peace.

Many are prone to take altogether more responsibility than the Lord intended they should bear. They seem to regard themselves as indispensable spokes in the ecclesiastical wheel, and fancy that every thing would go down in a common ruin if they should vacate the office of chief directors. It would be well for such persons to stop their worriment long enough to consider the fact that the spheres continued to roll, and God did somehow manage to run the universe, before they breathed the vital air! It is possible that he might keep things in successful operation, if they were laid aside altogether. Such reflections might be damaging to their self-conceit, but they would impart a life-lesson on the subject of their own littleness that could not fail to be profitable. There is not the least danger that God will break down, or that his church will be vanquished, even if we do give up our dictatorship, and roll off our heavy burdens of care at the blessed Master's feet.

A great point is gained when a man has sense enough to know his place, and grace enough to keep in it. When he is so fenced in by gospel restraints that his hands, his feet, his eyes, his ears, and especially his tongue, are conscientiously kept from invading the rights of others, he will at least be a harmless man. When, in addition to this, he employs his active energies in the prosecution of every good work, he then fills the picture of piety drawn by the pen of inspiration; he not only ceases to do evil, but he learns to do well. In a word, such a man has learned to mind his own business. This, however, does not mean selfishness, stoicism, seclusion; it means wisdom, watchfulness, and work.

Though the rule prescribed in this article might seem to be rather a preventive than a cure of church difficulties, I think a faithful observance of it will prove that it is both. Where there is a good degree of harmony, let each one seek to perpetuate it, by occupying his own place, discharging his own responsibilities, keeping his own secrets, watching his own heart, and minding his own affairs. Where the fires of contention have already been kindled, nothing is more important than that all meddlers and busy-bodies should retreat from the field of conflict and set their own houses in order. Let me entreat them to begin at once. Stop feeding the unholy flame. It will probably go out of itself, if no more fuel is added. Do not carry a poker with you to stir up the smouldering embers of strife. Do your duty in the matter, then commit the whole case to God, and let it alone. Finally, my brethren, "mind your own business!"

The following is suggestive of an evil which exists in certain city churches:

"A Boston minister says he once preached on the 'recognition of friends in the future,' and was told after service by a hearer that it would be more to the point to preach about the recognition of friends here, as he had been in the church twenty years, and did not know any of its members.—Ex.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 24th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

TENT MEETING.

The Mass. Mission tent-meeting at Groton Junction has closed. It was our second meeting this season; continued ten days, and was a good meeting. It was a place where but a few of "like precious faith" could be found—a sort of experiment; but notwithstanding the busy season, by the goodness of the Lord we had good congregations, especially in the evening. There was a great amount of prejudice to overcome, and still is. The professed friends have done great injury to the cause in this place in times past. Bro. Morrill and his helpers had the tent in readiness Saturday, and meetings commenced. The favor of the Lord was upon us, and the people came to hear. Sunday was a good day. Our brethren from the region around came to our help, and surely it was a good day. The common people seemed to hear gladly, and some were delighted; so we were encouraged to hold on, praying that some might receive the truth and be benefited.

Tuesday, the 4th, was a blessed day under the tent. The disciples looking for the return of the Nobleman were with us from Chelsea, Hudson, Acton, Littleton, and other places. Bro. Couch preached the gospel of the kingdom and defended it ably, showing clearly the importance of the message, and that it was adapted exclusively to this time or generation. Dinner was had under the tent, forty or more sitting at the table together, feasting from the "baskets-full," and enjoying it hugely, praising and thanking the Giver of every good gift. The afternoon was still a free time for truth, and in the evening more still came in to hear. Thus the Fourth of July was spent under the Mission tent; blessings were bestowed upon us abundantly. We had the old soldiers who have been looking many years for the second advent of the Messiah, and old times were revived, with glory, hallelujah. Our brethren left us, but the Lord did not; so we could but thank him and take courage.

The people in the village were very courteous, and nothing occurred to mar our comfort except on Friday, before noon, "the prince and power of the air" raised such a wind that it broke the centre pole, and in a moment our canvass was upon us and flat on the ground—sudden desolation; some hearts glad, I doubt not, and thought it was the end of the matter. But we soon found an interest to have the canvass spread again to the breeze. Bro. Brooks and Morrill were soon on their way to the woods for a pole, while the rest of us with all diligence and cheerfulness mended the tattered and torn canvass. Thus we dispatched things so hastily that our canvass was up and ready for the evening meeting, to the joy of those interested in the doctrine they had heard preached. Bro. W. S. Campbell was ready to give us a lift when the time came for preaching, and it was appreciated, and we all had a good time; so we concluded it was an ill wind that did no one any good.

Our social meetings were all good seasons. The Spirit of the Lord was very manifest, and the convert's voice could be heard. Saturday was a special time; some confession, deep feeling, a number inquiring, What shall I do to be saved? and if the christians in the village had come filled with the Spirit of Christ and good religion, and given their influence, instead of being afraid that some hurt would have been done, I doubt not as the result many would have found peace in believing; but as it was, we did the best we could for the people. All we ask where we go is for the people to come and hear. "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

Christianity makes all its converts one, and all we claim is the right to earnestly contend for the faith, or what we believe sacredly to be the word of God. And in doing it we want to be courteous, manly, and christian, granting to others the same right to differ that we claim for ourselves; always desiring to act with the utmost kindness, in love and union with all christians, and with love for all men, even while we do not see the fulfillment of scripture alike; this is acting according to the golden rule. How christianity suffers from the wide departure from this rule.

July 9th was a special day of favor. It was fair. Our brethren from Worcester and from a dozen more places had come, and as "iron sharpeneth iron," so this was a day long to be remembered. The congratulations, greetings, and hearty shaking of hands of those old "forty-three" disciples, whose lives had been preserved, and whose faith had failed not, were enough to do your soul good. It well paid for all the trouble to get together. It well paid for the whole meeting. Solemn parting! to say farewell, God bless you, and we think it probable we shall never meet till the judgment of the great day. Thus with loving, tender hearts, and tearful eyes, we parted, joyful with the "blessed hope" of meeting where parting will never be known.

Thus ended our meeting at Groton Junction. The citizens treated us respectfully. The brethren and friends did their best to make our stay useful and happy, and we have no doubt the meeting will prove a great and lasting blessing to many. May the seed sown bring forth fruit to the glory of God and the salvation of men.

L. Boutell.

Chelsea, July 11th, 1871.

P. S.—It would be a great blessing to our brethren and others where the tent is pitched, for them to make more sacrifice to come to these meetings. We go into new places, and we want help from you; your presence, influence, and money. Think of us amid all the prejudice with which we have to labor, and pray for us, for Christ's sake, and, if possible, come to the meeting when you see the notice. Soon our work will be done.

MINUTES

Of the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting.

Campmeeting Board convened at New Hartford, Iowa, June 30th, 1871. On motion, the board resolved itself into a committee of the whole. On organization, Eld. P. S. W. Deyo, President pro tem. Eld. C. C. Ramsey, Secretary. Committee appointed by the chair for permanent organization: H. D. Peckham, Sanford Peck, Joshua Pilcher. The committee report was accepted. Committee appointed to nominate officers: C. P. Burroughs, W. H. Peck, C. C. Ramsey. The committee reported the following named brethren: for President, Alonzo Raymond; Vice President, H. D. Peckham; Secretary, E. A. Marsh; Treasurer, Eben Hurlbut. To complete the board, J. J. Towsley, Sanford Peck, Hiram Peck, were unanimously elected.

Constitution.

Article 1. This body shall be known as the Christian Mission Campmeeting Association of Iowa.

Art. 2. The members of the association shall consist of ministers in good standing in the State of Iowa, and the delegates of churches belonging to the Christian Conf. of Iowa.

Art. 3. Sect. 1. The officers of this association shall consist of a President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer, who, with three other brethren, shall constitute a board of directors.

Sect. 2. Duties of Officers.

It shall be the duty of the President to preside at all meetings, and to execute the will of the body. It shall be the duty of the Vice President to preside in the absence of the President. It shall be the duty of the Secretary to keep an account of the proceedings of the meeting, and to receive and answer communications. It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all monies of the association, and to keep strict and impartial account of the same. To pay them out by order of the President and the consent of the board, and to make a report of the same at the annual meeting. It shall be the duty of the board of directors to appoint the time and place for all meetings, and to make the necessary arrangements for the same at the expense of the association. Provided, however, that the expense does not exceed the receipts in the treasury.

Sect. 3. The officers shall be elected by ballot at the annual meeting, unless otherwise ordered by the association, and their term of office shall expire at the close of the meeting.

Art. 4. This constitution may be amended at any regular meeting of the association, by a vote of two thirds of the members present.

Moved, To invite this conference to hold its next annual session in connection with our next campmeeting. Carried.

Moved, That the ministers of this conference be invited to solicit subscriptions to meet the expenses of this campmeeting, and to pay over the same, as fast as collected, to the Treasurer.

On motion, a committee was appointed to lease the land upon which this campmeeting is located for the future.

July 1st. Met at the call of the President. Moved, that this association secure the services of Elder Miles Grant for the next annual campmeeting, provided the funds in the treasury are sufficient. The meeting then adjourned, with bright anticipations for future success.

E. A. Marsh, Secretary.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. A. King (London, Eng.), June 25th, 1871.

Bro. Grant:—I reached London last night, and stopped at the noted Waverly cheap temperance hotel. I went to Spurgeon's tabernacle in the morning, but finding him ill, I went and heard Dr. Cumming. In the afternoon I attended the great St. Paul's Cathedral, whose steeple towers four hundred feet high, and the building covers a "heap" of ground. It is the most wastefully constructed building I ever saw. Outside, it looks like the Capitol at Washington; but there is not more than one fourth of the inside used for a chapel; the balance is composed of arches, etc., filled with statuary of the great generals. It was originally built by the Catholics, but when Mary Queen of Scotts died in Nov. 1858, she was succeeded by Queen Elizabeth, and Cardinal Poe, Bishop of Canterbury, dying soon after, Elizabeth appointed Mathew Parker her tutor and her mother's confessor, and called upon the priests to ordain him bishop, but they refused because he had not been regularly appointed, they claiming that the Queen should have appointed three, worthy, worthier, worthiest, and left it to the Pope to choose from the three, one to be Bishop; but Bishop Parker continued to officiate, hence the division, and church property went along. To my mind, there is little choice between the two services. I am always disgusted with the performance. We sat, or rather kept standing and sitting, for one hour and five minutes, during the reading, singing and praying exercises, before we came to preaching by Archdeacon Clawton. He spoke only twenty-five minutes on "eternal judgment" (Heb. 6:2), taking it for granted that the expression was equivalent to "eternal torment"; but said that was not the message of the church; her ministry found men in sin exposed to eternal punishment, and offered them eternal life. His discourse was but little more than an exhortation.

Dr. Cumming, in the evening, spoke from the text, "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" His remarks were mostly practical, but towards the close, he repeated the Archdeacon's apology for preaching eternal torment. I think some one told him what the deacon had said. But the Dr.'s remarks showed some familiarity with the Bible doctrine of life and death, and I am half inclined to believe he has some doubts about the truth of the view he set forth. I have fairly ached to have the people hear a messenger give the trumpet a certain sound; but I have not the means to give the missionary society a big lift now; and there will be no use in trying without several heavy lifts, and many others: for church and state are united here, and the wealth of the land is arrayed against change, for revolution must come; and when it does come, the land must be divided; hence the change will be kept off as long as possible by conciliation, and every other available means.

Parliament is now troubled about the question of Dissenters' rites of burial. According to law, if they bury in the cemeteries, the Episcopal service must be read. A bill was introduced lately to provide burial grounds for them, but was about to be defeated, on account of the expense of so many new grounds, when the Bishop of Winchester said that "the matter was an important one, inasmuch as he considered it a great hardship for Dissenters, that they could not perform at funerals in a parish church-yard without submitting to the reading of a service which was repugnant to their religious feelings. He did not, however, think the bill would effect what it sought to accomplish, because many unions were so large that poor persons could not afford to travel the unnecessary distance to a single burial place which might be determined upon; and he suggested that the bill should be referred to a select committee." His suggestion was followed, and the remedy cannot be found short of the disestablishment of the Episcopal church. It must soon follow the disestablishment of the church in Ireland, and when deprived of the support from the State, monied influence will be gone; and to keep up her splendid show, they will have to adopt the system of pew rent, etc., which will make many popular churches grow beautifully less.

Now is the seed-time; then will be the time for plants to grow and ripen for the harvest. Shall the pure seed be sown now? I do not mean that there are not some who are sowing the pure seed here. I expect to find Bro. Leask and others, but the word should be sounded out here; but I repeat it, the ground is occupied as it was not in California. I know that I could hardly advise the California trip, for fear of the expense, but was glad to learn that it cost the missionary society only about thirty-two dollars; and should be most happily disappointed if such results could be accomplished by Bro. Grant's visiting London, even if it cost the society ten times as much as the California trip. I repeat it, there is a change impending here, and now is the seed-time. "Blessed is he that soweth beside all waters." Your Bro. in Christ,

H. A. King.

Bro. G. W. Brown writes:—"It was my happy privilege to meet with those of like precious faith in the grove near Portsmouth, N. H., on the 4th of July; not only to remember the day so dearly cherished in the affections of every loyal citizen of the United States, but to remember Him also who gave us the day with all its attendant blessings, in prayer and praise; to extol and to speak his name with honor among the people. When I arrived on the ground in the morning, I found the brethren and sisters enjoying a love-feast in the Lord, with a higher idea of liberty than the worldly man enjoys. At half-past ten o'clock Bro. A. Ross preached an interesting sermon from Rev. 12: 11, which made us feel more than ever like fighting the good fight and overcoming by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of our testimony. At noon the children had a meeting, which we all enjoyed. Sr. Abbie Wood led the meeting, and we think the good Lord leads Abbie. Sr. W. is apt to teach. The children answered their questions promptly and satisfactorily, and withal this was a very interesting and I trust profitable feature of the day. May God bless both teacher and children, and bring them all to his heavenly kingdom.

In the afternoon we listened to a searching and interesting sermon by Bro. E. Owen, from 2 Kings 6: 11. We felt glad that we were for the King of Israel. The blessing of the Lord seemed to rest upon us all day, and I thought it was not only the better way to celebrate, but the best way I ever found to spend the fourth of July. We parted, feeling in our hearts a fixed purpose to meet each other in the kingdom of God's dear Son, where we shall enjoy the highest type of liberty, and celebrate with praise to God and the Lamb forever."

A. C. CONFERENCE OF N. S.

This conference met according to appointment. There was a general representation from the various churches of this province. A sweet and heavenly union prevailed throughout the meetings. Preachers present were J. J. Woodworth, Wm. Halliday, J. B. Fitch, Sr. M. A. Tripp, and the writer. Quite an interest was taken in the tract and mission work. We are glad to report that the cause of truth is coming up in this province. We feel satisfied that this conference organization is having a wholesome effect among us. Some have quite a distance to come, yet there is sufficient interest with some to leave their domestic cares, and wend their way over the rugged parts of this country to meet on such occasions.

To my friends who would wish to know what has become of the N. S. tract distributer, I would say I have not yet given up this good work. I am satisfied that the Lord has been with me these six years to bless my feeble effort in this direction. I sometimes get straitened for means to carry on my mission, yet the Lord opens the way for my relief, and sometimes where and when I least expect it. In this conference I enjoyed the sympathy of my brethren for my labors, in acts as well as in words, which has relieved me of much of my burden, so that I am encouraged to go on and carry these publications, preaching also as I go. May the God of all grace help each one of us who have the truth, to do all we can in saving our fellow men from coming perdition.

I am trying what I can to get the Bible Banner into circulation here. I find it excellent to take in new places. Many will take it who would not take a weekly paper from us. I find in my experience that papers are preferable to tracts in reaching the people with the truth. Brethren, try and circulate them, or others, even if at a reduced price. The Lord will recompense you when he comes for all the pains taken in this direction.

Camsell. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Thomaston, Ct., July 6th, Sr. Anna Camsell, aged thirty-nine years.

Sr. C. with her companion embraced the blessed hope of life only at the resurrection, about five years ago, under the labors of Bro. J. K. Bellows, since which time she has been a faithful christian. She went down with the hope that had so long sustained her, and expected to come up again at the resurrection of the just. May the orphan's God watch over her children, and bring them with father and mother to that glorious kingdom, where death can divide them no more. W. S.

Abner. Fell asleep in Jesus, in East Holliston, Mass., July 8th, 1871, Bro. Fogg Abner, aged sixty-two years.

After many years of christian life, he was suddenly cut down by a very short illness, but he was found prepared, and his death was peaceful. The afflicted ones feel that it was as the death of the righteous. They are comforted with the assurance that he shall live again in the resurrection at the last day, which was his hope. J. D. B.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

Berlin, July 14. The Germans are alarmed at the French recuperation and maintenance of the army on a war footing, and the appointment and rumored arrival at Belfort of a corps of French engineers, including Gens. Vinoy and Clinchart. Bourbaki is also reported as going there.

It is declared that the commission will construct a defensive fortified line on the Meuse menacing the newly acquired German fortresses upon the Moselle.

St. Petersburgh, July 15. A great conflagration is raging among the vessels in Riga harbor. It originated in an oil vessel. Thirty vessels have been destroyed, and several warehouses seriously damaged. The losses will amount to many millions of roubles.

The Pope, France and Italy.—It seems, after all, that M. Thiers is more considerate with reference to petting the Pope than was at first asserted. A second cable dispatch tells us, correcting the original one, that Thiers desires to dissuade the successor of Peter from coming to France, inasmuch as he does not wish to offend Italy. The real truth probably is to be found between the two dispatches. Thiers doubtless intended to invite the Pope, but found it so impolitic that he was compelled speedily to renounce. As a practical test of the strength of his Government, it has taught him a good lesson. He has only to hint at the re-establishment of any of the Empire's religious imbroglios to secure his own immediate overthrow.

DOMESTIC.

Vineland, N. J., July 17. A fearful tornado, accompanied by thunder, lightning, and heavy rain, struck this town last evening, and roofs, houses, trees and fences were destroyed. The most serious losses are the destruction of Rev. William J. Clark's Episcopal church, two railway depots, and two dwellings. In one of the houses destroyed six men were gathered when the roof was taken off and the walls fell in, wounding some of them, but none dangerously. No loss of life is reported. The tornado seems to have been entirely local, the country within a quarter of a mile of the town escaping from its effects.

☞ A correspondent with the Ku-Klux sub-committee now taking testimony in South Carolina says:

"When I state that since October last between seven and eight hundred men have been compelled by fear of death or visitation from the Ku-Klux to leave their houses daily at dark, and to spend the nights in the woods among the brush, I only state what can be proved by affidavits. When I go further and state that within the same time between two and three hundred have been taken from their beds at dead of night, I only state what can and will doubtless be substantiated under oath by the victims themselves, and when, to cap the climax, I tell you that in the nine months I have named, two have been murdered in cold blood, one burned to death after a bullet had pierced his brain, and a half dozen others shot at, I again give you what are sworn to as positive facts."

☞ The Rev. B. Mitchell, Presiding Elder of the Sioux City District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, sends the Sioux City Times the following:

Cherokee, June 23, 1871.

Mr. Editor: The Sioux City District Conference of the M. E. Church, now in session in this place, passed, in its morning session, to-day, the following resolution, voting unanimously, yea:

"Resolved, That the movement now being made to enfranchise woman is both wise and just, the genius of our government, the rights of woman, and the good of society alike requiring it."

B. Mitchell, President.

Western Crops. In Kansas the wheat crop is harvested and yields nearly thirty bushels to the acre in some places. Corn is from nine to thirteen feet high. The wheat crop of Jersey county, Ill., is estimated at 1,000,000 bushels. The Iowa wheat crop is coming on better than was anticipated. The corn crop is ahead of anything ever before, and the potato crop is faring well. All the crops in Northern Indiana are in splendid condition, and the yield of wheat, corn, oats, etc., will be large.

Chicago, July 14. A hurricane visited St. Joseph, Mo. and vicinity last night. Houses were unroofed and blown down in every part of the city. Four or five persons were killed by lightning and falling timbers, and many persons were injured. The loss on property cannot fall below 200,000.

The New York Communists—A Day of Terror.

At length the much-dreaded anniversary is over. Its celebration, thought not, perhaps, attended by the rampant reign of ruffianism that many anticipated, has been characterized by scenes of the most terrible and fatal nature, and the great metropolis has, for another time in its history, passed through the ordeal of a baptism of blood. True to their threatenings, the Hibernians, supported by the disreputable among the representatives of Irish Catholicism, and the heterogeneous riff raff from the haunts of crime and lawlessness all over the city, were on hand for riot and murder, but, true also to his word, Governor Hoffman brought into action every power—civil and military—that could be commanded, and with a determination equal to the emergency, sustained the dignity of the law, even at the sacrifice of many lives. The Orange procession, though of a very abbreviated character, came off according to the original programme, and the rioters, while most desperate in their attempts to break it up, were dispersed with heavy loss. . . .

The first movement of any magnitude looking toward the fulfillment of the threats of the rioters, was inaugurated by the laborers on the boulevards, who left their work en masse very soon after they had commenced, and proceeded in a body toward the centre of the city. On their road they made a brutal assault upon a number of unoffending Italian laborers, and severely wounded many of them. Following up these preliminary outrages, they proceeded to institute a number of attacks in the upper wards, meanwhile driving into their ranks all whom they did not disable. Increased in this way and by the accession of large crowds of men from the East River stone yards, the mob speedily attained very dangerous proportions, and but for the intervention of the military would have succeeded in perpetrating a terribly long list of most fatal outrages. Similar gatherings of a greater or less threatening nature were assembling in all the Irish sections of the city, and a disturbance of a very general character was then known to be imminent. The crowds were dispersed by the authorities as effectively as was possible under the exciting circumstances of the hour, and collisions with the officials were frequent and severe. In one of these encounters at the corner of Broadway and Tenth street a large number of the rioters were very severely wounded by the club of the policemen, and in more than one instance the injuries received were of an evidently fatal character. Numbers of the Fenians, too, notwithstanding the address of their leaders, joined the mob in its work of crime, and aided them in making raids upon armories in a search for arms and ammunition.

It remained, however, for the afternoon to witness the full desperation of the rioters. The procession of Orangemen, organized in the most unostentatious manner, and displaying no emblem more objectionable than the William of Orange flag, was perfected shortly after two o'clock on 29th street, below 8th avenue, amid the most terrific demonstrations on the part of the vast crowds of roughs that thronged the vicinity. On their march the Protestant celebrants, scarcely numbering two hundred men, and escorted by a powerful force of soldiers and policemen, were subjected to two desperate attacks. The first was at Twenty-Sixth street, and was repulsed by a volley of musketry and a charge of the Ninth Regiment, with heavy loss in killed and wounded to the mob, while the second and most reckless one of all was upon the avenue at the corner of Twenty-Fourth street. Here the rioters fired several shots into the procession, and missiles of every description were hurled upon it. Men and women, from house tops and upper windows, fought with a desperation worthy of the Parisian Commune. But their attack was a short-lived one, and in a moment the seething, turbulent throng was the recipient of a heavy fire from the 84th Regiment. The dead and dying, and wounded covered the roadway; men were fired at and wounded on the housetops, and at the point of the bayonet the troops drove the now thoroughly terrified wretches before them. After this, no organized attack appears to have been attempted, and the parade was finally brought to an end at Cooper Institute shortly after seven o'clock. Minor disturbances, as might have been expected, were of frequent occurrence, but with the above mentioned exceptions it was not found necessary to fire into the mob. Policemen's clubs, and the butt end of rifles, were used with telling severity in dozens of instances; arrests were made of bodies of rioters whenever practicable, but so far as the concentrated efforts of rowdyism were concerned an end had been reached, and the bloodthirsty criminals were compelled to sullenly acknowledge their defeat.

Of the casualties of the day it is impossible now to definitely speak. Over forty bodies, including those of a woman and two children, were in the Morgue last evening, and in very many other instances the wounds received will probably result in death. The injured are to be counted by hundreds. In the vast majority of cases the victims belonged to the ranks of the mob. For such the gentlest word that can be spoken is that their blood was upon their own heads. They died violating and defying the law. In three or four instances the persons killed appear to have been merely spectators, victims of their own reckless carelessness. Some few of the dead, however, fell in the execution of their duty as defenders of the peace and order of their city, and it rests with the citizens of New York to say whether the blood of these brave ones shall or shall not sanctify the dawn of a new era in the history of the great metropolis.

In Brief.

—— The British committee engaged in revising the New Testament were at the end of the second chapter of Mark on the 26th of May.——It is estimated that 80,000 men in Paris have become unable to support their families, and that there are no fewer than 24,000 persons dependent upon chaity.——One of the Siamese twins is reported as lying at the point of death, and the other is quite robust. In case the invalid dies arrangements are made to sever the connecting link.——A letter from Rome relates that, at the funeral of a Jew named Piperno, who was a National Guard, the hearse was followed by a number of his comrades, not only of his own religion, but also Catholics. This is said to be the first example of such tolerance and equality ever witnessed in the Eternal City.——The Baptists and Disciples in Ohio are comparing their respective creeds with a view to union. The statement of differences shows that the controversy between them is quite narrow, and the Christian Standard, the organ of the Disciples, expresses the opinion that there is no sufficient reason for continued alienation. A good many on both sides of the line treat the question rather coolly, however.——The Rev. Henry Boehm, the oldest itinerant minister of the M. E. Church reached his ninety-seventh birthday, June 8th. Though for two or three days previous he had been temporarily prostrated, he was able to be up and receive on that day the hearty congratulations and remembrances of his friends at Staten Island, where he is staying for the present. Father Boehm preached his first sermon seventy-two years ago, and is now enjoying a peaceful old age.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so.

The campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 9th, and hold over the Sabbath, the 17th.

For the Committe, J. Couch.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting (at West Wareham, Mass.) will commence on Monday, July 24th, and continue over the following Sabbath. With the blessing of the Lord, we expect an interesting season on this consecrated ground, as in former years; and hope all who can will make arrangements to attend this annual feast.

Henry V. Davis, for the Committee.

Notice.

The campmeeting of the "Life and Advent Union" will be held on their new ground, in Springfield, Mass., commencing August 13th, and holding over the following Sunday. The fare on the Connecticut river R. R. and on the Hartford and New Haven R. R. is reduced one half, and on the Boston and Albany R. R. one third, from August 10th to August 30th, inclusive. Ample provision will be made for board and lodging, and horse-keeping on the ground. Table board will be 80 cents per day. T. R. Weaver, Sec.

Notice.

The Mechanic Falls campmeeting committee will meet on the ground to build a stable, finish the seating, and make other necessary arrangements for the meeting, Tuesday, August 1st. We invite other brethren to join us. Let us have a good crew, that the work may be pushed through speedily. Our meeting will commence the 28th of August, and continue one week. Further particulars hereafter. J. Albert Libby.

The R. I. and E. Ct. Campmeeting.

Brethren, our campmeeting this year will (D. V.) be held at Green Station, on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R. It will commence on September 2nd, 1871, and hold till the 9th inst. We shall be happy to meet the brethren from "all the neighborhood round about." Those who have tents, or can procure them, are requested to bring them. Fares from way stations are being ascertained, and will be advertised.

For the camp committee, W. Kellaway.

North Dana, Mass.

There will be a grove meeting in North Dana, Mass., commencing on Thursday, August 3d, and hold over Sunday the 6th. Bro. J. Hemenway and others are expected to help preach the word. All preaching brethren and sisters, come and help us, and all others come. Provide for yourselves as far as convenient. Provision for man and beast can be obtained near by. We wish to make one more effort for Christ and his cause in No. Dana. Pray for the meeting. Geo. A. Streeter.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in North Holderness, in Bro. Amos G. Garr's grove, near my place, Sunday, July 30th. Brethren and sisters are invited to come to work for the Lord.

John H. Evans.

Southern Kansas Grove Meeting.

We commence Sat., July 22nd, at two o'clock P. M., at Crawfordville, Crawford Co., Kansas. Any who shall see this notice are invited to come. Ministering brethren, of "like precious faith," we desire your acquaintance and co-operation. There is a large and open field of labor here. Any coming by rail will take the Gulf R. R., step off at Girard, and inquire for us or Bro. A. M. Sidwell. The grove is two and a half miles west of Girard.

H. J. Munson.

Notice.

The campmeeting committee who were chosen at the New Milford, Ct., campmeeting last Sept., are requested to meet upon the old ground, New Milford, Tuesday, July 18th, at three o'clock P. M., and if decided to have another meeting this coming season, to fix upon a time, and make such other arrangements as are needed for the same. Brethren, if possible, and the Lord willing, come. In behalf of the committee, H. K. Flagg.

Notice.

There will be a free campmeeting either at Pittsfield, or on the Belfast Railroad, to commence Sept. 4th, 1871. Particulars hereafter.

Israel Damman.
W. Cousins.
A. H. Walker.

Notice.

Will those wishing me to hold grove, protracted, or conference meetings, please make arrangements, and notify me in season, so that all may be accommodated as far as possible. Let us do all we can.

H. B. Sevey.

Notice.

Elder E. McCulloch, of Nevada, Ohio, purposes to attend the National Campmeeting at Springfield, Mass., and remain east for a few weeks. Churches desiring his labors, will address him at Nevada until August 10th; after that at Savoy, Mass.

Maine Mission Tent.

This tent will be ready for meetings in a few days. Brethren wishing it pitched in any localities, will please write to me as soon as possible. Let there be a prompt response to this invitation.

For the Tent Committee,
R. R. York, Portland, Me.

Notice.

The Vermont State Annual Campmeeting will probably be located at or near the village of Bethel, Vt. More soon. E. P. G.

Connecticut Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting in the beautiful grove occupied for that purpose last year, near Plainville, Ct., commencing Sept. 2nd, 1871, and holding till the 11th inst.

The fare is reduced one half on the N. H. and N. R. R., same as last year. Regular tickets must be bought to Plainville, and free return passes will be furnished on the camp-ground. The committee have been unable to effect a reduction of fare on the H. P. and F. R. R. Mr. T. F. Clark will convey passengers from Plainville to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. Provision will be made for those coming with horses. It is desirable that all who can, bring tents and bedding, especially the latter.

We shall endeavor to provide wholesome food for all who may wish, at reasonable rates, and trust that, together with our brethren and sisters, we may exercise sufficient faith in God, coupled with good works, to dispel the fear of financial embarrassment, which so cripples the religious enterprises of the day, that their votaries are withering from spiritual drouth, the result of too much anxiety for money, and too little knowledge of faith in God. The Lord is soon coming, and we feel the need of a higher standard of holiness, and the deep inwrought work of the Holy Spirit. Let us walk humbly before the Lord, making this meeting the subject of prayer, beseeching our heavenly Father to breathe the Holy Spirit upon the entire encampment, that wanderers may be reclaimed, and sinners converted.

B. Hitchcock,
Geo. L. White,
Wm. J. Ripley,
O. D. Woodruff, } Committee.

Quarterly Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting for the northern district of the Advent Christian Conference of Indiana, will meet at four o'clock P. M., on Thursday, before the first Sunday in Aug., 1871, with the church of God at Sand-hill, four miles north of Rochester, on the Michigan road, in Fulton Co. A general invitation is given; and we say come one, come all; come on the first day, and stay till the last. Provision will be made for all who may come. Persons coming on the Michigan road will inquire for Brn. N. Doolittle, or S. S. Cole. Persons coming by R. R. will stop off at Sturgeon, and inquire for Bro. E. Partridge, or I. E. Andrus. By order of conf.,

D. Nave,
I. E. Andrus, } Committee.

Annual Meeting.

The Women's Christian Association will hold its annual meeting at Springfield, Mass., August 23d, 1871. It is desirable that all members of the Association should be present.

E. S. Jennings, President.

Grove Meeting.

There will be preaching at Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., on Sunday, July 30th, by Eld. J. G. Smith. If stormy, the meeting will be held in the Hall at the grove. Refreshments, and stabling for horses for all who wish.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting at Old Point, on Sodas Bay, Wayne Co., N. Y., July 22d and 23d. Come, brethren and sisters, with your hearts full of the love of Jesus, and your baskets well filled with provision. M. R. Miles.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting at East Lebanon, Me. (Little River Falls), Sundays, Aug. 6th and 13th. Geo. W. Brown, of South Elliott, and others, are expected to preach the word.

J. Bickford.

Southern Tract Fund.

At our recent Wisconsin campmeeting, a collection was taken to aid me in scattering gratuitously my forthcoming book (entitled "The Life beyond Death in the Home of the Holy") in the southern field, it having been prepared with reference to missionary or pioneering work. I desire to send at least one thousand copies of this work, with a quantity of my four tracts, into the southern field this coming fall and winter. It will be a pleasure for some to help me raise one hundred dollars for this purpose. Let such direct to Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Green Co., Wis.; or, if more convenient, to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass. W. S.

Notice.

I supplied a number of brethren with works at campmeetings last year, and those who can possibly send me what is due by mail, in June, I wish they would do so, as I am much in debt for printing, and ought to pay up. If any can aid me in throwing off the unpleasant burden of being in debt, it will be thankfully received. Age and health prevent my obtaining means to live and pay debts as formerly. Direct to J. Blain, Buffalo, N. Y.

Meetings at Bonny Eagle, Me.

For the information of friends residing at a distance from Bonny Eagle, Me., who may desire to meet with us occasionally, I will say that Eld. C. H. Sweet, of Rhode Island, having been invited to settle here, has decided to come and remain as long as may seem duty. Preaching every Sunday, at 10½ A. M., and 1 P. M.; Sunday school at 9½ A. M. Prayer meeting at 5 P. M.; also Tuesday and Friday evenings. All these services are held in the Chapel. T. J. Rumery, Ch. Elder.

German Tracts.

I will send my German Tracts gratis (except postage), to any one who wants them for himself, or to distribute. I have a good supply. Send your orders to L. Reimer, 1006 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Rochester, N. Y.

The Second Advent Christian Church will meet hereafter for the worship of God over 102 State Street, at the head of the second flight of stairs. It is a new hall. It is one block south of the New York Central Depot. Will be a permanent place. Meetings Tuesday and Friday evenings, and three times on the Lord's day. Preaching afternoon and evening. Preaching brethren will find a home at Bro. D. T. Cooper's, No. 72 Mount Hope Avenue. J. Phelan, Secretary.

Notice.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ATTITUDE.

"TO WAIT FOR HIS SON FROM HEAVEN."

"Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh."—MATT. 25: 13.

"I stand continually upon the watch-tower."—ISA. 21: 8.

I stand on my watch-tower, Jesus,
Watching for thee;
For I know thou wilt soon be coming
To summon me.
I am up in the early morning,
Ere the sunrise,
Piercing the gray streaks of dawning
With eager eyes.
I am longing, continually longing,
Thy summons to hear—
"Arise ye! prepare for the wedding;
The Bridegroom draws near!"
Oh, how shall I greet thee, my Jesus,
What joy shall be mine,
When, all doubts and anxieties leaving,
Thou claimest me thine?
What happiness just to behold thee,
And gaze on thy face,
While still in that vision of beauty
Thy wounds I shall trace!
And as sure as thou livest and reignest
In heaven above,
So surely thou never wilt sever
Thy bride from thy love.

I stand on my watch-tower, Jesus,
Looking for thee;
For I know thou art shortly coming
To summon me.
So I stand in the noontide gladly,
'Neath the hot sun's scorching rays,
To greet thee, when thou comest,
With a song of loving praise.
Mine eyes with looking upward
Are failing; yet to see
One glimpse of thine appearing
Is rapture, ecstasy!
So still I'll pierce through distance,
Though clouds may cross my sky,
With this wondrous thought before me—
"I shall see Him eye to eye."
No darkness then between us,
The veil shall be withdrawn,
And the evening mists have vanished
In the brightness of that morn.
So I'll bear the heat and burden
Of this present "little while,"
Till thou come and light my spirit
With the sunshine of thy smile.

I stand on my watch-tower, Jesus,
Longing for thee.
Thou hast said thou wilt come unexpected
To summon me.
The shadows of evening have lengthened,
The night wears apace;
And I'm watching, still watching, my Jesus,
For thy glorious face.
How long wilt thou "tarry," Lord Jesus?
Oh! when wilt thou "quickly come"?
Haste! "hasten the wheels of thy chariot,"
I long, oh! I long to be home.
Thou biddest me "watch and be ready,"
With my lamp burning brightly for thee;
For at "evening, or midnight, or morning,"
Thou mayest suddenly come and fetch me.
Then let me not weary or falter,
Though darkness my spirit enshroud,
This night must give place to the morning—
The "morning without a cloud."
"With patience," my soul, I'll possess thee
(Leaving all to his wisdom and power),
Content with the message He sends me,
"Ye know not the day nor the hour."
—The (London) Christian. JEANIE WOODS.

ADAM'S NATURE.

C. E. BARNES.

The subject mentioned above has attracted a great deal of attention lately, yet it still seems to be a contested point. I have read with interest the articles of the brethren upon both sides of the question, and in consequence I entertain a different opinion than I did when the first article appeared. I then believed Adam to be neither mortal nor immortal, but in a condition to which either was possible. I now believe him to have been created mortal, and to have been put on probation; at the successful termination of which, immortality would have been given him.

Mortality and immortality are two extremes, and I know of no middle position. If the question was as to his color, whether he was black or white, it might be consistently claimed, in the absence of positive proof, that he was neither, but of an intermediate color, as there is a great variety of colors and shades between black and white. Or if it was his height that was disputed, it could be consistently contended that he was neither tall nor short, but of a medium height; but the question being in regard to his nature, to me it seems that in this instance our belief must be confined to either one or the other of these extremes, viz., his mortality or immortality, for what middle ground is there to be taken?

Mortal is the opposite of immortal. Whatever immortality may be, mortality must be directly the opposite. An immortal being is one to whom death is impossible; a mortal being is one to whom death is possible, though not necessarily inevitable; therefore when it is admitted that Adam was not immortal, it legitimately follows that he was mortal, as there is no half way position for him to occupy.

Against this it may be objected that it would be deceptive to say to a man already mortal, "You shall die if you eat of the forbidden tree;" but not so. Are we not mortal today? And were not men mortal also when Ezekiel wrote "the soul that sinneth, it shall die"? Chap. 18: 4. Why not charge the Spirit of God with folly in declaring through Ezekiel that sinful mortal souls should die? Why not say it was useless to tell them that, when they would have died any way? And yet it is just as consistent to believe Adam to have been mortal and yet threatened with death, as it is to believe so in regard to men in Ezekiel's time. The objection applies as forcibly against the one as it does against the other, and if it has no force in the latter, then it has none in the former.

It is not a just inference that a mortal being must inevitably die; that a mortal nature demands death: for do not we believe that all who are living on the earth to-day are mortal, saint as well as sinner? And notwithstanding this, do we not believe that there are those living now who will never taste death, but "be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye"? And do we not believe this privilege is extended to the ungodly? Do we not exhort them to turn to Christ and live? Do we not tell them that except they repent and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ they will die? Do we not say "turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die?" And is it so, that we are only mocking them, when we declare to mortal men that death awaits them if they persist in their sin? Do we consider it folly to urge a mortal man to turn from the error of his ways that death may not be visited upon him? No, we do not. We think it a great mercy that a way has been prepared whereby even mortal men may escape death.

If it were true that a mortal nature must inevitably end in death, then there would be some force to the charge of folly in threatening it; but it is not true that a mortal creature must necessarily die, for many are the mortals living to-day that I believe will never die, but will be clothed upon with their house from heaven, that mortality may be swallowed up of life when Jesus comes.

Now, if it is not inconsistent to declare to mortal creatures to-day that they shall surely die if they disobey God, then it would not be inconsistent to tell a mortal creature the same six thousand years ago; for as some of the present race of mortals will escape death by a change at the end of their probation, if they continue in obedience, even so might mortal Adam have escaped death if he had continued in a course of obedience at the end of his probation. God did not say to Adam, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shall surely become mortal;" were this the case the charge of inconsistency might be sustained; but as death is not an inevitable consequence of being mortal, the charge falls powerless. When it is proved that a mortal nature requires that its possessor must die, then we will plead guilty to the charge of inconsistency; but until then, we shall maintain that there is no absurdity in telling a mortal man that he must die if he disobeys.

Once more I wish to repeat it. We are mortal, and yet our nature is not such that we must die, whether or no; for those who are living when Christ comes, will escape death by a marvellous change, and so too could Adam's mortal nature have been changed had he been obedient.

Those who believe Adam to have occupied a middle position, err in thinking that death was a necessary consequence had he been created mortal, whereas we have conclusively shown that such is not the case. This view satisfactorily proves that Adam's nature was mortal.

Salem, Mass.

LONG SERMONS.

I. I. LESLIE.

There is a great complaint in regard to long sermons, but this really means long meetings. It is not the sermon that is so long generally, but the extending it beyond the time when the meeting is expected to close. This is often done; but it is not because of the great length of the sermon, but on account of the preliminaries and appendices being long, and giving but little time for the sermon itself.

In most places one hour and a quarter is all that is allotted for the worship of God at any one time. More than this would be wearying and tedious to nearly all the devotional people of these days. This is as much time as most can contentedly spend at once in the house and worship of God. Men can associate in every other way and not soon become exhausted, or have time wear heavily; but in the service and worship of God they quickly get weary, and ask to be relieved. Let us see how this hour generally goes.

1. Almost every minister, especially on the Sabbath, begins the meeting and service of God by reading a portion of Scripture; and generally a chapter. Not to do this would seem to be to leave out an essential part of that service and worship. And to do it hastily, hurriedly, and without thought and expression, is but a form and ceremony, with no good result, and displeasing to God. To read then the Scriptures profitably requires time, and if this is done in the hour and a quarter, then a portion of it is gone when this is finished.

2. Then comes the first hymn, and if a long one is selected, read and sung, another portion of the hour and a quarter is gone.

3. Then the prayer,—and if it be a long one, as is often the case, in which every thing and every body is prayed for, with a general confession of all the sins of the age and the world, closing with a specification of the wants of all present—christians, backsliders, and sinners, then another good portion of the hour and a quarter is gone.

4. Then the second hymn; and if this be like the first, a long one, read through and sung at a slow pace, then certainly a large portion of the hour and a quarter is gone, and then the rest is left for the sermon and another hymn, benediction, appointments, etc.

Now we ask, about how much time is left usually for the sermon? Generally, not more than twenty minutes. Now is a sermon of twenty or twenty-five minutes a long sermon? The truth is, the people become weary before the sermon is commenced; and if the preacher is "slow of speech" (as some are), and has really something to say, then he may not finish his sermon before the time when the hearers expect to go for their dinners, or suppers, or a ride; and then he is charged with preaching long sermons, and boring the congregation to death.

Now we would say with another, "Clip!" but instead of clipping the sermon only (if it is the best you can preach), clip your hymns, and your prayers, making them short, and so begin your sermon as quickly as you can, before the people begin to think of going home and wish the meeting was ended. You have the oar in your own hands, and if it is to preach that God has called you, then do it if you have to leave out the singing and a long prayer. If the people will not give you but an hour and a quarter, take first as much of it as you need in which to declare the message that God has given you; and if there be time left, then sing, and let every one praise the Lord.

We say again, it is the long meeting, and not the sermon, that so often tires our good people in these days, when pleasure and ease are looked for in the house of God as well as everywhere else.

SPURGEON AND THE DAMNED.

WM. KELLAWAY.

From a sermon by this great London preacher, having the caption "Regeneration," and preached from the text, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," I have culled the following sentences on lost souls:—

"The damned are lost forever; they cannot be born again; they go on cursing, ever being cursed; ever fighting against God, and ever being trampled beneath his feet; they go on ever mocking, ever being laughed at for their mockery; ever rebelling, and ever being tortured with the whips of conscience, because they are ever sinning. They cannot be regenerated, because they are dead!"

With reference to the above, it is preached of men who are dead, and not of the last-day punishment. But how men can be dead, and yet at the same time be performing the actions of living men, in the way described by Spurgeon, is a wonder, since the second death is death both of body and soul. That passage in 2nd Ephesians, and one or two others, need not be quoted; for their distortion, as explained by Calvinists, will appear to many who will carefully study the text. Further on, in the same discourse, Mr. S. makes remarks concerning "Baptismal Regeneration," which may be easily adapted to his own language as above. Says he:—

"Ah! that doctrine [of baptismal regeneration] only needs to be stated to sensible men, and they will at once reject it. Gentlemen who are fond of a filagree religion, and like ornament and show; gentlemen of the high Beau Brummel school, will very likely prefer this religion, because they have cultivated their taste at the expense of their brain, and have forgotten that what is not consistent with the sound judgment of a man, cannot be consistent with the word of God."

I think if Mr. Spurgeon would only look at these two sentences together, and think calmly of what he says of Dante and his "Il inferno" in the same sermon, he would be more chaste in his remarks on the lost, and would not assert that he seemed as if he had been in hell.

A DIALOGUE.

J. MAXIM.

Adventist. Good morning, Bro. M.; happy to find you enjoying health this morning.

Methodist. Thank you, sir; glad to meet you, wishing to have some conversation with you. I understand that you are a "Millerite."

A. What makes you think I am a Millerite?

M. Because I saw you at the Millerite campmeeting the other day.

A. It seems, Bro. M., that you were there too, and if being there makes me a Millerite, does it not make you one too?

M. Well, but I did not take any part as you did in the prayer-meeting and love-feast, as it was called.

A. As you profess to be a christian, why did you not take a part with them?

M. Because I think their doctrines are infidel, and the Bible tells me not to take any part with infidels and unbelievers.

A. If you consider the Second Adventists infidels, why did you go to their meeting?

M. Oh, having heard them called infidels by my Methodist friends, I thought I would go once and hear for myself; and am sorry to say that I think the reports true.

A. Did you hear any infidel or unscriptural doctrines advanced there?

M. I think I did.

A. Did they deny the Bible?

M. Not exactly all of it, but then the main truths of the Bible were altered and twisted to harmonize with their unpopular ideas.

A. What scripture did they deny or twist, to maintain their "unpopular theology"?

M. They denied the immortality of the soul, the endless hell torments of the wicked, and the conscious state of the righteous and wicked between death and the resurrection; doctrines plainly taught in the Bible—yes, so plain "that the wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein."

A. You say those doctrines are plainly taught in the Bible; will you please to refer me to chapter and verse?

M. Perhaps not now, but I am sure they can be found in the Scriptures of truth, for I have heard our ministers, the best learned and the greatest preachers, often speak in their sermons of the "immortal" and "never-dying soul," "endless torment," and "the death that never dies." If such doctrines and texts were not in the Bible, do you think they would not have known it?

A. Before we talk any further, we will adjourn, giving you time to search for such passages as "immortal soul," "never-dying soul," "death that never dies," "endless misery," or "endless hell torments." If you find them, you shall receive from me one hundred dollars cash in hand, at the next interview.

M. All right, Bro. A. I will search my Bible faithfully and prayerfully, feeling sure that I shall not only come off victorious, but gain one hundred dollars. Adieu, till we meet again to resume this interesting subject.

SECOND INTERVIEW.

A. Good evening, Bro. M.; have come to receive the promised hundred dollars, I suppose?

M. Well, Bro. A., I must confess to you that I have not won it. I searched the Bible, using the best Concordance there is out; and after searching almost night and day for several days, I must frankly confess to you that those words and expressions are not in the Bible.

A. Bro. M., what think you now? Who, sir, are infidels; those who take the Bible as it reads, or those who add to it words "self-manufactured"?

M. Bro. A., I do freely acknowledge that I was blinded by tradition, as many of my brethren and preachers are to-day.

A. Are you now prepared to admit the Bible truths that you heard at the before-mentioned Second Advent campmeeting?

M. I am. After prayerfully searching the Scriptures, I not only found those passages missing, but I found the heart-cheering truth that "God is love"; that "love worketh no ill"; that "God is unchangeably good to all"; that "his tender mercies are over all his works"; that he will not keep "his anger forever," because he "delighteth in mercy"; hence endless torments cannot be true. If such doctrines had been true, the Bible would have been as full of them as many of our Methodist and Orthodox sermons have been.

A. True, Bro. M. Now as you find nothing, or no positive proof of endless torment, etc., what is your present conviction concerning Bible truth?

M. It is that all men are mortal and must "seek for . . . immortality and eternal life," or be forever destroyed "root and branch" in "the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." I learn by the Bible that "the soul that sinneth it shall die"; that "the wages of sin is death"—not eternal existence; for "all the wicked" God says he "will destroy" with "everlasting destruction." I read that "the dead know not anything"; they "return to the dust"; "in that very day their thoughts perish." I now believe the Bible says just what it means, and always means what it says.

A. Have you ever read any of our books or tracts upon these subjects?

M. Never till since our first interview, and they have enlightened my mind and cheered my heart. And my Bible now harmonizes with itself and the character of Christ. It is, as it were, a new book to me.

A. Bro. M., this is the language of every one who has left the heathen tradition of "immortal-soulism" and that "thou shalt not surely die," and have come over to the plain and literal teachings of the Bible. If men go to heaven or to hell as soon as they die, and are then all judged and rewarded according to their works, it excludes the necessity of a general judgment, and especially of a resurrection, on which is founded the hope of every true believer.

M. So, Bro. A., it now appears to me; and I shall ever be thankful to God for this blessed interview, which has resulted in my conviction of Bible truth. To God be all the glory. Hallelujah!

IOWA C. M. CAMPMEETING.

The campmeeting held at New Hartford, Iowa, commencing June 22nd, was one of great interest. The love, peace and harmony with which it was conducted was a remarkable feature of the meeting. Although many views were entertained respecting the doctrines and teaching of the Bible directly opposed to each other, no unchristian or uncharitable feeling was manifested. The fruits of the Spirit were predominant throughout the meeting, and no spirit of controversy or contention was shown, although some five different denominations were represented. The principle of christian union and brotherly kindness was evinced by all. Charity, liberty of opinion, and a desire to investigate God's holy word, were very noticeable on the camp-ground, and glorious results must follow as a sequence.

The Christian Conference was held in connection with the campmeeting, and its sessions were also remarkable for the order and harmony that existed among its members; not a dissenting vote was cast, and the voice of one was the voice of all. It was presided over by Eld. Thomas, whose age and experience eminently qualified him for that responsible position. In the fulfillment of his duties, and the manner in which he discharged them, he elicited the commendation of all. The discourses of Eld. C. C. Ramsay and his "coworkers" were of such a charater as not only to attract and claim the attention of the large audiences that assembled to hear, but were clear, powerful and logical, convincing the gainsayer, reclaiming the wanderer from God, and converting the sinner. The subjects treated were adapted to the times in which we live, and were "meat in due season" indeed. The glorious theme of the waiting church, "that blessed hope," was powerfully presented, and the "signs" and fulfillments of prophecy heralding that glorious event, the coming of Christ, was faithfully shown to the people. They were actuated by the same spirit that Moses had when he addressed the congregation of Israel. "Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth. My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew." For truly the eloquence of a Moses, the sublime language of Isaiah, was given to the proclaimers of present truth.

The prayer and conference meetings were a foretaste of the praises and thanksgiving that saints shall render to God and his Son our Savior in the kingdom; and as a sister remarked, "If I could believe in going to heaven, I should want to go now";—so we all felt that burning in our hearts that the disciples realized while on the road to Emmaus.

The last conference was truly a feast of love, and many eyes were dimmed with tears of joy for what we enjoyed here, and also of sorrow, knowing that we must part and leave the hallowed spot. Eighty testimonies and thirteen songs were given in thirty-five minutes. The young pilgrims participated in the general happiness of the camp, and had some interesting and very profitable meetings. Several made a start for the celestial city. There was a large number sat down to the Lord's table; about one hundred brethren and sisters partook of the emblems of Christ's broken body and spilled blood. It was a solemn and impressive time, and a joyful one; for we look forward to the day when we shall sit around our Father's board in the kingdom.

Eighteen family tents and the Iowa Mission and Chicago tents were put up, and accommodated over one hundred persons with lodging at night. A grocery stand was erected on the ground, which furnished provisions at reduced rates to those who did not provide for themselves, and the profits went to sustain the meeting. This is a wiser and better plan than that adopted by some of having a boarding tent, and gives better satisfaction.

There was a large crowd on the ground the first Sabbath. It was estimated that there were one hundred and forty teams on the ground. The last Sabbath there were perhaps fifteen hundred people present to hear the gospel. They came from all directions to attend this glorious meeting, some traveling eighty miles by their own conveyance. The immediate results are good, and many, we have reason to believe, will date their conversion from this meeting. Six precious souls put on Christ by immersion, and the scene, so beautiful and expressive of a hope in the resurrection, will not soon be forgotten.

Arrangements have been made to secure the ground for five years to come; therefore we may expect to enjoy those blessed seasons of refreshing, hoping to be soon gathered home where we will not have to part, and shall sing with immortal tongues the soul-cheering songs of Zion.

"There we'll meet all our loved ones in our Eden home,
Sweet songs of redemption we'll sing,
From the north, from the south, all the ransomed shall come
And worship our heavenly King."

A PRECIOUS PROMISE.

M. S. CHUTE.

"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 TIM. 4: 8.

O, what a precious promise is this to the christian, and especially to those who suffer persecution and affliction here in this life. How glorious to look forward to the time when the Lord Jesus shall come to give his weary saints release from all their toils. O, how we love the appearing of our blessed Savior. Let us be patient waiting for him, and laboring diligently for the upbuilding of his blessed and glorious cause. There are endless joys in store for us, if only faithful. How numerous are the promises that Christ has given to those who persevere to the end.

Weary pilgrim, when we ponder on all those glorious joys that await us at His coming, can we not say with the apostle Paul, that "our light afflictions, which are but for a moment, work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are unseen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." "Now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face,"—"see him as he is." Let us take new courage from these precious promises, and wait with patience for his coming (which will not be long), when he shall give us the crown of righteousness.

— We are to bear with those we cannot amend, and to be content with offering them to God. This is true resignation. And since he has borne our infirmities, we may well bear those of each other for his sake.

— Be kind to those around you.

Gems.

— As the most dangerous winds may enter at little openings, so the devil never enters more dangerously than by little unobserved incidents, which seem to be nothing, yet insensibly open the heart to great temptations.

We must feel ere we can pity;
We must long before we pray;
We must know the need of comfort
Ere we choose another's way.

— He who "sees the end from the beginning" will often appoint us a most inexplicable way to walk in. Joseph was put into the pit and the dungeon; but this was the way which led to the throne.

— If you have any principle, any faith, any enthusiasm, any fire in your soul, keep the tongue-valve close, and let the spiritual forces move your hands to noble deeds, and make your feet run on errands of mercy.

— Enjoy the blessings of this day if God sends them; and the evils bear patiently and sweetly. For this day only is ours; we are dead yesterday, and we are not born to-morrow.

Be not swift to take offense;
Let it pass!
Anger is a foe to sense;
Let it pass!
Brood not darkly o'er a wrong
Which will disappear ere long;
Rather sing this cheery song—
Let it pass, let it pass!

— Anger in dispute is like an unquiet horse in a dusty way; it raises such a cloud in the eye of the understanding, that it obscures its vision and impedes its operations.

— Men who have been eminent for usefulness in the cause of God, have been remarkable for their self-denial. The greater their control over self, the greater their influence over others.

— No one, says Jerome, loves to tell a tale of scandal except to him who loves to hear it. Learn then to rebuke and check the detracting tongue, by showing that you do not listen to it with pleasure.

— If you have religion enough to save you, everybody will know it. Love must tell it.

Our times are in thy hand,
Father, we wish them there;
Our life, our soul, our all, we leave
Entirely to thy care.
Our times are in thy hand;
We'd always trust in thee,
Till we have left this weary land,
And all thy glory see.

— If you are God's wise men the world will count you fools.

— Despise no infirmity of mind or body, nor any condition of life, for it may be thy own lot.

— A head properly constituted can accommodate itself to whatever pillows the vicissitudes of fortune may place under it.

— Gifts are the gold that beautifies the temple; but grace is as the temple which sanctifies the gold.

— Virtue is the health of the soul; it gives relish to the smallest loaves of life.

The heart craves many a fond desire,
And many a blessing seeks;
To earthly joys our hopes aspire:
But list! the Savior speaks—
"If you would my disciples be,
Deny yourselves, and follow me."

— To be dexterous in danger is a virtue, but to court danger is weakness.

— Pride and folly cost many persons more than their necessities.

"WHERE DID YOU COME FROM, BABY DEAR?"

DEAR EDITOR:—Please give to the children—young and old—the following exquisite bit of poetry by Geo. MacDonald, who writes so many precious words; and these are not the least, from his Good Words for the Young.—A. T.

Where did you come from, baby dear?
Out of the everywhere into here.

Where did you get your eyes so blue?
Out of the sky as I came through.

What makes the light in them sparkle and spin?
Some of the starry spikes left in.

Where did you get that little tear?
I found it waiting when I got here.

What makes your forehead so smooth and high?
A soft hand stroked it as I went by.

What makes your cheek like a warm white rose?
I saw something better than any one knows.

Whence that three-cornered smile of bliss?
Three angels gave me at once a kiss.

Where did you get this pearly ear?
God spoke, and it came out to hear.

Where did you get these arms and hands?
Love made itself into hooks and bands.

Feet, whence did you come, you darling things?
From the same box as the cherubs' wings.

How did they all come just to be you?
God thought of me, and so I grew.

But how did you come to us, you dear?
God thought about you, and so I am here.

LOVE MAKES THE DIFFERENCE.

"O, it's just as different as can be," said one of my young friends.

"What is?" I asked.

"Why, being a christian. Everything is so different from what I expected."

"What did you expect?"

"When you used to talk with me about being a christian, I used to say to myself, 'No, I can't now, for I shall have to do so many hard things, and I never can do them.'"

"What hard things?"

"O, I used to think, 'Now, if I become a christian, I shall have to walk just so; shall have to go to church and prayer-meeting; shall have to pray and read the Bible.' It is so different to what I thought."

"Why, James, what do you mean?" I exclaimed. "You do go to church and to prayer-meeting; you do read your Bible and pray; you do try to walk just right, do you not?"

"O, yes," answered James, looking up with a bright smile: "but then I love to do them—that makes all the difference. I love Jesus, and I love to do as He wishes me to."

O, I thought, if all professed christians would learn this lesson, how delightful the change! We should no longer hear brother A. say in prayer meeting: "It is crossing for me to speak, but I know I ought." We should not go to our closets with a weary step, and leave them with a sigh of relief. We should no more hurry over the blessed Bible—read only as a duty. The word for Christ would be spoken easily, because lovingly. Christ's yoke would indeed be easy and his burden light.

Yes, love does make all the difference. Love is the fulfilling of the law.—S. S. Times.

THE DRUNKARD'S SON.

A little boy stood in the door of a dilapidated house in the suburbs of a country village. His threadbare dress was of finer texture than seemed appropriate to such a lowly dwelling, and there was an easy gracefulness in the child's manner that bespoke an early training more refined than the children of poverty usually receive.

Eight summers only had the boy seen; but there was an unnatural thoughtfulness on his brow, and as he stood absorbed in the contemplation of a subject evidently painful his eye gleamed with strange light, his bosom heaved, the blue veins in his fair young brow grew swollen and rigid, and the deep flush of anger spread over those beautiful features.

"Mother," exclaimed he, turning suddenly toward a pale woman who sat busily plying her needle, "I have determined to run away, for I cannot live in this old house and be half starved, and see you work day and night—and all because my father will get drunk. Yesterday the boys got angry with me, and called me the 'son of a drunkard.' I can't bear it, mother—I will run away."

The mother gazed on her boy, as he stood there with clenched fists and beaming eyes, and the hot tears rained down her cheeks; for she knew how hard it was for her sensitive boy to meet the cold scorn of the world. "And leave your mother?" was her only answer. It was enough.

"I will never leave my poor mother," said the boy, as he threw himself, sobbing, on her bosom. "They may call me names, if they will; and, mother, if we starve, we will starve together," he added, sinking his voice almost to a whisper.

"We will not starve, my son," said the mother, kissing him fondly. "He who said, 'Ye are of more value than many sparrows,' will take care of us. Can you trust in God, my child?"

"Yes, mother—and I will never leave my dear, good mother." And the child forgot alike his anger and its cause, and with a light heart bounded away to join his playmates.

Day after day passed, and the high spirit was often chafed by the scorn and taunts of his companions. The cruelty of an inebriate father and the wretchedness of a drunkard's home, imparted no healing balm, no soothing influence. Yet he loved his mother; for her sake he was willing to endure; and the strong restraints of her love kept him from the vices to which he was constantly and fearfully exposed.

We cannot tell his heart-struggles; cannot tell how those aspirations to be and to do, rising as they do in every noble soul, did often gild his future with their radiance, only to be shrouded in darkness by the one reflection, the withering blight—the aspiring boy was a drunkard's child. Hard indeed is the heart of a drunkard. But we can tell how nobly he clung to that mother in all those years, and how honorably and successfully he fills one of the best pulpits in the land, aided in every good work by that wise, loving, and pious mother.

THE boy in school who is diligent in study, and honest and true in all his relations, may speak no words of admonition or persuasion, but by so much as he sincerely tries to do, does he lift up the whole school to a higher tone. Other scholars will fall into the pace and keep step.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

SLEEP—COMMON-SENSE VIEW.

There are, perhaps, few subjects that have been more abused by scientific writers than that of sleep. Men have examined it on scientific principles, and subjected it to scientific rules; but they never once thought of examining it in the light of common-sense.

Writers differ very greatly on this subject. Some would have us commit an unpardonable sin if we slept more than four or five hours out of twenty-four, while others very magnanimously allow us eight; and others still are so lavish as to give us ten.

Sleep is a necessity; without it we would suffer speedy dissolution. Every act that we perform, every movement we make, every thought that passes through our minds, every emotion that stirs our souls, breaks down a certain amount of nervous tissue, and leaves us weaker than before. These broken cells can be repaired during sleep only. The system, exhausted by physical and mental labor during the day, must be built up and strengthened for the next day's work during the dark, still hours of night, while the senses are locked in slumber, and the mind and muscles are all relaxed; for at no other time is this process of building up carried on.

It is impossible to lay down rules regulating the amount of sleep necessary for each individual; some persons need much more than others. The amount necessary depends much upon the age, health, temperament and climate. We propose to remain on the safe side; and this side is clearly pointed out to us by the dictates of common-sense.

We propose to lay down this one simple rule: Sleep while it is dark, whether that be long or short. This is the rule that nature teaches us, and her teaching is always correct. As soon as it is dark, labor and study should be laid aside; the mind and muscles should be gradually relaxed by light exercise and pleasant, cheerful conversation, until twilight has deepened into darkness, and then, when the system has been tempered down evenly, and the mind is at perfect rest, go to sleep,—and you will not wake until the sky lark calls you in the morning, when the first mellow light of approaching day shoots up in the east; then is the time to rise, and not sooner. If this rule be adhered to, every morning will find you fresh and vigorous—prepared to live and enjoy life; and every returning night will find you ready to relish sound, sweet, refreshing sleep.

It is no argument against this, to say that there would be a great waste of time during the long nights of winter. When winter approaches it finds us broken-down, debilitated, and relaxed by the heat of a long summer. During the winter, then, this waste must be repaired, the system must be fortified and strengthened for another summer, with its hot days and short nights.

There is nothing gained by "burning the midnight oil." The body is cramped and deformed by bending over dry books; the mind is kept on an unnatural strain; the eyes are injured by the unnatural light, and when at last sleep is sought, the mind is all active, excited and awake. The body being tired and worn out must have sleep, so the two act in opposition to each other, and the consequence is a troubled, dreamy sleep, which does not refresh or build up the system. Then, just as the mind has become relaxed, and sleep begins to refresh, the "alarm" set to wake the sleeper is sounded, and he must rise to grope in the darkness and the vapors and dampness of the morning, inhaling agues and absorbing rheumatisms; or, doing what is equally as injurious, crooking and bending his unrefreshed body over his books.

It is against the teachings of nature to suppose that we should labor during the hours of darkness. Our eyes are made only to see by the light of day, and any method by which we lengthen out the day is artificial, and was not comprehended in the original design; and if we so lengthen it out we rob ourselves, and make of none effect the laws of God.

I know that many cases may be cited of men who took only four or five hours' sleep during the night, who rose early and accomplished much; but they are only the exception, and by no means the rule. Occasionally there may be found a man who is so hardy, and blessed with so good a constitution that he will not suffer any very material inconvenience by losing a part of the hours that should be devoted to sleep; but this is by no means true of the majority of mankind.

I believe that by observing the simple teachings of nature in this respect, a great amount of suffering could be avoided, and life could be lengthened many years.

So much for the time when to sleep, and the amount necessary. A few practical suggestions may be profitable in this connection.

Feathers make a very unhealthy bed, because they retain the heat and keep the temperature of the body too high, thus debilitating the skin and rendering the system liable to contract colds; they also retain the moisture and waste matter thrown out by the lymphatics, which is absorbed, producing disease. A dry straw bed, or, what is better, a hair mattress, should be used. The bed should be level; high pillows should be avoided; they throw the head into an unnatural position, produce stooping shoulders, and prevent the free flow of blood to the brain.

Never place a very young person in the same bed with a very old one; the younger will suffer by a loss of vitality and heat. One in a bed is better than two.

The right side is best to lie upon, as it leaves the action of the heart free, and precludes the probability of undue pressure on any of the large blood vessels; but generally the body may be allowed to select its own position.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

THE OTHER SHORE.

We are drawing near to the end of earth's strife,
To the morn that beginneth eternal life;
To the evergreen glades of that beautiful land,
Where the Savior will dwell with the happy band
Of cherished ones, who have lived before,
And died on their way to the other shore.

Smiling and broad is the way of sin,
And many are they who walk therein;
But the narrow path that the saints have trod,
Is the way that leads to the christian's God,
And Jesus is waiting to welcome o'er
The heirs of grace on the other shore.

In that coming land we shall know no care,
No sin or sorrow will ever be there;
But life ever joyful to all will be given,
Who seek first of all the kingdom of heaven;
Then come, ye poor lone ones, and sorrow no more,
Your toils will all cease on the other shore.

The gates of pearl and the streets of gold,
Will our eyes on that day of days behold;
When with garments pure and free from sin,
That holy city we enter in,
And dwell with our Lord forevermore,
And sing his praise on the other shore.

"THE COMING OF THE SON OF MAN."

M. E. GRAHAM.

Christ's advent is often spoken of as being the same thing as death. Death is one thing, and the coming of the Son of man another. "As the days of Noah were, so shall the coming of the Son of man be." "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven." The coming of the Son of man will be as it was in the days of Noah; it will be sudden and unexpected, the precise time not being made known, though the indications have been given. The world will be found as it was then, that is, it will be found in the same condition that it was in the days of the flood. When the flood came, men were found "eating and drinking, marrying and given in marriage," absorbed in their worldly pursuits, and utterly regardless of Noah's repeated warnings. They would not believe there was any danger; they saw no likelihood of a flood. But at last the flood-gates of heaven were opened; the flood came very suddenly upon them, "and took them all away." Those that were not with Noah in the ark were lost; they were all swept away to their last account, unprepared, unconverted, and unpardoned, to meet God. And our Lord says, "So shall also the coming of the Son of man be." It would not be right in us to presume that the heathen will all be converted, and the earth filled with the knowledge of God, before our Lord makes his appearance in the clouds of heaven. We should not flatter ourselves that the end of all things cannot be at hand, because there is yet so much wickedness and unbelief in the world. The days of Noah and the flood are the true type of the days when our Lord shall return. The world will not be converted when the Lord Jesus comes again. Thousands of professing christians will be found worldly, thoughtless, unbelieving, and christless. Let us watch and pray, that we may not be found among them.

In this twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, our Lord further illustrates how sudden and unexpected this great calamity would take place. "Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left." The awful separation that will take place when the Lord Jesus comes again demands our serious attention. At present, the good and evil are all mingled together; the children of God and the children of the world are all side by side, in the chapel, in the place of worship, in the town and in the workshop, in the field and in the city; but in the day of our Lord's return there will be a complete division—"in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump," each party shall be separated from the other forevermore. Parents shall be separated from their children, wives from husbands, brothers from sisters. There will be no time for parting words, no time for a change of mind, when the Lord Jesus appears from heaven.

One of the characteristics of the christian is, that he believes that the Lord Jesus will return from heaven, and that he looks and waits for it. Other men do not believe this, but the christian confidently expects it. His Savior has been taken away from the earth, and is now in heaven; but it is a great, standing article of his faith, that the same Savior will again come, and take the believer to himself. The fact that he will come is identified with all our hopes; it is fitted to cheer us in trial, to guard us in temptation, to make us dead to the world, to lead us to keep the eye turned towards heaven.

This was the firm belief of the early christians—they looked for the coming of the Savior from heaven; and this expectation was [illegible] earthly affairs were of little importance, as the scenes here were soon to close; to live above the world, and in the desire of the appearing of the Lord Jesus, and to be prepared for his coming. "Watch!" says our Lord, "for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh."

OBEDIENCE.—No. 4.

O. R. FASSETT.

Obedience to the Father's will entitles the obedient to the most endearing relationship with Jesus Christ. "Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." Matt. 12:50. Our divine Master had been instructing the people in a certain place, and while he was yet speaking, and his discourse unfinished, he was apprised that his mother and his brethren were without desiring to speak with him. For what purpose they wished to communicate with him, we are not informed. It was a matter, probably, of but little comparative importance; certainly not of sufficient consequence to intrude upon his public ministrations. We are too apt to magnify into undue importance our temporal affairs, and allow them to intrude upon our hours of devotion, which should be improved to our spiritual advantage. This was the case with Martha, the sister of Lazarus and Mary. While Mary improved the time her Lord was present with them to store her mind with useful knowledge, "Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me." Jesus thus rebuked her: "Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things; but one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her." Luke 10:38–42.

There are too many Marthas in the world, who multiply needlessly their domestic duties, to gratify their husbands, families, and especially visiting friends, and have too little time to spend with Jesus in prayer and communion, and meditation on his word. Husbands, and christian friends, be careful how you demand from these diligent and care-worn wives and sisters too much undue labor and toil, to gratify your appetites at the table, or pamper your pride. Lend a helping hand, and aid them through their necessary duties, that they may have more time with Jesus.

The same lesson is taught by Jesus to the multitude, as was taught Martha: "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you." John 6:27. Oh, how many toil hard and anxiously for a mere temporal sustenance and support, neglecting the "bread of eternal life," while—

"'Tis but little we need—
Nor need that little long."
"We are passing away."

Our Lord's reply to those informing him of the desire of his kindred to speak with him shows how apt he was to improve every circumstance to impart religious instruction. Now he teaches the lesson of obedience to the higher will—"the will of our Father which is in heaven." He did not treat with irreverence, disrespect, or neglect, his mother and kindred in the flesh. He gave them all due attention and obedience; yet in his practical life revealed "the higher life." When but a child twelve years of age, he went up to Jerusalem with his mother and kindred, and while they returned he "tarried behind in Jerusalem." They went a day's journey homeward, supposing him to have been in the company; but when they missed him, they returned to Jerusalem to seek for him; and, to their astonishment, they found him "in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions." "Amazed," "his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us?" In his reply he said, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Luke 2:41–49. The apostle thus instructs children after the pattern of Christ's example: "Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right." Eph. 6:1. Parents have no right to demand of their children disobedience to God, or impose hindrances in the way of their obedience to the gospel and its requirements. Children have the right of conscience in matters of obedience to Christ, when they are called into his service.

Mary, the mother of Jesus, exclaimed with ecstasy, on the announcement of the angel that she was to be the mother of the long expected Messiah—"My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Savior. For he hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden; for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed." Luke 1:46–48. How passing strange is it that in our states of highest and most rapturous spiritual enjoyment and prosperity, and when most blest of God, personal pride will seek self exaltation. The thought of Mary's humbled heart was, the commendation of posterity. Yet she was honored with being the mother of Jesus. Another woman, carried away with enthusiasm at the wonders Jesus performed, and the gracious words he spake, cried out, "Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked"; thus losing all discretion and delicacy of language in the fanaticism of the hour. But Jesus replied, "Yea, rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it." Luke 11:27, 28. If to be the natural mother of the Lord Jesus' humanity, and a brother or sister by the tie of nature, be an honor and a blessing, the more so is it to be among the sanctified to this relationship. "Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, [illegible]

For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." Here is the spiritual and eternal relationship which exceeds by far all mere natural or human ties, which are for mere time. And this we may claim through obedience.

O how near and dear were the disciples and followers of our Lord to him in the days of his earthly sojourn and humiliation,—the beloved John, the impetuous Peter, and all of the eleven! How "Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus"; and how often in their home was he entertained hospitably and lovingly, "with a pure heart fervently." And it is written of the strength of Jesus' love, as he was about to "depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end." John 13:1. With the same love he has loved his whole church, including ourselves, if we are his; for he prays for all—"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." And he prays "that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee; that they also may be one in us." John 17. Oh, what a blessed prayer, and how it opens the loving heart of Jesus to us. And says the apostle, "Both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren." Heb. 2:11.

Ye aged women, who do the will of the Father; who have stood weeping beneath the cross and borne it with Jesus, see how he honors you, placing you beside his own mother in the flesh in his heart's affections; and if he cared for her in his last and dying hours, and provided for her in the affections of his beloved disciple (John 19:25–27), will he not care and provide for you through life's closing days? "Who is my mother? . . . . Whosoever shall do the will of my Father" among you, ye aged women, would Jesus say. Then trust in him, and cast your care upon him, for he careth for you.

Ye younger women, who, like Martha and Mary, enjoy communion at times with Jesus, and whom he seems to visit more or less often by his Spirit, giving you words of knowledge and comfort,—do you from the heart want to know and do the will of God? and do you do it to the best of your ability in your weakness, amid life's cares, perplexities, trials, and bereavements? Remember, Jesus esteems you his sister, and says, "The same is my . . . . . sister." Ever choose "that good part, which shall not be taken from" you, even the promise of "eternal life."

Brethren in the Lord, ye sanctified and faithful ones, who are doing the will of the Father, Jesus says he is "not ashamed to call" you "brethren": "the same is my brother." Yes, we may claim this relationship to him. He is our Elder Brother, and of us he will "not be ashamed" before the Father and his holy angels "at his coming." Happy are all they to whom the King at his coming shall say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," and invite into his eternal presence with the gracious words, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.

A SHORT SERMON,

BY A BOY PREACHER IN 1867.

"Pass the time of your sojourning here in fear."—1 Pet. 1:17.

We are so wedded to this world that we have constant need of exhortation. Our minds need stirring up frequently to a remembrance of the things which were spoken before by the holy prophets, the apostles, and Jesus Christ himself. Paul exhorts us to "consider one another, to provoke unto love and to good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Heb. 10:24, 25. Timothy was commanded to be "an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity. Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine. Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery. Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear to all. Take heed unto thyself, and to the doctrine; continue in them; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." 1 Tim. 4:12–16.

The apostle Peter exhorts his brethren to gird up the loins of their mind, to be sober, and hope to the end. He endeavors to cheer them with the prospect of immortality when Jesus comes. Grace is to be brought, and inasmuch as they were looking for such great things, he advises them to maintain a holy deportment, as obedient children; not fashioning themselves according to their former lusts in their ignorance; but as he who had called them was holy, so they were to be holy in all manner of conversation; and as they called God their Father, who was an impartial Judge of all human conduct, it became them to pass the time of their sojourning here in fear.

1. The christian is a sojourner. A sojourner is one who dwells in a strange country, and has no possession in it of his own. Thus "Abram went down to Egypt to sojourn there." He felt himself a stranger and a pilgrim, and by his unsettled state he was kept in mind of the "city which hath foundations," that is permanent and stable, whose builder is the living God. It was by faith that he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. So christians are absent from their native country. They are born from above. Their citizenship is in heaven. This world is but the place of their pilgrimage during [illegible] in all ages have occupied this position. The ancient seed of Abraham saw the promises "afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."

The Psalmist David and the prophets possessed the same faith, and cherished the same hope. 1 Chron. 29:15,—"For we are strangers before thee and sojourners, as were all our fathers. Our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding." Christ told his disciples that he had chosen them out of the world; and so it has been ever since. Christ has been gathering out of the Gentiles a people for his name. The gospel has been proclaimed, and though multitudes have rejected and despised it, yet some have gladly received and obeyed it, and to them it has been the "power of God unto salvation."

Such have received the spirit of adoption; they have broken off from the world, and have become the followers of Him who was a "man of sorrows and acquainted with grief;" and so this world is to them what it was to him—a vale of tears; a land of sorrow and poverty; a furnace of affliction; a battle-field; a scene of stern, dangerous, and incessant conflict. Here was no rest, or peace, or home, or pleasure for the Savior; he wandered as an exile in a world which despised and abused him. And so the christian is taught to view these things as so many temporal and fleeting troubles, which are destined to fill his cup of sorrow, and prepare him to appreciate the river of God's pleasures when the bitterness of sorrow's cup is eternally forgotten. But the christian can say however with the apostle, "These light afflictions which are but for a moment, work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." 2 Cor. 4:17, 18.

II. A sojourner is at a distance from his relatives. Some of these may be with him, but the most of them are out of his sight and beyond his reach. So it is with those whom God has called to labor in his vineyard; and oh, how bitter the parting when we have to bid farewell to all, to go forth into a wicked, unbelieving world, to preach an unpopular doctrine, and meet with buffetings and disappointments on every hand. I well remember how the big tears rolled down my face as I bade farewell to home and friends to go forth in my weakness to seek the salvation of sinners; and as I stood upon the hill not far away, and turned and took one more view of the home of my youth, thinking perhaps it might be the last, how sad my heart felt. Then I went to the old spot beside the wood where I used to pray, and there knelt and besought the Lord to save my friends, and as I went forth weeping and bearing the precious seed, to make me instrumental in saving sinners, so that in the harvest day I might return with joy, bringing my sheaves with me. This was a sad hour. But I believe the Lord has heard my prayer, for all my brothers have been converted, and I have seen many sinners brought to Christ, which I hope to meet in that glorious day when God makes up his jewels.

We not only must be separated sometimes from those who are near and dear to us by the ties of nature, but God's dear saints are separated one from another. Though they all belong to one family, and all have one Father, yet they have never all met as yet. They are scattered throughout the world. Broad lands separate them. Wide oceans separate them. Strange tongues divide them. Satan divides them, and death separates them. Multitudes have left us and gone to their long home, and we are left to mourn their loss. So here we wander sad and lonely through this weary world. But we sorrow not as those that have no hope, for we know in a little while the whole scattered family of God will be gathered home. Not one will be left behind. The angels shall gather them all. How beauteous will be their glittering ranks. They will be glorious beyond description, and Christ himself will be glorified in them. Brethren long parted will be there. Companions in labor will be there. Saints of all ages and climes will be there, and the garland of immortal brotherhood shall weave itself about their glowing hearts. Death will be destroyed, and all tears wiped from their eyes. They shall part no more. Their crowns will never cease.

III. A sojourner is sometimes exposed to rough treatment by the natives. They cast out his name as evil. They derided and persecuted him. His principles, pursuits, exertions and hopes were hated by the wicked. And is not this the case with christians? Do they not have to suffer from the wicked one who have their portion in this life? Have not God's children suffered in all ages of the world? Did not the child of the bond-woman persecute the son of the free? Is it not so at the present time? Gal. 4:31. This fact is abundantly proved both by history and our own experience. Jesus said in John 15:19, 20,—"If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his Lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you? If they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also." Again (17:14)—"I have given them thy word, and the world hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." And Paul declares in 2 Tim. 3:12—"All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Jesus was persecuted, reviled, hated, and spit upon, when he was upon the earth; but see him now exalted as a prince [illegible] saints may be abused, and look contemptible in the eyes of an ungodly world, but the time is coming when they will triumph. For if we suffer with him, we shall be also glorified together. Rom. 8:17.

IV. A sojourner is but little known. His friendship, his companionship, are not counted. He has pleasures and bright anticipations of future bliss to which sinners are strangers. When Jesus made his appearance to this world, he did not come among the great, the rich, or the noble; but he was born of poor parents, and grew up in humble circumstances, a poor laboring man, a carpenter, and when he preached it was to the common people, who heard him gladly. The proud Pharisees and hypocritical Jews were offended at him, or stumbled over him, just because of his humble life, teachings and death. They knew him not. But although Jesus suffered, being rejected and persecuted, yet he endured it all patiently for the joy that was set before him. And so this same prospect is before his faithful followers. The proud, the great, the rich and honorable of this world are strangers to the sweet peace and glorious prospects of the humble disciples of Jesus. Christ's followers are generally poor, consequently they are unknown. But God knows them. "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him?" The saints are kings and priests in disguise. They are unknown to a great extent by the unbelieving world, but the time is coming when the humble shall be exalted, and there will be a glorious manifestation of the children of God. "The righteous shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father."

V. A sojourner has no inheritance in the country through which he is traveling. This world is not the christian's rest. It is polluted and defiled by sin. He seeks a better country, that is an heavenly one. "Wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he hath prepared for them a city." God's people have not yet received their reward. The ancient worthies died in the faith, but did not receive the promise, "God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." The world to come is to be the christian's home. God promised it to Abraham and to his seed for an everlasting possession. Paul says, "He saith not and to seeds, as of many, but as of one; and to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. 3:16. "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Jesus "shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom [this earth] all things that offend, and them which do iniquity." "Then shall the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." "Then shall the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever." "Then shall the King say to them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Many shall come from the east and west, and from the north and south, and shall sit down in the kingdom with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

These are a few of the many passages that bring to view the saints' inheritance. And how blessed it will be to be there, when the curse shall be removed, with all its concomitant miseries; when the clouds and mists of time shall flee away, and the glory of God shall fill the whole earth. We shall then find rest to our weary souls; rest from wicked men and wicked oppressors; rest from the storm-gusts that have blown life's ocean into billows of sorrow, trouble, and dismay. Sin shall be banished from that peaceful clime; darkness and sadness shall not enter there. There shall be no briny tear to bedew the pallid cheek; no death-knell to ring solemnly and mournfully out upon the passing breeze; no sigh to heave the troubled breast; no death to sunder the tenderest ties; but all will be abiding, unending, eternal. Christ will then reign on David's throne and over the house of Jacob forever. Then "the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." The New Jerusalem will descend; all things shall be made new; death and pain and sorrow and crying will be ended, and God shall be all and in all.

VI. The christian's pilgrimage here is but short and fleeting. It is but a little while longer that we shall have to put up with the inconveniences of this world. The bright and glorious things for which the church of God has been looking and praying these many years, are about to be opened to her joyful gaze. The New Jerusalem which the ancient patriarchs saw by faith, and which John saw in vision coming down from God out of heaven, will soon descend, while the vast and radiant cloud of glory shall unfold its gorgeous portal, and the angels of God shall escort the ransomed host in through the pearly gates. Then the Savior's smile will be seen and his greeting heard. The pierced hand will wipe away the lingering tear. The dead and the living will be together once more. The blood-besprinkled host will gather around the table, and the marriage supper of the Lamb will be celebrated. These things are very soon to be realized. The signs of the times proclaim in thunder tones the end of all things at hand. Soon this earth will tremble beneath the footsteps of its coming Judge. Its hills and rocks will soon echo with the sound of the judgment trump. Soon old Babylon will go down like the mighty mill-stone, while the saints and [illegible]

Lord God omnipotent reigneth." Who, then, can stand save those who have on the wedding garment? Let us secure it while we may, for soon it will be too late.

VII. The christian must pass the time of his sojourning here in fear. Not in slavish fear, for there is no necessity for that. Christians "have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father." Rom. 8:15. They are made free in Christ, so that they can say indeed, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." They do not fear death, for Christ has conquered death, and "brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." But christians are to walk in reverential fear,—in fear of sin, in fear of offending God, in fear of temptation, in fear of loving the creature more than God. Paul explains it in 2 Cor. 7:1—"Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." Again (1 Pet. 2:11)—"Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul; having your conversation honest among the Gentiles; that whereas they speak against you as evil doers, they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation."

We are to abstain from "the very appearance of evil," and walk so circumspectly before God, that we may be living epistles read and known of all men. A mere form of godliness without the power will avail us nothing in that day when our works shall be tried by fire. We shall need something more than a mere profession of religion. We must have the life-giving presence of the Holy Ghost; for if we have not the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his." Our righteousness must exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, or we can never enter the kingdom of heaven. We must have that righteousness within that developes itself in practical conformity to the will of Christ. But more particularly—

1. As sojourners, let us live as though we are really not at home, manifesting by our conduct deadness to the world, and in earnest pursuit after spiritual and celestial happiness, that we belong to a better country, that is, an heavenly. If we are risen with Christ, let us have our affections placed on things above, not on things on the earth; remembering that "we are dead, and our life is hid with Christ in God; and when He who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory."

There are many who profess to be the disciples of Christ, but they are all buried up in the things of this world; lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; consequently they dislike to hear the plain, practical truths of the gospel, because it hits them; but, nevertheless, we are in duty bound to declare the whole truth, whether men will hear or forbear; for we read—"If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him"; and if the love of God be not in us, we are destitute of the Spirit, for "the love of God is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost; and if the Spirit be not in us, we are not christians, for "if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Again, we are commanded to present our bodies living sacrifices unto God, and to be "not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

2. Let us not strike deeply our roots here, nor encumber ourselves with the things of this world, considering what a journey we have to take, what a race we have to run. "Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us; looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high." Let us "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath set" us "free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." Christians now should be free from sin, and from everything that would be an impediment to their usefulness in the cause of Christ. Ministers should not have their attention and their minds engrossed with the things of earth; but they should be full of faith and the Holy Ghost, and labor with all their might for the salvation of sinners. The whole church of God ought to awake immediately and cast off the works of darkness, and put on the armor of light, if she would be ready to meet the coming King.

Brethren and sisters, if we profess to be the children of the Most High, how can we be so half-hearted? Why are we not more in earnest? How is it that we can be so careless, so stupid and indifferent? Why are we not more willing to speak and pray when we come together? Let us awake and gird on the whole armor. Come out from the world with all its glittering show. Stand for God. Resist the devil. Hold up the truth. Expose error. Rebuke sin. Pray without ceasing. Love God with all the heart, and love one another with pure hearts fervently.

3. Are you sojourners? Remember that the eyes of the natives are upon you; they will make no allowance, show you no mercy, scrutinize your actions. How careful, then, ought we to live, when we are watched daily by those who make no profession. How often has my heart been grieved when I have seen those that professed to be the followers of Jesus associating with unbelievers, and joining with them in all their fun and frivolity; and I have heard the unconverted say, If such individuals are christians, [illegible] professors would see that sinners are stumbling over them into perdition, and that they themselves are vainly dreaming of heaven, while their own hearts are deceiving them. If any such should read these lines, let them remember that "God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." "He that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Let us take heed to our ways, and make sure work for eternity. "Walk in wisdom towards them that are without; redeeming the time, because the days are evil." Let us not be found indulging in vain and trifling conversation, but rather let our words be seasoned with grace, remembering that Jesus said that "for every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." May God help us so to walk, talk, and live, that others by seeing our good works may be led to glorify our Father which is in heaven.

4. We should recommend the gospel, while we sojourn, to those around us, by a corresponding temper. We ourselves must first experience the purifying effects of the gospel upon our hearts, and breathe forth the heavenly spirit and disposition which it produces, or we cannot be successful in laboring for the salvation of those around us. We must first be the disciples of Christ ourselves, before we can say "will ye also be his disciples." We must practice what we preach, if we would have others listen with candor to what we say. One tendency of the gospel is to destroy selfishness and hatred, and produce love and benevolence. So when our hearts are full of love and sympathy, we can labor more effectually to save the perishing than in any other way. We must let them see that we feel for them, that we really love them, and that we are in earnest to secure their welfare, and then we can more easily win them over to the Lord. We should never shun to speak the truth, but we should always speak the truth in love. We hear it said sometimes by those who have listened to a sermon from some preacher: "We liked what he said well enough, but we did not like the spirit he manifested." How important it is that we know what manner of spirit we are of. We cannot drive men to Christ by using harsh means; and when christians have hard feelings, and speak hard words about each other, they need not expect to see sinners converted. "By this," says Christ, "shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." Let us strive, then, to be full of love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.

5. In a short time we shall be at home in our Father's house. Soon we shall have done with all the unkindness and suspicions and censures of those who surround us. Soon, if we are found faithful to the end, we shall share in the fruits of a glorious victory. We have been sojourners in this wicked world for a long time. Sorrow's cup, with all its bitterness, has been wrung out to us. We have been like travelers in an inn. But soon we shall know what it is to enjoy the comforts of our own happy home. When these splendid blessings are given to the saints of God, every description of misery shall have disappeared, never again to becloud the comforts of the ransomed throng, or to interrupt their everlasting enjoyment. The tears of sorrow will no more bathe the cheeks of the followers of the Lamb, and they shall no more become the victims of death's tyrannical dominion. The cup of mingled sorrows shall no more be presented to their lips, for the cause of sorrow shall be removed. There shall be no more weeping and crying, the expression of sorrow. There shall be no more pain, either of body produced by maladies lingering and acute, or of mind produced by afflictions, perplexing and severe. When these mighty deliverances are effected, "the former things shall have passed away, and all things shall have become new." Sin shall have passed away, and unspotted holiness shall enjoy the exercise of undisturbed authority. Enemies and temptations shall have passed away, and stormy tempests will be followed by the tranquility of eternal peace. All things shall be made new. And let us hear the following encouraging words, and may the Spirit of God apply them to the reader's heart,—"He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." Amen.

J. W. Thomas.

WORKING CHRISTIANS.

Learn to be working christians. "Be ye doers of the Word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." It is very striking to see the usefulness of many christians. Are there none of you who know what it is to be selfish in your christianity? You have seen a selfish child go into a secret place to enjoy some delicious morsel undisturbed by his companions. So it is with some christians. They feed upon Christ and forgiveness; but it is all alone, and all for themselves. Are there not some of you who can enjoy being a christian, while your dearest friend is not; and yet you will not speak to him? See, here, you have got work to do. When Christ found you he said, "Go, work in my vineyard." What were you hired for if it was not to spread salvation? What blessed for? O, my christian friends, how little you live as though you were the servants of Christ. How much idle time and idle talk you have. This is not like a good servant. How many things you have to do for yourself; how few for Christ and his people. This is not like a servant.—McCheyne.

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

In less than a month the time will arrive for the commencement of our great annual gathering at Springfield, Mass. We are expecting the best meeting we have ever had. Let all who feel interested make that meeting a subject of special prayer, that it may accomplish more good than any previous one. The evidence is very strong to show that Jesus is coming soon; but there is reason to fear that but few of those who profess to believe it are ready. Let each reader ask the question, am I living in constant preparation for that great event? is my heart pure? am I clothed with Christ's righteousness? would I be glad to have Jesus come to-day? If not ready, what must I do to be prepared? There is no time for delay.

There is one passage of Scripture we wish all would remember, and consider with very close attention. It is this: "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Heb. 11 : 14. Are we up to the standard presented in this verse? It is to be feared that many are below it. Let each inquire, am I at peace with all men? have I the holiness necessary to admit me to the presence of the Lord?

At our next national campmeeting, it is hoped all who are anxious to get ready for the coming of Christ, will try to be present. Let us meet for no other object but to consecrate all to the Lord for ever, and to get strength and courage to go forth and labor in the vineyard of the Lord with more energy and zeal than at any former period. As a people, we need a fresh anointing with the power of the Holy Spirit. We must have pure hearts, as well as right doctrine, if we expect to be ready for the coming of Jesus. Let us come together and have a thorough heart examination, confessing and forsaking all our sins, that we may be cleansed "from all unrighteousness" It is proposed to have special daily meetings at Springfield, expressly for the benefit of those who are anxious to sanctify themselves entirely to Christ, and be fully prepared for his coming.

Dear Brn. and Srs., we would urge that all make it a subject of prayer that the Lord may help us to see the necessity of holiness of heart in order to be saved; and that he will beget in all our hearts an earnest hungering after righteousness; for we have the promise that those who hunger and thirst after it "shall be filled." Let us throw off every weight, and come at once to the Lord's standard. May our motto be, "Holiness to the Lord."

New Bedford.—Our meeting in the City Hall, New Bedford, July 16th, was one of special interest. The beautiful hall was filled with a very attentive audience; and the Spirit of the Lord rested upon us, producing a hungering and thirsting after righteousness, which indicated blessed results. We all felt it was good to be there. There are a number in New Bedford who are rooted and grounded in the hope of the gospel; and who are anxiously waiting for the coming of the Son of man, expecting to see him soon. We believe their expectation is well founded. Indeed, we see no chance for any other conclusion. It is time every one, who desires to be at "the marriage supper of the Lamb," should have his heart "free from sin," ready to go and meet the "Coming One," when he shall appear in glory.

A NEW THEORY.

We have just received a pamphlet of seventy-two pages, entitled "A Vindication of the Government of God over the Children of men; or the Promise and Oath of God to Abraham." By George Storrs. In this pamphlet Bro. Storrs endeavors to prove that all who have not heard the gospel will be raised from the dead, and have an opportunity to hear about Christ, when they will either receive or reject him. We would say that the arguments presented by Bro. S. in favor of his position, do not convince our mind that his new system of salvation for the heathen is correct, and in harmony with the Scriptures. We can see that his new position overthrows his former one, in relation to the resurrection of the wicked dead. He and his associates have urged the point that no one could be raised from the dead except those who had the Spirit of Christ in them; that is, none but christians. Of course, he will not claim that the heathen were christians, in possession of the Spirit of Christ; hence, when he assumes that they will be raised to hear the preaching of the gospel, in the coming age, he strikes a death-blow to the doctrine of the non-resurrection of all who are not christians. Both positions cannot be true, because they contradict each other. If one unconverted man will be raised, why not all?

We think it best to believe Paul, when he said: "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust" (Acts 24 : 15); and Jesus when he said: "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which ALL that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." John 5 : 28, 29.

Turned Out.—The following is from the Evangel, in California:

"In the Union Square Church two were baptised on Sunday. Last week this church excluded three of its members for upholding the soul-sleeping and annihilation doctrines of Second Adventism. One of the three thus disfellowshipped was Rev. Thomas Howell, once ordained to the Baptist ministry."

We are acquainted with Bro. Howell, and esteem him highly as a devoted christian, and a member of the true church of Christ. We very much doubt his name was blotted out of the Lamb's book of life when it was crossed off from the books of the Union Square church. Bro. Howell has great reason to rejoice that Jesus keeps the true records.

Perfect Love.—Those who wish to enjoy the perfect love that casteth out all fear, will find in another column an excellent article from the Guide to Holiness. And, by the way, we wish to commend this valuable monthly to our readers. It is published by W. C. Palmer, Jr., 111 East 9th St., New York, at $1.25 a year.

What Motive?—We would call special attention to an article headed "What is your motive?" It contains important considerations that require the careful consideration of all who attend meetings. Give it more than a careless reading. Weigh the matter candidly, and let the right motive prevail.

NEW TRACT.

Just published by the A. C. P. Society, Symbolization of the World's Eventful Crisis, by O. R. Fassett.

An excellent tract of 16 pages, showing that we are living amid the events occurring under the opening of the "sixth seal"; that "we are witnessing them, and are far down in their history, and close upon the end of this world and the solemn judgment scenes."

Price, single, 2 cts.; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail.

☞ Eld. Thomas Smith of Bangor, Me., now nearly eighty years old, and a faithful servant of God, we are sorry to say is sick, and unable to do anything in preaching or traveling, as he has extensively in years past. He says: "I ask the prayers of the church of the living God, that I may glorify God in this time of tribulation, be restored to working health, if it be his pleasure, or be willing to suffer as shall please the Lord."

A SPIRITUALIST'S PRAYER.

Instead of praying to the Lord, the Spiritualists often pray to the spirits of the dead, as did the ancient Brahmins, Hindoos, Greeks and Romans. In short, Spiritualism is only a revival of hero worship, or necromancy. The demons are deceiving this generation as did the heathen two thousand years ago. Instead of progressing, Spiritualists have gone back into the gross darkness and deception practiced in ancient witchcraft, divination, and sorcery. The doctrines they teach are the same as those taught in Pagan Rome, and other heathen nations.

The following prayer was offered by E. S. Wheeler, in the Music Hall, Boston, Sunday, March 5th, 1871, and reported in the "Banner of Light," July 15th, 1871.

"Most holy angels, oh ye great and good and beautiful souls who have made earth the heaven it is fast becoming, hear our prayers. Unable to comprehend an Infinite Mind, we offer our supplications to you. Great souls that have blessed the world, condescend to bless us. Martyrs, heroes, patriots—ye who have inspired in all times the hearts of men, give us your sympathy, your love, your wisdom in this hour. Mighty ones of years gone by—Pythagoras, Zoroaster, Confucius, Buddha—all ye who have gone before us, understanding the experiences of the life in which we live, and the richer, riper wisdom of the life beyond, be ye unto us the angels of the Father whom we cannot comprehend, and bestow upon us your inspiration. From the deep ocean of your spiritual life, let flow upon us the waters of a celestial baptism. Reach down from the heaven above us the white hand of angel inspiration, and guide us through the scenes of earth-life to a heaven of restful labor evermore. Come to us, Socrates, Plato, Jesus, Mahomet, Ann Lee, Washington, Channing, Elizabeth Browning, Theodore Parker—all who have lived, all who have suffered, all who have inherited angelic life and passed into the inner court of the temple of the infinite. Come to us, and bring to-day the holy shew-bread of the sanctuary, and break it upon the curb-stone to feed the multitude of the present age. Hear us as we ask for strength and wisdom, and give, in answer to our practical prayer for help, that assistance which you well know is our necessity. Amen."

It will be observed that among the "most holy angels," to whom Mr. Wheeler prays, are the heathen philosophers, Pythagoras, Zoroaster, Confucius, Buddha, Socrates and Plato, including Ann Lee, and Theodore Parker of modern times; and then in the same group he puts Jesus and Mahomet. This is a specimen of praying among those who profess to be reviving ancient Christianity, which is to bless all mankind, and reform the world. It is so plainly the devil's religion, it seems strange that any one, but a pagan, should listen for a moment to such heathen notions. Yet all this is but the result of believing in the devil's lie, that man has an immortal soul or spirit, that continues to live when the man is dead and sleeping in the grave. O, when will men awake to see this terrible delusion, on which rest all false systems of religion, and take instead the word of the Lord as their only rule of faith and practice? O for holy boldness to stand up everywhere against the lie of the devil.

The Methodist appears on the first of July (its twelfth birthday) in a new typographical dress, and enlarged by the addition of eight columns. "The Methodist" is considered the leading independent, unofficial organ of American Methodism. In order that everybody may have an opportunity to test its merits as a religious newspaper, the publisher offers to send it free for one month, to any one who will apply for it.

SUNDRY EXPOSITIONS.

Replies to the following requests and queries may not be void of interest to many other readers of the Crisis, aside from the writer of this note, so I reply through the paper:

Mr. W. Sheldon:—A diligent student of the Bible wishes to know your interpretation of the following passages of Scripture:—(1.) "And when the sun was going down, a deep sleep fell upon Abraham, and, lo, a horror of great darkness fell upon Abraham.... And it came to pass that when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace and burning lamp that passed between those pieces." (2.) Also, 1 Cor. 15 : 29. Also, Ezek. 37th chapter. (4.) Also, the last two chapters of Isaiah on eating swine's flesh. (5.) Also, what Paul meant by saying that some men's sins go before to judgment, and some men they do follow after. 1 Tim. 5 : 24. (6.) Also, 1 Cor. 7 : 14. (7.) Also, Jer. 31st chapter. Please reply through the columns of the Crisis, as I have recently taken that paper, and oblige S. S. Cristman.

Response.

1. The passage referred to in Gen. 15 : 12, 17, is a record of Jehovah's method of assuring Abram that he should ultimately possess the promised land; for Abram had just inquired (v. 8), "Whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?" God bade Abram prepare for the administering of an oath after a custom then in practice, by dividing beasts; the person taking the oath must pass between these dead animals, thus virtually saying, Let me thus die if I fail to fulfill my promise. After Abram had prepared for the taking of the oath by Jehovah, in order that Abram might not be led to suppose that he should receive the promised inheritance during his temporal life, a deep sleep, typical of the sleep of death, is caused to pass over him; and then he is told that he must die and be buried in a good old age; that his posterity should be foreign bondmen four hundred years, then return to Canaan,—all this to precede the giving of the land to Abram; then, having fully guarded Abram against receiving the wrong impression from the oath, Jehovah appears to Abram, not as he appeared to Moses, in a fire in a bush, but as "a smoking furnace and burning lamp," and passed between the pieces, thus rendering a failure in fulfilling this promise of land to Abram as much impossible as the death of Jehovah.

2. "Baptized for the dead." By baptism we express, through an outward figure, our faith in the resurrection, being buried and raised again, in imitation of Christ's resurrection; but if Christ has not been raised, he is still dead, and then every performance of this ceremony is rendered meaningless, and amounts to nothing less than being "baptized for the dead"—a dead Jesus. Why express a resurrection from the dead by this ordinance, if the dead rise not? Why be baptized for a dead Messiah? For as surely as the dead saints are not to be raised literally hereafter, Christ has not been raised in the past, being the first fruits or specimen. Paul was showing the inconsistency of a denial of a resurrection, (1) by proving that the sentiment carried out would rob Christ of a resurrection, and (2) reduce baptism to a meaningless figure.

3. As we have no right to explain God's explanation, the vision of the valley of dry bones stands already explained to signify, "I will open your graves, and bring you up out of your graves," etc. That explanation needs no explaining. Then they will enter the promised land, being "one nation" under one King, David II., or the son of David, having been gathered at the resurrection from among the the heathen, where many of them had died, together with their children and children's children, coming in multiplied numbers from every realm, being cleansed from mortality, with the tabernacle of God among them; while the ungodly will be convinced that there is a living God, but too late to secure salvation.

4. We do not think that a correct exposition of the last two chapters of Isaiah (which cannot be given now) would discountenance the eating of swine's flesh in this age, all positive prohibitions against the practice having been abrogated; still the reason why God forbade the practice still exists, so I refrain from eating it. There is now no prohibition against eating skunks or alligators. Shall we, therefore, eat them?

5. Some men commit sins for which temporal judgment is inflicted, while others sin on without any display of divine wrath against them in this life. Some were struck blind in a moment, some delivered over to Satan, and some struck dead. Some good men, too, receive temporal favors for their good deeds, while others might not profit by such special interpositions, but rather be lifted up and ruined thereby.

6. The statement in 1 Cor. 7 : 14, "Else were your children unclean; but now are they holy," does not prove that some children are born holy, and some born unholy, as many suppose; but simply proves that they are made or kept holy by the power of true christian influence, as will be seen by reading the first part of the text, in connection with this statement: "For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the [believing] wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the [believing] husband; else [if it were not for this power of influence] were your children unclean; but now are they holy." The same powerful influence that could sanctify an unbelieving husband or wife, would make the children clean also. There is no hint given here that some children are born clean, and others unclean.

7. A mere outline exposition of Jer. 31 must suffice at present. From the first to the thirty-first verse, we have a glowing picture given of the return and national prosperity of Israel, after their northern captivity; but it should be remembered that this prophecy, as well as all national prophecies, can be fulfilled, whether in part or in full, only in harmony with this God-given rule: "At what instant I speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it; if it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good, wherewith I said I would benefit them." Jer. 18 : 9, 10. This portion of the prophecy includes the slaughter under Herod, hence is not in the future. From verse thirty-one to thirty-eight the New Covenant, now in its incipient stage, is presented. In its glorious culmination, Israel immortalized will be a "nation" perpetually—not in a mortal state, else death would eternally exist, like the sun and moon. At the thirty-eighth verse, a new prophecy of national prosperity is presented, to be governed by the rule already referred to, which applies to all national threats and promises. Many great promises must thus remain unfulfilled. W. S.

NOTES ON PROPHECY.—No. 4.

PROPHECY OF DAVID.

David not only looked forward to the dark hour of death that should enshroud him in its dreamless slumbers, but he contemplated a time to come when the sleep of death should end, and he be permitted to wake up in the immortal likeness of his Redeemer. "As for me, I shall behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." Ps. 17 : 15. "But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave; for he shall receive me." Ps. 49 : 15. "Thou, which hast showed me great and sore troubles, shalt quicken me again, and shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth." Ps. 70 : 20.

David did not regard death as a finality, but as a sleep from which he should "awake." He expected to enter the grave, but he also expected in due time to be quickened by the power of God, and to be brought up again from the darkness of death. And beyond the dark reign of death, he saw a golden age for the faithful. "Evil doers shall be cut off; but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth.... But the meek shall inherit the earth; and they shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace..... The Lord knoweth the days of the upright; and their inheritance shall be forever.... For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth; and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off... .. The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever.... Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it." Ps. 37 : 9, 11, 18, 22, 29, 34. Thus, at some epoch of time, the wicked are to be dispossessed, and earth to be given to the saints forever, many of whom are now sleeping, but soon to awake. W. S.

WHERE ARE ENOCH AND ELIJAH?

A brother writing from Vermont, remarks: "Jesus said when on earth—'No man hath ascended up to heaven.' Where did Enoch and Elijah go?"

We are not informed in the Bible to what locality they were transported, but evidently not to the heaven of God's residence, where our High Priest is officiating, the realm of light "which no man can approach unto," and to which "no man hath ascended." Of Enoch it is affirmed, "God took him" from earth, and "Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven—into the atmospheric heaven. We read of "the winds of heaven," "the fowls of heaven," "the dews of heaven," and "the clouds of heaven," reference being made to the atmospheric heaven, and not the heaven of angelic residence. And on this principle it is plainly seen that Enoch and Elijah must be taken into heaven in leaving earth, but not the heaven of Jehovah's abode.

Doubtless they were transported to some planet, for some wise purpose; but since nothing has been revealed about the matter, nothing definite can be known concerning it, aside from the fact that they are not in heaven. In short, we are told where they are not, but are not told where they are. And even if it could be proved that they are in heaven, it would not prove the theory of a disembodied passport thither. If there is a disembodied existence, and it is preferable, God has assigned Enoch and Elijah an inferior position, thus making their translation a curse to them. Who believes that? W. S.

"RESTRAIN NOT GRACE FROM THE DEAD."

It is well known that the Catholic version of the Bible contains more books than the Protestant Bible, including apocryphal books; and when hard pressed for authority for the practice of offering prayers for the dead, they sometimes quote this passage from their Bible: "A gift hath grace in the sight of all the living, and restrain not grace from the dead." Eccl. 7 : 37. A person must be hard pressed for proof to (1) go out of the Bible to find it, and (2) to pervert it when found. This statement simply relates to grace, or favors bestowed upon the living, or the dead, in the form of a "gift"—gifts for the living to benefit them, and gifts for the dead to decorate them, but not a word is said about prayers for the dead.

In a foot note on this passage, we find the following: "That is, withhold not from them the benefit of alms, prayers, and sacrifices. Such was the doctrine and practice of the church of God even in the time of the Old Testament. And the same has always been continued from the days of the apostles in the church of the New Testament." But where is the proof? Assertions prove nothing. And even if such a deviation could be pointed out, it would only show evidence of human folly arrayed against divine wisdom; for "should not a people seek unto their God? for the living to the dead?" Isa. 8 : 19. Necromancy—a pretended consultation with the dead—is denounced, as a real consultation was not possible, from the fact they are really dead; and prayers are unavailing for them for the same reason. W. S.

THE NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

This is the appropriate name for this meeting, as no other meeting has so much important business to do, that affects in this nation so large a number of those looking for the coming of Christ. Others are of importance, and ought to be sustained. This meeting is not for a local benefit, like many others, but important business is to be done at this meeting. Important officers are to be chosen to fill important positions, and on a business and Christian principle, ought to be well attended. The spinal cord of this meeting runs back to the first campmeeting of the kind in the nation, at Chicopee Falls, where Brn. Miller and Himes, with their associates, Brn. Fitch, Collins, Brewer, King Hastings, and some forty other preachers, stood up valiantly for the truth, and against the tradition of the world. God blessed their labors, and some four hundred were converted at that meeting. It shook the nation.

It is only four weeks to our next meeting, and it is time to make arrangements. I would here say, for economy's sake, as straw is so high ($20 to $25 per ton), I am engaging good dry meadow hay for bedding, at $12.50 per ton; and if you will bring an under tick, and fill it with hay, you will save expense, and lie just as comfortably. Please remember this. We expect a great and good meeting. Many who never came before intend to be present. We hope a good number of large tents, from different places, will come to accommodate strangers. There are two or three places for tents on the first circle, which can be had for wooden tents, if notice is given soon. Direct to me, at Chicopee Falls, Mass. Those who talked of a spot last year, must see to it soon, or lose the chance. The front circle will be full. Hiram Munger.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 24th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

FAMILY CAMPMEETING.—No. 2.

This meeting commenced June 30th, one day earlier than published, and was not held in the place first chosen, for the reason that our Methodist friends held a campmeeting two weeks before in the same neighborhood, so it was deemed prudent to remove ours, lest they might think we wished to proselyte some of their members (this we despise; but we do wish to convert all we can to the truth). It was held three miles south, at the head of Adams Valley. We arrived on the ground with the big tent at 11.30, and found a number of the brethren already there with tents and lumber and other fixtures. It was a charming sight. The location could not be excelled, unless we had found some place where the curse was removed. Let me mention some of its attractions: It was level, covered over by a rich carpet of green grass, shaded by lofty and sturdy oaks, with their wide-spreading branches, minus any underwood; a beautiful spring, gushing out from the bluff a short distance from the camp, and winding its way within forty feet of the big tent, always murmuring out sweet praises to its Creator, and seemed to say, I was always glad to suppy the cattle and wild beasts and feathered songsters with my cooling beverage, but now I am overjoyed to think I shall minister to the comfort of the camp of Israel. I am favored almost like the stream that gushed from the smitten rock in Horeb. It was calculated to give pleasure to the camp family, and all that might attend with them. Besides, fifty acres of excellent pasture were donated for the use of the camp family, and that by one who does not believe in the doctrine we love so well. Rejoice in the Lord, O Israel, and again I say, Rejoice.

When we had laid out the circle for the big tent, we proposed consecrating the ground to the Lord during our stay, and asking our Father to let his Holy Spirit abide with the congregation throughout the encampment. I had no sooner made the proposition, than all voices responded, "That's good." Six of us bowed and asked God to be with us during our stay, and by his Spirit to consecrate the ground to his service, and make our hearts glad by the outpouring of his Holy Spirit to the upbuilding of his people and the salvation of some perishing ones. God heard our prayers, and all others that were offered up in faith; for we had the answer, praise his name forever. Amen.

The next day, July 1st, Bro. Thurber and the brethren and sisters from Sparta, Burns, Adams, Lewis, and La Crosse Valley, came in, and erected seven large cotton tents, which with the large one made the whole look like the camp of Israel, and led some to say, "How goodly are thy tents, O Israel." All hearts were cheered. The best of order prevailed; we did not need a watch at any time. The attendance was good. On Sunday it was large, and very attentive. The ministers and members seemed to keep the object of the meeting in view—the conversion of sinners, and reclaiming of the cold and backslidden. They all labored as I never saw them before. It seemed as though they had language not their own, but the utterance of the Spirit was witnessed, and the congregation was more impressed and affected by the labor of the church, than the ministry. (Do not understand me to say that both are not needed.) Sinners were converted, and backsliders were reclaimed.

Let me particularize some incidents. There did not seem to be any general and deep impression made on the minds of the unsaved, until Sunday evening; and I think what added to the interest of the meeting then was this: A young man, a student from Galesville, came to the meeting in search of truth, and seeing the spirit that prevailed in the meeting, his own soul caught the same flame, and he, like Saul, found himself among the prophets. He arose and like Barnabas was glad to see the grace of God. On Monday the meeting was somewhat overcast when it was understood that Bro. Thurber must leave on account of his health. Perhaps I felt the loss more than any. I should then be the only preacher on the ground; but I thought of Paul, when he said we had the sentence of death upon us, but we trust in the living God, who raises the dead. We came together, and as I had before given notice that I would try and show that old Rome would burn before Jesus comes, I did so, as far as I was able, and think I satisfied the most of them. I then gave the meeting into the hands of the brethren and sisters, who well improved the time. They talked mostly of their experience, how and where they were converted, and closed up by assuring the household that they held a through ticket, and they meant to meet them in the kingdom. Now and then one would talk who was (if possible) more than full, and shed an extra power on the meeting, and made the tent vocal with the sweet sound of hallelujah from every tongue.

I hope I shall not trespass on the reader, when I particularize one. He is our pet brother, a colored man. We call him "Bro. Jack." He cannot read, having been a slave all his days until lately. He became eloquent, and told the story how he listened under the window to hear the gospel, till he was compelled by cold to go away, and Sister Fields (who now sleeps) brought him into the house, and he confessed Christ, believed on him, was baptized, and his peace is like a river. He has a through ticket. He had seen when he was a slave three or four hundred converted, but they did not last long. He thanked God this Advent doctrine went clear through him. It seemed as though the gates of glory were hoisted some higher. The whole company laughed like Abraham, and praised God like David. Some time past eleven o'clock, I reminded them of the time, but to no purpose. I lay down in the stand to rest, but was too full to hold my peace. Suffice to say, it was past twelve when they broke up, but no complaints of a late hour. All confessed they never saw its superior, and yet there was nothing disorderly. It was as pure a work of the Spirit, undiluted with fanaticism, as I ever saw. I believe Paul was right when he said God has "given us the Spirit .... of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." 2 Tim. 1 : 7.

Up to this time seven had started to serve the Lord, and some cold ones had waked up; but on the "Fourth" all tongues were loosed. Three and four might be seen standing, waiting for a chance to speak for Jesus. They occupied one hour and ten minutes, and then, in order to have a chance to say anything for Jesus, I was compelled to offer all who would have spoken, if time had been granted, to rise. A large number rose. Another class, the backsliders, were invited to rise, and the call met a response. Then a third class, those who wished to serve the Lord, were invited to rise, when five arose.

The meeting at two o'clock was our last, and was characterized by a deep feeling of unity of the Spirit. I will not detain the reader longer than to describe the closing scene. We formed a circle, the object being stated before we formed it,—that it was a christian salutation and covenant with each other to live, by the grace of God, so as to meet in the kingdom of God, when Jesus comes. (1) All christians were invited. (2) All cold or backslidden, who would give that token to return. (3) All sinners, who would start and serve God. When the circle was formed, there was not one in the big tent, so that it might be said the whole camp was converted. That scene was heavenly. Angels and saints rejoiced, and Jesus smiled. That parting will never be forgotten by many. During our stay, all that came were fed free of charge. Fruit and milk were brought in without price. The congregation unitedly voted to have one next year, and try and get Eld. Grant to attend. So may it be. We were hailed by a Methodist Bro., on my return home—"Well," said he, "that beats all meetings yet." P. W. Hough.

THE NEW YORK RIOT.

The tumult in New York, and the universal agitation, occasioned by the bloody scenes connected with the Orange display, are very suggestive, and lead to the inquiry, Will our American freedom pay? The frantic exclamation of the woman, bereaved of her seventeen-year old boy—"I lived forty-five years the other side of the water, and never saw the like in England!" speaks volumes to our Fourth of July boasters, and is a significant warning to the party religionists of the land.

That an event occurring one hundred and eighty-three years ago, in the north of Ireland (a Protestant victory, the battle of the Boyne), should rankle in the bosoms of these distant generations, and stir up such bad blood on our democratic shores, proves not only that memory may be a living scorpion, but that love and forgiveness are not of genial growth in the human heart. There is more of pride, and ungodly waste, and brutal sensuality, in our multiplied parades and sectarian festivities, than is consistent with a prevalent sentiment of "good will to men." It will not be long before good men will seek a better way of showing our patriotism and our religion.

Correspondence.

From W. E. Grinnel to Bro. Sheldon.

By consent of the parties, I send you the following letter for publication in the Crisis, as I believe that it may be the means of enlightening some who are in error concerning the state of the dead:—

"Dear Cousin:—My companion has passed from death unto life. She is, we trust, with the angels around the throne of God. I am resolved to make heaven my home. Since she left me, I have joined the United Brethren, and am determined to meet her at the throne of God.

Bell Centre, Crawford, Wis."

Answer.

"'But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died, and rose again, even so, them, also, which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.'

You say your wife died and went to heaven. The Bible does not teach that persons go to heaven at death; but that they return to earth, just as God said they would. You think that the soul goes to heaven at death; but the Bible does not sanction any such thought. 'The soul that sinneth it shall die.' I do not believe in adding to the word of of God. We read that the spirit returns to God who gave it. Now, what is the spirit, a part of the person? No, it is that which God breathed into man, the breath of life, which is the spirit of life. Job says, 'The spirit of God is in my nostrils.' That is not the soul, for 'the soul that sinneth, it shall die.' I believe that the soul primarily means the entire man, who sleeps in the grave until the resurrection; then, when Jesus who is our life shall appear, we shall appear with him in glory.

What a blessed hope! When the gospel is preached to all nations, then he will come to reward the saints and the prophets. The reward is eternal life in the kingdom of God. After the judgment, then the reward comes. If we have an immortal soul that cannot die; we are independent of God, having no need of Christ, no need of his coming to give life; we have it already. We read, put not thy trust in man, for 'his breath goeth forth; ... in that very day his thoughts perish.' I never expect to go to heaven. I expect a new earth. The meek 'shall inherit the earth.' Jesus said so. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and the prophets of old, are not made perfect without us. They are not in glory yet. I am a Bible reader, and want a thus saith the Lord. Man's theory will soon pass away. It is best to be like the wise man, and build on a sure foundation, which cannot be moved. If any one can point out the passage of Scripture which teaches that the soul is immortal, or that man goes to heaven at death, I would thank him to tell me where it is. I cannot find any such passage. Human theories teach a great many things for Bible doctrine, which, upon investigation, we find to be error. The Bible does not teach eternal misery for the wicked, but that they will be destroyed with everlasting death. Please read the 37th Psalm; Matt. 5 : 5-21; also the 21st chapter of Rev. These will give some light on the subject."

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. P. B. Manning writes from Goffstown, N. H., July 8th, 1871:—"I am yet in this wicked world, trying to live for God, and to do the best I can to gain admittance into his kingdom. I am still a great sufferer, and expect to be as long as I live. How good God is to me in all my trials and pain that I have to bear; bless his holy name for ever. God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. I am still looking for the coming of the Lord. I believe it is at the door. The great thing is to be ready for the kingdom, for it will be here sooner than many expect. While I see the wickedness increasing every day, I feel bad for the people who profess to be looking for Jesus. Truly, the last days have come, when men are lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good,' and so on to the end of the chapter. 2 Tim. 3 : 1. Never have I ever seen the fulfillment of the prophecies so plain as at the present day. Dear brethren and sisters, do be faithful to the Lord a little while longer. Time will soon end. Jesus will come very soon. Hold fast, that no man take thy crown. 'Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.' Matt. 7 : 21.

Well, brethren and sisters, pray for me, that God will provide for me till I go down to the grave, or Jesus shall come to take me home to the kingdom. God only knows the sufferings that I undergo day and night. I have no means to get medicine, so I must leave all in the hands of God, to trust him for my support while I stay here on earth."

Bro. R. L. Harrison writes from Hoosac Falls, July 3d, 1871:—"I have returned from East Pownal, where I buried four in baptism. One was a dear sister who had belonged to the M. E. church for years. When I went to Pownal last winter, she was very sick, and had not walked for four years. She had been poured in the M. E. church, but was not satisfied, and we had a season of prayer at her request, that if the Lord would have her be buried with him in baptism, that he would raise her up, and give her strength to go to the water; and glory to God, it has been done to the surprise of the whole community, except a few who believe in the prayer of faith. May the Lord give us more faith.

In Wood Hollow, the Lord has done a great work. Bless his name. I buried five in baptism last Sabbath, making eleven in all. It was called the hardest place in this part of the country, and some said that I would get tar and feathers if I went there; but I went in the name of the Lord, and the people received me kindly, and the result will be the establishment of a church. Glory to God for the truth. There was an old man of seventy-six years, who had lived all his life in sin. The Lord, by his Spirit, got hold of him, and he yielded, and with a tottering step, and a Bro. to assist, we got him into the water, and buried him in baptism, while tears were flowing all around. Glory to God for a free salvation."

Bro. E. Morrill writes:—"We are still in Gloucester with the tent, and the Lord is blessing. Some have been converted, others deeply convicted, and wanderers reclaimed, and the truth is stirring up the people. Yesterday we had a good hearing; preaching four times, besides three seasons of prayer and conference, and children's meeting. In the evening the tent was well filled, besides scores listening on the outside. Those wishing to spend a few days by the sea-shore, would do well to come here while this meeting continues. This is a new field of labor. Brethren and sisters from abroad can bring their baskets of provisions with them, and stop with us in tents which we have provided, and help us in the meetings, which help is very much needed. We expect to be here another week, and as much longer as duty may require. Pray for us and the meeting."

REPORT OF COUNCIL.

In accordance with a vote taken in Portland, by the Maine Second Advent Christian Conference, June 14th, 1871, that a council be chosen to investigate the difficulties existing between the two churches, consisting of C. Goud, F. A. Baker, J. A. Libby, W. H. Mitchell, John Stevens, John Megguier, and J. T. Jordan, the council met on Wednesday, A. M., June 28th, and after investigation, came to the following conclusion:

1. Resolved, That the cause of division existing between the two parties of the Advent body in the city of Portland, existed prior to Dec. 28th, 1868.

2. Resolved, That the church worshiping at Union Hall is legally the original church.

3. Resolved, That the efforts of Bro. R. R. York to bring about a union between the two parties, have been from the purest motives, and that he is truthful, honest, and above reproach.

4. Resolved, That Bro. J. S. Brooks had a legal claim on the first lot of settees used in "Advent Hall," and that the church, though acting from the purest motives, acted injudiciously in removing the seats from said hall.

5. Resolved, That the two parties have both erred in steps taken to affect a union, though it did not appear to the council there was any intentional wrong on the part of Bro. Brooks and those worshiping at Advent Hall, or those worshiping at Union Hall.

A committee of four was then chosen, two from each party, to consult with the council as to the best method to bring about a union for future action; and after consultation the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That the churches worshiping at Union Hall and Advent Hall, together with all Advent believers in good fellowship, worshiping at each of the above named places, respectively meet in general assembly, at Union Hall, at a convenient date within forty days. That a President and Secretary be chosen for said meeting by ballot. That the covenant and by-laws at Union Hall be so altered and amended as to remove, as far as may be suitable to the minds of the largest number of said meeting, any conscientious scruples against recording their names as members. Members may be then taken into the church on a test of fellowship. All the old officers shall then resign their offices, and new officers shall be chosen by ballot of those belonging to the church.

Resolved, That the members of the body of the church of Christ, who have conscientious scruples to signing their names to the covenant, shall have their names kept by the clerk for his convenience. They shall have the right to vote in all business and other meetings, and shall submit to the discipline of the church.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

This is to certify that, whereas Eld. F. A. Baker, of Levant, Me., has had the misfortune to be deserted by his wife, and is thereby subjected to the deepest sorrow, and is also liable to be laid under suspicion of fault in his family relation, where his standing and character are not well known; we, the undersigned ministers of Christ in the State of Maine, and members of the "Maine Second Advent Christian Conference," of which he is a member in good fellowship, having examined proofs as to the cause of his calamities, do feel a deep sadness in consequence of his misfortune, and give it as our judgment and firm conviction, from the evidence before us, that he is entirely free from all fault on his part in the matter, and is above reproach in his family relations; and in our estimation his christian character remains unblemished by his present trying situation.

Signed, W. H. Mitchell, J. Albert Libby, R. R. York, J. T. Jordan, C. Goud, John Ridley, Thomas Smith, (not a member of conference, but co-operating) B. S. Emery.

Portland, June 30th, 1871.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

This is to show that we, the parents and sister of the wife of Eld. F. A. Baker, of Levant, Me., who has now left her husband, while we are on our own account greatly afflicted by that sad event, we do fully sympathize with her companion in his calamity, and fellowship him as a christian, and a minister of Christ. We firmly believe that his conduct and treatment towards his wife has been every way worthy of that sacred relationship which they have sustained, and worthy of his profession as a christian, and his station as a christian minister. And further, his wife, on leaving, stated in our hearing "that she had no complaint of any nature whatever against her husband; that he has always treated her with respect, providence, and affection; that he has ever been a kind husband and father, and she believes him to be a sincere christian."

Signed, Josiah B. Massure, Martha T. Massure, Clara B. Massure.

PROUTY. Munson Prouty, aged thirty-six years, was suddenly killed by his team the 29th of June, in Reading, Mich.

He was sitting on a barrel of lime, in the front part of his wagon, which had no box on, and in making a descent across the R. R. track, the barrel pitched forward, throwing him upon the nigh horse's heels. He was kicked senseless almost instantly. The team ran about twenty rods with Mr. Prouty upon the traces, when he dropped. He was soon caught up, but breathed only two or three times, and was dead. He had a presentiment of his death some two weeks before. He told his brother that he should die between the 29th and 30th of June. His funeral was attended by a large and attentive audience on the 30th of June, in the Methodist church in Reading. This young man had never made any public profession of Christianity, but was quite conversant with the Scriptures; was religiously inclined, and, as his pious mother said on the day of his burial, "he was a good boy." Sermon by the writer.

CHAMBERLIN. Died in Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 27th, 1871, of typhoid pneumonia, Ella M. Chamberlin, aged fifteen years, one month, fifteen days.

Ella gave evidence of love for the Savior early in childhood. She was buried in the likeness of Christ's death four years ago at Alton Bay, and from that time until death did its strange work, maintained a consistent christian life. She leaves a sorrow-stricken widowed mother and a brother to mourn her loss. May the widow's God and the orphan's Father bless and care for them. Words of comfort were spoken on the funeral occasion by Bro. Couch.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

PARIS, July 21. The contest for the municipal elections, appointed for next week, grows daily more severe and exciting. The Le Monde, an ultra-Catholic organ, demands that the Government support the Pope in the exercise of his temporal rights.

LONDON, July 21. Dispatches from the East represent that the cholera prevails alarmingly in Persia, and the ravages caused by the disease are dreadful.

LONDON, July 22. A letter from Count de Persigny, published in London papers to-day, attributes the French disaster during the war with Germany to the isolation of the French armies.

Buisson, the Communist Commander of the Paris Free Shooters, has been arrested in Paris.

THE FAMINE IN PERSIA. In regard to the famine in Persia, of which brief accounts have been published, Mr. Bruce, a missionary at Ispahan, writes to the New York Evangelist as follows, April 22.

"In reference to the famine which rages from Teheran southward and eastward in the cities and districts of Irak, a part of Koordistan, and Loovistan, Kars, Kerman, Khorasan, and Gilan, in five of the largest ports of Persia, the suffering is fearful. It is impossible for tongue to describe its horrors. Here in Ispahan a bushel of wheat is eight dollars, of barley seven, and millett six; cotton seed and rice still more expensive. (As money in Persia is worth five times as much as in this country, eight dollars for a bushel of wheat there is equivalent to forty here.) Multitudes are dying from starvation—I cannot tell how many; but in villages numbering five hundred houses, now but two hundred remain. Multitudes have died, and multitudes have fled. They hardly look like human beings. Their appearance is fearful to behold. As I go out into the streets the dead, the dying and churchless meet the eye constantly. They snatch at everything to eat; husks of barley, blood of animals, flesh of dead horses and donkeys. Shop-keepers stand before their stalls with clubs to keep the hungry and starving from carrying everything away. Lamentation and bitter crying for bread are heard on all sides from objects staggering along the streets. You will see people in the public square selling their clothes and all they possess for a mere pittance in order to get a few pence for bread but to prolong their sufferings a brief hour. Mothers run frantic saying 'What shall I do? my children are dying for lack of bread.' Three-fourths of Ispahan are beggars to-day for bread.

A man just come from Bushire says the famine to the south is more fearful than here, that whole families are dying off and the dead lie without burial.

This famine has also extended to the valley of the Tigris, in the regions of Mosul, Amadia and Bootaw, though not so seriously."

PARIS, July 24. The municipal elections in this city yesterday resulted in the choice of six Republican conservatives and forty-nine moderate Republicans. The vote cast was very small.

The journals are discouraged at the apathy of the citizens in the elections, abstentions from voting on Sunday having reached unprecedented low figures.

DOMESTIC.

Springfield, Mass., July 22—1.30 A. M. The most beautiful and remarkable Auroral display in the memory of the oldest inhabitant is now being witnessed here.

New York, July 20. At a meeting of the Gideon Loyal Lodge of Orangemen last night a resolution was adopted thanking Governor Hoffman, the military and police for the protection afforded during the parade last Wednesday.

At an indignation meeting of Irish citizens of the Nineteenth Ward last night, Stephen J. Meany in a speech said: "How can we avenge the blood of men which has been shed? How are we to secure proper protection in this country for men of our own race? Shall Orangemen and Know Nothingism rule this city? (Never! never!) Never, said the speaker, shall the scenes of Wednesday last be permitted again. (Never, never.) When he saw the dead on Wednesday his blood curdled in his soul, and he prayed to God that he would live to see the day when the act would be avenged. (Cheers.) It was hard to see armed ruffians striking down innocent men and women. For the crime of looking upon foolish Orangemen, women had been made widows and children orphans for the caprice of one man in Albany, who came to New York to revoke the humane order of the Mayor. A voice—"Hang him on a lamp post.") Meany—No! No! my friends, I pledge myself that every drop of blood shed on that day shall be legally avenged if there be law in New York. Never again shall organized ruffians be allowed to insult Irish citizens who have fought to uphold the Constitution of the United States. (Cheers.) The Legislature must prohibit such processions in the future. It cannot do less than the English House of Commons, which prohibits Orange processions in Ireland. When was an Orangeman found fighting the battles of the Union? Hibernians and Catholics kept aloof from the parade that day. If they had not done so there would be a different story to tell. If law does not vindicate itself then I may say something else at another time. Governor Hoffman should never again receive the votes of Irishmen. Never! Never!"

Governor Hoffman has issued a general order thanking the militia for their services during the riot.

It is said that a prospectus will soon be issued in Williamsburg to obtain the names of native born Americans to organize an order to be called the United Sons of America.

Washington, July 22. At three o'clock this morning an explosion occurred in a small magazine at Washington Arsenal, which is used for the preparation of rockets, lights and shells for the signal corps. The explosion was distinctly heard in the northern part of the city, and it was almost immediately followed by an alarm of fire, for it caused a serious conflagration, involving the destruction of at least $1,000,000 worth of Government property. The flames communicated to a frame building near by and were carried thence to what is known as storehouse No. 2, and in which were stored all kinds of cavalry and artillery equipments.

In this building, too, was a model room or museum, in which were stored all kinds of models, etc., foreign arms and equipments, and which is a serious loss to the Government, aside from the mere intrinsic value of the articles destroyed. Storehouse No. 1 was also in danger and probably would have been destroyed, but for the fact of the wind. There is not much powder kept stored in the magazine where the explosion occurred, as the arsenal makes no pyrotecnics or explosive articles except for the signal Corps upon a special order. Sergeant Flint was at work in the magazine last night, and when he left his work all things seemed to be in good order. It is supposed that the explosion was the result of spontaneous combustion. The fire also communicated to another adjacent building, in which were stored saddle trees and other equipments. The quantity of iron in this building can be made available in the future.

The buildings to which the flames communicated are totally destroyed, and several houses near the large buildings were injured by the flames. The firemen were promptly on the ground, but could do nothing in the way of saving the buildings on fire. There was a large crowd about the arsenal gate, but they were generally kept back from entering the grounds, as they could not render assistance. The officers of the arsenal were early on the ground.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 21. The whole business portion of the city of Truckee, California, on the line of the Central Pacific Railroad, and the great lumber depot of the Sierra Nevada region, was burned again yesterday. Loss immense.

Interesting Revelations concerning the Ku-Klux.

CONFESSION OF A KU-KLUX.

Louisville, July 22. Payne, the Ku-Klux, who was examined yesterday and who turned State evidence, was interrogated last night and gave the following information concerning the order: "I first signified my intention of joining the band to Henry Adams, working in the same drift with me. He took me to the middle of the drift, and in the presence of John Patricking, after asking me to put my left hand on my heart and hold up my right he administered the following oath:

THE OATH.

"You do solemnly swear you will not reveal a sign or password of this secret organization to which you now attach yourself: also you will aid and assist any brother in any difficulty in which he may become involved, and you will support Democracy, and may you suffer your body to be cut in four parts and cast to the four quarters of the earth before you will reveal a sign or password of this secret organization." There was also something about negroes in it.

SIGNS AND PASSWORDS.

Adams also gave me signs and passwords to recognize a brother at a distance. We raise the hat with our right hand, pull the brim downward over the right eye; the answer is the same with with the left hand; both then draw their left hands across their mouths as if washing and striking their breasts with the right; the grip is made by grasping the hands in the usual manner, with the thumb pressing slightly between the other's thumb and forefinger, giving one shake, saying "I am all right; how are you?" He answers, "I am all right." I reply, "How may I know you are all right?" He answers, "By word or letter." I ask, "Which do you prefer?" He may call for either: if he asks for a letter I tell him to spell. He says "S," I say "L." He says I say "P." He says "U," I say "P." He says, A, spelling it out, "Slap-up," which is the test word of the order. If I get into a difficulty and am overpowered and desire to know if any brother is present, I lock arms across the breast, saying, I wish I knew if any of St. Mary's children were about." If any brother is about he will come to my aid; if my opponent be a member of the band he will immediately desist. When traveling at night, on meeting a person and desiring to know if he is a brother, I say "Halt," and give a loud slap on my thigh. He answers with two slaps.

SECRET MEETINGS.

When it is desired by the captain to call a meeting, he sends a marshal to notify each member. The place of meeting is always in some dense wood, without fire or light of any kind. No man must leave home for the place of meeting before dark. When the meeting is assembled and the roll called, the absentees are sent for and compelled to come under guard. No raid is ever made unless every member of the band is along.

Town destroyed by a Storm.

[From the Walnut Valley (El Dorado, Kansas) Times Extra of June 17th.]

Last evening El Dorado and surrounding country was visited with one of the most terrific storms ever known in this part or the State. About 8 o'clock a storm came up from the northwest, accompanied with wind, hail and rain, and before the people had time to make any preparation for it, the hurricane swept through the town. The clouds were of inky blackness; the vivid flashes of lightning, accompanied by crashing thunder, caused our citizens to feel that the storm was of no ordinary magnitude. Every moment the gale increased, and, as the rain came down in torrents, the situation became more fearful. Every momentary lull in the storm only seemed to increase its fury, and, in fifteen minutes from the commencement, men, women and children could be seen flying through the streets, seeking protection from the falling houses. By this time the air was filled with flying timbers. Large houses were completely demolished; others were unroofed, while others were lifted from their foundations and carried by the wind from forty to two hundred feet. And yet there seemed to be no lull in the storm. As we stood by the window, gazing outward, we could plainly see houses toppling over. The roar of the storm was terrible, and the earth seemed to tremble beneath our feet. We have been unable to get any particular news from the surrounding country, but for four or five miles around, the same wholesale destruction seems to be visible. Houses were blown down, fences destroyed, and the crops ruined. Many of our people are left in destitute circumstances. Our town this morning presents a most woe-begone appearance. People who were in comfortable circumstances yesterday are to-day left without anything. The storm, from the best information we can get, did not extend very far east or west of the town, Towanda, eight miles west, was not damaged; and Chelsea, eight miles north-east, had but one house blown down. Augusta, twelve miles southwest, had one house blown down.

NEW ENGLAND SHAKEN BY AN EARTHQUAKE.—It seems as if earthquakes were to become a recognized New England institution. The shock of last autumn was regarded as altogether an exceptional affair, but in less than a year our people have been disturbed in their slumbers by one of these unwelcome terrestrial commotions. The disturbance occurred about one o'clock this morning, July 19th. It appears to have extended through Eastern Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine. It was most severe in New Hampshire, where buildings were violently shaken, crockery thrown down, doors settled, bells rung, and other abnormal demonstrations made. We append accounts of the phenomenon as far as received.—Boston Journal.

☞ A comet which is rapidly approaching the sun, and which will have reached its maximum grandeur toward the end of this month, has been discovered by Herr Winneck of Carlsruhe. It will soon be visible to the naked eye.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL CAMPMEETING will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the camp-ground, beautifully located about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing Saturday, August 19th, and continuing till August 28th.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the new and commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents, excepting Sunday, August 28th, when it will be 75 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Albany $4.35, Pittsfield $2.35, Worcester $2.50. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, at Boston, Natick, South Framingham, Milford, Southville, Worcester, and the stations to Pittsfield. Also at North and South Adams, Cheshire, Chatham, Hudson, and Albany.

On the Hartford and New Haven R. R. fare is reduced one third; tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Berlin, Middletown, Hartford, Windsor Locks, and Thompsonville.

On the Conn. R. R. fare is reduced one third from South Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from August 10th to August 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the Vt. and Mass. R. Road, Troy and Greenfield R. Road from Hoosac Tunnel, persons will purchase regular tickets at the offices for Greenfield. At Greenfield they will go into the ticket office and call for Campmeeting Tickets for Springfield. All such when they go to the Secretary on the camp-ground to have their tickets countersigned, will be furnished with a free return pass from Greenfield to Athol, Fitchburg, or any place on the Vermont and Mass. R. R., or Troy and Greenfield R. R., that they may come from—provided twenty-five passengers shall have come over the Vt. and Mass. Rail Road to the meeting.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R., campmeeting tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the depot in Providence, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R. Road, friends from Nashua, N. H., Groton Junction, and Clinton, will purchase regular tickets at the stations for Worcester, at which place they will purchase tickets for Springfield; and free return passes from Worcester will be furnished them by the Secretary on the ground.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to the Secretary, on the camp-ground.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 6, 7, 8½ and 9 A. M.; and at 3, 4½, and 9 P. M.

Arrangements with any other roads that may be made, will be noticed hereafter.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so.

The campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 9th, and hold over the Sabbath, the 17th.

For the Committe, J. COUCH.

Tremont Campmeeting.

The Tremont Campmeeting (at West Wareham, Mass.) will commence on Monday, July 24th, and continue over the following Sabbath. With the blessing of the Lord, we expect an interesting season on this consecrated ground, as in former years; and hope all who can will make arrangements to attend this annual feast.

HENRY V. DAVIS, for the Committee.

Tent Meeting at Gloucester, Mass.

We are still at Gloucester with the tent, and expect to stay, the Lord willing, another week, and over Sunday, July 30th, and longer if duty demands. Meetings under the tent through the week, at 3 and 7½ P. M. Come, brethren and sisters, come to this meeting. Those coming to stay through the week, can find comfortable lodging room here with us. The Lord is blessing. Pray for the meeting.

ENOCH MORRILL,
LUTHER BOUTELL.

Notice.

The campmeeting of the "Life and Advent Union" will be held on their new ground, in Springfield, Mass., commencing August 13th, and holding over the following Sunday. Fare will be reduced on the Boston and Albany R. R., Hartford and New Haven R. R., and Connecticut R. R., one third, from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th, inclusive. Provision will be made for board and lodging, and horse-keeping on the ground. Table board will be 80 cents per day.

T. R. WEAVER, Sec.

Notice.

The Mechanic Falls campmeeting committee will meet on the ground to build a stable, finish the seating, and make other necessary arrangements for the meeting, Tuesday, August 1st. We invite other brethren to join us. Let us have a good crew, that the work may be pushed through speedily. Our meeting will commence the 28th of August, and continue one week. Further particulars hereafter.

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

Notice.

The campmeeting committee who were chosen at the New Milford, Ct., campmeeting last Sept., are requested to meet upon the old ground, New Milford, Tuesday, July 18th, at three o'clock P. M., and if decided to have another meeting this coming season, to fix upon a time, and make such other arrangements as are needed for the same. Brethren, if possible, and the Lord willing, come. In behalf of the committee,

H. K. FLAGG.

The R. I. and E. Ct. Campmeeting.

Brethren, our campmeeting this year will (D. V.) be held at Green Station, on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R. It will commence on September 2nd, 1871, and hold till the 9th inst. We shall be happy to meet the brethren from "all the neighborhood round about." Those who have tents, or can procure them, are requested to bring them. Fares from way stations are being ascertained, and will be advertised.

For the camp committee, W. KELLAWAY.

North Dana, Mass.

There will be a grove meeting in North Dana, Mass., commencing on Thursday, August 3d, and hold over Sunday the 6th. Bro. J. Hemenway and others are expected to help preach the word. All preaching brethren and sisters, come and help us, and all others come. Provide for yourselves as far as convenient. Provision for man and beast can be obtained near by. We wish to make one more effort for Christ and his cause in No. Dana. Pray for the meeting.

GEO. A. STREETER.

Connecticut Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting in the beautiful grove occupied for that purpose last year, near Plainville, Ct., commencing Sept. 2nd, 1871, and holding till the 11th inst.

The fare is reduced one half on the N. H. and N. R. R., same as last year. Regular tickets must be bought to Plainville, and free return passes will be furnished on the camp-ground. The committee have been unable to effect a reduction of fare on the H. P. and F. R. R. Mr. T. F. Clark will convey passengers from Plainville to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. Provision will be made for those coming with horses. It is desirable that all who can, bring tents and bedding, especially the latter.

We shall endeavor to provide wholesome food for all who may wish, at reasonable rates, and trust that, together with our brethren and sisters, we may exercise sufficient faith in God, coupled with good works, to dispel the fear of financial embarrassment, which so cripples the religious enterprises of the day, that their votaries are withering from spiritual drouth, the result of too much anxiety for money, and too little knowledge of faith in God. The Lord is soon coming, and we feel the need of a higher standard of holiness, and the deep inwrought work of the Holy Spirit. Let us walk humbly before the Lord, making this meeting the subject of prayer, beseeching our heavenly Father to breathe the Holy Spirit upon the entire encampment, that wanderers may be reclaimed, and sinners converted.

Southern Kansas Grove Meeting.

We commence Sat., July 22nd, at two o'clock P. M., at Crawfordville, Crawford Co., Kansas. Any who shall see this notice are invited to come. Ministering brethren, of "like precious faith," we desire your acquaintance and co-operation. There is a large and open field of labor here. Any coming by rail will take the Gulf R. R., step off at Girard, and inquire for us or Bro. A. M. Sidwell. The grove is two and a half miles west of Girard.

H. J. MUNSON.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a two days' meeting at the Card school-house, on Troupe' Creek, Steuben Co., N. Y., six miles above Knoxville, commencing Friday evening, August 11th, to continue over the Sabbath following. Preaching brethren and all others are cordially invited to come and help us. For the Brn.,

E. H. EGGLESTON.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting in North Holderness, in Bro. Amos G. Carr's grove, near my place, Sunday, July 30th. Brethren and sisters are invited to come to work for the Lord.

JOHN H. EVANS.

Quarterly Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting for the northern district of the Advent Christian Conference of Indiana, will meet at four o'clock P. M., on Thursday, before the first Sunday in Aug., 1871, with the church of God at Sand-hill, four miles north of Rochester, on the Michigan road, in Fulton Co. A general invitation is given; and we say come one, come all; come on the first day, and stay till the last. Provision will be made for all who may come. Persons coming on the Michigan road will inquire for Bro. N. Doolittle, or S. S. Cole. Persons coming by R. R. will stop off at Sturgeon, and inquire for Bro. E. Partridge, or I. E. Andrus. By order of conf.,

D. NAFE,
I. E. ANDRUS,
} Committee.

Campmeeting in Maine.

It is expected there will be a campmeeting at Pittsfield, Me., in the same place where it was held last year, in September. The date and other particulars will be given soon. This meeting is no side issue, but will represent the interests of the cause at large. For the Committee,

F. A. BAKER.
J. M. JEWETT.

Grove Meeting.

A meeting will be held in Mr. C. Moulton's grove, in Buxton Centre, Me., Sunday, Aug. 13th. The grove is only a few rods from the depot of the P. and R. railroad, and easy of access to all. A cordial invitation is extended to all God's saints in these regions to meet with us, and assist in the work of the Master. Come and help us.

E. S. MOULTON.

Notice.

All preachers wishing to preach in Rutland, Vt., will please correspond with the deacons of the church.

Annual Meeting.

The Women's Christian Association will hold its annual meeting at Springfield, Mass., August 23d, 1871. It is desirable that all members of the Association should be present.

E. S. JENNINGS, President.

Grove Meeting.

There will be preaching at Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., on Sunday, July 30th, by Eld. J. G. Smith. If stormy, the meeting will be held in the Hall at the grove. Refreshments, and stabling for horses for all who wish.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting at Old Point, on Sodas Bay, Wayne Co., N. Y., July 22d and 23d. Come, brethren and sisters, with your hearts full of the love of Jesus, and your baskets well filled with provision.

M. R. MILES.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting at East Lebanon, Me. (Little River Falls), Sundays, Aug. 6th and 13th. Geo. W. Brown, of South Elliott, and others, are expected to preach the word.

J. BICKFORD.

Notice.

A grove and basket meeting will be held in Boscawen, N. H., where we had the fourth of July meeting, commencing Saturday, Aug. 12th, and holding over the Sabbath. Bro. C. W. Sargent, and others, will be with us to help preach the word. Come, brethren, and labor for sinners.

SIMEON ROBY.

Notice.

If the Lord will, the Maine Mission Tent will be pitched at Craig's Mills, Oxford, Thursday, July 27th, and remain over the following Sunday, and as much longer as thought best. Bro. J. A. Libby, J. Whitman, and others, are expected to preach the word.

A. W. TAYLOR.

Southern Tract Fund.

At our recent Wisconsin campmeeting, a collection was taken to aid me in scattering gratuitously my forthcoming book (entitled "The Life beyond Death in the Home of the Holy") in the southern field, it having been prepared with reference to missionary or pioneering work. I desire to send at least one thousand copies of this work, with a quantity of my four tracts, into the southern field this coming fall and winter. It will be a pleasure for some to help me raise one hundred dollars for this purpose. Let such direct to WM. SHELDON, Brodhead, Green Co., Wis.; or, if more convenient, to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Notice.

Meetings at our houses in South Boston are postponed till further notice.

C. W. HUNTRESS, 2 Lowland Street.
J. N. BERRY, 227 E. Street.

On Sundays, and Wednesday and Friday evenings, meetings for the present at 382 Broadway, (under Wait's Hall.)

Notice.

We are now located about two miles south of Oxford Depot, and about two miles from Webster North Village, on what is known as the Rufus Larned place. We would like to have the brethren in Charlton, Webster, and other places in this vicinity, aid us in establishing meetings at our house. And we desire the prayers of all, that our labors may not be in vain in the Lord.

Oxford, Mass. F. H. & S. S. CHAMBERLAIN.

Notice.

Elder E. McCulloch, of Nevada, Ohio, purposes to attend the National Campmeeting at Springfield, Mass., and remain east for a few weeks. Churches desiring his labors, will address him at Nevada until August 10th; after that at Savoy, Mass.

Notice.

There will be a free campmeeting either at Pittsfield, or on the Belfast Railroad, to commence Sept. 4th, 1871. Particulars hereafter.

BOOKS IN CALIFORNIA.

We have opened a Depository for books, tracts, and papers, at White & Bauer's, 413 Washington Street, opposite the Post Office, San Francisco, Cal. Those on the Pacific Coast, who wish to obtain the publications sold at our office, will find it for their convenience to get them at WHITE & BAUER'S.

NEW TRACTS.

WHO ARE SADDUCEES? OR, TRUTH VINDICATED. Being a Review of "The Wicked not Annihilated; or, Modern Sadduceeism Refuted, by Israel P. Warren." By GEO. THOMSON.

The above is a valuable Tract of 32 pages, published by the Author, Attica, Wis. 10 cts. per copy; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid.

"A COLPORTEUR'S NOTES, by John B. Wadsworth, Memphis, Tenn." Published by the Author.

An interesting pamphlet of 48 pages, giving some incidents in the experience of the author, as tract distributor: a dialogue between a Baptist missionary and an Adventist, together with choice sayings, valuable receipts, etc., etc. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Both of the above are for sale at this office.

AG'T.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. LIFE AND DEATH THEOLOGY: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. IMMATERIALISM: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. DEATH AND THE DEAD, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. THE COMING JUDGMENT: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good.

"THIEF ON THE CROSS."

BY ELDER GEORGE THOMSON.

A New Tract.

One of the best ever published on the above subject. Just the thing to scatter widely. Price, 3 cts. single; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail.

EVANGELS OF THE COMING ONE. Price by mail, 10 cts. single copy; per dozen, 70 cts.; per hundred by express, $5.00.

THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY. This is a work on the man of sin, as viewed in the light of historic testimony. Price by mail, single copy, 5 cts.; postage 2 cts.; 50 cts. per dozen; $3.00 per hundred.

"TALKS ABOUT PEOPLE'S STOMACHS,"

Is the title of a new work just issued by Dr. Dio Lewis, of Boston.

"Like all of his works, it is brimful of common sense. We do not know of another writer on matters pertaining to health, who says so many good things as Dr. Lewis."—Crisis of Dec. 7th.

"HEALTH BY GOOD LIVING."

A VALUABLE WORK, BY W. W. HALL, M. D.

These two works are for sale at this office, and will be sent by mail, on receipt of publisher's price, $1.50 each.

AG'T.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

By Elder James H. Whitmore. Published by the Western Advent Christian Association.

This little volume of three hundred pages is a valuable contribution to the literature of the subject on which it treats, and is worthy of a wide circulation, not only among those who hold to the views advocated therein, but among others who have not given them due thought and investigation.

Price, single copy, postpaid, $1.00. Six copies, by mail, $5.00; by express, $4.20.

NEW HYMN BOOK.

"Hymns of the Jubilee Harp."

WITHOUT THE MUSIC.

The above work, printed in large, clear type, on beautiful paper, we are ready to fill orders for, at the following prices:—

Bound in cloth, with sprinkled edges, 75 cents per copy; $7.50 per dozen; $55.00 per 100.

Bound in leather, gilt edge, $1.00 per copy; $11 per dozen; $75.00 per hundred; when sent by mail, 10 cts. additional postage.

HOME AGAIN.

Heavenly home, heavenly home,
  Precious name to me;
I love to think the time will come
  When I shall rest in thee.

I've no abiding city here,
  I seek for one to come;
And though my pilgrimage be drear,
  I know there's rest at home.

Heavenly home, heavenly home,
  There no clouds arise;
No tear drops fall, no dark nights dim
  Thy ever smiling skies.

This earthly home is fair and bright,
  Yet clouds will often come;
And O, I long to see the light
  That gilds my heavenly home.

Heavenly home, heavenly home,
  Ne'er shall sorrow's gloom,
Nor doubts, nor fears disturb me there,
  For all is peace at home.

I know I ne'er shall worthy be
  To dwell 'neath heaven's bright dome;
But Christ, my Savior, died for me,
  And now he calls me home.

WHAT IS YOUR MOTIVE?

C. B. BARNES.

What is your motive in going to meeting on Sundays? Do you have any? And if you have, are you sure it is a good one? I hope it is, but I know many that attend services whose motive is not good. Pride sometimes leads people to go to meeting; it is sometimes the moving principle in professors of godliness. When the spring suit is completed, with what willing steps some people wend their way to to the place of worship. The main reason they attend is, not because of their desire to be fed with the bread of life, but mainly because it is a good opportunity to make a display Selfishness is another principle that leads many to the meeting. They go with a desire to get benefitted,—a good desire, too,—but they seldom have a thought about doing good to others. Now thus to do, is acting selfishly. When this or that preacher, who has quite a reputation as a public speaker, is advertised for a certain Sunday, we see this class quite largely represented; but let it be known that on the next Sunday the preacher is to be one who is young in experience; who is not celebrated for his oratorical power, and many who were out to hear the former will not be seen when the one less gifted preaches. Why is this, if these brethren are not selfish?

I think the churches would be more greatly blessed under preaching, if all would come to meeting, not merely to hear and get benefitted, but to do good as well as to get good. Is it asked how people can do good in attending meetings on Sundays? I answer, by making the meeting an object of special prayer before starting, and then coming to meeting in such a frame of mind that you will not go away murmuring if you are a little disappointed in your expectations. When the "big gun" comes along, this class of selfish ones are all attention, ready to catch every word, which so far, is just as it should be; but when the one who is not a "big gun" preaches, if this class are out to meeting, instead of feeling a sympathy for the weak one, and lifting up their hearts in prayer to God to strengthen him; instead of doing this, and encouraging him with their upturned faces, the eyes are closed, and the head is dropped forward, and a general manifestation of sluggishness is visible, plainly saying, "I don't expect much from such a man as that; so I may as well doze during meeting," and this is not just as it should be.

I tell you my brethren, it is important to have a right motive in going to meeting. When the people get to be so large-hearted, so deeply imbued with the spirit of Christ, that they will be willing occasionally to have the bread of life broken to them by the young Timothys as well as by "Paul the aged," without condemning or censuring the Timothys for not preaching so "deep" a sermon as Paul; when the people get willing to hear and to receive the truth graciously, regardless of the weakness in which it may be brought; when the people get willing to do this, then there will be seen greater results from the preaching. God will bless a people who heartily receive his messengers, and who sympathize with them, and who endeavor to sustain them; but when people come to meeting merely to get an intellectual feast, and who will go away dissatisfied if their expectations are not met; when people do so, how can we expect God's blessing?

Now, brethren and sisters, you have a greater influence in this matter than you may be aware of. When the young preacher enters the desk, and arises to address you, if be sees a general feeling of indifference manifested by you, it is apt to have a depressing effect upon him. It isn't necessary that you should remind him of his weakness—he feels that himself. It isn't necessary that you should tell him that he is not eloquent; he knows it and realizes it more than you do. And when he goes home to dinner, don't entertain him by telling him how able such a brother is, nor how clearly Bro. A. or B. presented the subject you have just heard the young preacher present. If you wish to help him, do not in this manner, but let him see that you appreciate his efforts, however weak; let him feel that he has your sympathies and prayers, and that he is preaching to christians, and not to a congregation of severe and relentless critics.

So, again I say, when the young preacher comes, don't stay away from meeting because he doesn't handle the Scriptures like an old veteran; but be all the more ready to go and pray for him, and strengthen him by your attentive presence. Let selfishness be your motive no longer. Have a nobler aim than that. Drink more freely of the fountain of life; and have so much of the Spirit of Christ, that you can not help bear the burden of him who is weak, and so fulfil the law of Christ.

Again I ask, what is your motive in going to meeting? Do you have any? And if you have, are you sure it is a good one?

Salem, Mass.

PULL AT THE OAR.—The servants of Jesus are like rowers in a boat. They sit with their backs to the bow, and cannot see what lies ahead. But the helmsman at the stern is on the lookout, and he steers the boat whithersoever he wills. So in our godly undertakings we sit with our backs to the future. It is all unknown, untried, and impenetrable. We know not what the morrow may bring forth. But it is our business to pull at the oar of prayer and earnest labor. There is a divine Helmsman who sees the future, and who holds the rudder in his hand. We have only to commit our way to him, and to pull at the oar of duty.—Cuyler.

— We do not believe immortality because we have proved it, but we forever try to prove it because we believe it.—James Martineau.

PURITY OF HEART.

The consequence of the work of regeneration is, the presence of a new life in the heart; a life born of the Spirit, who has

"Breathed himself into our breast,
Earnest of immortal rest."

The result of the work of sanctification is the absence of the life of self and sin. One of the first discoveries we make of the results of this work is the unmixed character of our spiritual life. All its elements exist in the heart in their simple, unalloyed state. How unmixed is our resignation to the will of God! Not forced, not corrupted by uprisings of self-will, but every outbreathing of the soul is the desire that his will may be done.

Love is there: just the same love which has existed in our hearts, but seeming so new, so sweet, because so unmixed. Our vile affections being crucified, love exists in purity. We love God not so much because of what he does for us, as because we see in him everything lovely, everything attractive.

"He is the sea of love,
  Where all our pleasures roll;
The circle where our passions move,
  And centre of the soul."

Our love to our neighbor is not dependent upon that neighbors relations to us. It is not warm and glowing when he ministers to our happiness, and cold and inert when those ministrations are withdrawn.. No; we love him because he is an object of the Master's regard. How Jesus loves our neighbor! How he sympathizes with his cares and sorrows; how he mourns over his waywardness and his guilt; how he seeks, by his providences, and the Spirit's influences, to draw him to himself. We never could so comprehend the love of Christ for fallen humanity as now, when our love, freed from that selfishness which so mixed with and corrupted it, is a pure emanation from the heart of Jesus. How we love our brother, in whose heart is the image of Christ! We are no longer repelled because he does not think, or speak, or act as we should do. That self which loved its own image, and was attracted to that in our brother, and repelled at its absence, is now dead, and we discover in our brother's peculiarities of thought, of word, of manner, much to be commended; much to be loved. The love we feel is the pure love of Christ, unalloyed by the base element of selfishness.

Our faith is steady, easy, natural; there is no mixture of unbelief. The life of sin, which was born of unbelief, which constantly desired signs and evidences as a foundation on which to rest its faith, which now as in the day when sin entered into the world, calls the truth of God in question, being destroyed, no longer intrudes its doubts; while the life of Christ within us, hangs with undoubting confidence upon his immutable truth. We do not need a great increase of faith to overcome unbelief, but when sin is destroyed, the faith we have we have rests confidingly upon him who is the truth.

And as with these, so with all the graces of the Spirit. They exist in the heart in purity, wholly unmixed with their opposites; humility without any pride; zeal without apathy or indifference; patience without eagerness, impetuosity or irritability. We wait God's order, and move in harmony with his providences, and not according to our illy-controlled impulses.

This is purity of heart;—when our spiritual life exists in simplicity, without any alloy. It is not a blessing conferred upon an individual; not a gift bestowed, but it is the natural result of a work wrought in the heart, the crucifixion of self. It is not merely such a quickening of spiritual influences, such an exaltation of thought and feeling, as causes us to forget for the time being, the evil within; but it is such a destruction and consequent absence of sin in the heart, as leaves that heart the dwelling place and temple of the Holy Ghost. With Paul we can say, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

"'Tis there I would always abide,
  And never a moment depart;
Concealed in the cleft of thy side,
  Eternally held in thy heart."

—Home Methodist Journal.

CHRISTIANS OF THE PRESENT DAY.

Christians of the present day are unlike the primitives. Of the present, they have no desire nor intentions to suffer for their faith. They become professors in many cases, so as to be popular with other professors. It is a christianity that seeks worldly aggrandizements and pleasure; indeed, it has no limits. Christianity of the past is quite different. (See History of Paganism, Popery and Christianity.) Dean Miller says:

"If the ancient martyrologies had been preserved uncorrupted, they would doubtless afford us useful materials, and illustrate much the spirit and genius of real christianity in its primitive professors; but frauds, interpolations, and impostures, are endless. The papal and monastic superstitions, in after ages, induced their supporters to corrupt these martyrologies, and indeed the writings of the fathers in general. The difficulty of procuring materials for a well connected, credible history of real christianity is hence increased exceedingly. What I cannot believe, I shall not take the trouble to transcribe. What I can, where the matter appears worthy of memory, shall be exhibited. This is the case of the martyrs of Scillita, a city of Africa, in the province of Carthage. The narration is simple, credible throughout, and worthy of the purest ages of the gospel. The facts belong to the time of Severus.

"Twelve persons were brought before Saturninus, the proconsul at Carthage, the chief of whom were Speratus, Narzal, and Cittin; and three women, Donato, Secunda, and Vestina. When they came before him, he said to them all, 'You may expect the emperor our master's pardon, if you return to your senses, and observe the ceremonies of the gods.' To which Speratus replied, 'We have never been guilty of anything that is evil, nor been partakers of injustice; we have even prayed for those who persecute us unjustly; in which we obey our emperor, who prescribed to us this rule of behavior.' Saturninus answered, 'We have also a religion that is simple. We swear by the genius of the emperors our masters, and we offer up vows for their health, which you ought also to do.' Speratus answered, 'If ye will hear me patiently, I will declare unto you the mystery of christian simplicity.' The proconsul said, 'Shall I hear you speak ill of our ceremonies? Rather swear, all of you, by the genius of the emperors our masters, that you may enjoy the pleasures of life.' Speratus answered, 'I know not the genius of the emperors. I serve God who is in heaven, whom no man hath seen nor can see. I have never been guilty of any crime punishable by the public laws. If I buy anything, I pay the duties to the collectors. I acknowledge my God and Savior to be the Supreme Governor of all nations. I have made no complaints against any person; and therefore they ought to make none against me.' The proconsul turning to the rest said, 'Do not ye imitate the folly of this mad wretch, but rather fear our prince and obey his commands.' Citten answered, 'We fear only the Lord our God, who is in heaven.' The proconsul then said,—'Let them be carried to prison, and put in fetters till to-morrow.'

"The next day the proconsul, seated on his tribunal, caused them to be brought before them, and said to the women—'Honor our prince, and do sacrifice to the gods.' Donata replied, 'We honor Cæsar as Cæsar, but to God we offer prayer and worship.' Vertina said, 'I also am a christian.' Secunda said, "I also believe in my God, and will continue steadfast to him; and, in regard to your gods, we will not serve and adore them.' The proconsul ordered them to be separated; then, having called for the men, he said to Speratus, 'Perseverest thou in being a christian?' Speratus answered, 'Yes, I do persevere; let all give ear, I am a christian'; which being heard by the rest, they said, 'We also are christians.' The proconsul said, 'You will neither consider your danger, nor receive mercy.' They replied, 'Do what you please, we shall die joyfully for the sake of Jesus Christ.' The proconsul asked, 'What books are those which you read and revere?' Speratus replied, 'The four Gospels of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; the Epistles of the apostle St. Paul, and all the scripture that is inspired of God.' The proconsul said, 'I will give you three days to reflect and to come to yourselves.' Upon which Speratus answered, 'I am a Christian, and such are all those who are with me; and we will never quit the faith of our Lord Jesus. Do, therefore, what you think fit.'

"The proconsul, seeing their resolution, pronounced sentence against them, that they should die by the hands of the executioner, in these terms: 'Speratus and the rest, having acknowledged themselves to be christians, and having refused to pay due honor to the emperor, I command their heads to be cut off.' This sentence having been read, Speratus and his fellow sufferers said, 'We give thanks to God, who honoreth us this day with being received as martyrs in heaven, for confessing his name.' They were carried to the place of punishment, where they fell on their knees all together, and having again given thanks to Jesus Christ, they were beheaded."—Pages 128–131.—Selected by THOS. J. THE LITERAL JESUS.

A. H. O. WILSON.

"He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."—LUKE 1: 32, 33.

It is with a feeling of deep sorrow that I look upon this world and the inhabitants thereof at the present time; and why is it so? The main reason for this feeling may be found by contemplating the real ignorance of the people concerning the fundamental doctrines of the Bible. To enlighten a few of the multitude, to cheer up the faithful ones, and to call sinners to a real Jesus, there to receive pardon for sins, and heavenly grace for their minds, we take up our pen at the present time to contemplate a literal Jesus in a literal Bible.

Every thing which we handle is real, literal, tangible, visible and destructible. The merchant sells literal goods to literal persons; the mechanic fabricates literal things with literal tools; in short, every and any thing which we perceive with any of our five senses is literal. But when we arrive at things and objects relating to Bible and religion, then facts and literal things cease to be, and we launch ourselves into a gulf of mystery, from whence nothing but the truth of God's book, the Bible, can rescue us.

The apostle Peter in Acts 4: 12, teaches that through the name of Jesus we must be saved. If this is so (and I believe the record of God), the question arises, Is our Jesus a literal being, or is he not? This question is one of importance to every lover of the truth as revealed in the Bible. For since the orthodox (?) and spiritists combine under the leadership of Satan to mystify the Bible, and even to figure away the literal birth, death, resurrection, ascension, and coming again of Jesus Christ, we as a people ought to be ready to give a reason for our hope to any and every one that asketh us. 1 Pet. 3: 15.

Taking heed that we follow the precept of our God given in Isaiah 8: 19–20, we at once inquire, What do the prophets say concerning the birth of Jesus? After man transgressed God's commandment in the garden of Eden, God in his infinite mercy and love provides a way by the which he might be saved from the curse and penalty of the law. In Gen. 3: 15 we find the first promise of a Savior, although symbolic in its expression, yet too plain to be misapplied. This symbolic promise is made plainer and surer by various prophecies relating to the same subject. Open your Bible and read Deut. 18: 15–20; Isa. 7: 14; 9: 6–7; Dan. 9: 25; Micah 5: 2. Tell me, do the prophets of old prophesy of a spiritual, immaterial Jesus? Nay, verily not. But a literal Son to be born in a literal place, to be known by literal people as Bethlehem. How were those prophecies fulfilled? Answer—literally; every one of them has had its fulfillment. And like Joshua of old we can say—"And behold this day I am going the way of all the earth, and ye know in all your hearts, and in all your souls, that not one thing hath failed, of all the good things which the Lord your God spake concerning you. All are come to pass unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof." Joshua 23: 14.

By carefully and prayerfully reading the record of Christ's birth, we have come to the conclusion that prophecy is a light that shineth in a dark place. 2 Peter 1: 19–21. Let us now see how these prophecies relative to Christ's birth were fulfilled. Let us turn to Matt. 1: 18–25. Here we are told that a literal angel appeared to a literal Mary; furthermore, that this literal Mary gave birth to a literal son, whose literal name was Jesus. We ask, Is this all figurative language, or is it not? Well, says one, partly it is figurative, and partly literal. This will not do. It is either all figurative or all literal language. Bless the name of God, we believe it to be literal language, and therefore we see a literal Jesus in a literal Bible.

Again we call your kind attention to Matt. 2: 1–12. Here we have the same Jesus lying in a manger, and the wise men offering gifts. Is this a literal account of a literal transaction? If it is, we have literal Bethlehem, literal wise men from the east, literal king Herod, literal chief priests and scribes, literal star, literal Mary the mother of literal Jesus, literal gold, frankincense and myrrh, and a literal God. If it is not literal, but figurative, then we have—have what? A great dose of nothing given unto us with a spoon made out of nothing.

Now let us consult the sacred word again on this subject. Read Luke 2: 8–20. Is this literal, or is it not? Thanks to God for a literal Bible, for a literal Jesus, and for a literal salvation. Christ is born, the angels sang. Christ is born, the shepherds proclaimed. Have they proclaimed something they knew had not transpired? Decidedly not. Then glory to God for the birth of a literal Jesus.

KEEP ME.

BETSY L. HAGGETT.

Blessed spirit, love divine,
Keep me, Lord, may I be thine;
Joy and peace to me impart,
Seal thy love upon my heart.

Lead me in the narrow way;
May I ne'er from Jesus stray;
Lead me to my final rest,
To be with Christ, ever blest.

Help me to be meek and mild,
Like a harmless little child;
"And may this my glory be,
Christ is not ashamed of me."

Heavenly Father, canst thou bear
To hear this frail, imperfect prayer?
Wilt thou listen to the praise
My poor heart may wish to raise?

Jesus calls, let none delay;
Bids me come, I cannot stay;
Help, dear Lord, to thee I fly,
In thy arms O let me lie.

OUR GUIDE.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

"The Lord shall guide thee continually."—ISAIAH 58: 11.

We need a guide. And we must have a guide. If we do not have a good guide, we shall have a bad one; one that will lead us away from the path of life, and into the snares of death. Having neither the power nor the wisdom requisite to guide ourselves aright, we need one for our guide who is more wise and more powerful than any mere human being. Pretenders to wisdom may cross our track, and promise to lead us in the path of wealth or fame and worldly honor. Shall we follow them? They say, "if you engage with us we propose to direct you in the right way, and we propose to keep you in the right way, if you will follow our directions." But what is this way which they call the right way? They only pretend that it is the way to make money. We read that "there is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." Prov. 14: 12.

Again, "they that will be rich, fall into temptation, and a snare, and into many hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition." 1 Tim. 6: 9. If we are blind, we do not want to be led by blind guides, for then we should be sure to be led astray. Hypocrites are blind guides, worldly wise men are blind guides, and Satan and all his demons are worse than blind guides. Our only safe way is to choose the Lord for our guide. He is able and willing and ready to guide us if we will obey him. The conditions or terms of the agreement are found in the fifty-eighth chapter of Isaiah. When these terms are complied with (on our part) "then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily; and thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall gather thee up. (Margin) Then thou shalt call and the Lord shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say here I am. . . . Then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness shall be as the noonday; and the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones; and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not." "Wilt thou not from this time cry unto me, my Father, thou art the guide of my youth?"

☞ A sly old deacon wishing to give his pastor a hint to put more juice in his sermons, said to him one day, "I must get a seat near the pulpit, for by the time your words reach my ears, the people in front of me have so taken the pith out of them, that they are as dry as dish water."

SERPENTS COILED;

OR,

Educating Little Mary for the Heavenly Kingdom.

D. F. NEWTON, Author of "Apples of Gold," etc., etc.

"Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field, which the Lord God had made, and he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden; but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die."—GEN. 3: 1, 2, 3.

Beloved brother and sister, here is a lie in the beginning—barefaced, heaven-daring, from the father of lies, the old serpent, the devil. And this same lying from this same father of all lies, and of all liars, has been going on increasingly to the present day, especially in books, tracts, and periodicals.

"How shall I speak thee, or thy power address,
Thou god of idolatry, the Press!
Like Eden's dread probationary tree,
Knowledge of good and evil is from thee!"

And here lies danger, impending, fearful, in educating this dear, sweet one, concerning whom God says: "Take this child away and nurse it for me and I will give thee thy wages." Ex. 2: 9.

"There is a path that leads to God,
All others go astray."

You may not only hinder little Mary's salvation, but endanger it forever, by not forming her reading and mental taste on the side of virtuous purity, the heavenly, spiritual, the wisdom that cometh from above. Here is danger, fearful, imminent—often irretrievable, everlasting! Beware! The taste for strong drink, the cup that intoxicates, the poisonous, degrading "Indian weed," you are aware is unnatural, vicious, obstinate, deeply rooted, and nothing will effectually destroy the relish for these poisons, but miraculous or superabounding grace—God's infinite mercy. So it is with the reading or mental taste—a taste formed for the light, frivolous, fictitious and vicious. The forming of this unnatural and vicious taste, in both these cases, is the work of Satan, the old serpent, the devil, to decoy, entrap, and ruin both soul and body. It is a question, yet unsolved, whether the enemy of all good succeeds in taking more souls to perdition through the instrumentality of rum and tobacco, or that of the light, frothy, popular literature—novels and romances. Both are intoxicating, dissipating, soul ruinous!

Mrs. Swisshelm, in her Saturday Visitor, declared unhesitatingly that the whole batch of fashion-plate magazines, and other fictitious writings, spread more domestic misery and destruction over the human race than all the rum-sellers in the nation. "Yes" says she, "they instigate more murders than the tyrannical bloody Nero!" The beloved Judson, and sister Vinton, missionaries to Burmah, expressed similar sentiments, weepingly. By the vitiated taste, formed through the corrupting influences of the press, the relish for Bible reading, the solid and the pure are measurably destroyed. Here lies the serpent coiled, or in the grass, unseen.

Place a serpent or stinging adder in the hands of this daughter of yours? Sooner, far, than a sensation book or periodical! The bite of a serpent may be healed, but that of a literary serpent never—save by God's special interference.

For thirty years and more we have besought parents, tearfully, not to form the tastes of their children on romance or the fictitious. "Can a man take fire in his bosom and his clothes not be burned?" "Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out." Prov. 26: 20. How is the taste acquired for intoxicating drinks? Look at that wretched inebriate reeling through the streets or in the gutter, with tattered garments, haggard looks, bloodshot eyes, red nose and bloated cheeks, in the lowest depths of misery and degredation. How came he there? What the first moving cause of his downfall? Did he commence tippling with drugged liquors at the low groggeries or devil's dens—the little hells, boiling over with the scum of the pit, where nightly ring horrid oaths and blasphemies? Not so; the starting-point to this sink-hole of moral pollution, this hot-bed of debauch, and these bacchanalian excesses was at the genteel restaurant, the gay saloon, the fashionable hotel, where polished gentlemen assemble, clad in fine broad cloths, with ruffled shirts, gold-headed canes, gold breast-pins, gold watch chains, keys and seals, dangling; where stand the sparkling decanters of delicious cordials, tempting wines, dealt out in goblets, placed to the lips in vessels of silver and vessels of gold. Here is where drunkards are manufactured—take the first step to the gutter and brothel.

"Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath babblings? Who hath wounds without cause? Who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine, they that go to seek mixed wine. Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder. Thine eyes shall behold strange women, and thine heart shall utter perverse things. Yea, thou shalt be as he that lieth down in the midst of the sea, or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast. They have stricken me, shalt thou say, and I was not sick; they have beaten me, and I felt it not; when shall I awake? I will seek it yet again." Prov. 23: 29–35.

Precisely so in forming the taste for romance—for fictions—

"The coxcomb's novel,
And the drunkard's toast."

EXCELLENT ADVICE.

Those who are endeavoring to live entirely consecrated to the Lord, will find the following advice, from the July number of the "Guide to Holiness," of special importance:—

HOW THE BLESSING MAY BE RETAINED.

There are many who once enjoyed the blessing of perfect love, that have now lost it. Some have received it a number of times, and after all, are now without it. But thank God, they may come again, although they have been unfaithful; for the fountain is still open and Jesus is still at the mercy-seat, in order to save. The following thoughts are written to preserve those who receive it, from fickle unfaithfulness.

1. In order to keep yourselves in the love of God, you must confess it. The fear of man, which brings a snare, sometimes hinders people from confessing. But this should be conquered. Many have resisted the Holy Spirit when they ought to have confessed the blessing; and by doing so, they have from that very moment lost it. Confessing entire sanctification does not exalt self; no, it humbles the soul, and gives glory to God.

2. To keep it you must continue to believe. We are kept by the power of God through faith. As soon as people give up believing, they lose the blessing; and no wonder, for we stand by faith. Sanctified Paul said, the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God. St. Peter said, that the ancient christians were kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation. 1 Pet. 1, 5.

3. To keep it you must live constantly in the spirit of self-denial. Of every thing sinful, of course you must deny yourself; and also of everything doubtful. There are some gratifications which are not forbidden in Scripture; but it is not expedient for a sanctified soul to use them. The safest way, is to let them alone. Thousands have fallen by lawful things. Be on your guard, or one moment may spoil the work of fifty years.

4. To keep it you must live in the spirit of watchfulness constantly. Watch against temptation, and resist in a moment, steadfast in the faith. Watch against a light, trifling spirit, by which hundreds have fallen into gloom and stolid darkness. Watch against the world; for it is full of allurement; and every thing that is sensual has a tendency to lull the soul. Be awake, and keep your eyes open. Be very jealous of your tongue, and bridle it.

5. To keep it you must be faithful to the emotions of the Holy Ghost. Follow the Spirit of God, let consequences be what they will. The Holy Ghost will sometimes remind you that it is the hour of prayer; and if you do not promptly attend, you may in one moment forfeit full redemption. Perfect love is a very tender dove; and it will immediately take its flight, if you do not every moment walk after the Spirit of God.

6. To keep it you must read the Holy Scriptures much. They are spirit and life. They are soul-food. And perfect love will require some food every day. If you do not give it Bible meat, it will die. All those who have enjoyed perfect love have found strength, comfort, and direction in the word of God. And those who have been the clearest in perfect love, have been persons who paid the greatest attention and deference to the word of life.

7. To keep the blessing of perfect love, you must constantly aim at growing in grace. Many people have lost the blessing through not pressing after a greater fulness; for there are heights and depths, and lengths and breadths of the love of God, to which we must be constantly aspiring; and if we do not press after them, we shall most likely be going backward, and losing what we had before attained.

7. To keep it you must live constantly under a sense of the presence of God. Always remember, "Thou God seest me." If you knew that more than twelve legions of angels were looking at you constantly, O! how carefully would you stand on your guard, and take care to act aright; but O! you are watched every moment by an eye that is a million times keener than the eyes of angels; that awful eye is the eye of God. Live constantly under a sense of his immediate presence, and then his guiding eye will keep you safe.

9. To keep it you must constantly give yourself unto prayer. Be a man of prayer. Pray early in the morning, and, if possible, remain on your knees for thirty minutes. This will prepare you for the day. Pray often, and then prayer will soon become a delight; and you will do execution. Stay with God in prayer—stay till he melts you—and then stay when you are melted; and plead with God, and he will answer, and you will get changed, and transformed, and renewed.

10. To keep it you must labor hard for the salvation of sinners. It is the nature of perfect love to lead you to long for the salvation of souls; and if you do not go out with God for the salvation of men, your love will cool down into apathy and indifference, and you will lose the evidence of entire sanctification altogether. When your heart yearns over sinners, go to God in prayer, and go to sinners with manly sympathy; and you will find it an excellent means of grace to your soul—a holy oil that will anoint you.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

DISEASES INDUCED BY FOOD.

Happiness and morality are greatly increased by a sufficient and proper diet, unhappiness and sickness, and even crime, result from an improper one. Diseases are produced by, 1. Excess or deficiency of food. 2. Imperfect condition of digestion. 3. By poor quality of food.

When too much food is taken, it may not all be digested and absorbed, but a portion of it decays in the alimentary canal, producing flatulence, dyspepsia, diarrhea, constipation, and irritation. Sometimes the putrid mass is partly absorbed, producing blood, poisoning, fevers, torpidity, heaviness and fetid breath, jaundice, sore eyes, skin diseases, and other complaints. If an excess of food is digested and absorbed, then comes obstructions to the smaller vessels, and a long train of diseases, as plethora, apoplexy, fevers, rheumatism, gout and a long list of maladies we need not mention.

Those who eat very largely of meat, may find the muscular fiber undigested in the feces, by examination with a microscope. Fatty and starchy matter passes undigested when taken in excess. When albuminous food is taken in excess, it is almost sure to obstruct the liver and kidneys, and produce plethoria.

Deficiency of food does not often occur in this land of plenty, but the results of deficiency are muscular and mental weakness, feverishness, dyspepsia, bloodlessness and loss of weight. Eating too frequently produces bad effects, so does too long intervals between meals.

A bad quality of food, or good food badly prepared, is a parent source of many diseases which we will not name here.—Herald of Health.

LIGHT.—A dark house, wherever found, is always an unhealthy one, and usually a dirty one, too. Want of light discourages growth, promotes scrofula, encourages "consumption," and in fact everything else which is bad. It is the unqualified experience of all who have had opportunities of judging, that light is second only in importance to fresh air; and the next worse thing after a close room is a dark one. Many suppose that it is upon the spirits only that sunlight acts, and not upon the body. It is just the other way. It does the body good, and the brighter spirits show it. Most persons know that light purifies the air; and any one who does not has only to go into a room when the shutters are kept closed, to see what a close and corrupt smell the air has there. It is because the sunlight has not purified the atmosphere.

FATIGUE.—In order to understand the influence of an irregular expenditure of force, we need only to remember that when greatly fatigued we lose our appetite, and that when the stomach is full of activity the limbs are indisposed for performing hard work. Insufficient nourishment and fatiguing work, during the period of growth, stop the corporeal development of the individual.—Liebig.

A SURE REMEDY FOR A FELON.—It is said by somebody, who pretends to know all about it, that the following is a sure remedy for a felon:

"Take a pint of common soft soap and stir in air slacked lime till it is of the consistency of glazier's putty. Make a leather thimble, fill it with this composition, and insert the finger therein, and a cure is certain."

We happen to know that the above is a certain remedy and recommend it to any one who may be troubled with that disagreeable ailment.—Buffalo Advocate.

LIGHT CLOTHING.—In clothing the human body this principle should be kept constantly in view, viz: let the clothing be as light as possible consistent with comfort. Every pound of clothing beyond this constitutes a useless and constant burden. Besides this, it presses upon and interferes with the action of the skin. Adherence to this principle also implies an equal distribution of clothing over the entire body.

WHERE IS YOUR LANTERN?

Young Harry was sent on an errand, one evening in early winter. After giving him his message, his mother said,—

"Be sure you take the lantern with you, Harry."

"Bother the lantern!" answered the boy, gruffly and disrespectfully; and he started, muttering to himself,—

"What do I want with a lantern? I guess I know the way fast enough!"

Very soon Master Harry, in crossing the street, stumbled into a hole which had been made by a recent rain. By this fall he knocked the flesh from his shin bone, and covered his clothing with mud.

On his way back, he forgot that the fence had caved in near the edge of a ravine. As he groped his way along the bank, he fell over, and went sprawling to the bottom of the ravine. With much ado, and after many bruisings, he got into the road once more; but when he finally reached his mother's door, he looked more like a scarecrow than a living boy.

The lantern would have saved him from all this. Wasn't he a foolish fellow not to take it? Certainly he was. But what shall be said of those boys and girls who know the Bible to be the only lamp which can guide their feet safely through the paths of life to their home in heaven, and yet refuse to carry it? Are they not still more foolish? You know they are. Take the Bible, therefore, for your life lantern, and let it be a lamp unto your feet, and a light unto your path.—Ex.

A CHILD'S NOBLE ANSWER.

"A little English boy, nine years old, a member of the Band of Hope, was at a dinner party one day, and those present wanted to test the strength of his principles.

"A half sovereign was put into the bottom of a tumbler, which was then half filled with ale. 'Now,' said they, 'if you'll drink that, you shall have what is at the bottom.'

"'No,' replied the noble little fellow; 'not a dozen half sovereigns shall make me break my pledge!' Surely the 'root of the matter' was in him. That noble child will make a noble man."

Three cheers for the little temperance boy! He means to go through life sober. If he holds on as he has begun, you will never hear of him, when he grows up, going to dinner parties and drinking wine and brandy.

WILLIE'S FIRST OATH.

A little boy came in from school the other day looking very unhappy. Was he hurt? No. Had he been in mischief? No. What was the matter with Willie? He had hardly spoken at supper time, and ate very little.

His mother asked him again, "Willie, what ails you, dear?" "Mother, I swore. The minute I spoke it I was afraid of God, and ran home. Mother, if I could only wipe those wicked words out of my mouth—if I only could. Will God ever forgive me for taking his holy name in vain? Pray for me, mother," and Willie sank upon his knees and hid his face.

His mother did pray for him, and Willie prayed for himself—prayed that he might never profane the name of God again.

"I'd rather be dumb all my life long,' said Willie, "than ever to become a swearer."

LITTLE things and little people have often brought great things to pass. The large world in which we exist is made up of little particles, smaller than the sands on the sea-shore. The vast sea is composed of small drops of water. The little busy bees, how much honey they gather! Do not be discouraged because you are little. A little star shines brightly in the sky in the dark night, and may be the means of saving many a poor sailor from shipwreck; and a little Christian may do a great deal of good, if he or she will try. There is nothing like trying.

GOD WILL KNOW IT.—"Not a soul in the whole world will ever know it," said Robert Jones to himself, one day, when he was strongly tempted to do some wrong act.

"But God will know it," promptly whispered conscience, and Robert was afraid to do it.

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," says the Bible. Robert had learned his first lesson.

WHILE a mother was brooding over her poverty, her little son said: "Mamma, I think God hears when we scrape the bottom of the barrel!"

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

"BEHOLD, HE COMETH!"

Lo! we lift our heads with gladness,
  And cheer our hearts with song,
For the triumph and the glory
  Shall dawn on us ere long.
In faith we cry, Come quickly, Lord,
  And claim us for thine own;
And where on earth thy cross did stand,
  Oh! come and fix thy throne.

And though the strife grows keener still,
  And foes increase in strength,
Lo! the day of our redemption
  Is drawing nigh at length.
With loving expectation
  Each waiting heart is stirred,
And the joyful cry, "He cometh!"
  Shall soon by all be heard.

Awake, awake! the night is spent,
  The day is dawning fast,
For the clouds on the horizon
  Are breaking up at last;
Now the night winds, sad and mournful,
  Have slowly died away,
And our joyous songs are greeting
  The coming of the day.

Awake! awake! lift up your heads,
  Redemption draweth nigh!
Lo! the tokens of the coming day
  Are spreading in the sky.
The Sun of Righteousness shall rise
  With healing in his wings,
And unto every watching heart
  He sweet deliverance brings.

Awake! awake! the promises
  Are now to be fulfilled,
And in hope's glad fruition
  Shall each rising doubt be stilled.
Now shall our dim eyes brighten,
  So long clouded by our tears,
For He who maketh all things new,
  Our Lord and Christ, appears.

THE END AT HAND.

JOHN COUCH.

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations; and then shall the end come."—MATT. 24: 14.

THIS language was used by the Savior in answering a question; therefore it relates directly to the subject presented by the question. The central idea was the time when certain events should transpire. It did not involve the nature of the events, but the time of their occurrence. The answer was given in harmony with the question, and was designed to show the order of their fulfillment, so as to indicate where in the series, the great event inquired after would transpire. To illustrate: If a stranger in a place should inquire of a friend where a certain man's house was located, and was told to take a road on which he would pass a stone house, a brick house, and a white house, and then he would immediately come to the house inquired after, the subject would be made plain; and the person would understand that the stone, brick, and white houses were referred to on account of their relative position to the house sought.

So in this prophetical answer of our Savior. The inquirers desired to know the time when his coming and the end of the world would take place. He kindly and plainly answered them by stating what events would transpire in their foretold order; the last one of the series being given in the text, which is a direct answer to the question, and locates the end of the world.

The age ending at the divinely appointed period cannot be the Jewish age, but the Christian; for the law and ritual of Moses were promulgated by divine authority during that dispensation, but the gospel through the next.

As Christ in this text declares that when the gospel has accomplished a certain work, the end of the age shall come, he must refer to the age in which the gospel is preached, or the Christian age; as the gospel must end with the gospel age, for that is the period of its continuance.

The disciples in their question anticipated the end of the age as coming at the second advent of Christ, when they said, "What shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" They doubtless understood that the sign which would indicate the nearness of his coming, would also indicate the nearness of the end of the world. The Savior did not correct that idea, but endorsed it by his answer, in which he manifested a purpose to make the location of the events so plain that none need mistake it. He gave series after series of different classes of events, and at the end of each he locates his coming, the end of the world, and the establishment of God's everlasting kingdom.

It could be illustrated by the man seeking to find the house; his informant, after locating the house by giving the position of other houses, might have added strength to his proof by saying: You will also pass a cotton factory on the right, a saw-mill on the left, beyond which is a meeting-house, and opposite this is the house you seek. Being thus explicit would show great kindness in the informant, and also that he esteemed it quite important that the inquirer be able to identify the house at sight. So did the Savior in answering the question of the disciples, when they inquired concerning his second coming.

He first exhorts the church not to be deceived, which shows that it is a subject of great moment, and that they would be liable to be misled upon this vitally important point, viz: the time of the ending of this age.

He then presents a series of events, as we have illustrated: first, false Christs; second, national wars, famines, pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places; third, persecution and hatred of the church by all nations; fourth, many false teachers promulgating deceptive doctrines; and last, at the closing of the series, this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached, and then shall the end come.

He then goes back and gives another class of events, terminating at the same point, presenting, first, the abomination of desolation, producing tribulation, unequalled by any since the beginning of the world; following that would be theological changes, in which false doctrines relating to his second coming would be taught, showing that the event would be invisible and spiritual, and that it had already taken place; the proof of which could be given in secret chambers and desert places.

He then presents the fact that cotemporaneous with the theological developments, would be physical signs in the sun, moon, and stars, commencing immediately after the great tribulation; and then makes an application of the subject, illustrating the connection between these predicted events and the great one inquired after, by the parable of the fig tree; showing that as certainly as men may know when summer is near by the progressive development in the trees, so certainly his people may know when his coming is near, by seeing these signs transpire as predicted.

He then declared that the days preceding his coming would be like those prior to the flood, and the destruction of the cities of the plain. As the people there did not take heed to God's prediction foretelling those events, and therefore "knew not" until they were ensnared, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

He also predicts that at the same time there will be two classes of Christian servants ministering to the church; one class giving the household meat in due season, that is, truth designed for that time, while the other class, or evil servants, will say, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and will sympathize with the drunken, scoffing multitude, and be fatally ensnared when the unlooked-for day of judgment shall come.

He then, to put the subject beyond all doubt, illustrated the same time and classes by ten virgins in a parable; showing the different positions of the saved and unsaved, when he (the Bridegroom) should appear. After which he describes the scenes of the judgment which should follow his coming, and the end of the gospel age.

In all this instruction the Savior is evidently laboring to show his church the great events clustering around the time of his coming; so that it should not come upon them unawares, but that they might be watching like servants waiting for the return of their master from a wedding.

As the Savior plainly shows that the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom would be one of a number of predicted events, to transpire in connection with, and terminating at his coming, it follows that those events must be cotemporaneous; therefore the gospel of the kingdom cannot be preached until the signs indicating Christ's coming shall appear; at which time the two classes of servants will be found doing their work, and the virgins moving to meet the Bridegroom.

(1) What is the gospel of the kingdom? (2) What must it accomplish among the nations? (3) Has that work been done?

(1) The gospel of the kingdom. Gospel signifies God's message. A message is a communication sent from one to another. Gospel is a communication sent from God to men. When God sends a message, or makes a revelation concerning any subject or class of people, that message frequently receives a name significant of its particular application and design. Thus we read—the gospel of circumcision—the gospel of uncircumcision—the gospel of Jesus Christ—the gospel of the kingdom of God. The particular qualifying terms used in these passages show that they refer to particular classes of revealed truth. The gospel of circumcision cannot be the same as that of uncircumcision, any more than a black horse and a white horse can be the same beast. The gospel of circumcision is that class of truth relating to the Jews as a circumcised people; while the gospel of uncircumcision related to the Gentiles as an uncircumcised people. The gospel of the kingdom is a message of truth in which revelatons are made, and instructions given, concerning the kingdom.

Jesus, when he uttered the text, was making revelations and giving instructions to show the time when the kingdom of God should come. He was delivering that part of the gospel of the kingdom which related to the time of its establishment. He expressed this fact every time he made a point in the argument, as he said in speaking of the signs of his coming: "When ye shall see all these things, know that it is near;" or, as Luke records it, "know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

When Jesus said this gospel, he evidently meant the one present in the conversation; the one to which their minds were then directed; the one concerning which predictions were being made, and instructions given, showing the time and circumstances under which the kingdom of God should be established.

The same message was given to the Jews, and the subject photographed typically in their history. It was called the gospel of the kingdom as it was preached to them by John and Jesus and their disciples. "Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand." Here we get the same characteristic feature of the message as in the text. In both cases the emphatic point is the time of the coming of the kingdom. In the first instance, the message was preached to a typical people, and was therefore necessarily confined to them, and must be typical in its results. This appears plain when we examine the commission given the disciples to preach it: "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Matt. 10: 6, 7.

In this case, the message in which it was said, "The time is fulfilled, the kingdom of God is at hand," is preached to one nation, while in the last case it will be preached to all nations, when the servants of Christ have witnessed the signs foretold by him, and can apply his language to themselves. "So likewise ye when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

It is said by some that the kingdom of God has been at hand ever since the days of the apostles, because they said at that time it was at hand. This, we think, is a mistake. Jesus did say, while they were preaching that message to that nation, "Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel till the Son of man be come." He afterwards explained what he meant by his coming, when he said, "There be some standing here which shall not taste death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom;" (Matt. 16: 28;) or, as Mark records it, "till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power." The fulfillment of this prediction is then recorded, which was the transfiguration. It appears, therefore, that the kingdom which they proclaimed at hand, did come during their life time, as predicted, and was a typical kingdom, which came in connection with the typical second coming of Christ. From that time no one was authorized to say that the kingdom was at hand, until the last day signs should appear.

As the first proclamation and its results were the divine foreshadowings, and photographic representations of the mighty events to take place at the ending of the antitypical age, we may learn from the perfectly drawn lines of the picture, the parts and connections of the wonderful scenes before us.

ALL.

F. H. FAHNESTOCK.

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise [all] the dead?" Acts 26: 8. "For as in Adam all died, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15: 22. "Now, if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the [wicked or rest of the] dead?"—1 Cor. 15: 12. "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."—Acts 24: 15. "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto a resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto a resurrection of damnation."—Jno. 5: 28, 29. "And many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, some to shame and everlasting contempt." Dan. 12: 2. "But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits, afterward, they they that are Christ's at his coming."—1 Cor. 15: 23. "And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years: but the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection; blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power."—Rev. 20: 4, 5, 6. "And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle, the number of whom is as the sands of the sea; and the sea gave up the dead which was in it, and death and hell [grave] delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged, every man according to their works, and death and hell were cast into the lake of fire; this is the second death; and whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."—Rev. 20: 7, 8, 13–15. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me hath everlasting life."—Jno. 6: 47. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; he that believeth not the Son, shall not see life [everlasting], but the wrath of God abideth on him."—Jno. 3: 36.

Who for one moment can think, in the face of all this testimony from the Holy Spirit, that God will not raise all the dead—yes, the wicked and the good? It was certainly not only the righteous that died in Adam; it was all, good and bad, both just and unjust; all in the graves shall hear and come forth. They certainly will then be alive when they hear and come forth. "All" certainly means not one of any class omitted. Awake to shame and everlasting contempt (Dan. 12: 2) means the wicked dead; for the righteous never awake to shame. The righteous only live and reign with Christ; and the "rest" (wicked) live not again till the thousand years are finished, implies that they (wicked) will live then; for if they did not rise, how could they suffer the second death, which is only for the wicked? Rev. 20: 4.

And think it not incredible that every human being that ever breathed the breath of life will be raised, to be judged and rewarded according to their works. The righteous will have eternal life, whilst the wicked will be burned up root and branch (Mal. 4: 1); they shall be as the "fat of lambs," shall "consume, into smoke shall they consume away" (Ps. 37: 20); "yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be."—Ps. 37: 10. "The face of the Lord is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth."—Ps. 37: 9. "But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, the transgressor shall be rooted out of it."—Prov. 2: 22. "And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts."—Mal. 4: 3.

If they have no resurrection, how are all the above texts to be fulfilled? It is true they shall not see life eternal, as it is equally true that as in Adam all died, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

HOW ARE THE MIGHTY FALLEN!

ALLEN DAMON.

"O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity."—HOSEA 14: 1.

The sentiment expressed in this Scripture represents a sad condition of the church of God. Undoubtedly the Jewish church, prior to the first advent of Christ, was typical of the Gentile church prior to the second advent. The question may be asked, What were the iniquities that caused the Jewish church to fall?

I. They turned away from God, and worshiped idols. Such is the case with the Gentile church at the present time.

II. They carried on merchandise in the house of God. Such is the case now.

III. They would not believe the prophecies that pointed to the first advent. Such is the case now in relation to the second.

IV. They were proud, and adopted the practices of heathen nations, and forsook the law of their God. And so it is at the present time.

Jesus foresaw that it would be so, and when giving the signs of his coming, he says, "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." Matt. 24: 12. Paul also says: "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Again he says: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come." 2 Tim. 3: 1, 13. Not altogether are these perils to be seen and felt in the moral, social, and political world; but in the religious also. Says Paul of such, "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. From such turn away." The church has not fallen so much from its theoretical faith, as it has from the Bible standard of true christianity. And it is the case, and ever has been, that under such circumstances she has lost the peculiarity by which she was distinguished from the world; and the result is, the world does not believe what she says, and she has forgotten the declaration of the Son of God, when he says, "I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you"; "Ye know that it hated me before it hated you." It is plainly seen that the reason why the world does not hate the professed church at the present time, is because it looks so much like the world; people do not know where to make the distinction, therefore the world will not hate its own.

As soon as a person begins to lose his faith in God and his word, he will conform to the world and its folly. Pride not only rules the world, but the professed church. It is very frequently the case that we hear our brethren speak aluringly of other denominations. It may be time to look at home awhile, and see if there are not some gaps in the wall against our own house. I think we shall not require a microscope to see how far we have stepped into the world, and how low many have fallen from the gospel standard of truth and piety.

There are a number of causes for these things, but one is, the church has lost her first love, and has gone to court the honors of the world by conforming to its fashions; and the result is, she has become palsied, and does not know what the matter is. She is bitten by this serpent, and is so benumbed that she is not sensible of any wrong which she has done; therefore thinks that she is all right, because her conscience does not condemn her. The Israelites were once bitten by the flying, fiery serpent, and were so benumbed that they were not sensible of any physical or mental agony, but were so paralyzed that they could not look at the brazen serpent which Moses lifted up for their salvation, without an earnest effort. So it is now. In these times people must make a mighty effort to look to Christ, in order to overcome the tide of popularity which is sweeping the giddy throng down to destruction.

It is not enough to look to Christ as the Son of God, but we must look to his word and obey it, in order to live. Jesus said—"Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." The way to be sanctified by the truth is to obey it. Some are very willing to believe that Paul told the truth when he spoke of the coming of Christ, and the resurrection, and immortality through Christ, and his reign on David's throne; but when Paul says, "I would that men pray every where, lifting up holy hands without wrath or doubting. In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works" (1 Tim. 2: 9–10); they are not so careful to look at this; for, say they, these are some of Paul's notions, for he was an old bachelor, and was opposed to such things; therefore, it does not matter so much whether we obey them or not. But we read in the good word of the Lord, that by "the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established." Peter is the other one, and was not an old bachelor. He says: "Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. For after this manner, in the old time, the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection to their own husbands." 1 Pet. 3: 3–5. It is very evident that those persons who act in opposition to this commandment of the apostles, and do not feel condemned, have their consciences seared.

I have heard persons, who profess to be looking for the coming of the Just One, make these excuses, and try to palm it off by saying that Paul said, "Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind." It should be remembered that Paul made no allusion to these things, but was speaking of the Sabbath day. Those who are disposed to reason away a portion of God's word, so plainly revealed as this, can easily use the same reasoning on any portion of the Bible. O, well, says another, if we are only honest, no matter about these things. This is another switch of the devil. How can a person be honest in doing right contrary to the word of God, while it is blazing in his face and eyes?

"But," says one, "if Christ had spoken these things it would be different." My dear friend, just listen to the voice of God. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man [and women also] of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17. Since we have this scripture, we come to the conclusion that no person, whose heart is a recipient of the love of God, will attempt for a moment to make such excuses, nor have a desire to on any point whatever. If we love God, we shall love his word. No matter what the position may be that the word may lead us to take, whether it pleases or displeases our friends, we shall dare to do right. We need not expect the honors of the world and God at the same time; for we cannot serve God and mammon. The cause of Christ is bleeding at every pore on account of these things.

I know of a sister who spoke in very strange terms through a paper against pride and frippery of fashion, and it was not long after that that the same sister, while on her way to a conference, called at L., and got her hat all arrayed with wreaths and plumes, and jested and joked with the shop hands, and told them she was on her way to a conference. Perhaps she thought that Paul and Peter were old bachelors. What was the result of this act? It was sounded in the ears of the world, and what we love so well is held in disrepute. But why should we wonder at such things, while at the same time many of our preachers do not say a word against them, because they put them on to their own wives and children? How can men preach against wearing gold, while at the same time they are selling it to their congregations? How can men lift their voice like a trumpet, cry aloud and spare not, when they are buying costly things to adorn their parlors? Why not as well adorn our bodies?

There are many calls for help for missionary purposes, and very likely there is some poor family suffering right at your door for want of decent clothing to wear where they can hear the gospel preached; and when the clothes-room is examined, there hang silks and satins in abundance. Where, oh where is gospel equality? Where is that love which loves our neighbor as ourselves? Where are they that "give to him that asketh of thee; and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away"? Where are they that in all things do as they would that men should do unto them? Where are they that weep between the porch and the altar? Where are they that know and love the joyful sound, who once aroused the world, and shook it from centre to centre? Where are those cutting testimonials that once made the sinner tremble, and caused him to see his need of Christ? Let those men of God who wield the blazing sword of God's eternal truth step out into the field of battle, and defend the character of their God. But remember, if you use the sword that cuts, you will cut the rich and covetous man. Some friend may turn against you, but God will raise you up friends who will love you, because you tell the truth. Let no man, though he be rich, cause your weapons to fall from your hands, and you fall because your heart is lifted up. Flee these things, O man of God.

ABIDE IN CHRIST.

A. O. BARTLETTE.

"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."—JOHN 15: 7.

If we are joined to Christ, the union is by faith. Such faith as believes that Christ is the atoning sacrifice, that he will save all who come to him, and that confidingly trust in him. That faith which enables us to draw nigh with "full assurance, ... having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience." That faith through which we are sanctified, saved from sin, and perfected in love. This faith is obtained by consecrating all to God, believing that he accepts the sacrifice we bring, and by it we become closely united to Christ, as the branch is to the vine. Then the life that is in the vine is communicated to the branches, and the graces of the Spirit—the fruit, appears in abundance. This joining to the Lord takes place whenever a genuine work of saving grace is accomplished. Some profess to know Christ, "but in works deny him," being "disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate"; such are as branches cast forth, withered and dying, and if not soon rescued must perish forever. But the true followers of Jesus feel that dependence on God is complete and entire; therefore with purpose of heart they cleave unto the Lord.

"If ye abide in me." By the term "abide," we see that the conditions are, to be constant in the performance of all christian duties. Pure love to the Savior is not like a sunbeam in a winter's day, or a meteor's glare—soon gone. A true christian will abide in Christ, as the branch in the vine. "Behold we count them happy which endure." Such only shall be saved.

"And my words abide in you." The Psalmist says, "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee." "How sweet are thy words unto my taste!" "Thy statutes have been my songs in the house of my pilgrimage." Says Jesus, "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." Sweet words, and blessed promise.

The words of Christ abide in the heart and become a living principle. They regulate the affections and the whole life. Love, joy, peace, gentleness, meekness, temperance, and all things of good report prevail, and are manifest in the life. The conditions being performed, God is faithful to his promise—"Ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." The desires of the heart being regulated in accordance with the divine will, prayer is offered in faith, and mercies and blessings flow downward with the promptness of divine love. If the answer is delayed, we can only wait and trust. "All things are possible to those that believe." May the Lord help us to be rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom. So shall we possess all real good here, and eternal glory hereafter, by living in Christ, keeping his word, and offering in humility the prayer of faith. And if we love Jesus, and are living in him, we certainly shall love his appearing. It cannot be otherwise. The glorious hope of the resurrection and eternal life, depends on the coming of Christ. We may lay up a treasure in heaven, but we shall not go there to get it. When Jesus comes, he will bring our treasure, or reward with him; which will be an everlasting inheritance among all them which are sanctified, in the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Speed on, ye lingering moments! O Jesus, quickly come,
The night's been long and dreary, we're sighing now for home;
From toil, and care, and watching, thy waiting ones release,
And bring us with the "dear ones," where night and death shall cease.

FREEDOM.

L. J. DIBBLE.

"He is a freeman whom the truth makes free,
Who first of all the bands of Satan breaks."

Yet how few such freemen there are. How few of those who count themselves such, can truthfully be so reckoned;—free from the bondage of sin; free from the bondage of error—error that neutralizes to a great extent the pure word of God, depriving it of half its power to sanctify the soul; bondage to man's opinions, which destroys the child-like simplicity of mind it is necessary to bring to the word of God. Those who have suffered under such a yoke; those who believe in God and love him; believe in the Bible as a revelation of his will, and yet, through false teachings in regard to it, have been compelled through weary years to fight the natural sense of justice implanted in their breasts; to look in vain for harmony in a book they wish to believe an infallible record of the divine will; such know how to appreciate the unclouded truth when it is revealed.

None need tell me it is unimportant whether one believes in a conscious or unconscious state of the dead; whether we believe in the final destruction of the wicked, or of their eternal torment. When I look over my own life, and see what that one doctrine of the eternal torment of the lost has done for me; how like the pall of death it hung over the innocent hours of childhood; how in youth it opened the door for infidelity, disbelief in the Bible as the word of God; how after years of weary wandering in the desert of unbelief, after God had revealed himself to my soul a God of love and goodness, my soul was attracted to the Bible as its natural, spiritual food; how even then it came between my love of God and that book, tempting me to look in some other direction for a revelation of that God of love who had revealed himself to my soul, sending it forth to fruitless searchings in Spiritualism, in Swedenborgianism, and to almost every ism, in hopes to find some truth that would vindicate God's justice, and at the same time leave me my faith in the Bible.

Disbelief in the Bible sets one free from it; but to believe in it, and yet believe that it teaches a doctrine that the whole soul revolts against, it is no marvel, I think, that one harbors doubts; that such thoughts as these find lodgment in the breast. The word of God must accord with the natural sense of right. If the doctrine of the eternal torment of the lost is taught in the Bible, it does not look just or right. O how such doctrine weakens the authority of that book. How loosely it sets upon the mind, when we think we may take from, or add to; yet the mind will seek some refuge from a doctrine the heart cannot endorse.

I do not wonder now at the want of zeal or enthusiasm among professing christians, whose minds are mystified and confused by their spiritualized Bibles; whose hearts are in rebellion against the horrible doctrine that spiritualizing has evolved. But I thank God, the mist has been cleared away from my spiritual vision. I can now see the beauty, harmony and simplicity of the Bible.

The mission of Elder Grant to California was like that of the Master's to earth, in that it set at liberty those who were bound. Not only have his teachings penetrated the hearts of many, causing them to turn from a life of sin to one of holiness, but it has set at liberty the souls of many who were bound in chains of error. I thank God for the light his teachings have shed here. I feel that God, through him, has divided the light from the darkness in my spiritual world. O that the light had come to me before, that I had had it in early life; how much grief it would have spared me. There is bitterness mingled with my cup of rejoicing now, when I remember a darling brother, who, like myself, had wandered into the desert of unbelief. A lingering disease had brought him near to his grave. For months and years together we had tried to find something satisfactory in Spiritualism, but had failed. We were talking together a few days before he died of our disappointment. I shall never forget his look, as he turned his face toward me and said, "O! L——, there is nothing so good as christianity, after all, take away that hell-fire doctrine from it." I answered in haste, "But you cannot take it away; they are one and inseparable." I never heard another word from his lips in favor of the religion of Jesus. I have no assurance that he died in the faith of the christian religion; and that I have it not, I lay wholly to that accursed doctrine of the eternal torment of the lost. O that the gospel, the good news of the kingdom, could be preached throughout the length and breadth of the land, without those doctrines of the enemy of all good going with it.

PURIFYING FAITH.

Faith works by love, and purifies the heart. Not a mere intellectual assent to the truths of God's word, accepting of the theory, while destitute of the power of godliness. A mere belief never saves. Devils "believe and tremble." We may profess faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, in his power to save to the uttermost, to cleanse from all unrighteousness; but unless we have a deep realizing sense in our own hearts that this work has been wrought within us by the power of the Holy Ghost, it will avail us nothing; only add to our condemnation. I praise God, we may know when this work is accomplished. When a soul, filled with the earnest of the Spirit, comes before God, consecrating its entire being upon the altar that sanctifieth the gift, pleading for complete deliverance from all sin, the Spirit helps our infirmities, and enables us to reach within the veil, even into the inner sanctuary, and claim the power of Jesus' blood to wash and keep us clean. Oh the blessed consciousness of purity within; the Spirit testifying to the fact, and witnessing with our spirits that we are indeed the Lord's, and made fit temples for the Holy Ghost to dwell in, united to Christ, as the branch to the vine, one with Jesus in the work of saving souls.

Surely, it is a privilege angels might covet to come at the feet of Jesus, bringing precious souls in the arms of our faith, and in agonizing prayer plead for their salvation, till victory comes. Glory be to God, it is love, all conquering love, pervades the souls of those made clean in the blood of the Lamb. Who would not plead for clean hands, and pure hearts, that they might go forth in the name of Jesus, "strong in the strength that God supplies through his eternal Son," to seek and save the lost and erring ones, and gather jewels for the Redeemer's crown. Lord, breathe upon thy children, that they may receive the Holy Ghost, and go forth laboring for thee. His richest blessings are not given for our own enjoyment merely, but to fit us to be laborers together with him in the work of saving souls. May God help us, and give us the earnest of the Spirit, that we may covet souls for him, and labor effectually in his vineyard.—Selected by G. E. Merrill.

THE DIFFERENCE.

F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

"Then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God, and him that serveth him not."—MAL. 3: 18.

Unbelievers often deny the existence of a radical difference between the people of God and those who are not his people. They scoff at the terms commonly used to designate this difference. The righteous and the wicked are all the same to them, or, if there is a choice, they esteem those called "wicked" above the righteous. Saints are hardly on a level with sinners, in their estimation. But whoever allows the Bible to be what it claims to be, must also allow that there is a difference between the righteous and the wicked. This difference is as clearly marked as the difference between beasts clean and unclean, or between sheep and goats. The reason why the difference is not clearly seen now, is on account of defective powers of discernment. In some cases, evidently, it is a wilful blindness, that will not admit the truth of what may be seen. But there is a day coming in which a general separation will take place; the sheep will be separated from the goats; the real difference between saint and sinner will be made manifest, and "then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God, and him that serveth him not."

To those who are willing to see and acknowledge the truth, this difference is apparent now. Not as fully and clearly manifest as it will be in the day when God makes up his "jewels," yet evident enough to convince all who are not persistently rebelling against the light. Here is one test, or mark, given by our Lord himself: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." John 14: 35. Love springs up in the breast of one whose sins are forgiven, and "to whom much is forgiven the same also loveth much." Reader, seek and find pardon for all your sins, and you will know by experience the difference between the righteous and the wicked.

CHRISTIANITY did not come from heaven to be the amusement of an idle hour; to be the food of mere imagination; to be as a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice. It is intended to be the guide, the companion of all our hours, the serious occupation of our whole existence.

— Amid the tears of grief, peace keeps her silent place like the rainbow upon the spray of the cataract; nor can it be disturbed so long as Jehovah's sunshine rests upon the soul.

THE S. N. A. CAMPMEETING.
Vermont Central R. Road.
FARE REDUCED.

Our friends living on the line of the roads operated by this company, will see by reference to our notice in another column in this paper, that this year they have an opportunity to attend our meeting at a less rate than ever before. Let there be a general rally of the friends in Vermont, Northern New York, the Canadas, etc. G. T. A.

ARE WE READY?

It is a question of no minor importance, Are we ready to meet Christ? The evidences are abundant to show that he is coming soon. It should be kept in mind, that without holiness "no man shall see the Lord." Heb. 12: 14. Please give that passage of Scripture a very careful and prayerful consideration. If Jesus should come to-day—to-night, are we ready? Provision is made by him for our complete cleansing from sin, and all its pollutions. We may live daily, so that we shall be free from condemnation. Says the apostle: "There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit." Rom. 8: 1. Again he says: "But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." Rom. 6: 22. Such an one would feel ready. Inasmuch as there is a fountain opened through Christ "to cleanse us from all unrighteousness," why not have the full benefit of the fountain, and be clean? Said Jesus: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Matt. 5: 8. He would not teach thus, if it is impossible to have a pure heart.

We are now so near the coming of Jesus, and besides, life is so uncertain in this world, it is not safe to live a single day, or hour, without a clean, pure heart. Let us all pray that the Lord will increase our hungering after holiness.

CHRISTIANITY AND SKEPTICISM.

In 1869 the General Association of the Congregational churches in Mass. became convinced that infidelity was making an earnest effort to overthrow the foundations of christianity, and that something should be done to counteract the works of those who are the enemies of the cross of Christ. After mature deliberation, it was decided to have a course of lectures from able men, showing the strength of the christian's foundation, and the weakness of those who sustain infidelity. Ten such lectures were given the winter of 1870, and ten more in 1871 These make two octavo volumes, of between four and five hundred pages of valuable reading matter. The works are published by and for sale at the Congregational Publishing Society, 13 Cornhill, Boston. They are called "Boston Lectures."

WHAT SHALL BE DONE?

BRO. GRANT:—Soon after my return from the tent meeting at Woodstock, I chanced to meet a Methodist preacher, who (knowing my views on baptism) said he had a question for me. I will submit to the Crisis for an answer.

QUESTION: "There is an individual in New Hampshire whose weight is over four hundred pounds, and the minister don't dare immerse him. Now, according to your views, what will be done?"

This is the question in his own language. Please answer through the Crisis, and oblige M. A. P.

We think the minister has not had much experience in baptism; for if he had, he would not hesitate to baptize one weighing four hundred pounds. It is a well-known fact that the water will float a man of any given weight, no matter how heavy he may be; hence, if one is familiar with baptizing, he need not hesitate at all to baptize the heaviest man living.

A PROTESTANT LEAGUE.

The late riot in New York has aroused the Protestants to provide against a repetition of the bloody scenes of the 12th of July. The following is said to be in circulation for signatures:—

> "In view of recent and probable future events, the immediate organization of a society to be known as 'The Protestant League of America,' headquarters in New York City, with affiliated societies throughout the United States, is recommended. For this purpose and properly to consider the immediate event that gives rise to this suggestion, let public meetings be called at once in this city and elsewhere. The claims of Roman Catholicism are incompatible with civil and religious liberty."

CAUSE OF CRIME.

It is a well-known and lamentable fact, that licentiousness is rapidly increasing, especially in the United States. Different causes operate to produce this result, but one prominent one is the love of fashionable dress, on the part of women. In the Annual Report of the New England Moral Reform Society, made at the Park Street Church, Boston, May 31st, 1871, we find the following:—

> "We grieve to be obliged to record our deliberate conviction of the prominent causes that lead to the violation of the laws of purity among women. The conviction is forced upon us every day and everywhere. It is the love of dress, or display among women. The love is fostered in the child by parents from its cradle. Consciously or unconsciously, the education of the mother tends to this display. The child comes to feel that dress includes almost everything; that he or she is nothing without it.
>
> Look at our christian women, professing to have renounced the world, its pomps and vanities. Christian women, adorned with all the paraphernalia of the ball-room, walking the streets, entering the house of God, attracting attention from all eyes by the fineness and quantity of their laces, the rarity of their jewelry, the costliness of their silks. These are the sermons that are heard, these the epistles that are read each Sabbath day; read and pondered by the children, the poor shop-girls and servants, while each, as soon as able, by fair or other means, practice what they have read. Is it strange that we hear of young and older women advertising for 'Friends' who will assist them to dress as others do? women, who, in return, give all that makes life desirable to woman.
>
> Hear what a writer to the Chicago Republican says in connection with this subject:—
>
> One result of my investigations on this subject is to lead me to the conclusion that the passion for dress and display is the cause of a larger portion of this evil than any one other thing. I am thoroughly convinced that more girls are seduced into a life of shame through a desire to keep up with the times in fashionable attire, than in any other way. In fact, I believe that three out of every five enter the gate that leads to destruction through the wiles of the tempter—Fashion.
>
> The women, themselves, therefore, who run riot in the extravagance of dress, are primarily more chargeable, in my opinion, with the existence and extension of the 'social evil' than are the men.
>
> Oh, mothers, sisters, Christian women, will you continue to give impetus to this tide that is drifting thousands of souls to sure and certain destruction? Will you permit your innocent children to give and attend parties where every frivolity in dress and amusement, everything that can vitiate the taste and lead to looseness of morals is tolerated, nay, smiled upon as pretty, as stylish? These things are done—done by parents professing godliness.
>
> A christian mother, speaking within the hearing of the writer, not long since, told of the number of parties her child of nine years old had attended within a short space of time, saying there were others for which she must purchase dresses that she might appear fashionable, adding, 'the poor little thing is almost tired out with the excitement!'
>
> A writer in one of our religious papers states the fact of a little boy, who boasted of the variety of wines that he had for his birthday party. Can any one doubt what the result of such a course of education will be on that boy? These are not isolated cases; they are multiplying constantly. We utter this note of warning as in duty bound, as guardians of youth, as a call to mothers to guard their children against these fearful temptations."

PIC-NIC RELIGION.—This is the title of a sixteen page tract from the soul-stirring pen of Bro. D. F. Newton, 303 West 20th Street, New York. It is just the thing for the times, and should be scattered in all places where parties of pleasure are instituted to forward the cause of Christ. We give our readers an extract from the work this week. The price of the tract is $2 per one hundred.

PERSONAL.—From a notice in another column, it will be seen that Bro. and Sr. Durand, Cheshire, Ct., have met with an accident, and cannot fill their appointments at present.

"GOOD HEALTH" for August is received. As usual, it is filled with able articles relating to health. It is now published at No. 2 Hamilton Place, Boston. Price $2 per year.

PERFECT LOVE.

How can we obtain perfect love, that love that casteth out all fear? Many are becoming deeply interested in this important question. The possession of perfect love is the richest treasure one can have in this life. It can be obtained only by entire consecration to God. Those who are thirsting for the fulness there is in Christ, will be interested in the following extract from "The New Testament Standard of Piety."* When speaking on the passage in Mark 11: 24, which reads, "Whatsoever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them," he says:—

> "Believe you have it, and you have it, is one extreme. Believe that you shall receive, and you shall receive, is the other extreme; and yet both are not very different from the truth, which is, Believe that ye receive or are receiving, and ye shall have. But this difference is enough to produce a failure at every step. The first asks us to believe an absurdity, a falsehood; while the latter leaves our faith without any point, or perfectly indefinite. There is a vast difference between believing we have a thing, and believing we are receiving it. The text under consideration inculcates this idea,—Believe you are receiving, and you shall have. . . . .
>
> Now, according to the experience of thousands, the process seems to be this: The Christian seeking entire sanctification believes intellectually that entire conformity to the will of God, as to conduct and words, as to thoughts and affections, is his privilege and duty. He believes intellectually in the adaptation of the provisions which God has made, and in the truth of God's promise in this regard. Conscious of impurity within, he earnestly desires to be cleansed from its least remains. Considering the prayer of the apostle, 'the very God of peace sanctify you wholly;' and the assurance, 'who also will do it;' and 'the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth from all sin;' and assured in his consciousness that he has brought his sacrifice to the altar and bound it there; that he has made a full surrender, an unreserved consecration, with faith exercised through divinely-given power, (which power is requisite to the exercise of faith,) he says, "I now give all. Thou hast promised to receive the gift. Thou dost now receive. The blood of Christ cleanses now;" and in that moment, in view of the condition fulfilled, viz., his implicit faith in the promise and the atonement, the Holy Spirit does the work, and he is in that moment sanctified in soul, and body, and spirit. His faith then rests on the truth of God, and is not a belief that we receive that we may receive, but, as Mr. Wesley expresses it, "a divine evidence and conviction that he doeth it;" it being always understood—and this is the point to be guarded—that it is faith for a present blessing; but the blessing is conditioned on faith, and is conferred at the very instant the faith is exercised.
>
> We are not saved because we have consecrated all to God; but having made such a consecration we are to believe that it is accepted, and we are received for Christ's sake. I know not what else faith has to do. It is not enough that the gift touch the altar, it must be placed there in faith that "the altar sanctifieth the gift." Unbelief may cut off the virtue of the altar, and leave the sacrifice untouched by fire. Having placed our gift on the altar, we have the right to believe that God receives us according to his promise, without regard to our feelings. We are then receiving through that very faith we are graciously-assisted to exercise.
>
> 'But can I believe before I feel that the work is accomplished? I may be deceived in my consecration, and without the feeling that the work is done I cannot believe.'
>
> It seems to me that it would not require very much faith to believe we receive a blessing after it is received. It must be borne in mind that entire sanctification is a blessing conditioned on faith; which faith must be exercised before the blessing is received. But according to the dogma we are opposing, the blessing comes first, and the faith upon which it is conditioned afterwards.
>
> If I cannot believe for entire sanctification until the evidence of its possession is clear, I can never believe for it; for the evidence of its possession must be subsequent to its possession, unless we receive the evidence first and the blessing afterward. The scriptural order is, faith first, the blessing next, and the evidence last. But with many it is, the evidence first, the blessing next, and the faith last.
>
> This difficulty arises from confounding faith and evidence. That which assures us that the blessing is ours, is the evidence which God gives—the witness of the Spirit. And if we do not believe until this evidence is received, we shall never believe; for this evidence which we so much desire is conditioned on faith—which faith must be exercised before the blessing is received.
>
> There is nothing upon which we depend more than upon feeling. We walk by sense, not by faith. Feeling is not faith. Feeling is not salvation. Feeling is not the condition of salvation. That upon which salvation is conditioned must exist before it is received; faith being that condition, it must exist before the salvation. Feeling is the effects or fruits of salvation, and follows it as salvation follows faith; neither faith nor salvation being dependent upon feeling for their existence. If, then, neither faith nor salvation are dependent upon feeling, they may both exist without feeling. If both may exist without feeling, then the evidence of their existence may be found in something else than feeling. I say, may exist; for I cannot question but in most cases the feeling accompanies the faith, insomuch that it is somewhat difficult to separate them. Still we claim that faith may be exercised, and the blessing received, without what may be termed by many, feeling. What, then, is the ground upon which we rest our faith for the accomplishment of the work?
>
> 1. The promise of God.
>
> God has promised that on the performance of certain conditions he will receive me. I am conscious of having performed those conditions. With this consciousness I have the right to believe, then and there, that God performs his part, and the work is done.
>
> This is beautifully expressed by Charles Wesley:—
>
> "Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees,
> And looks to that alone;
> Laughs at impossibilities,
> And cries, It shall be done."
>
> 2. That God will very soon give us feeling is certain. Such a change cannot be wrought without very soon being felt through the whole soul. In fact, we should not rest until we have this emotional evidence. But let us not doubt God's word in the absence of emotion.
>
> While the absence of strong emotion is no evidence of a want of salvation, its presence is a very great assistance to faith, and very greatly aids us in our religious duties. This is a blessing we have the right to expect."

FASHION.—At the late annual meeting of the New England Moral Reform Society, when speaking of the tendency of the present fashions in the dress of women, Maj. H. C. Dane said that "Years ago, he observed in Paris that the key note of that city was fashion; that those fashions were arranged with reference to these two ends, viz., to gratify the eye, and to arouse the passions of men. The moral degradation of the city was such, so much corruption resulted from this devotion to mere fashion, that he then prophesied that that city could not long continue; it must and would ere long be destroyed by its own sin."

NEW TRACT.

Just published by the A. C. P. Society, Symbolization of the World's Eventful Crisis, by O. R. FASSETT.

An excellent tract of 16 pages, showing that we are living amid the events occurring under the opening of the "sixth seal"; that "we are witnessing them, and are far down in their history, and close upon the end of this world and the solemn judgment scenes."

Price, single, 2 cts.; postage, 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred, by mail.

NOTES ON PROPHECY.—No. 5.

ISAIAH'S PROPHECY.

The evangelical prophet saw the dawn of a bright morning beyond the dark night of death, when the death-bound saints shall feel the electrifying power of Deity, arousing them from their slumbers. "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise. AWAKE and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isa. 26: 19. Here is an affirmation that cannot be figured away to signify the release of an immaterial personality from the material casket, but refers to "dead men," the "dead body," affirming that they shall "awake," "arise," and "live," as the result of a power exercised upon them like dew upon herbage in the spring of the year, imparting new life. "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God shall wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall be take away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 25: 8.

Death will be obliterated, tears be dried, and all the earth become a realm of pleasure, forever free from sin and sorrow. "Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting and destruction within thy borders; . . . for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended. Thy people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land forever." Isa. 60: 18, 10, 21. Beyond the reign of death is an era of unparalleled bliss, and of endless duration, for all the saints; "neither can they die any more." W. S.

"THE IMAGE OF GOD."

I find this note on the Image of God in the Douay version: "This image of God in man is not in the body, but in the soul; which is a spiritual substance, endued with understanding and free-will."—Note on Gen. 2: 26. This attempt to deprive the body of the image of God, and make it apply to the soul, does not change the matter in the least, since the soul is supposed to resemble the body in form so completely that one can be mistaken for the other; for in a note on the appearance of Samuel to Saul, it is claimed "that the soul of Samuel appeared indeed; and not, as some have imagined, an evil spirit in his shape." So if the soul is a "spiritual substance, and is made of the "shape of the body," this image is made to consist in the form of spiritual substance."

The first reason assigned why man should not be killed, was the fact that man was made "in the image of God" (Gen. 9: 6); so the part that was made in the image of God could be killed, whether that part is the soul or the body. Right here the query arises, If the soul is really a personality imprisoned in the body, and would be far better off if it could get out of prison, why did God ever make it a crime to let the soul out of prison, especially in the case of good men? And still back of this, another question arises: If the soul is so much better off without a body, why did God ever encumber it with a body? Would God take so much pains to make a body for the discomfort and detriment of the soul, and then so foolishly threaten that if any man should let a soul out of its body-prison, that for this offense he should also have his soul liberated from prison? W. S.

"CREATING SOULS."

In a foot-note of a Catholic Bible, Douay version, on Gen. 2: 2, I see that the Catholics believe God is still "creating souls." They have doubtless discernment enough to discover that the immortality of the soul can not be maintained with the admission that souls are transmitted, as mortality cannot transmit immortality, nor can immortality transmit immortality without involving the ludicrous idea of male and female spirits; but at the same time, they are blind enough not to see how God is slandered by the claim that he is constantly "creating souls" for each child that is born into the world, illegitimates included, for none will claim they are without souls. Will God denounce adultery, and then make souls for the offspring of adulterers, thus sanctioning it? W. S.

PARADISE.

It may be an item of information and interest to some of the readers of the Crisis, to be informed that "paradise," instead of "garden," is used in the Douay version of Genesis. God placed man in paradise. Paradise will be restored.

The passage in Luke 23: 42-43, is thus translated: "Lord, remember me when thou shalt come into thy kingdom. And Jesus said to him, Amen, I say to thee, this day thou shalt be with me in paradise." Here the original term "amen" is transferred, a term signifying "so let it be," when used in response to a petition, as in this case; thus making the Savior sanction the request; and with a correct punctuation (which has long been disputed), would make the reply read, "Amen: I say to thee this day, thou shalt be with me in paradise." W. S.

"THAT THEY MIGHT OBTAIN A BETTER RESURRECTION."

Paul informs us that some of the ancient saints, when tortured by their enemies to induce them to renounce their allegiance to God, with the offer of the preservation of their lives in case they would recant, would not accept "deliverance" from death on these terms, "that they might obtain a better resurrection." In 2 Maccabees 7, we have the case of a mother and seven sons, who were put to death for their faith, and who refused the offer of the preservation of their lives on condition they should disobey the law of God, being sustained under their trial, not with the hope of an immediate emigration to the skies, to join the angelic throng around the throne of Deity, but with the hope of a release from death by a better resurrection—a resurrection to endless life; and one of them thus exulted with his latest breath: "The King of the world will raise us up, who die for his laws, in the resurrection of eternal life."

Another one gave this dying testimony:—"It is better being put to death by men, to look for hope from God, to be raised up again by him." The mother, to the last, stimulated her sons to refuse the offer of life, on condition of becoming untrue to God, saying to them, "He will restore to you again, in his mercy, both breath and life." Thus the offer of deliverance was spurned in view of a resurrection to endless life, if faithful to the end; a life to begin when the sleep of death shall be broken by the trump of God, which shall awake "some to life everlasting"; "neither can they die any more." God's "dead men shall live" in an immortalized and glorified state in the better resurrection. W. S.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE LATE SR. C. B. TURNER.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ:—Having just returned from a visit to Syracuse, I am now prepared to report that the money which you have so generously contributed to aid our deceased sister while she was living, and her children since her death, has been faithfully applied to the objects for which it was given—the whole amount being $305.-50. The mortgage, with nearly two years' interest due, amounting to two hundred and twenty-seven dollars and sixty-seven cents ($227.67), has been paid. The doctor's bill was finally settled for $60, and the balance, of $17.83 was applied to necessary expenses incurred in the interest of the children. The funeral expenses were paid from the proceeds of sales of household articles. The property, now consisting of house and lot, is finely located, and from its surroundings is destined to increase rapidly in value; and I believe it will be for the interest of the children to retain it, at least until the eldest shall have become of age.

The children, Charles, Franklin, and Fredley, aged seventeen, thirteen, and six years respectively, are all provided with homes. Charles and Fredley are with their uncle and aunt, Bro. and Sr. Palmer, who feel a deep interest in them; and Franklin has found a good home with Bro. Robert C. Brown, of South Butler, who is just the man to treat him kindly, and to bring him up "in the way he should go." Let us all pray that they may become the true lovers of Jesus, and grow up to be useful men in the world. The relatives of the family express their heartfelt gratitude, and desire me to thank you for the deep interest you have manifested, and the timely aid you have rendered to Sr. Turner and family, in their afflictions and need; and are assured that you will be abundantly rewarded when the Master comes.

Fraternally yours. A. H. BROWN.

☞ IT is in the power of the Church, clad in God's complete armor, baptized into gospel fulness, to chase a thousand, and put ten thousand to flight. It is in the power of God's people, having the shield of faith, filled with the Holy Spirit, to banish intemperance, Sabbath desecration, licentiousness, a corrupt press, and every wicked abomination, and send forth light and salvation to the ends of the earth. A corrupt press, the light and frothy literature, the scum of the pit, intemperance in strong drink and tobacco could not long exist, were it not upheld more or less by a sensual, wicked, man-fearing, time-serving church and ministry.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 24th, 1870, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

WINTER QUARTERS.

There are many churches which remind us of the movements of the army. It occupies the field during the summer, in conflict with the enemy; but when frosty days come on, retires into winter quarters. It comes out occasionally, and has a dress parade, but makes no more assaults upon the enemy. Its arms and all the appliances of war are kept in perfect order. It has an abundance of ammunition in store, ready at a moment's notice to engage in the conflict. Those churches which spend only a few weeks in the year in special efforts for the salvation of sinners, may be justly compared to those armies which engage for a season with the enemy, and then retire from the field.

When we see a church settling down into a cold, formal state, having long, formal prayers and exhortations, and without any special object in view, we conclude it has gone into winter quarters.

When we see a preacher exhausting his logical powers to elucidate some pet doctrine, or theory, and having no burden for the conversion of sinners, we conclude he has gone into winter quarters, and needs the burning rays of the Spirit of God to thaw him out.

When we see a church spending all its time in trying to fix up and get into gospel order, we conclude it has gone into winter quarters. The better way would be to engage with the enemy at once, if it is only a few; and if they are united, and have faith in the almighty arm of Jehovah, victory will surely crown their efforts.

When we see a church spending its time in disputing upon theological subjects, or in any way neglecting its high mission, which should be to bring men to Christ, we conclude it has gone into winter quarters.

We have of late seen several articles in the Crisis headed "Church Divisions," and also articles from Bro. Munger upon church or gospel order. We are of the opinion that the difficulty with those churches lies in the want of a fixed principle to glorify God, in special work, to fit us for the Savior's crown gems and stars in that great day of rejoicing; and our advice would be, that in all those places where these difficulties exist, let those who can work harmoniously engage in this one work of trying to pull men out of the fire, and not spend their time in trying to straighten crooked sticks; for we know that in all ages of the church there has been a class of men and women, who are in Scripture termed "busy-bodies," and such will never come into gospel order, being heady, high-minded, etc.

If the adversary can keep the church divided, he knows it will not trouble him, and he can rest at ease. But we are not surprised that these divisions exist, and the chosen people of God are wading through trials and tribulations, for these are among the "all things" that work together for their good. We hope those churches and christians who have gone into winter quarters will come and face the enemy, and not be satisfied with merely having a pleasant time, a dress parade occasionally; by which we mean, to get together and have what is generally termed a good meeting, but without any special effort for the conversion of those out of Christ; for when we consider the final issue of all the labor of the present life, that only which tells upon the future life will be of any account at the great reckoning day. D. N. SMITH.

AN ACCIDENT.

BRO. GRANT:—At the request of Bro. and Sister Durand, I write to inform you and the readers of the Crisis of the accident which has befallen them. Last Monday, as they were on their return from West Haven, where they had spent the Sabbath, their horse was frightened by the cars, near Ives' station, Hampden, Ct., about six miles from home; and in attempting to control him, the lines were broken, first one and then the other. Bro. Durand was thrown out, striking a pile of stones, badly bruising and spraining his ankle and shoulder, but breaking no bones. He is of course very lame, but not seriously injured, and will be a prisoner but a short time. The wagon, which was a covered, two-seated, Beach-top, was thrown over on the top, smashing the top completely. Sister Durand, and Howard, their youngest son, who was with them, were still among the ruins, and unable to extricate themselves. After assistance had arrived, it was found that Sr. Durand's left arm was broken between the shoulder and elbow, besides being otherwise bruised. Howard was bruised and somewhat stunned, but otherwise uninjured.

They were taken to a house near the scene of the accident, where they were well and kindly cared for, the broken bone set, and the next day they were brought home. The accident occurred so quickly, and in so bad a place, that it seems a wonder they were not all killed; but they are now doing as well as could be expected, under the circumstances, although it will be some time before Sr. Durand will be able to be out much. Thinking you, and the brethren and sisters would like to learn of the occurrence, I have written, as they were unable to do so themselves.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE IOWA CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

This conference held its fifteenth annual session at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, commencing June 28th, 1871, in connection with the Iowa Christian Mission campmeeting. Members present: P. S. W. Deyo, S. B. Ensign, Alonzo Raymond, A. A. Wilbur, A. H. Eggleston, and Ansel Durand. Visiting brethren present: R. M. Thomas, James Skillin (old Christian order), Levi Lyons, J. W. Burroughs, and Elder Henry (Disciple order). Bro. Gildersleve not being present, we elected Bro. R. W. Thomas, President pro tem; whereupon, we suspended the rules of the constitution, and proceeded to receive new members and churches. The following names were presented and received: C. C. Ramsay, E. A. Marsh, N. F. Eggleston, J. B. Talmage, M. A. Newcomb, Reuben L. Clark, A. F. Ticknor. There were three new churches presented and received: namely, Tama City, Douglass and Bear Creek, with an aggregate membership of sixty one.

The following names were elected officers for the ensuing year: Board of Directors—Job Gildersleve, President. Alonzo Raymond, Clerk. W. H. Peck, M. A. Newcomb, J. J. Towsley. Eleven churches reported with an aggregate membership of four hundred and sixty-six. All are alive, and trying to let their light shine, especially on the second coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead. Seventeen ministers reported. Eleven were present. Six by letter. Others did not report, who are known to be at work in the gospel field. All made a similar report. All felt a lack of doing as much as they might. Hoped to see the cause of God prosper. All expressed determination to try to do more the coming year.

ORDINATION.—Bro. Reuben L. Clark was set apart for the work of the ministry, by prayer and the laying on of hands, June 29th, 1871, in the following order: Prayer by C. C. Ramsay; charge by R. M. Thomas; right hand of fellowship by J. W. Burroughs. Bro. N. F. Eggleston was set apart for the work of the ministry, by prayer and the laying on of hands, July 2nd, 1871, in the following order: Prayer by J. W. Burroughs, charge by C. C. Ramsay, right hand of fellowship by Alonzo Raymond.

On motion it was unanimously voted that we cordially accept the invitation of the Iowa Christian Mission Campmeeting Association to hold our next annual meeting in connection with their next annual meeting. See report of campmeeting. Voted, That this conference express their sincere gratitude and thanks to the Campmeeting Association and people, for their kindness and liberality.

The report of the meeting will be found in the report of the Secretary of Campmeeting Association. However, I will say I think it was the best meeting we ever had on the old camp-ground. Bless the Lord. There was much consecration to God. Many denominations were represented. The truth was spoken in the Spirit of Christ. All were willing to bear and forbear to the glory of God. Peace reigned in all our borders. I can better express my thoughts in the words of Bro. R. M. Thomas. He said: "I have attended conferences for over forty years, and I never saw before such unity of action." Not a negative vote was cast in all our deliberations. May the Lord help us to get better and better, and if Jesus should not come, and the Lord should spare our lives, let us try to have a better meeting next year.

ALONZO RAYMOND, Clerk.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. Munger.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to make a few suggestions concerning the order of our coming campmeeting, which will be likely to have a good effect. Have old-fashioned tunes, such as we have in our note books, instead of sheet music, at the stand. More public meetings at the stand, between preaching, and fewer singing circles will appear, which generally lower the standard of vital godliness, and make up a sickly kind of worldly worship, calling in all that can sing, thus neutralising in part the object and spirit and design of the meeting, which is to impress sinners. This would do away in a great measure with this peddling of sheet music at our meetings, which I am opposed to, as are also many others. We have the best selection of music in our book there is in the nation. Let us use it. Why cannot some good singers look up some appropriate tunes for campmeeting, and come back on to the old ground of campmeetings in other respects as well as in this?

One of the ceremonies has been omitted of late which was a great blessing to saints and sinners; i. e., having a parting circle formed around the camp Sabbath, at 5 P. M., and shaking hands with the preachers, and receiving a word of comfort or encouragement. This may prove a great blessing to many, as formerly. We must guard against floating off with the spirit of the age. The Methodists admit the power at their campmeetings is gone by, having conformed to the spirit of the world and turned their meeting into a religious picnic. We as a people can reform in this respect, and do more good.

From Bro. Seth Goodhue.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—While I have been thinking of the past, present, and future, I thought how important it is that we are just right in the sight of God; that our bodies are pure, so that we truly can be fit temples for the Holy Spirit to dwell in. I think if we really have the Spirit of Christ in us, we should be led into all truth that God wants us to know or understand. Instead of writing or talking to satisfy a carnal or selfish mind, would it not be better to be moved by, or possess the mind of Christ, and then we shall not try to twist the Bible to suit our particular notions, but let it be just as it is. Supposing I should write or talk, and be destitute of God's Spirit, I think I had better hold my peace; for in order to feed the church, and to rightly divide the word of truth, we must have a spiritual mind.

Dear brethren and sisters, it does seem to me that, in order to be saved, we must (according to the word) be filled with the Spirit of Christ, and then we shall not advance so many erroneous ideas, which are calculated to draw so many from the true path of life, who believe just what the minister says, and do not search the word as for hidden treasures, with a heart burning with love to God, claiming the promise of the Bible which says, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God." Although we may be illiterate and unlearned, if we have the witness within our hearts that we are saved from sin now, we know that light will illuminate our pathway, even unto the end of the journey. I do thank God with all my heart for the light that has shone on the pathway of his people, and that will shine even unto the perfect day. I do hope, dear brethren and sisters, that in future we shall see to it that we are guided by the Spirit, and kept by the mighty power of God, that we may be all ready to enter the kingdom, which will in a short time be given to all of God's faithful ones.

Wilmot, N. H.

From Sr. E. E. Alexander.

BRO. GRANT:—There has been such a work going on in Philadelphia for the last few weeks, under the labors of Elder J. G. Hook, that I think an account of it well worth a place in your paper. On Sunday afternoon, July 16th, he preached to a large congregation in the open air, corner of Broad and Master streets, and never perhaps was a more attentive audience. Although the heat was very oppressive, they remained until the meeting was over, and quite a number gave in their names for baptism. A pleasing feature of the occasion was the mingling together of all denominations, who expressed a great desire to hear Elder Hook again. I think an account of this, and also of the progress of the little church which assembles in Bethany mission, Brandywine street, below 16th, will greatly encourage God's people.

On the evening of last Sunday, a very impressive service took place. First, there was a reception of several new members by the right hand of fellowship, and afterwards a faithful servant of God was ordained to the to the gospel ministry. The blessed feast of the Lord's Supper was then partaken of by those who loved Jesus, of all names, which was a very solemn time. There are many tokens of God's favor and love in this little vineyard, which we feel is his own planting. It seems but the droppings before a great shower. God is indeed doing a glorious work in our midst, under the instrumentality of Bro. Hook. Though many have been the trials and difficulties, through which we have been called to pass, yet we are permitted to see some fruits of the faithful labors of this servant, in the ingathering of precious souls to the church of Christ.

Philadelphia, July 18th, 1871.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. D. E. ADAMS writes from Barnard, Vt., July 17th, 1871:—"Last May, Bro. Z. Wood was induced to come this way to impart food to the few hungry souls in this place. While enjoying the fruits of that little season, he came to the conclusion to leave the appointment for a grove meeting, commencing July 2nd, and holding over the 4th, when we had a refreshing time. Elders Z. T. Wood, Geo. A. Co'e, T. M. Drake, and S. Sampson, were here to preach the word. Some four or five hundred were present the second and Fourth. All seemed willing to hear, and peace reigned triumphant. On the Fourth, the Methodist clergyman, Elder Barton, assisted in the exercises, and with a part of his congregation joined us at the communion table. The unity of the Spirit and the bond of peace prevailed; prejudices were removed, and a good impression was left on the minds of the congregation generally. It was a season long to be remembered; and as we came near the close, we could but wish it might last till Jesus shall come. Here we meet for a little season, only to be separated; but while our hearts are made sad by parting scenes, we have the blest assurance that if faithful a little while longer, we shall reunite in one grand company, where parting scenes will never come."

BRO. C. GOUD writes:—"By request of the Bro. in Portland, I was present at the meeting on the 17th inst., called in pursuance of the report of the council, chosen by the Maine conference to hear and settle the difficulty between the brethren worshiping at Union and Advent Halls respectively, by whose decision both churches had pledged themselves to abide. This meeting was called to order by Bro. [illegible] R. York. Prayer being offered, the brethren proceeded to vote for officers, the brethren from Advent Hall refusing to participate, saying they did not believe in voting. The meeting being organized, the brethren at Union Hall voted unanimously to adhere to their pledge to abide the decision of the council; while those from Advent Hall refused to do so, eighteen to one. The Union brethren then proceeded to carry out the decision of the council to the letter."

SR. C. E. TUTTLE, Dexter, Me., writes:—"I wish to say to those who have sent me help, I feel very thankful for your kindness, and hope the Lord will reward you all. I wish it was my privilege to meet with you in a prayer-meeting. How cheering it would be; but, alas, I can not. I will try and not murmur. I feel grateful for all that is done for me. I am very helpless. I have been sick for several years. I am not able to sit up much of the time. My lungs trouble me a great deal. Pray for me, dear, beloved friends, that my faith fail not; and if we never meet on the shores of time, I hope to be numbered with you in the kingdom."

BRO. B. PERHAM writes from Vernon, Vt., July 24th, 1871:—"The leaven of truth is working at North Hinsdale. A Baptist minister has lately come out and embraced the truth, and has been to Vernon and preached to the Advent church. Some of his Baptist brethren threaten him with expulsion. This he is willing to bear for Jesus' sake. How much good the tracts are doing. God blesses every effort."

Obituaries.

BYAM. Bro. B. Keeler Byam, of Rochester, N. Y., was drowned in Irondaquoit bay, July 3d, 1871, aged twenty-three years and three months.

No eye that ever rested on our dear Bro. Byam, to know him, can trace these lines undimmed with tears. Amiable in disposition, brilliant in intellect, cultivated in literary attainments, refined and beautified with marked christian graces, he was one of the most winning and lovely young men in the city of Rochester.

The accident which occasioned his sudden departure from this life was under the following circumstances: Being a member of the Social Literary Society of the city of Rochester, he accompanied that society to Irondaquoit bay, to spend a few hours in recreation and social intercourse; and while in the middle of the bay, where the water was fifty feet deep, in a small boat, with a young lady of very rare christian graces (a very fit associate for one of his habits), accompanied also with a younger girl of fourteen years, one of the ladies in changing position fell into the water; and, as near as could be discovered by witnesses on the shore, in the effort to rescue the one in peril, the boat was capsized, and all went down to a watery grave together, from whence the last body was rescued at eleven o'clock in the evening.

The sad news soon reached the city (a distance of six miles), when many hearts were rent with grief. The parents of our dear brother were saved from utter despair only by the "blessed hope" they with their dear son cherished and prized so highly.

Bro. Byam was brought into the "blessed hope" during the tent-meetings held here by Bro. Pratt and Grant in 1867. He went south soon after, and labored with Bro. Leslie till compelled to leave that field on account of poor health. His faithfulness in rendering material aid to the cause is commendable. Self-sacrifing in spirit, he gave a full tenth of all he received to the Lord.

The Corn Hill M. E. church was freely granted for the funeral services, and filled with solemn and deeply sympathising friends. The services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. J. H. Whitmore.

Caverly. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Melvin Village, N. H., June 20th, 1871, Bro. George W. Caverly, aged thirty-seven years.

The enemy death has cut down our Bro. in Christ after a few months' sickness, but he was found prepared. The afflicted ones feel that it was as the death of the righteous. They are comforted with the assurance that he will live again in the resurrection, at the last day, which was his hope.

Felch. Fell asleep in Seabrook, N. H., July 15th, 1871, E. Felch, aged forty-three years.

The subject of this notice was a kind and affectionate son, a loving brother, and a good citizen. His loss will be mourned by a large circle of friends. A large assembly of weeping friends gathered on the funeral occasion at the Advent chapel, to which the writer preached from 1 Peter 1. 3.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

New York, July 19. His Holiness the Pope recently declared to the college of cardinals in a Latin allocution that "all is lost, and only a miracle can save us." He sees no possible help from man, and recommends his hearers to seek interposition from the Almighty.

According to a London correspondent, Napoleon visits the town every day, generally following along the sunny side of Bond street, or haunts the bow windows of a club house. He is very popular with the working classes, who cheer him, and he is getting very fat.

The extraordinary phenomena produced by Home the American medium in London, are being made the subject of careful examination by Professor Crookes, the eminent chemist, Dr. Huggins, the equally eminent astronomer, and Sergeant Cox of the English bar. The results of their yet incomplete examination are recorded in a London scientific journal. The investigators are satisfied of the immense scientific importance of the subject. Professor Crookes and Sergeant Cox both seem to be convinced of a "nerve atmosphere of various intensity enveloping the human structure." Dr. Huggins has not yet been able to satisfy his mind, and wants to make further experiments.

The London Spectator laments over the decadence of the monarchical system in Great Britain. It says: there is in this country but one great political institution left alive, and that is apparently endeavoring to commit suicide by asphyxia. The throne as a political power is dead. The Lords are dying, and if the House of Commons loses the respect of the people there will be nothing left.

London, July 24. The Pope may leave Rome at any day. Preparation is making for his reception at the chateau at Corte Corsica. Valery, the owner of the chateau, has had an understanding with Antonelli, and is to place it at the disposal of the Pope.

There is a movement going on in France to guaranty to the Pope temporal sovereignty over Corsica. The Pope wishes to publish a syllabus in regard to the occupation of Rome by the Italian Government, and declaring that measures withholding from him all temporal power are void.

Measures have been taken already in Rome to prepare for the choice of the next Pope. It is proposed to choose one who may be moderate in his views and not unfriendly to Italy, and by this means effect a compromise with the Italian Government. Cardinal Camille de Pietro is mentioned. The deputation by the French Chamber of Petitions in regard to temporal power of the Pope is equivalent to laying them on the table.

London, July 25. A series of terrible earthquake shocks recently occurred in one of the Philippine Islands. More than two hundred persons were swallowed up, and every one of them was almost instantly killed. Sixty dead bodies have been recovered. The rest of the inhabitants have fled from the island.

London, July 27. An important speech was made by the Pope recently in the Academy to a deputation bearing Peter's Pence. He said that the church invited her children to defend her against ignorance and malice.

Infallibility, if sufficiently understood, does not confer power to depose sovereigns. Popes in former times deposed and dispossessed sovereigns, not because of the infallibility of the Popes, which only touches matters of doctrine, but because by the authority then recognized in Popes. Deposition or dispossession was accepted as a public law. Christian nations also accepted the Pope in those days as a Supreme Judge. Confounding the present with the past, in this regard, is done with a bad faith or with a desire to influence the State against the Church. The comments on the decisions of the Council be regarded as superfluous, the text of those decisions being sufficiently clear.

The Italian Government has requested Von Beust of Austria to act as intermediary to propose conciliation to the Vatican.

Paris, July 28. The rumor that Bismarck consented to the evacuation of the environs of Paris on or before the first of August is pronounced without foundation. The German troops will not be withdrawn from their present positions in the vicinity of Paris until 1,500,000,000 francs of the indemnity have been paid, and it will be impossible for the French Government to pay that so early as the 31st proximo.

The Avenir says that the Empress of the French has written a letter to the Czar, urging him to continue to maintain friendly relations with France.

Rome, July 27. Syro Maronite and Greco Melchite, patriarchs; Greco Melchite, Archbishop of Aleppo, and thirteen Hungarian Archbishops have forwarded to Rome their submission to the dogma of infallibility.

London, July 28. The earthquake in the Philippine Islands, May 1st, affected in a terrible manner the small island of Camaquin, five miles from Misamis. For some months previously, especially in March, there was a succession of violent shocks, which opened extensive crevices in the earth.

A VILLAGE SWALLOWED UP.

Finally on May 1st the level plain near the village of Catarmin began gradually to subside until the tops of the houses became level with the surface of the earth. This remarkable phenomenon attracted a large number of people, when suddenly some terrific shocks were felt, and before the thundering reverberations had died away the whole level plain fell in, engulfing one hundred and fifty persons.

A VOLCANO TAKES ITS PLACE.

The plain became the crater of a volcano, 1500 feet wide, and from its smoke, ashes and stones were thrown into the air. A pause until dark succeeded, when there was another explosion, and followed. The woods became ignited, and men and cattle went flying before the flames. The spectacle was frightful in the extreme. The volcano continues to eject stones and earth. The inhabitants have left the island, which formerly contained a population of 26,000. Camaquin produced of Manilla hemp one-tenth of the whole quantity grown.

A RAIN OF FIRE.

THE DROUGHT

last year in the central and southern provinces and the consequent partial failure of the crops caused great destitution and misery all winter. At the same time

THE TAXES WERE INCREASED

on the people of Laristan, which brought on a famine, and numbers of the people left their homes and the Government lost its usual taxes. A new Governor promised to raise not only the usual sum but more.

EFFECTS OF THE OPPRESSION.

This apprehension drove all the country people from their homes to the cities, which pay no taxes. The failure of the crops in Pharistan was rendered more disastrous, because the other provinces, which mostly raised opium, cotton and silk, depended on it for grain. The results in Ispahan, Yezd, Kerman and Chiras were terrible by the end of winter. Before the new crop the cities were crowded. Wheat at Kerman rose nine times its usual price, and starvation began.

The people could get no grain and they ate grass and roots. In Khorassan the people sold their children to the Turcomans to save their lives, and in other provinces the people ate their children, after having eaten all the domestic animals and vermin. In Ispahan men were caught digging up corpses to feed their starving families, and the pestilence in consequence committed fearful ravages. One half of Persia is depopulated.

In Brief.

—— A correspondent [at Wolfboro', N. H., writes that about eleven o'clock on the night of the 24th inst., a shock of earthquake was felt in that town. It shook buildings and kitchen utensils. The next morning a "sun dog" was seen, equaling in brightness the sun itself. The sky and the atmosphere have an autumnal appearance. The clouds for some days have presented an unusual aspect.——The French government has opened negotiations with dealers in Vienna for the purchase of 40,000 cavalry and artillery horses. It is believed that the government will interfere, though there is no law to forbid the exportation of horses, as it would materially weaken its own resources.——Leprosy is spreading in Honolulu with the rapidity of an epidemic, and the local papers say that unless the law for the isolation of lepers is vigorously executed, the Hawaiians are doomed to become a nation of lepers in a very short time. ——Thirty-nine thousand people die annually from consumption in England.——Great Britain consumed 42,000,000 pounds of tobacco last year, or about a pound and a half to each inhabitant.—— Nearly a quarter of a million of people visited Central Park, in New York, on Sunday.——Upwards of three thousand persons exist—they can hardly be said to live—in a single block of tenement houses near the Five Points in New York. ——The roughs of Newark, N. J., disappointed at not being enabled to indulge in their rioting proclivities on the 12th, find a vent for their feelings by breaking up Sabbath evening religious meetings.——The officers of the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals have been made deputy sheriffs, and authorized to arrest offenders without the aid of the police.—— The amount of rain that fell in this city on the afternoon and night of Saturday up to an early hour of Sunday was an inch and one tenth, one inch of which it is believed fell in the half hour before one o'clock in the afternoon.——The telegraph announces the death of John Slidell, exrebel Commissioner to France.——About 500 persons became insane in Paris during the reign of the Communists.——The followers of Dr. Dollinger, in Bavaria, call themselves "Old Catholics," meaning thereby that they hold fast by all the doctrines and ecclesiastical usages which are sanctioned by the Scriptures and Catholic tradition, and reject all doctrines and usages of recent invention.

On the roads operated by the

comprising Vermont Central, Vermont and Canada, Stanstead, Shefford and Chambly, Montreal and Vermont Junction, Sullivan, Og. and Lake Champlain, Missisquoi, Rutland, Vt. Valley, Montreal and Plattsburgh, Whitehall and Plattsburgh Railroads, the friends will purchase regular tickets at the several stations, for the nearest point on the Conn. River Road to South Vernon or Greenfield, at which place they will be sure to go to the ticket office and get a Campmeeting ticket for Springfield, which they will present to the Secretary on the camp-ground to be countersigned; and they will then be furnished with a free return pass—good from South Vernon to the places they came from on any of the roads run by the Vermont Central Railroad.

On the Vt. and Mass. R. Road, Troy and Greenfield R. Road from Hoosac Tunnel, persons will purchase regular tickets at the offices for Greenfield. At Greenfield they will go into the ticket office and call for Campmeeting Tickets for Springfield. All such when they go to the Secretary on the camp-ground to have their tickets countersigned, will be furnished with a free return pass from Greenfield to Athol, Fitchburg, or any place on the Vermont and Mass. R. R., or Troy and Greenfield R. R., that they may come from—provided twenty-five passengers shall have come over the Vt. and Mass. Rail Road to the meeting.

Passengers coming from North of South Vernon, unless provided with return tickets, should purchase only to South Vernon, and then purchase to Springfield and return. The same rule will apply also to passengers coming from East of, or in the vicinity of Greenfield.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R., campmeeting tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the depot in Providence, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R. Road, friends from Nashua, N. H., Groton Junction, and Clinton, will purchase regular tickets at the stations for Worcester, at which place they will purchase tickets for Springfield; and free return passes from Worcester will be furnished them by the Secretary on the ground.

Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.70 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 P. M., connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. Passengers by this boat arrive in Springfield at 10.51 P. M. and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary of the camp-ground. The other boat, which leaves New York at 11 P. M., reaches New Haven in time for the accommodation, which leaves New Haven at 8 A. M.; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the Hartford and New Haven R. R. Tickets for the R. R. to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket, which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the camp-ground.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have free return passes by application to the Secretary, on the camp-ground.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 6, 7, 8½ and 9 A. M.; and at 3, 4½, and 9 P. M.

Arrangements with any other roads that may be made, will be noticed hereafter.

Committee of Arrangements.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

Notice.

I wish to ask such as are not coming with their tents this year, to notify me of the fact, and where their tent was from, and on what part of the ground it stood. All the tent spots will stand for them until Wednesday morning, unless you notify us you are not coming.

H. Munger.

Tent Meeting.

Eld. Wm. Sheldon will hold a series of meetings in the large tent at Arena, Iowa Co., Wis., commencing Sept. 9th, 1871. We shall expect a large gathering. Let all who can attend. All who come will be provided for. Come in the spirit of the dear Master, to labor for the good of our fellow men. The night cometh, and the morning will soon dawn. Arena is on the Milwaukee and Prairie du Chien R. R., about thirty miles west of Madison.

Geo. Thomson, For the church.

Notice.

Elder E. McCulloch, of Nevada, Ohio, purposes to attend the National Campmeeting at Springfield, Mass., and remain east for a few weeks. Churches desiring his labors, will address him at Nevada until August 10th; after that at Savoy, Mass.

The Advent Christian Association.

This Society will hold its annual meeting at the Springfield camp-ground, commencing on Monday, Aug. 21st, at 4 o'clock P. M. Let every church send a delegate. None should forget the importance of the business to be done at these annual meetings. Every church is entitled to one delegate and one additional delegate for every twenty-five members above the number of fifty members. An assembly of worshipers, though few in numbers, constitutes a church.

H. F. Carpenter, Secretary.

Meeting of the Board.

The Board of the A. C. A. will meet at the Springfield camp-ground on Monday, August 21st, at two o'clock P. M.

H. F. Carpenter, Sec.

Notice about Tents.

For the benefit of those who have no tents, I would say there are ten or fifteen good new tents, twelve and fifteen feet when pitched, sufficient to accommodate ten or twelve persons, that can be hired through our meeting for $5 each, brought on to the ground Monday, Aug. 21st, and taken on the ground the following Monday by the owner. This will save the trouble of taking down and transporting away. The tents are made of the best thick drilling. Address me soon at Chicopee Falls, Mass., so that I may secure them, or a part of them. Those writing me on campmeeting matters, who expect answers, please send a stamp.

Hiram Munger.

Vermont Campmeeting.

After examining various localities, the committee have decided to locate our annual campmeeting once more upon the old ground of last year. We can find no other so beautiful and commodious as this, with such improvements as we can make. Good water can be supplied freely upon the ground, and board at 85 cts per day, at boarding tent. Those coming to this meeting can come over any R. R. controlled by the Vt. Central R. R. for fare one way. You will buy a regular ticket, and pay full fare to Bethel, and receive a free return pass from the camp committee. All trains will stop at Bethel, Vt., from which place teams are engaged to carry all passengers, with all their baggage of every description, to the ground, at 25 cts each; children under twelve, half price. Inquire for Wilson's teams, and go with no other. Bro. Wilson keeps the depot house at Bethel, and will entertain all who wish at low rates. Lodgings can be had in private houses on reasonable terms; but let all bring bedding, as these places may be full before you come. To enjoy the meeting most richly, every family should have a family tent. We want a Graham boarding tent upon the ground for ministers, invalids, and those who do not wish to become invalids. Who will volunteer to take charge of such an one? Write me at once.

Now, ye lovers of Jesus, and all others, come, from York State, New Hampshire, and from all parts of Vermont, and from far and near, to our annual feast at Bethel, Vt., to commence Sept. 2nd, and to continue till Sept. 11th. We are hoping that Bro. Couch, and others from abroad, will be present to help us.

H. F. Carpenter, for the Committee.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

All persons wishing to get tents built at Alton Bay, are recommended to apply to J. L. Ricker, who will furnish building material, and build according to order, for a reasonable compensation. He will build between the first of August and the close of the third week. Persons wishing him to build, had better send their orders soon. Direct to J. L. Ricker, Alton Bay, N. H. Believing it would be against the interest of the meeting to paint, blind, or otherwise ornament the tents, the committee voted to request the brethren to desist from doing so.

The campmeeting will commence Saturday, Sept. 9th, and hold over the Sabbath, the 17th.

For the Committe, J. Couch.

Board Tent.

For sale, at Alton Bay, one half of a double tenement house, next south of Strafford tent, containing two rooms, sleeping apartment up stairs large enough for two beds, with piazza and balcony. For particulars inquire of J. G. Burnham, No. 37 Friend street, Lynn, Mass.

Grove Meeting.

A meeting will be held in Mr. C. Moulton's grove, in Buxton Centre, Me., Sunday, Aug. 13th. The grove is only a few rods from the depot of the P. and R. railroad, and easy of access to all. A cordial invitation is extended to all God's saints in these regions to meet with us, and assist in the work of the Master. Come and help us.

E. S. Moulton.

Annual Meeting.

The Women's Christian Association will hold its annual meeting at Springfield, Mass., August 23d, 1871. It is desirable that all members of the Association should be present.

E. S. Jennings, President.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a grove meeting at East Lebanon, Me. (Little River Falls), Sundays, Aug. 6th and 13th. Geo. W. Brown, of South Elliott, and others, are expected to preach the word.

J. Bickford.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a two days' meeting at the Card school-house, on Troops' Creek, Steuben Co., N. Y., six miles above Knoxville, commencing Friday evening, August 11th, to continue over the Sabbath following. Preaching brethren and all others are cordially invited to come and help us. For the Brn.,

E. H. Eggleston.

Quarterly Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting for the northern district of the Advent Christian Conference of Indiana, will meet at four o'clock P. M., on Thursday, before the first Sunday in Aug., 1871, with the church of God at Sand-hill, four miles north of Rochester, on the Michigan road, in Fulton Co. A general invitation is given: and we say come one, come all; come on the first day, and stay till the last. Provision will be made for all who may come. Persons coming on the Michigan road will inquire for Brn. N. Doolittle, or S. S. Cole. Persons coming by R. R. will stop off at Sturgeon, and inquire for Brn. E. Partridge, or I. E. Andrus. By order of conf.,

D. Nave,
I. E. Andrus, Committee.

Notice.

Any who may wish to aid me in canceling my indebtedness for publishing "Who are Sadducees?" either by purchasing the book, or otherwise, may address me at Arena, Iowa Co., Wis., or Bro. Adams, Agent, Crisis office.

Geo. Thomson.

Southern Tract Fund.

At our recent Wisconsin campmeeting, a collection was taken to aid me in scattering gratuitously my forthcoming book (entitled "The Life beyond Death in the Home of the Holy") in the southern field, it having been prepared with reference to missionary or pioneering work. I desire to send at least one thousand copies of this work, with a quantity of my four tracts, into the southern field this coming fall and winter. It will be a pleasure for some to help me raise one hundred dollars for this purpose. Let such direct to Wm. Sheldon, Brodhead, Green Co., Wis.; or, if more convenient, to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

W. S.

Notice.

Meetings at our houses in South Boston are postponed till further notice.

C. W. Huntress, 2 Lowland Street.
J. N. Berry, 227 E. Street.

On Sundays, and Wednesday and Friday evenings, meetings for the present at 3882 Broadway, (under Wait's Hall.)

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Eastern District of Wisconsin will be held at Merrimack, Sauk Co., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 22nd, 1871, and hold over the following Lord's day. Let there be a general rally of ministers and members, not only to enjoy the feast, but to labor for the perishing. Friends from the adjoining districts are also cordially invited to meet with us.

Geo. Thomson.

Acknowledgment.—The church of Christ in Biddeford, having failed to sustain the charge of false statements preferred against T. P. S. Hampson, before the committee acting for the Maine Second Advent Conference, do vote to make the following acknowledgement: That the church did wrong in the act of excluding said Hampson from the church without more sufficient evidence to sustain such a charge; and do also rescind a vote taken (Jan. 19th, 1871) to that effect.

For the church, Geo. Leach, Sec.

Request.—Will A. M. Tripp come to the Belfast campmeeting? Please answer through the Crisis, as I do not know where to write.

Benj. Tripp.

Campmeeting at Belfast, Me.

The campmeeting proposed to be at Pittsfield, or Belfast, is appointed to be held one mile and a half north of Belfast, on the Swanville road, near the paper mill, commencing Aug. 28th. It is motioned and seconded, that we have an old-fashioned meeting, such as Bro. Grant says we used to enjoy twenty-eight years ago, when we knew no sect nor party, but were one in Christ, and had not left our first love. If this be the mind of all concerned and interested, far and near, to enjoy such a meeting, let them signify it by coming in the name of the Lord, committing all strife and contention to the fate of the chaff of the summer's threshing-floor, and bring an offering that shall be acceptable unto God, even the sacrifice of a broken and contrite spirit. Provision will be made as far as practicable to make the season one of gospel labor, rather than a place of merchandise. We expect a big tent for the accommodation of the meeting. All who possibly can will bring family tents, with bedding and provisions, as there will be no boarding tent on the ground. Arrangements are being made for the reduction of fare on the boats and cars from the different points of compass. Those coming on the Maine Central, from either point, will stop at Burnham, and take cars for Belfast. Come all as one, who love our Lord and his appearing.

W. Couains.
I. Damman.
A. W. Walker.

Grove Meeting.

The annual meeting of the church of God (called Adventists) will commence, the Lord willing, Thursday, August 31st, on the old ground, two miles and a half west of Lincolnville, Crawford Co., Pa., and continue over two Sundays. Friends from the east and west will leave the Atlantic and G. W. R. R., or Erie Railway, and Philadelphia and Erie R. R. at Union, Pa., and take the Union and Titusville R. R. to Lincolnville. Three trains leave Union and Titusville each way daily. Teams will be at Lincolnville on Saturdays to take friends to the ground; also at other times, by writing in time to the subscriber. Come, brethren and sisters, to the meeting, filled with the Spirit of God, and much prayer that the blessing of God may attend the meeting. Hearts, houses and barns open and free. For the Committee,

John T. Ongley.

Notice.

By request of the friends in this section of the country, Bro. C. F. Sweet will commence a series of meetings in Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Thursday evening, Aug. 10th, and hold over the following Sunday. Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings following, at Hickory Corners. Thursday evening, Aug. 17th, at Sutton's Corners, about six miles southwest of Meadville, on the Great Western R. R. As Bro. Sweet has given me liberty to use another week of his time in this section, if there are any who desire his labors, they will please correspond with me at Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

Wm. M. Darrow.

The R. I. and E. Ct. Campmeeting.

Brethren, our campmeeting this year will (D. V.) be held at Green Station, on the Hartford, Providence, and Fishkill R. R. It will commence on September 2nd, 1871, and hold till the 9th inst. We shall be happy to meet the brethren from "all the neighborhood round about." Those who have tents, or can procure them, are requested to bring By arrangements made with the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill R. Company, "five persons at any station on their lines can buy a ten-passage ticket (i. e. a return ticket each) on which they might together go and return at 20 per cent less than regular rates."

For the camp committee, W. Kellaway.

North Dana, Mass.

There will be a grove meeting in North Dana, Mass., commencing on Thursday, August 3d, and hold over Sunday the 6th. Bro. J. Hemenway and others are expected to help preach the word. All preaching brethren and sisters, come and help us, and all others come. Provide for yourselves as far as convenient. Provision for man and beast can be obtained near by. We wish to make one more effort for Christ and his cause in No. Dana. Pray for the meeting.

Geo. A. Streeter.

Connecticut Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting in the beautiful grove occupied for that purpose last year, near Plainville, Ct., commencing Sept. 2nd, 1871, and holding till the 11th inst.

The fare is reduced one half on the N. H. and N. R. R., same as last year. Regular tickets must be bought to Plainville, and free return passes will be furnished on the camp-ground. The committee have been unable to effect a reduction of fare on the H. P. and F. R. R. Mr. T. F. Clark will convey passengers from Plainville to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. Provision will be made for those coming with horses. It is desirable that all who can, bring tents and bedding, especially the latter.

We shall endeavor to provide wholesome food for all who may wish, at reasonable rates, and trust that, together with our brethren and sisters, we may exercise sufficient faith in God, coupled with good works, to dispel the fear of financial embarrassment, which so cripples the religious enterprises of the day, that their votaries are withering from spiritual drouth, the result of too much anxiety for money, and too little knowledge of faith in God. The Lord is soon coming, and we feel the need of a higher standard of holiness, and the deep inwrought work of the Holy Spirit. Let us walk humbly before the Lord, making this meeting the subject of prayer, beseeching our heavenly Father to breathe the Holy Spirit upon the entire encampment, that wanderers may be reclaimed, and sinners converted.

B. Hitchcock,
Geo. L. White,
Wm. J. Ripley,
O. D. Woodruff, Committee.

The American Life and Advent Union Campmeeting.

This association of Advent believers will hold their annual campmeeting upon their new and beautiful ground in "Carew's Grove," at Springfield, Mass. (distant about one and one-fourth miles from the railway station), commencing Sunday, Aug. 13th, and continuing over Sunday, Aug. 20th. The campmeeting committee desire to say to the friends that nature has done much for our camping place. We have an area of six acres of fine, level, dry tenting-ground, dotted over with grand old trees, bestowing grateful shade. To these natural advantages, through the liberality of kind brethren, have been added all the accessories which thought could suggest as necessary to the comfort and convenience of all. Let all, then, far and near, from north and south, from east and west, turn aside from the dusty, weary way, and come in to this consecrated spot to rest and refresh awhile.

Dedication. The public services of the meeting will commence Sunday, Aug. 13th, at 1.30 P. M., at which time a dedicatory sermon will be preached by Geo. Storrs, of New York.

Fares. Fare on the Boston and Albany R. R. is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices between Boston and Worcester at Grantville, Holliston, Natic, Westboro, Milford, and Southville; beyond Worcester at the usual stations. On the Hartford and N. H. R. R. fare is reduced one third. Tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Middletown, Berlin, and New Britain, Hartford, Thompsonville, and Windsor Locks. On the Conn. River R. R. fare is reduced one third from South Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 10th to Aug. 30th, must be called for at the ticket offices, and they must also be signed by the Secretary of the campmeeting. Remember this. Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.70 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 P. M. connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. Passengers by this boat arrive in Springfield at 10.51 P. M. The other boat which leaves New York at 11 P. M., reaches New Haven in time for the accommodation, which leaves New Haven at 8 A. M.; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the H. and N. H. R. R. Tickets for the R. R. to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket,* which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the campground. Omnibuses will be found in readiness at the Springfield depot to convey all to the ground. Fare 15 cents.

Board. Good board will be furnished at 80 cents per day. Those intending to board themselves will find a choice and constant supply of groceries, provisions and fruits for sale upon the ground at regular market rates.

T. R. Weaver, Sec. of the Campmeeting Com.

* The confusion experienced in regard to return tickets by the boats, will not occur again.

Notice.

A grove and basket meeting will be held in Boscawen, N. H., where we had the fourth of July meeting, commencing Saturday, Aug. 12th, and holding over the Sabbath. Bro. C. W. Sargent, and others, will be with us to help preach the word. Come, brethren, and labor for sinners.

Simeon Hoyt.

SHELDON'S FOUR NEW TRACTS.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

1. Life and Death Theology: or, The Scriptural Doctrine of Eternal Damnation and Everlasting Punishment. Price 8 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 75 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $5.00 per hundred by express.

This work of forty-eight pages is the clearest and strongest document yet produced by Bro. Sheldon on this topic. It is just the thing to scatter among all classes.

2. Immaterialism: or, The Doctrine of Soul-Immortality Refuted. Price 5 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 40 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $3.00 per hundred by express.

A tract of thirty-two pages, showing that fifteen cardinal errors spring out of the doctrine of the soul's immortality, and that those errors could not exist independent of that doctrine, thus showing it to be the main root of error. Let it be scattered widely.

3. Death and the Dead, 16 pages. Price 3 cts. single, postage 2 cts.; 20 cts. per dozen, postpaid; $1.50 per hundred by express.

Just the thing to scatter everywhere.

4. The Coming Judgment: Its Necessity and Result. Eight pages. 10 cts. per dozen, postpaid, or 75 cts. per hundred by express.

It will do much good

"THIEF ON THE CROSS."

THE FOOLISH VIRGINS.

MARTHA J. BRIGGS.

"Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out."—Matt. 25: 8.

"Give us of your oil," the five virgins exclaim,
So careless and wicked, they've none of their own;
Though there was enough at the place whence we came,
We made light of the fountain, and empty have grown.
If we had been wise, we'd have filled our lamps too,
But they have gone out now, O what shall we do?

We will go to the sellers this moment and buy,
We do not believe that our day is quite past;
And when we've obtained a sufficient supply,
Perhaps we'll attend the King's wedding at last.
If we had been wise, we'd have filled our lamps too,
But they have gone out now, O what shall we do?

We are groping in darkness, we know not the way;
The Bridegroom has come, but we see not his face;
The door's shut against us this terrible day,
What agony, shame, and unending disgrace.
If we had been wise, we'd have filled our lamps too,
But they have gone out now, O what shall we do?

We had plenty of time, but we all fell asleep,
With no oil in our vessels, and none in our lamps;
The sin of neglecting our watchword to keep,
Upon us its image indelibly stamps.
If we had been wise, we'd have filled our lamps too,
But they have gone out now, O what shall we do?

We will knock yet once more, and we'll beg for admission,
Our feet are so weary, our hearts are so faint;
But justice, unmoved in its changeless decision,
Regards not, nay, heeds not our bitter complaint.
If we had been wise, we'd have filled our lamps too,
But they have gone out now, O what shall we do?

Too late for a seat at the great marriage feast,
With the Bridegroom's companions by multiplied twelves;
Our sorrow and grief will be tenfold increased,
While we know we have foolishly banished ourselves.
If we had been wise, we'd have filled our lamps too,
But they have gone out now, O what shall we do?

AMERICAN COMMUNISM.

A send you entire an article from the Examiner N. Y. (Baptist), which is worthy of careful perusal. It is editorial, and appears in a column of that paper, in which the regular weekly contributions are, as a whole, marked by thoughtfulness, candor and intelligence. The representation here given is certainly impressive and startling, and evinces the terrible infidel tendencies of the age.

Please permit me to say to any who are waiting for the issue of my promised pamphlet, wait a little. Very truly yours,

C. COLEGROVE.

COMMUNISM IN THE UNITED STATES.

We had thought that the atrocities of the Paris Commune were regarded in this country with universal abhorrence. They have been set forth very fully by the press, but it is probable that even the fullest accounts which have been published fall very far short of the whole truth respecting the days of horror in which this association of fiends held possession of Paris. But notwithstanding all its dreadful crimes, it appears that the Commune finds not only apologists, but adherents and associates in the United States. These are not merely the refugee Frenchmen who were Communists before they came among us, but men bearing English names, and many of them, undoubtedly, American citizens. The sentiments of these people have found utterance in several journals of the lower sort, which are said to be very widely circulated among the working classes of our population, and have been more boldly declared at a mass meeting held in this city, on a Sunday evening a week or two since.

This meeting was designed to be the beginning of a movement for the organization of Communism in the United States. Its main appeal is to the poor against the rich—to the laborer against the capitalists—and, in general, to the vicious, the idle and discontented of all orders, against the industrious, the thriving and the contented portions of our population. It is the same sort of movement, in principle, as that in which the Socialistic organizations of Europe began, though its spirit can scarcely be so bitter amidst the free institutions of the United States. The same false theories are at the bottom of one as of the other. The same disregard of moral obligations, and the same brazen defiance of all existing institutions characterize them both alike; and when an occasion sufficiently exciting shall be presented, we may expect the same wild and reckless proceedings in the furtherance of American Communism as have so often characterized the Communism of Europe.

We have long had scattered fragments of this system among the labor reformers who hold their ranting meetings every year in New England and New York. These fragmentary ideas have hitherto been mingled with many other wild doctrines which find ventilation on such occasions from the women and the men who occupy the platform. While thus combined they are comparatively harmless, and are regarded mainly as the mere effervescence of an enthusiasm and philanthropy which are too intense to be repressed. But it is now evident that an attempt is making to organize these notions into a system by themselves, and to embody it in associations such as exist in so many countries of Europe. The central idea which is thus put forth is the community of property, or in other words the virtual destruction of property, by limiting the amount which any one man may possess and thus taking from all the stimulus to industry and to effort, and supporting the idle and the vicious out of the honest earnings of the virtuous and the industrious. It is the old idea of St. Simon and Fourier, and the other French economists, modified and developed by the labor reformers and revolutionists of later times. With this central idea are also connected various others, which are even more attractive to the ignorant multitudes to whom they are presented. These ideas are all more or less at variance with christian morality, and with the existing constitution of society, and some of them point to materialism and blank atheism. These are the results to which they have led in France and in Italy, and they are their legitimate fruits everywhere.

The growth of such doctrines in this country, and especially their organization for practical operations, is a phenomenon fitted to awaken the utmost concern. It points to a social danger that must be met and warded off, or it may bring us unspeakable misfortunes. Here is a vast company of men, holding affiliations with a still greater company in various parts of Europe, and spreading themselves by still other affiliations over the whole country. Their sole object is to change the existing constitution of society in this and the other most prosperous countries of Christendom. They have enlisted in their service a pretty large amount of talent, both for writing and speaking, and they everywhere exhibit a certain bold plausibility, which lends prestige and attraction to their dangerous theories. But their great strength in the United States lies in the vast number of foreigners here who are prepared by their European traditions to adopt these ideas, even if they have not adopted them already. Our peril at this, as at so many other points of our social well-being, arises from the hospitality which we have shown to people from all parts of the world. Every false notion which they may bring, every evil passion which they have been accustomed to indulge, is sure to have here a free and full development, and bring forth its natural fruits. It is a well-known fact that, if we except a few professional philanthropists, who are at the service of every new movement, our Labor Reform Associations have thus far been composed almost wholly of foreigners. The recent coal troubles in Pennsylvania were exclusively of foreign origin and support.

It has generally been believed that these Communistic ideas can have no permanent lodgment in American society, where institutions are free, and the laborer and the capitalist are scarcely separated from each other. We doubt, however, the soundness of this opinion. We have been surprised at the readiness with which they find acceptance even among many whose training has been purely American, and who ought to know the end to which they will lead. Such people, of course, abound most in the large cities, where life is most artificial, and where the distinctions of society are the most strongly marked. The Universal Association, as it styles itself, is able to fill its ranks from the discontented and reckless population of our great cities, and from the industrial centres, which so much resemble them in spirit and character. Its affiliations are said to be multiplying, and presses are either established, or specially hired to advocate it. It thrives in our very freedom, and it finds occasions of complaint in everything that exists. Its fundamental idea is directly at war with individual liberty and self-direction, for it makes every man exist, first of all, for society. This becomes the master of his destiny; its will is his only law, even in the minutest particulars; his earnings are for its wealth, his life is at its disposal. It aims to annihilate the family, and to take the place of God. And yet, with all its monstrosities, it has educated men for its apologists, and is fast becoming a most mischievous power in the land, as it has become in so many other lands.

PIC-NIC RELIGION.

"Sitting down to eat and drink, and rising up to play."

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD—CHRIST AND BELIAL.

"The church and world amalgamate,
A union worse than with the State,
Though motives are the same;
The love of pleasure and of gold,
On some professors have such hold,
They oft forget their name."

Is money to be raised for church debts, church building or repairing? A Sabbath school or a missionary enterprise? For the the increase of the minister's salary? To relieve the poor or for any benevolent operation? What now? How is this money to be forth-coming? In a sober, rational gospel way? Nay, a feast is prepared; a soiree introduced, a fancy fair, a pic-nic, a concert or exhibition of some kind, a donation, tea or strawberry party, a sleigh-ride, oyster-supper, a tin or gold wedding, something to inflame the passions, excite and enlarge the appetite, produce a little fun or vulgar merriment. The entire community is put in requisition for weeks. The excitement is intense, outbursting on the right and on the left. To open the purse-strings worldly policy is resorted to, foolish talking and jesting, feasting and frolicking! These festivals are the rage and fever of the day, the world is on fire with them! Where is there a church or society, white or colored, Popish or Protestant, that does not resort to these unholy excitements, these stratagems of Satan to raise funds for some object of benevolence? It is money, money! Money we want, money we will have, gospel or no gospel, heaven or no heaven. Gospel and soul-saving are laid aside. "Away with serious or sober looks, away with them. On for a jolly time of feasting!" "On with the dance, let joy be unconfined." "Know ye not, friends, the friendship of the world is enmity with God?" "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin."

"Will ye play, then, will ye dally
With your music and your wine?
Up! it is Jehovah's rally!
God's own arm hath need of thine."

Conviviality is the ultimatum, the first and the last. "Let us have a jolly time, eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die." The excitement for weeks is more or less dissipating, swallowing up every thought of the soul's welfare. Children and youth are on fire for a spree,—and what else are very many of these festivals and pic-nic excursions but sprees or frolics?

All false religions seek to attract interest by amusements and animal gratifications. The worshipers of the golden calf sat down to eat and drink the oblations to their new god, and then rose up to play. And a bait of sensuality in some form has always been the lure to heathen worship. Popery has always followed in the same line. Even its Sabbath worship connects a dance with the mass. And throughout the whole structure of that "mystery of iniquity,' the sensual and the comic are interwoven with the pomps and ritual of worship. And one of the most common methods by which decay advances upon sound churches is by pleas of amusements to give an attractive and hilarious character to religion, which usually are so many pleas for conformity to the world. We are not unaware of the value of a cheerful religion. We respond to the reasonableness of the command to "rejoice evermore." And yet we read that the "joy of the Lord is your strength," and that our rejoicing must be in God to make it a religious joy. It is not a religious joy, where professedly religious men indulge in gratifications that are worldly, sensual, and frivolous.

"There is a path that leads to God;
All others go astray."

What are Sabbath-schools for? To tickle the fancy; gather in the "little ones" for sport? This blessed institution, intended exclusively for soul-saving, is frequently a gospel-hardening, conscience-searing process. The truths taught here instead of being a savor of life unto life are a savor of death unto death! Children grow up infidels, go out into the world infidels, reprobates under the mid-day sunlight of the gospel, take seats with the scornful. How seldom do we hear of any special revivals in Sunday schools at the present day. And when awakenings do occur, alas! how superficial, how short-lived. "Like the morning cloud and early dew." Is there not a cause for this dearth and spiritual death? Is it not this perpetual rush for the visionary, the lack of gospel teaching?

"If the salt has lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted?" Matt. 5: 13.

To make schools, on the Lord's day, scenes of hilarity, merriment, fun, and frolic, is to defeat the special object in view. Children are naturally excitable, inclined to pride, folly, and self-complacency. And instead of fostering these reptiles, every possible means should be resorted to, to counteract and exterminate them, and lead them directly to the feet of Jesus. Very many of our common school exhibitions tend to puff up or inflate juvenile minds. Pic-nics and Sabbath school exhibitions, as they are now generally conducted, are evil and only evil.

1. They excite envy in the children. Those who are not selected to speak, envy those who are.

2. They encourage pride of spirit and pride of dress—that is, pride of talent in the speakers; and pride of dress, because the girls and young ladies are often dressed as for a show.

3. They are destructive of spiritual interest in the school, especially in seasons of revival.

4. They create confusion and disorganization in the school, owing to the attention given to preparation and to efforts to enlist children in the sale of tickets, etc.

5. They have a reactionary tendency, throwing the school backward for weeks after they are over.

6. They are mere money-making affairs, and to make them popular with irreligious persons the pieces selected are often irreligious and of evil tendency.

The beloved Wm. A. Alcott, M. D., who "being dead yet speaketh," after dwelling at length on the mischievousness of this smash-down business in Sabbath schools, closed thus: "How unlike the spirit of Christ! I rebuke these things in all kindness, but rebuke them I must."

"Never engage in deeds which must
An insult to all justice prove;
Each fetter forced upon the mind,
Let thy strong hand remove."

OUR TOUR WEST.

I. C. WELLCOME.

To the Brethren East:—I think it may be interesting to many of you to read a few incidents of our western tour. We left Maine for Minnesota, with our family, June 21st, on the Grand Trunk R. R. It being earlier in the week than we had planned to start, we were not able to comply with the request of our Montreal brethren to spend a Sunday with them, and therefore withdrew our engagement. We arrived in Montreal at six o'clock A. M., June 22nd, and left at nine, giving us three hours to look about the city. We visited several places of note, among which was the French Catholic church, during their morning high mass service. I have not room to describe the scene further than to say it was the most rich, gorgeous, inflating, fascinating, hypocritical display of human vanity we had ever witnessed.

At nine we took the train, and rode all day and night through Canada, over a pretty country, of well cultivated fields, but poor buildings, passing Toronto at one o'clock A. M., and arriving at Sarnia at seven, where they promised the passengers twenty minutes for breakfast at the saloon, and choked them off with the boat bell in ten minutes, when we passed out of the Queen's dominions into U. S. atmosphere and customs. We were not sorry, although we had passed through a delightful country, and been happily disappointed in the scenery and the people, and had been kindly treated. We found the general customs of society and trade very inferior to those of the U. S.

The 23d we spent on the Michigan Central R. R., which is the best road and best managed of any R. R. we have yet seen. At four P. M. we arrived at Buchanan, and spent the night with the family of Bro. J. V. Himes, who received us with a hearty welcome, and cared for us with much kindness. Brn. J. V. and Wm. L. were absent, attending their State campmeeting at Jackson, as were Bro. and Sr. Mansfield. We were much disappointed in not seeing them all. We called at the A. C. Times office; found Bro. Elijah Mansfield, who kindly showed me about the business and working departments of the W. A. C. P. Association, from which tens of thousands of papers, books and tracts are wending their way to all parts of the great West, as also the East, bearing the glad tidings of the gospel of the kingdom of God, and the soon return of our blessed Lord, together with many other of the most neglected and important truths in the Bible. This office is a marvel, when we consider the incipient stage of the Advent cause in the West, the various elements of dissolution associating with it in former times, and the scantiness of facilities to prosecute such a work as the founders of this office propose. It is a model of energy, economy, and business tact. We attended a prayer-meeting at the house of Bro. Mansfield, and enjoyed a precious interview with the brethren and sisters present, although much fatigued, having rode over one thousand miles in forty-six hours. Our rest was sweet that night.

June 24th, Bro. E. Mansfield kindly took us to the station, and we took the train and arrived in Chicago at 12 M. The omnibus which took us to the North-western station, having others to carry to the south part, gave us a pleasant ride over the chief parts of that young but mammoth western city. Arriving at the station, we were obliged to wait until 5 P. M. for the Milwaukee train. We would have spent the time in looking up old friends from the East, and some brethren we had read of, but were too much fatigued. We had a fine offer to be stripped of our money by a "confidence man," which we will relate in another paper in detail, for the benefit of travelers who are unaccustomed to tricks.

Saturday evening, nine o'clock, we arrived at Milwaukee, Wis. Here we met a hearty greeting by Bro. Geo. Christenson and wife, formerly of Kennebunk, Me. We were mutually joyous and thankful to meet each other. We enjoyed their hospitable kindness, and spent Sunday with them, preaching twice in their place of worship, and forming acquaintance with a few tried and faithful ones, who have learned that Jesus is soon to return, and have suffered like afflictions and persecutions with us in the East. This is a large city, rapidly growing, full of foreigners and of sin. It is a great field for mission work for Christ's disciples. The brethren there need help. Who will go and preach to them? At Milwaukee stations, we saw some five hundred emigrant Swedes, robust, neat, and apparently of industrious habits, who had left their homes in Europe to seek better homes in the great West of America. The tide of emigration is constantly thus going on. Who shall show them the Bible locality, richness, glory, and perpetuity, of the better home in the kingdom of God? Who will guide their feet into the narrow way that leads to everlasting life, before they become corrupted by the morals of young America?

Monday, June 26th, we bade adieu to Bro. and Sr. Christenson, and took the Winona and St. Paul train, and rode through Wisconsin, a delightful country, with rich fields of thousands of acres of wheat, oats and corn; but not as forward nor as promising as in Michigan. The R. R. bridge over the Mississippi river at Winona having fallen, the cars did not run in the night, and we stopped during the night at New Salem.

June 27th, took cars and crossed the Mississippi in a flat boat. While going to the cars, we were greeted by a Bro. Ramer, who knew me by having my wood-cut picture in one of my books. We took cars here for Kasota campmeeting, and rode across the world-renowned State, Minnesota, arriving at the camp-ground at six o'clock. Here we were met in the open prairie by my brothers,—Elder M. Wellcome, whom I had not seen for twenty-five years, and Elder S. C. Wellcome, whom I had not seen for twenty-three years, they having left Maine for the West in 1846 and 1848. This was a happy meeting indeed to us all, for we met not only as kindred, but as united believers in Christ, and fellow-laborers and sufferers with and for Christ, in the blessed hope of being also glorified together, and that at Jesus' speedy coming. As we got upon the ground, we also met our dear Bro. O. R. Fassett, a former fellow-laborer in the East, and Bro. E. T. Himes, and several others, with whom I had associated more or less in the East in former days; and then with Bro. L. C. Collins, whose praise is in all the churches, and with many others of the West, whose names we trust are registered in heaven.

On the second day we met Dr. J. W. B. Wellcome and wife—our younger brother, whom we had not seen for seventeen years, and who has gained great popularity as a physician and surgeon in this State. We four brothers were permitted by the good providence of God, and the kindness of Bro. Lombard and family, to sit down to tea together, after a separation of twenty-seven years, and to enjoy a social interview in this far-off West, while many friends and strangers gathered around to witness the scene, and to note the mercy of God in this providential preservation and meeting. Truly, the Lord has been very merciful to us. Blessed be his name.

The campmeeting was an excellent one, though small compared with our Eastern meetings. The great truths which inspire us as a people are taking deep hold of the minds of many in the West. The laborers are earnest, and we should think, faithful. But they need many more laborers. The people of the East have no adequate idea of the vastness of the country, the rapid growth of towns, the numerous cities, and incoming tide of population in this most fertile and beautiful country, not in this State only, but in all this western country.

Campmeeting being ended, and receiving many pressing invitations from many parts to come and preach, we repaired to our eldest brother's, and met our father, eighty-one years of age, and our dear mother, seventy-eight years old, who came west twenty-three years ago. Then our other brother, our only sister, with the companions and children of all. These were happy greetings, and greatly enjoyed by us all; but if we shall all gain the world to come, and meet in the kingdom of God, it will far exceed this.

Gems.

— This world and the next resemble the east and the west; you cannot draw near to one without turning your back on the other.

To his own thy Savior giveth
Daily strength:
To their troubled souls he liveth
Peace at length.
Weakest lambs have largest share
Of this tender Shepherd's care:
Ask him not, then, when, or how?
Only bow.

— Every christian should begin to doubt himself, if he finds, after ten years, that self-denial is as hard in the same things as it was at first.

— He that cannot live well to-day, will be less qualified to live well to-morrow.

— To be wise in our own eyes, in the opinion of the world, and in the sight of our Creator, are three things so very different as rarely to coincide.

— We carry an atmosphere with us, and by it either raise or depress the religious temperature of the community; we are icebergs to chill, or central fires to warm.

— Habit is the deepest law of human nature.

— It is not enough to break with sin, unless we break with sinners too.

— Meekness is a virtue by which a man may know a christian better than by his name.

Why art thou cast down, O my soul?
Uplift thee and be strong;
Thy care upon thy Maker roll,
Thy sadness doth him wrong.
Beneath his eye
Thy goings lie;
Thy God who rules above,
His child doth know and love.

— In judging of others, let us always think the best, and employ the spirit of charity and candor; but in judging of ourselves, we ought to be exact and severe.

— Despairing thoughts make a man fight against God with his own weapons.

— Murmuring is a black garment, and it becomes none so ill as saints.

— What thou art in the sight of God, that thou truly art.

— Happiness is a very common plant, a native of every soil, yet some skill is required in gathering it; for many poisonous weeds look like it, and deceive the unwary to their ruin.

— Those who are always useful, have not leisure to complain or be unhappy.

— It is obedience that proves our love.

PLEASING.

Amid the perils of these last days, it is truly pleasant to the lovers of Christ to find here and there some who are willing to turn away from the fleeting and vain pleasures of earth, and seek the Lord, that they may wait for God's beloved Son from heaven. Last Sabbath, July 9th, was a pleasant day to the little band of heirs of our Father's kingdom at W. Parsonsfield, Me.; as they, with a goodly collection of people, gathered down beside the pleasant waters of Province Pond, and witnessed the immersion of four happy souls in the likeness of Christ's death and resurrection, by our beloved Bro. Mark Stevens. Praise the Lord that he has visited the place in mercy, and caused the truth to be proclaimed to the salvation of sinners, and the upbuilding of his cause. CHAS. H. HURD.

TAKE HOLD OF CHRIST.

A traveler in the Alps had been climbing a precipice which gradually became more and more steep. But he was lured onward by the pleasure of the exercise and the purpose of reaching the top, till he found he could go no further. Now looking back he saw he could not return. To attempt to descend would be certain destruction. He was in great peril. He had but an inch or two of footing, which might at any moment give way, and his strength was beginning to fail. He had been watched by a friend, who saw his peril, and, by another route, reached the summit of the rock and lowered a rope. What must he do? Believe! He hesitated. The rope might break—his friend's arm might fail—but the path was crumbling, his own strength was going; so he believed; that is, he trusted his friend and obeyed his directions, and so was drawn up to safety.

So let us believe and be saved. Let us take Christ at his word. Let us accept his mercy, and obey his commands. Then shall we be saved—saved from guilt and condemnation; saved from death and judgment; saved now from wretchedness and ruin. We shall be saved, and so able to fulfill our high vocation to live for God and serve him. We shall be saved, and so experience the blessedness which may be enjoyed now in the service of God. And this salvation will progress and endure; for the gift of God is eternal life.

Then that lake reflecting the beauties of the sky, and those valleys teeming with flowers and fruits, and those mountains piercing the clouds, will be but poor emblems of the soul, which, with higher faculties and in a nobler way, will soar upwards to heaven, arrayed in all the beauties of godliness, and rich in all the fruits of faith, and reflecting the glories of the Sun of Righteousness.—Sunday at Home.

SERPENTS COILED;

OR,

Educating Little Mary for the Heavenly Kingdom.

NO. 8.

D. P. NEWTON, Author of "Apples of Gold," etc., etc.

"Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field, which the Lord God had made, and he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden; but of the fruit of the tree, which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die."—GEN. 3: 1, 2, 3.

"Scatter ye seeds in the field of mind—
Seeds of flowers, with seeds of grain;
In the spring and summer sweet garlands ye'll find,
And in autumn ye'll reap rich fruits for your pains."

My dear brother and sister would be shocked, horrified, stand aghast at the idea of placing the "Mysteries of Paris," a corrupt Bolwer, or a licentious Eugene Sue in the hands of this sweet, lovely daughter, called Mary! Sooner, by far, you would place a stinging viper in her bosom! And yet, what do you? Something worse or more dangerous—select a romance, a novel from "Harper," "Godey," "Peterson," "Demorest," Beecher, Dickens, and other writers of sentimental fiction, written in a style beautiful, fascinating?—that contains fine sentiments, elevating and purifying, highly commendable; strains of ardent piety, correct portraits of living ministers; but, mark, they present the rose without the thorns—the brimming cup of pleasure without the dregs of bitterness. They present pictures, scenes, and situations of another and pleasanter life than that which ordinary mortals enjoy. By transporting one into a paradise of pleasure, it creates a distaste for real life, thus unfitting one for the hard matter-of-fact, work-a-day world in which God has placed man for his probation.

These works of fiction become popular by being recommended and patronized by ministers of the gospel, advertised and puffed by religious editors. The sensation books and periodicals may not contain anything vulgar, coarse or gross. Better if they did. Evil that comes in the form of grossness or vulgarity is not so dangerous as that which comes veiled in gracefulness and exquisite sentiment. Subjects which are better not touched upon at all are discussed, examined, and exhibited in all the most seductive forms of imagery. Parents would be shocked to see a son in a fit of intoxication; and yet, we solemnly aver it would be better to see a son in a fit of drunkenness, than to see the delicacy of a lovely daughter's mind injured, and her imagination inflamed with false fire. Twenty-four hours will terminate the evil in the one case, but twenty-four years will not exhaust the effects of the other. You must seek the consequences at the end of very many years. "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth." "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." Prov. 4: 23.

The first step in a downward course should be shunned as a deadly serpent. None become abandoned at once. We cannot have too clear an idea of the danger of the "first steps" in any sinful career. Those whose business and profession it is to ruin men, well understand this danger. What kindly allurements and tender cords of enticement do they use at first to decoy the unsuspecting and unwary young men. The most unsuspected traps and snares have at first been laid, until thousands of interesting youths of both sexes have been led on, hardly aware at first that they were in the ruinous course, until they have falllen, drawing others along with them into the lowest vortexes of infamy. And so it is always bidding us beware of the first steps in sin. So Bunyan's path over the stile, or that leading into by meadows, lay apparently almost straight along the Pilgrim's true road.

"The course of evil
Begins so slowly, and from such slight source,
An infant's hand might stop the breach with clay;
But let the stream get deeper, and philosophy,
Aye, and religion too, shall strive in vain
To turn the headlong current!"

Nor should those parents and others, whose business and profession it is to educate mind, and train the young for virtue and heaven, be less conscious of the influence of "first steps," whether in vice or virtue. Guard these with unsleeping vigilance. Among the pernicious activities of our time is the prolific production of novels and romances. These are of every grade of mischief in their competition, but they have, to a large extent, a property in common, namely, the policy of artful disguise. The debasing tendency is not only veiled, but many times greatly enhanced by the arts of rhetoric, and an elaborate and polished diction.

Parents and teachers seem not to know, that the thirst for novel-reading is cultivated by novel-reading; or they seem not to know that reading fiction, with a little sprinkling of religion, prepares children to love to read fiction, though it may have a sprinkling of irreligion.

There is that in the character of fictitious writings, properly called novels, whether the subject be secular or religious, which forms a taste different from historical, didactic, or any of the other classes of writing, and this taste is as readily formed by holding the child upon religious novels in his younger years, as if he were supplied with secular novels.

By our religious machinery the child is piously trained to seek his gratifications of mind amid elements of grossest corruption. If the enemy of all good should set himself to devise a scheme to take children out of religious families, and from them to rear a supply of victims of this form of ruin, he could, with all his cunning, hardly contrive a better way to avoid giving alarm and to secure the result. "Stolen waters are sweet, and bread eaten in secret is pleasant. But he knoweth not the dead are there; and that her guests are in the depths of hell." Prov. 9: 17, 18.

In the Sabbath school library, and in the books purchased for children, we furnish them with the means of cultivating a taste for novel-reading, and so prepare them greedily to devour whatever fictitious trash may fall in their way, and then waste our breath in deploring their exposure to a corrupt literature.

Our Sabbath-school libraries, and our families, and our book-stores, are full of these introductions to the "Mysteries of Paris."

"How great their charge who feed the mind,
And, with a high and heaven-taught spirit, strive
To neutralize the poisons that corrode
Its health, and with an appetite for truth,
Replace the gilded tales that impair
Its nerve and firmness."

GOING TO SEA.

George was discontented with farm life. He complained that it was drudge, drudge—never any rest, and never any pleasure in it. He was tired of foddering and milking cows, of hoeing, weeding, raking, husking. He "was never meant for it."

What should he do? What would he do if he could? He hardly knew. He had some fine ideas of the sea. He sang of it as "the bold, the grand, the ever free." He fancied that he should like to ride its proud waves, to battle with its storms, to play with it and conquer it, in accordance with fanciful book-talk. Then he wanted to see everything—whales, dolphins, flying fish, all the wonders of the earth, and all the celebrated countries and people.

As George grew discontented he grew undutiful. He worked grudgingly, slowly, and sometimes badly.

"How I do hate to milk!" he said as he took his pail. "I'm sick to death of hoeing!" he said when sent to work in the corn-field.

His father was often displeased with him, and as often reproved him. This made George the more dissatisfied, and he kept saying inwardly:

"I will not stay here to work hard and be scolded for nothing. What shall I do?" he seriously questioned. "Shall I go to sea? It would trouble father if I did; that would be one good thing," he wickedly and foolishly thought. The old man would miss him, and be sorry that he had scolded him so much. But his mother! It would break her heart. It might kill her. He loved his mother. How could he give her pain? No, he would not leave her. He worked on more patiently and dutifully for awhile. Then he was over-tired and grew careless. His father was displeased, and might have been too severe. His words decided George. He would leave him. He would bear from him no longer. He would seek a better life.

"A better life!" poor, foolish, ignorant, wicked boy! Where is there a better life than in the home where parents love and care for us; where they cherish our virtues and reprove our faults? Look at the forlorn stranger, the homeless one—a leaf on the wind, a fragment on the sea, a waif; who cares for him? Who cherishes, who blesses him? Poor George! he has made up his mind. His mother must bear it, for he must go away. He would not stop to deliberate again. He had done it once, and to no purpose; he had delayed only to lose time. That should be his last night at home. He would go at the first dawn of the morning.

He began to feel badly when he gave his last fodder to the cows, and thought that it was the last; he did not know how much he loved the kind animals.

He played with his little sister, and smiled at her so tenderly that she pulled down his head to kiss him, and told him she never knew he loved her so much before. George did not know it either. He had no idea she was so dear to him. O, how much he would do for her in the bright days to come! He would bring her rare shells and birds, and beautiful things. Silks and pearls and riches should yet be hers. He would make her delighted and happy.

He looked at his mother, at her sweet face, and turned away. He dared not trust himself to look at her, or be with her now. Another instant might unnerve him. He hastened to his room. Half-way up stairs he called out a faint "Good night."

And was this all the leave-taking for those dear ones who loved him better than life? Would he go on the dangerous, treacherous sea of life—without his father's tender blessing; his mother's farewell kiss? "Foolishness is bound up in the heart of a child," so saith the Bible.

George slept little that night. He was awake before the dawn, dressed, and with bundle in hand, had left his home forever. How strange! how foolish! how mad! He did not look back till he came to the turn, which shut it entirely from his view. Then he paused, leaned against the fence, and took a last look at the dear old place. It was imprinted on his heart, every feature of it, so deeply that he could always call it up, and see it as a living picture. He knew he should want to see it, when far distant, on the Sabbath days, and in the long, lonely twilights.

But he would see it again in reality before long. He would come back to it, proud with success; he would gladden it again. He was grieving its loved inmates now; he would make them rejoice. A dark, terrible thought crossed his mind. Would they all be there when he should come back? How could he come to find them not, only their cold, still unforgiving graves?—for he must be forgiven. He was already half penitent.

"God protect them—the dear ones!" he whispered. "God keep them!" and choking down a sob, he grasped his bundle more tightly, and hurried on his way.

It was the evening of the next day, and, feverish and foot-sore, he threw himself upon the ground to rest. Rest! he could not rest—and, springing up, pursued his way again.

We will not follow him in his weariness, his perplexities, his heart full of yearnings and regrets, misgivings, and fears and remorse. He was a wretched boy—hurrying on after a dream, but carrying enough wretchedness in himself to spoil even a paradise. Let us go to his home.

"Where is George? I haven't seen him this morning," says the father.

"How late he sleeps!" says the mother.

The sun is high in the heavens, and the cows are lowing for the pastures, still unmilked. The sister is sent to wake him. Alas! she will never wake him more. She finds the open couch, the deserted room.

"George is up," she says, returning.

"Where can he be?" the father anxiously inquires, as if of himself.

"Where can he be?" responds the mother.

"Have you called him?" she inquires.

The barn, the woods, echo back his name in vain. He will never hear himself called by a father's lips again. And this is the last time the father will speak his name without a tear, or groan, or inward sigh.

The breakfast is eaten in silence. Then the father, forgetting his work, walks the room and says:

"It is so strange about George! He never did so before." But he does not breathe his dreadful fears. No. If—if it is so, let the truth be broken as slowly as may be to the gentle-hearted mother.

The mother goes quietly and alone to her poor boy's deserted room. If she had suspected anything before, she knows all now. God help her! Such faintness, such sickness of soul, can come to us but a few times ere we die. God be thanked for this! Death itself is nothing to the dying still in life.

George's room is but little changed. It was always neat and orderly, and is so now. He left it so on purpose, thinking of his mother. But some things are gone—his best clothes, his porte-monaie, his little writing-case, a book or two are missed. Is his Bible gone? Thank God, it is! O, there is some consolation—a little softening of the anguish in this! The mother prays:

"God of the Bible! God of the wanderer! bless my boy! Save him! O, save him! For the sake of the beloved Son of Mary, hear a mother!"

The mother's face tells the father all.

"God help me!" he exclaimed. "Was I severe to the boy?" he asks himself. "O, that I had been more gentle, more considerate and patient! Have I driven out my own son, him whom I loved?"

He hastens after him. Which way? Where? To the nearest city.

Arrived there, where shall he go? To the wharves, and to the ships, and to all his acquaintances. He advertises; he inquires of every one who may by any possibility know anything of the wanderer. In vain.

But he must search on. He cannot return to the broken-hearted mother without tidings. They come at last. In another city, George has shipped for a long sea voyage. Blessed news! He is still alive. He may be found. The vessel may not have sailed, and the son may be regained and persuaded back to home and love. But O, if the father be too late! If the vessel with George on board should have sailed!

He is too late; the vessel has sailed.

"When will the ship Julia return."

"In three years."

"What a voyage! In three years the boy will be a man, and have forgotten us all. Three years without him will bow me to the earth. Ah! it will not take so long to break the tender heart of her who bore him. Three years, did you say, sir? the father again inquires.

"She's bound on a three years' voyage," was the reply. "Have you any friend on board of her?"

"A son."

"Wait a minute, the ship has been spoken. We've news from her."

The father listens. The record is read. Latitude and longitude is given.

"Ship Julia, one day out from New Bedford Geo. Allen fell from the mast head to the deck, and was instantly killed."

"What is the matter? How pale the man is! Does he breathe?"

"Is your name Allen, sir?" is asked.

No answer, but the swell and heave of a breaking heart. "I'm sorry. I beg your pardon, sir. I did not dream that the young man who was killed could be anything to you."

"He was my son, my only son. How am I to go back to his mother? How can I break her already smitten heart? O God, be with her and support her."

Do you question more concerning poor George's death? I have told all that could be learned. And surely his fate is enough to teach you contentment and patience in your lot; to warn you against the sin and folly of boyish wilfulness and self-seeking, and enforce anew the command:

"Honor thy father and mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."—Life Boat.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

TREATMENT OF CONSTIPATION.

I know of no treatment better calculated to remove constipation of the bowels—the result of a depraved condition of the system, than nutritious and easily-digested food in compact form, not sloppy nor bulky; bread made from unbolted flour being one of the principal articles of diet. I speak from an experience of over thirty years in the use of this bread, having used it myself for that length of time, and prescribed it constantly to all my patients who are troubled with torpid bowels. Out of several cases of its curative power, which I might mention, I will state that I was called to visit an old lady of seventy years of age, about four years ago. She had moved here from Ohio, and had an attack of intermittent fever, which she had contracted many years before. She was extremely feeble, with great nervous prostration; her greatest trouble was constipated bowels. She kept pills always in the house, and two or three times a week took a dose, otherwise she would have no evacuation from her bowels. I prescribed for her intermittent fever, and recommended her, if able to leave her bed again, to use Graham bread for a time, as her almost exclusive diet. I instructed her how to use and make it. I paid her but one visit and heard no more of her.

Two years afterward, a hale old lady walked into my office and announced herself as the person I had visited with intermittent fever. She stated she had used the bread, made it the principal part of her food, and had not taken one pill since she commenced its use. Within four blocks of this hall resides another of my female patients, who is a stout, healthy-looking woman, of middle age, but who had to keep her box of patent pills constantly in use. I persuaded her to try Graham bread, and although three years have elapsed since she commenced its use as an article of food, she has had no further need of cathartic pills.

KEEP THE KITCHEN AIR PURE.—A little sink near a kitchen door-step, inadvertently formed, has been known, although not exceeding in its dimensions a single square foot, to spread sickness through a whole household. Hence, every thing of the kind should be studiously obviated, so that there should be no spot about a farm-house which can receive and hold standing water, whether it be the pure rain from the sky, the contents of a wash-basin, the slop-bowl, or the water-pail.—Home and Health.

LIGHT IN A SICK CHAMBER.—The quantity of light admitted into the sick chamber is a matter of immense importance to its suffering occupant. As light is an element of cheerfulness, it is on that account desirable that as much should be admitted as the patient can bear without inconvenience. The light should be soft and subdued and not glaring. Care should be taken that bright, lustrous objects, such as crystals and mirrors, should be kept out of sight.—Ibid.

The "Crisis" is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

MY FATHER, FRIEND, AND HOME.

I have a Friend, a precious Friend, unchanging, wise, and true,
The chief among ten thousand, oh, I wish you knew him too;
Encompassed with a host of foes, weary in heart and limb,
I know who waits to soothe my woe,—have you a friend like him?
He comforts me, he strengthens me, how can I then repine?
He loveth me! this faithful friend in life and death is mine.

I have a Father, true and fond; he cares for all my needs;
His patience bore my faithless ways, my mad and foolish deeds;
To me he sends sweet messages, he waiteth but to bless.
Have you a Father like to mine, in such deep tenderness?
For me a kingdom doth he keep, for me a crown is won;
I was a rebel once; he called the rebel child his son.

I have a proved, unerring Guide, whose love I often grieve;
He brings me golden promises my heart can scarce receive;
He leadeth me, and hope and cheer doth for my path provide
For dreary nights and days of thought; have you so sure a guide?
Quench not the faintest whisper the heavenly dove may bring,
He seeks to lure with holy love the wand'rer 'neath his wing.

I have a home—a home so bright its beauties none can know;
Its sapphire pavements and such palms none ever saw below.
Its golden streets resound with joy, its pearly gates with praise;
A temple standeth in the midst no human hands could raise,
And there unfailing fountains flow, and pleasures never end.
Who makes that home so glorious? It is my loving Friend.

My Friend, my Father, and my Guide, and this our radiant home,
Are offered you; turn not away; to-day, I pray you, "come."
My Father yearns to welcome you, his house, his heart to share,
My friend is yours, my home is yours, my Guide will lead you there;
Behold one altogether fair, the faithful and the true,
He pleadeth with you for your love, he gave his life for you.

O, leave the worthless things you seek, they perish in a day;
Serve now the true and living God, from idols turn away.
Watch for the Lord who comes to reign, enter the open door,
Give him thy heart, thy broken heart, thou'lt ask it back no more.
Trust him for grace and strength and love, and all thy troubles end;
O, come to Jesus, and behold in him my loving friend.

THE END AT HAND.

JOHN COUCH.

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations; and then shall the end come."—MATT. 24: 14.

The first message was made up of divine predictions of the time and circumstances connected with the coming of earth's great King, and the manifestation of his glorious kingdom. The second part must answer this representation. The first presented two manifestations of the Messiah; one already accomplished, the other at hand, immediately to transpire. The second must answer this description. Therefore, when the gospel of the kingdom is preached as predicted in the text, the arguments must rest upon predictions presenting the time and events preceding and attending the glorious coming of Christ, and the establishment of God's everlasting kingdom. It must also present the first coming of Messiah as already past, and his second antitypical coming "at hand," or immediately to take place.

Again, the preaching of this message to the Jews, was a divine testimony given to them, that the time had come, according to God's arrangement, to change the administration of the divine government with them, and give it into the hands of the Messiah. So it must be in the second case, and is so expressed in the text. Jesus says, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations."

(2) What must this message accomplish among the nations? It must witness to all nations. What is it to witness? It is to give testimony concerning facts. A man to witness in court is required to testify of things he knows relating to the case under consideration. What case was under consideration in the conversation in which Jesus uttered the text, of which the gospel of the kingdom should witness to the nations? It was the time when the gospel age should end, and Christ should come to judge the world. Then it would follow that the preaching in this case would be the testifying of facts, identified and known, which would prove to the nations that the end of the world was immediately to come.

To witness to a nation is not to convert it, but to give it proof of certain facts. It might be converted by that proof, or it might not; that is another question. The Scriptures teach us in this case, however, that the proof given the nations by preaching this message would not convert them, but as in the type or picture, the Jewish nation resisted the proof given them, and thus sealed their destiny for destruction.

Jesus spoke of the overthrow of the Jewish nation and their city, and added, "Because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation." He also predicts the same condition under the preaching of the second message; showing a likeness between the nations hearing this, and those of Noah's day, saying, "For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

The antediluvians who did not receive the divine witness that the flood was coming, were destroyed; while Noah received it, and secured a place of safety.

Christ makes an application of this principle to all the tribes of the earth at his second coming, saying, "And then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming," etc.

These passages prove conclusively that the witness of this last message would not be received by the masses of the people of any nation; but their rejection of the testimony would result in their overthrow and destruction.

What facts and circumstances must be testified to in preaching this gospel to the nations? The predicted events which by their order of occurrence, and connection with the end, would indicate its location. Therefore this testimony cannot be given until the signs shall begin to appear, which are given as proof that the generation seeing them shall not pass till all these things (including the end) shall be fulfilled.

Jesus says, WHEN YE SEE these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand.

The servants of Christ are not allowed to assume that they know this until they see the predicted signs appear; therefore cannot witness to the nations until then.

Men are not allowed, as witnesses in court to testify of things they do not themselves know; so in this case; the very men who are witnesses of "these things," may "know," and can therefore testify that the end is at hand.

It is inappropriate to give one class or generation warning signs and premonitions of coming danger, to which another generation and not themselves are exposed. God has invariably given the signs of all coming events to the classes who were upon the stage at the time the event occurred. Warning is always given to those who are exposed to danger, and can, by heeding that warning, escape it.

This work of witnessing to the nations is bounded to the limits of one generation, and the message is due at that time, and not before or after, as Jesus' words imply, when he said, "who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

This work will not be completed until the end. The meat is given through the preaching of the gospel. The last gospel message preached, is the gospel of the kingdom; therefore, the meat given is the truth of the last message. To give it in due season, is to give it at the appointed time. Dinner is not due in the morning, or evening, but at noon-day. This message is not due until the last nations come upon the stage, who are to continue unto the end, or until the signs of the last judgment are seen.

The Lord presented this great subject to the prophet, saying, "Behold the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold thy salvation (or Savior) cometh; behold his reward is with him, and his work before him." Isa. 62: 4. This passage proves that before the Savior comes to reward his people (which will be at his second coming), a proclamation must be made "to the end of the world," or all over the earth, "Behold thy salvation" (Savior) "cometh."

This proclamation is identical with the gospel of the kingdom; being made at the same time, and for the same purpose. It proves, therefore, that the central idea and burden of the last message would be the speedy coming of the Savior at the end of the age.

God evidently speaks of the same proclamation when he says, "Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles; prepare war. . . . "Beat your ploughshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks into spears." "Assemble yourselves and come all ye heathen. . . . Let the heathen be weakened and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat, for there will I sit to judge all the heathen" . . . "Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe."

These expressions clearly present the emphatic points in the last heaven-sent message to this perishing world. It announces coming war, in which newly invented implements of human destruction would be used. It heralds the forthcoming judgment battle, foreshadowed by the tragical scenes of deadly strife in Jehoshaphat's bloody vales, again to be repeated on Armageddon's battle field, where God's great marshall shall lead to perfect and eternal victory heaven's invisible hosts, against the assembled armies of all Gentile nations, whose blood shall flow "even unto the horse bridles," and "all the fowls" shall be "filled with their flesh."

It proclaims the coming "harvest," which "is the end of the world." when the reaping angels shall bind in bundles of unholy "confederacy" the wicked, to be destroyed by the last day fires, and in swift chariots shall carry to mansions of holy blessedness all the children of the kingdom. It notifies the world "that the day of the Lord is near."

We learn from the passages examined, the prominent truths to be presented to the world, when the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached.

We find that the message presents prominently the coming of Christ near—the kingdom of God at hand—great preparations making for the last great battle which must soon be fought—opposition to those who proclaim this message, by those who say the Lord delays his coming—and the truth that the signs of Christ's coming, and the end of the world at hand, must be published as a witness of these things to all nations, and then the end shall come.

This same message was clearly presented to the Revelator by the angel flying "in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come."

This proclamation is identical with the gospel of the kingdom; both are sent to all nations, and to be proclaimed at the same time.

It cannot be preached until it can be truthfully said, that "the hour of his judgment is come."

The judgment referred to is immediately explained to be the fall of Babylon; which, according to Rev. 18, is destined to experience two falls, which are called judgments. Between the first and second, a cry or proclamation is made, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."

This cry synchronizes with the flying angel's message, both given after the first fall and judgment of Babylon.

The first judgment is presented by Dan. chap. 7: 26. "But the judgment shall sit; and they shall take away his dominion to consume and to destroy unto the end." "Then the first fall came when his dominion was taken away. The dominion taken was that by which he consumed and destroyed, or as the preceding verse says, "wear out the saints." To wear out is the same as to consume. It would not be proper to say that dominion was taken away, and then put in a state of consumption. To take away a king's dominion is to destroy it. Therefore we learn that when the first judgment of Babylon came, it lost its power by which it wore out or destroyed the saints. This took place in the last part of the eighteenth century, or about 1773, when Jesuitism was abolished.

This harmonizes with Christ, when he said, immediately after the tribulation of those days, or "wearing out of the saints," shall the sun be darkened. He makes that darkening the first sign of his coming; and as his servants could not know and preach his coming and kingdom nigh at hand, until they should see those signs, therefore the preaching of this gospel could not commence until it could be said, "the hour of his judgment is come." This could not be known until the signs had commenced to appear, which would prove that the tribulation had ended; consequently the dominion to destroy had been taken away.

As the great tribulation, in consequence of the edict, did end about 1773, and as the sun was wonderfully darkened immediately after, in 1780, and the predicted signs followed in their order, and as the very nations described, as those to meet the judgment at the end of the world, are now upon the stage, it would seem that the time has come for the gospel of the kingdom to be preached, as foretold by our Lord.

(To be concluded.)

ADORNMENT.

C. R. BARNES.

"Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." 1 Pet. 3: 3, 4.

In the passage quoted above, the subject seems to be adornment. The desire to look well, to present a pleasant appearance, seems to be common to human nature. To be sure, the manner of adorning is different in different countries, but the desire is the same the world over. The city-bred person indulges his fancy by clothing himself in costly broadcloth; while his brother of the South Sea Islands will go into raptures over the cast-off coat of some foreign soldier, or it may be a worn-out hat, or a ragged pair of pants. The city belle, to adorn herself, wears jewels in her ears; while her sister of heathen lands prefers them suspended from her nose; so it is manifest however much they may differ in their notions as to what constitutes adornment, the desire for it is mutual.

The desire to please, and the wish to be adorned becomingly, is not wrong. The wrong consists in making use of improper means and from wrong motives. It is a wrong idea to think the Bible forbids christian people to be adorned; far from it. Peter does not condemn adornment; on the contrary, he recommends it. He alludes, however, to two kinds; one is internal, the other external, and these two methods he recognizes as belonging to two distinct classes; the godly and the ungodly. The people of the world, those whose hopes and whose interests all centre here, have always been remarkable for their love of display, for their fondness of dress. And as this is their only means of adornment, they often go to ridiculous extremes. In the expectation of captivating Jehu by her charms, Jezebel adorned herself; "she painted her face and tired her head," hoping thereby to allure the victorious Jehu. 2 Kings 9: 30.

Isaiah describes the folly of certain ones who made themselves ridiculous, when he speaks of their "chains, and the bracelets, and the mufflers, the bonnets, and the ornaments of the legs, and the head-bands, and the tablets, and the earrings, the rings, and nose jewels, the changeable suits of apparel, and the mantles, and the wimples, and the crisping pins, the glasses, and the fine linen," etc. Chap. 3: 19–23. One would almost think that he was looking at the things that fill our streets at the present day, so similarly do they dress; for in these modern times we see the same extravagances indulged in that were condemned away back there.

Women, not content with the hair afforded them by nature, affix to their head-dresses portions of hair from the heads of other persons, or it may be an imitation of hair. Desiring to improve upon the complexion given them by their Creator, they apply paint to their faces; and, not yet content, they fasten to their persons in every conspicuous place various kinds of jewelry, which if seen upon a heathen in foreign lands would be deemed ridiculously absurd. This is the way the worldlings dress. This is their chief ornament, and probably to a worldly-minded man it is sufficient; but how sadly deficient must such appear in the eyes of Him who readeth the thoughts of the heart.

Besides this manifestation of folly, there are other characteristics common to this class, which are offensive to Him to whom they must render an account. There may be an exception here and there, but I allude to them as a class. And first among them I reckon pride. This is seen in every part of their dress, and because of it, they are led to treat one plainly dressed coldly, or perhaps shun his society entirely. It also prevents them from going to church, if they happen to be a little "out of style," the usual complaint being "nothing to wear," while perhaps among the articles of their wardrobe are dresses in almost as good condition as when first worn. Or, if possessed of a suitable outfit, the place sought is not where there is the most devotion, but where the people are most fashionable. Another feature very manifest is a light and trifling disposition; having no relish for serious things, and considering those as singular, or prudish, who ever utter a word of admonition to them.

Here I have a word of caution. Do not let any christians think I am referring to them. I am not. I am alluding only to the characteristics of the worldly. If I was addressing you personally, probably some of my many readers (for I believe there are thirty or forty thousand readers of the Crisis—quite a good-sized congregation), if I was addressing you personally, some might say, "I think you meant to hit me"; but no, I am referring only to the worldly-minded; therefore, if you are a christian, of course you are not meant. Do any mean to say that in describing a vain, ungodly person, I have drawn the picture of a professor of religion? Is it possible that any of my readers say that I have hit them? Suppose in preaching I begin to condemn swearing, lying, etc., and a man arises and says, "You have been aiming at me." I would ask, "Are you a christian?" He replies, "I am." What! you a christian, and yet say that in condemning those who lie and swear, I have "hit" you? I should say, If I have hit you, then you are not what the Bible recognizes as a christian, whatever may be your profession. Hence, if any think I mean them in describing a worldly one, to say the least, I should think their religion was very defective.

The foregoing relates to those to whom Peter alludes; those whose adorning is outward, and which consists in wearing of gold and of pearls and of costly array. This is the adorning which is external, but the adornment of a christian does not consist in gilded baubles; does not consist in being clothed in the latest style; but consists "in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." O that all professing godliness might seek to be thus adorned. O that they would strive to meet the approval of God, with one half the zeal with which they court the approval of the world.

That one, whose chief adornment consists in what is upon the person, is sadly deficient; is far from the requirements and spirit of the gospel. With Paul, a profession of christianity seemed to call for non-conformity to the world. Rom. 12: 1, 2. It called for a separation from the world, as being the terms on which God would accept them, and become their Father. 2 Cor. 6: 17, 18. This is what was required then; and who has changed it since? Not Paul, surely. The strait and narrow way, of which Jesus is the gate, has been made no wider; the price of eternal life (if the term is proper) has not been lowered; it was, and is, an entire consecration of self to God. But to-day how different! Where is the church or people of whom Paul could say, "Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, known and read of all men"? 2 Cor. 3: 2. One of the most prominent signs of the times is this very conformity of church and world; and it is the evil which, above all others, needs to be most guarded against.

O, careless reader, lukewarm professor, can this charge be sustained against you? When you let your judgment and convictions of right have free course, do you not feel reproved? Do you not feel that if weighed in the balance, you would be "found wanting"? If thou dost feel in the least degree that thou art "wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked," then I direct thee to Jesus to buy; yea, buy, "without money, and without price," "gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see." Rev. 3: 17, 18. Whatever may have been your condition; whatever it may be now; from this time forth, I pray thee, let the peculiar characteristics of a christian be seen in thy life, and thus by thy consistent, godly life, lead men to glorify thy Father which is in heaven.

Salem, Mass.

☞ I LOVE a kind of light, a kind of melody, a kind of fragrance, a kind of food, and a kind of embracement, when I love my God, —the light, the melody, the fragrance, the food, the embracement of the inner man; when there shineth unto my soul what space cannot contain, and there soundeth what time beareth not away, and there smelleth what breathing dispereth not, and there tasteth what eating diminisheth not, and there clingeth what satiety divorceth not.—St. Augustine.

LETTER FROM GERMANY.

The Lutheran church in Eichnach, Germany, has four galleries, two more than Spurgeon's Tabernacle, but the four in the former would not accommodate with a good view of the speaker as many persons as one of the latter. I spent part of two days at Eisenach, viewing the valleys and scaling the mountains of Thunguria. Upon one of the highest cliffs of these stands the ancient castle of Wartburg, where Martin Luther preached. We saw the house where the great reformer lived for a year. We made two trips to Wartburg, where Luther lived from May, 1521, to March, 1522. Like most other European castles, Wartburg was built for a strong fortress. One of the buildings is over eight hundred years old, others seven hundred, while some parts which had been destroyed, but rebuilt by the different reigning princes, present a more modern appearance. Its present owner is the Duke of Weimar, brother of the late prince consort of Queen Victoria. As one could not fill both positions, the younger brother was made Duke of Weimar; but the elder brother's son, though an Englishman, will become Duke of Weimar upon the death of the present prince. The castle is used as a summer retreat, and as a place for balls, feasting, and gayety. It is largely visited both by Europeans and Americans, and the entrance fee, though small, with the rents paid by those who keep the extensive restaurant, must add considerably to the Duke's income.

Here we stood in the room where Luther studied. We sat in his old chair by the side of his table, looked in his book-case, and as we remembered his life and labors, and their grand results, we mentally thanked God for a Luther.

On our way to Hamburg and Brunswick, we stepped off at Cologne, where the famous toilet articles are manufactured, and visited the great Catholic cathedral. It is three hundred and eighty feet in width, five hundred and twenty-three feet in length, and one hundred and sixty-one feet high. It is built in the old Gothic style. The old town was built in 1248; the north tower not until 1848, six hundred years later. It is still in process of construction, and when finished will be five hundred and thirty-two feet in height, the same as its length. The centre tower is three hundred and eighty feet high, the same as its width. We saw a perfect model of the building, which cost ten thousand Prussian thalers—about $7000. The old part of the tower is much defaced by the action of time, but new stones are being constantly inserted, and on this and the new work four hundred hands are employed at a cost of 150,000 thalers a year. The windows are of colored glass seven hundred years old, yet the colors are as bright as though painted yesterday.

Our devoted Catholic guide showed us the statue of St. Christopher, and related the old story so familiar to German schoolboys. St. Christopher was a large man, a giant in fact, and being conscious of his strength, desired to serve no one of less power than himself. As the king gave evidence that he feared the devil, St. C. told him that the devil must be more powerful than he (the king) was, and therefore he would serve the devil. He followed his new master faithfully, till one day, on coming in sight of a cross, the devil turned aside and commanded St. C. to follow him; but the strong man, asking his satanic majesty why he turned aside, and receiving an evasive answer, inferred that the Lord was stronger than the devil, and from thence sought the Lord as his master. On asking the priest what he could do in his service, he was told that many pilgrims crossed the river to worship there, and, as he was a stout man, he could serve the Lord by carrying them over. This St. C. performed faithfully till one night he heard a faint cry—like a child—across the river pleading to be carried over. He crossed the river and made diligent search, but could find no one. Having returned, he heard the same cry repeated, and he crossed again, with the same result. The third time the cry was repeated, and St. C. resolved to go over once more only. This time, to his surprise, he found a beautiful little child, and taking it upon his shoulder he began to cross the river. But the child grew heavier and heavier, until the strong man almost sank under the load. Fearing that the child would be drowned, he offered up to God a prayer that he might receive strength to save the life of the child. From that moment his burden became lighter, and he reached the shore safely. The child then told him he was Jesus; that he had been a great sinner, priding in his own strength; but as he had acknowledged a higher power in calling upon God for strength, his sins should all be forgiven, and he should be received on high, and as evidence of the promise, if he would plant his staff in the ground, it should bud and blossom. The next morning St. C. found his old, dry staff blossoming with the vigor of a young, healthy tree. St. C. died soon after, and received the rest of the promise.

The foot of the statue was ten feet from the floor, and it must have been more than that distance from the foot of the statue to the head of the child on its shoulder. As the old guide related the story, his face shone with holy emotion, evincing the most child-like faith. Would to God that the power that clothes holy things with superstition might soon come to its predicted end, and the glorious kingdom of God's dear Son take the place of these scenes of ignorance and superstition, war and death.

I have been visiting a family of the nobility—the Baron Von Berlepsche—who call themselves "Old Catholics," and follow Dr. Dollinger (pronounced Dalliner), who paid them a visit recently. The Baroness has written against the "dogma of infallibility" in the Gartenlaube, one of the leading papers, and she says the Pope could have done nothing to procure the destruction of his power sooner than to pronounce himself infallible; that the people being so absorbed in the war, the opposition could not make itself felt, the people preferring to submit quietly than to assert their disbelief in the dogma. She says the "old Catholics" are on good terms with the Protestants, and Dr. Dollinger says both parties must make some concessions and unite, but thinks the time has hardly come yet. The "old" and "new" Catholics fight "like cats and dogs," or only keep the peace by carefully avoiding the discussion of the infallibility question.

The death of poor people who rejected the new doctrine was hardly noticed, but about the last of June Prof. Jeager died, and just before that event he applied to the curate of St. Ludwig to administer the last sacrament. He came, but refused to perform the ceremony unless the Prof. would cause his name to be erased from the address against the Infallibility of the Pope, and profess his belief in the same. This he refused to do, and sent for Prof. Frederick, who had also been excommunicated. He came and administered the sacrament to the dying man. The question now arose how he should obtain priestly robes needed at the burial. He applied to the church belonging to the government, but was refused. He then applied to the Mayor, who informed the bigoted priests that the robes must be furnished, or they would be taken by force. Having obtained the robes, the burial took place, before twenty thousand people. Preparations had been made by the Pope's friends for a riot, but precautions had also been taken to preserve the peace, and all passed off quietly. The great mass of people, who were all anxious to hear what Prof. Frederick would say, crowded on the graves and trampled the flowers under foot. This was seized upon by the Infallibility party, to accuse the others of a lack of respect for the dead. But the mass of thinking persons regard it as a great demonstration against the "dogma." Those who do not believe the Infallibility doctrine call themselves "Old Catholics," and desire the King to give them a church where they can hear Prof. Frederick, and worship according to the creed as it was before July 18th, 1870.

The Lord has been with me, and crowned my coming to Europe with complete success, for which I thank him from the very depths of my being. Yours, H. A. KING.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD—CHRIST AND BELIAL.

(2.) Let us look at the whole batch of these revival-killers, under the heading of

TESTIMONIALS. We select a few among many. We could fill volumes; "but in the mouth of two or three witnesses, every word shall be established."

TESTIMONIAL No. 1.—From a devoted Bro. in Christ, at Saratoga Springs, New York.

"Dear Friend:—Nearly all our churches this winter have been holding fairs, festivals, oyster-suppers, and the like, in their respective church edifices, for divers religious purposes, and I have been zealously laboring against this custom of desecrating the sanctuary. Knowing you to occupy about the same ground as myself on this question, I ask you, as a friend and brother in Christ, to assist me, if in your power at this time to do so. I hope you may find time soon to write a tract on the evils of this worldly conformity, quoting Scriptures, meanwhile, to sustain your position. Should the Lord incline you to this work of love, do not forget to touch tea and strawberry parties, for now the winter campaign is nearly ended, and it will not be many months before the summer festivities will be called for by dressy and "fun-loving" brethren and sisters.

I meet with considerable opposition among all orthodox church-members, but I have not gone to the right or left of what I consider the path of duty. Yours for purity and consistency."*

TESTIMONIAL No. 2.—The editor of the Golden Rule objects to these festivals. 1. Because they are wrong in principle, unscriptural, contrary to gospel purity and sobriety. "To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isaiah 8: 20. 2. On account of the foolish talking and jesting which more or less accompany these scenes of hilarity. Nothing is more contrary to the spirit of godliness than levity. This building up churches, Sabbath schools, and the like, on wit and humor is not gospel. This method may succeed for a time, but rest assured by-and-by God will blow upon it.

"'Tis not for man to trifle. Life is brief,
And sin is here;
Our age is but the falling of a leaf—
A dropping tear.
We have no time to sport away the hours;
All must be earnest in a world like ours."

"For every idle word that men shall speak they shall give an account thereof in the day of judgment." "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." Matt. 12: 36, 37.

3. They are stumbling-blocks to the world.—Sinners are eagle-eyed, they see and know these festivals are gotten up for selfish purposes; that their chief object is money-making and not soul-saving. Consequently they lose confidence in religious professors, and become more given up to the service of sin and Satan. Exhort sinners to faith, repentance and newness of life; they point us directly to these dark spots, beguiling unstable souls, sporting themselves with their own deceivings. Impenitent sinners, instead of looking to the Bible, to the Lord Jesus Christ for the truth, for the religion of purity and love, as they ought to, and as God commands them to do, look upon ungodly church members, and judge of religion as they see it embodied in these dry bones, in those having a name to live and are dead, having a form of godliness, but, by wicked works, denying the power thereof. Thus the world is reeling on, like a drunken man, to dark damnation.

4. He objects to them because they are stumbling-blocks to young converts, the lambs of the flocks; one special cause of their backsliding, losing their first love. How can it be otherwise? But fearful wo is pronounced against those who offend, or cause God's "little ones" to stumble. See Matt. 18: 6.

5. They wound the hearts of God's chosen people. The most consistent, consecrated, humble, devoted disciples of Jesus are always grieved at this method of raising money for religious objects. They see and know with sorrow the evil effects on the church and the world.

"If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." "Give none offence, neither to the Jews nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God." "Even as I please all men," says Paul, "in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved." "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." 1 Cor. 10: 31–33.

6. The editor of the Golden Rule objects to them furthermore on account of their violation of civil law. A secular paper alluding to this religious gambling says: "We are glad to see it announced, that the grand jury of Oswego, New York, have published a card, notifying managers of fairs and festivals, held by church societies, that the practice of disposing of their goods by lottery is contrary to the statute, and must not be persisted in." Good.

7. Again, he objects to them from the fact that they are a special hindrance to revivals. Soul-saving is out of the question, so long as these fairs, tea-parties, or festivals, are on the docket. And when these upheavings are over, the undue excitement for weeks in the preparation of luxuries, fancy articles of little or no value—the late hours, the gluttony, the surfeitings, the foolish talkings and jestings, who is prepared for prayer, praise, or to labor in a revival, to urge sinners to repentance, temperance, and holy living? Sampson is shorn of his locks. Often when God is near to bless, revive his work, pour out his Spirit graciously, convict and convert sinners; when inquiring souls are weeping between the porch and the altar; just at this crisis Satan comes in, stirs up the people, cold, formal, backslidden church members,* for a fair, donation, tea or strawberry party, a pic-nic, oyster-supper, a feast of some kind, to turn away the attention from things pertaining to life eternal, hope everlasting. Thus the Holy Spirit is grieved, takes his flight, the revival is scattered to the four winds.

Who knows how many precious ones are lost, forever, by this devilish stratagem? And yet these fires of the pit are kept burning all over the land!

President C. G. Finney, the revivalist, alluding to these revival-killers and soul-destroyers, remarks thus:

"Often when it comes the time of year to work, when the evenings are long, and business is light, and the very time to make an extra effort, at this moment somebody in the church will give a party and invite some christian friends, so as to have it a religious party. And then some other family must do the same, to return the compliment. Then another and another, till it grows into an organized system of parties, that consume the whole winter.

"This is the grand design of the devil, because it appears so innocent and so proper to promote good feeling, and increase the acquaintance of christians with each other. And so, instead of prayer-meetings, they will have these parties. The evils of these parties are very great. They are often got up at great expense; and the most abominable gluttony is practised at them.

But it is said they are christian parties, and that they are all, or nearly all, professors of religion who attend them. And furthermore, they are often concluded with prayer. Now I regard this as one of the worst features about them; that after the waste of time and money, the excess in eating and drinking, the vain conversation and nameless fooleries with which such a season is filled up, an attempt is made to sanctify it and to palm it off upon God, by concluding it with prayer. Say what you will, it would not be more absurd, or incongruous, or impious to close a ball or a theatre with prayer.

"But I shall advise any congregation who are calculating to have a circle of parties, in the mean time to dismiss their minister, and let him go and preach where the people would be ready to receive the word and profit by it, and not have him stay and be distressed, and grieved, and killed by attempting to promote religion among them, while they are engaged, heart and hand, in the service of the devil. Professors should never get up anything that may divert public attention from religion. In relation to giving parties, say what you please about their being an innocent recreation, I appeal to any of you, who have ever attended them, to say whether they fit you for prayer, or increase your spirituality, whether sinners are ever converted in them, or christians made to agonize in prayer for souls."

TESTIMONIAL No 3.—The New York Recorder speaks thus: "Passing by the envies and evil-speakings, the unkind recollections, the erroneous ideas of benevolence engendered, they place the church of Christ in a false position before the world. No pecuniary profit can compensate for the injury done by this false position."

TESTIMONIAL No. 4.—From the Earnest Christian:

"Pleasure rules the hour. It is fearful to witness the inroads which worldly pleasure is making upon Christianity. With the avowed design of keeping the young people under the influence of the church, the weekly sociable is instituted, and fun and frolic prevail. To pay the preacher, a donation party is held, and old and young, professor and worldlings, devote the evening to feasting and merriment. Festivals, picnics and excursions, oyster suppers and lotteries, are resorted to, for the purpose of replenishing the funds, or reviving the flagging interest—not religious—in the prosperity of the church. We object to one and all of these various expedients to promote the cause of Christ."

THE S. N. A. CAMPMEETING.
Vermont Central R. Road.
FARE REDUCED.

Our friends living on the line of the roads operated by this company, will see by reference to our notice in another column in this paper, that this year they have an opportunity to attend our meeting at a less rate than ever before. Let there be a general rally of the friends in Vermont, Northern New York, the Canadas, etc. G. T. A.

FAST.

In view of the great importance of our approaching National Campmeeting at Springfield, Mass., we would suggest that those who are interested in that meeting should observe Friday, August 18th, as a day of fasting and special prayer to God, that the meeting this year may far surpass all others in its power to lead men to Christ and CHRISTIAN HOLINESS.

Besides the National Campmeeting, let all the other proposed campmeetings be subjects of special prayer at the same time, that they may be instrumental in leading the professed followers of Christ, and especially his ministers, to sanctify themselves anew and wholly to his service forever. Let us all be ready to do or suffer any thing and every thing that will glorify our dear Savior, who suffered so much for us. We believe he is soon coming, and we must be pure in heart to be ready to meet him. It is time to pay special attention to the work of preparation for "the marriage supper of the Lamb."

Again we would say, let there be much and earnest prayer that the spirit of holiness may be the all-prevailing one in our approaching campmeetings.

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

We hope that all who are interested in our great National campmeeting, to commence at Springfield, Aug. 19th, will make it a subject of special prayer, that it may surpass all other meetings ever held in the State. Let us meet there for no other object but to consecrate all to God, and worship him "in the beauty of holiness." Come at the beginning of the meeting, and leave every unhallowed thing behind. Bring no "root of bitterness," no hatred, no variance, no tongues for evil speaking, backbiting, or fault-finding; but come with clean hearts, to speak holy words, and to illuminate the camp with the blessed light of a pure christianity, which is the one thing needful at the present day.

The times are specially perilous, and, as a people, we need a new anointing with the power of the Holy Spirit, that we may go forth with renewed energy to proclaim the everlasting gospel. Christ is coming; and none but holy ones have any promise of a home in his kingdom. Let us come together on the camp-ground, as did the apostles on the day of Pentecost, to receive a fresh baptism of holy power to assist us in the great work of saving men and women from destruction. We need a complete crucifixion of self—the old man—that we may be filled with the Spirit of Christ. Let us meet for this object.

TREMONT CAMPMEETING.

We spent but one day at Tremont campmeeting, but we saw, heard and felt enough to satisfy us that the meeting was one of the best, if not the best ever held on the ground. There was an earnest hungering after righteousness. The key-note of the meeting appeared to be, holiness of heart. Quite a number expressed a willingness to consecrate all to Christ, and received rich blessings. Some very interesting testimonies were given expressing the results of consecration. A heavenly atmosphere pervaded the meeting, sinners were being converted, and backsliders reclaimed. We expect to hear of blessed results from the meeting.

The ground is pleasant, and well adapted to meet the wants of the meeting. There is a nice spring of water but a short distance from the boarding tent. There were some thirty tents on the ground, two of which were large, in which meetings could be held, when the weather was not suitable to be in the open air at the stand.

The prayer-meetings were excellent. Whenever the church begins to seek for a more complete consecration to the Lord, the meetings become more interesting and refreshing; sinners are converted, and backsliders become alarmed. In view of our nearness to the judgment, it is time that all who wish to be saved should present their "bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God." Let us not delay this important and necessary work.

THE POPE.

The Pope's future looks quite gloomy. A great change must soon take place at the Vatican. The present indications say that Pius IX. will soon leave his palace and retire to the island of Corsica. His assumed infallibility affords him very poor help. Since the proclamation of that blasphemous dogma, he has been in a continuous decline, until his power has sunk down to zero. It is said:—

"All is agitation and gloom at the Vatican. Messengers and attendants hurry to and fro. Admittance is denied to ordinary visitors, great secrecy is observed, and the cardinals of the papal household are almost constantly in council with the Pope."

The Pope is well aware that without temporal power his "bulls" and anathemas are of no force. Like laws without penalties, they are powerless. The more he tries to frighten into obedience, the more they laugh at his weakness, until his position has become specially disagreeable and perplexing. No bright cloud overshadows him. Like Pharaoh, when pursuing the children of Israel, he is about entering his Red Sea, from which there is no deliverance. Grand events are at our door. Nothing short of holiness of heart will fit us for eternal salvation, and a home in the coming kingdom. Let us be ready. Eternal life is cheap at any cost. Let every idol be sacrificed; and let every one who wishes to be saved, make an entire consecration of himself to Christ; then he may sing,

"All is well."

TRUTH vs. ERROR.

The conflict between truth and error is waxing warmer and more earnest. This is a bright omen indicating a grand and final conflict in the near future. The whole theological world is aroused on the subject of man's inherent immortality. The Bible is being reexamined, creeds are being criticised by the light of Scripture; and many have already found a wide difference between the two. While it is true that some think their creeds must be right, and dare not call them in question, others have the courage to believe the Bible if it spoils all human creeds. It takes noble courage to stand against the popular current, in defense of the plain teachings of the Lord; but it is a blessed, glorious position, and affords sweet peace and heavenly comfort.

The following is from one connected with the Navy Department, at Washington, D. C., and appeared in the Washington Chronicle.

THE BIBLE VS. TRADITION.

"To the Editor of the Chronicle:—Allow me to offer a few remarks on the subject of 'Critic's' response to 'Believer' last week. In the first place, it is useless to deny that very many thoughtful men both in the church and out of it, entertain very much the same ideas as 'Critic' with regard to the character of such a God as is brought to view in the teachings cited by him. But is it not worth while to inquire before rejecting the Bible on these grounds, whether these really are its teachings, or whether men who profess to expound it have not, like the Pharisees of old, made it 'void through their traditions?'

There is probably no postulate that is received by believers and skeptics alike with such unquestioning credulity as that of the natural, inherent immortality of man; and yet right here will be found, we think, the point of departure from which have sprung all those absurdities and inconsistencies in the Protestant and Catholic creeds which 'Critic' has so well portrayed, and which have led him and many others who do their own thinking to reject them altogether. But, says a worthy believer, who from having heard this doctrine proclaimed as an axiom from childhood, does n't the Bible teach it? We answer, No, except from the mouth of the serpent, who, when God had annexed the penalty of death to a violation of this law, told our first parents, 'Ye shall not surely die, * * * but shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.' The Christian church, leaving the teachings of Christ and the apostles, of immortality only as a reward to be bestowed in the future on those who 'seek for' it here, 'through patient continuance in well doing, have substituted for them the speculations of Plato and other heathen philosophers, leading, facile decensus, to the kindred dogmas of purgatory and eternal torments. Losing sight of the object for which Christ was sent, as set forth in the passage quoted by 'Critic,' that "whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life,' theologians have built up a system of mythology, which, if admitted, gives spiritualism the whole ground in any argument against it.

Admitting that by far the larger portion of the human race will fail to avail themselves of the salvation offered them, yet, as their punishment is death, 'an extinction of being,' ('the soul that sinneth, it shall die,' 'fear him that is able to destroy both soul and body in hell,') while the reward of the righteous is everlasting life, the balance of good arising from the creation of man exceeds that of evil by just so much as time is exceeded by eternity; and the benevolence of God, as well as his justice, stands vindicated. But if, on the other hand, we assume that God has created something that he cannot destroy—if the works of the devil are to be co-eternal with those of God himself—if he is never to have a clean universe, but the walls of anguish and despair are forever to pollute it—we may as well become Manicheans, or devil-worshipers at once, since he will have proved himself, instead of the vanquished Miltonic rebel he is usually represented, a successful one, in that he has been able to effectually thwart the cherished purpose of God in man's creation; and we would seem to be justified in rejecting such a God as wanting, not only in benevolence, but in omnipotence, also.

[Those who may wish to examine the arguments from nature and revelation in support of these positions, can obtain them by addressing Miles Grant, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.]

A BELIEVER, BUT NOT A BIGOT.

If candid people will only examine the Scriptures carefully in relation to the subject of immortality, they will not find one passage that teaches man has an immortal soul or spirit; consequently it is not a Bible doctrine, and should receive no support from the followers of Christ.

"WORLD'S PEACE JUBILEE."

We may well say, "The world moves." This is an age of wonderful things. Men are plotting and executing upon a grand scale. What rapid strides have been made during the last half century, and especially within twenty-five years. Steam has been harnessed, the lightning tamed, and become obedient to the service of man. Next comes a proposition for "A World's Peace Jubilee," to be held in Boston next year. We give below the

PROSPECTUS

FOR A WORLD'S PEACE JUBILEE; an International Musical Festival, to be held in the city of Boston, June—July, 1872; opening on the 17th of June, closing on the 4th of July. The New World invites the Old to join in a universal exposition of the divine art of Music. A union of all nations in harmony. Grand chorus of TWENTY THOUSAND VOICES. An orchestra of TWO THOUSAND INSTRUMENTALISTS. Representatives from all governments, and bands from all nations. A Coliseum capable of seating A HUNDRED THOUSAND PEOPLE, decorated within with the emblems of Peace and Harmony, and without with the Flag of all countries, floating over all and above all the broad banner of UNIVERSAL PEACE!

Two years ago the Boston Jubilee held the nation spell-bound, by the sublimity of its music. That great volume of song swept through the land like a flood of melody, filling every christian heart with "glad tidings of great joy." It came like a sunburst upon the musical world, shedding light where all had been darkness before, and revealing a new sphere of harmony, a fairer land of promise, and triumphantly realizing greater achievements in the divine art than were hitherto thought possible. It will ever be a memorable epoch in the history of music.

Never before had musical enthusiasm run so high in our own land, never had there been such an occasion to call it forth. It was a grand outburst of sacred song, an overwhelming outpouring of the people, a universal expression of joy and thankfulness that Peace, blessed Peace, had settled down upon the land once more. It was a glorious event, and thousands upon thousands are happier to-day for that one week of heavenly music.

The boom of the cannon, the stroke of the bells, the clang of the anvils, the peal of the organ, the harmony of the thousand instruments, the melody of the ten thousand voices, the inspired works of the great masters, the song of the Star Spangled Banner, the cheers of the multitude, the splendor of the spectacle, the general excitement and interest of the event—all this is the rich possession of many a memory, and will ever be recalled as among the happiest experiences of a life-time.

It was indeed a glorious triumph for all interested—a triumph for the individual participant, a triumph for the nation, a triumph for the musical world. Is there one of the thousands who were there who would not wish to see, to hear, to take part in another such feast of music—nay, in a festival of double the magnitude, double the magnificence, double the interest and importance in every respect? Such a festival is now in prospect!

Within the past year the black cloud of war has burst over Europe, deluging with blood one of the fairest countries of the continent; but, God be praised, Peace has conquered at last, and once more unfolds her white banner over the Christian world. The moral consciousness of mankind is so shocked with the terrible havoc of war, as now waged with all the improved machinery of death, that the tendency of the time is for peace, permanent, enduring peace, among the nations of the earth.

Will not all say God-speed to any movement that would help inaugurate such a happy era? With this end in view, it is proposed to hold in the city of Boston, in the month of June, 1872, a World's Peace Jubilee, an International Musical Festival, a Union of all Nations in Harmony, when Twenty Thousand Voices shall swell the Grand chorus, and sing as never before the Hymn of the Angels—"Peace on earth, good will toward men."

For this purpose it is proposed to erect a Coliseum that will seat a hundred thousand people—a grand Temple of Music, that shall be the gathering place of all nations, upon whose sacred altar every people shall lay its gift of song. Within it shall be adorned with the emblems of Peace and Harmony, and over the different entrances the names of all nations will be emblazoned; while above it shall float the flags of all countries—highest above all the broad banner of UNIVERSAL PEACE."

"The proposed Coliseum,—to be erected in which to hold the great jubilee,—will be built from plans furnished by the well known architect, Mr. Francis Allen, who, it will be borne in mind, planned the building for the Jubilee of 1869. The form of the proposed Coliseum on the ground plan is a quadrilateral parallelogram, 422½ feet wide, by 822½ feet in length, covering an area of 346,884 feet, or nearly eight acres. The roof, without the elevations for the windows, monitor, etc., will have the appearance of an elongated dome, as it rounds up toward the centre from the ends as well as the side. The capacity of the structure is to be for a chorus of 20,000, an orchestra of 2000, and an audience of 78,000, making 100,000 in all.

The interior finish and ornamentation is not yet decided upon, but it will be upon a scale of richness commensurate with the magnitude of the building. In the present unfinished state of the working plans and details, an entirely accurate estimate of the amount of the material to be consumed cannot be made; but in order to give some slight idea of the immensity of the building and its requirements, we will say that there will be needed 1344 piles, 4,500,000 feet of lumber, 350,000 square feet of covering material for the roof, 52,16s iron bolts, 3528 iron bars (twelve feet long), 46,368 tree nails, and 44,888 square feet of glass lighting surface."

We are confident it will take something more than a "World's Peace Jubilee" to produce universal peace. Nothing short of the PRINCE OF PEACE can secure the desired result. When his kingdom shall be set up, and the immortalized, incorruptible saints shall take "the kingdom under the whole heaven," then we may have the "WORLD'S PEACE JUBILEE." Then music may be heard that will as far excel that at the proposed Jubilee, as that will surpass the songs of a backwoods man. Let us all have our hearts and tongues tuned in readiness to join in the grand hallelujah chorus, when the redeemed shall sing the song of Moses and the Lamb, at the coronation of the King of kings.

"SPEAKING THE TRUTH IN LOVE."

There are different ways of "handling the word of God." Some make it a mere pugilistic weapon of theological warfare, to gratify their unsanctified relish for controversial strife, to gain the mastery. This class are always a detriment to the cause. Everything around them is blighted in a short time, except what can receive stimulus from the waters of chilling strife. Others occupy an opposite extreme, equally as disastrous to the cause, by suppressing the truth in the presence of its enemies. It was the boast of one man that he preached two hours upon a controverted topic to a congregation about equally divided upon the question, and at the close of the sermon both parties claimed him on their side. This evasive, go-between policy, which leads to the covering up of unpopular truth to get the good will of the enemies of truth, is not of God. If God's truth must be smothered, let it not be done by its friends.

The practice approved of God is this—"Speaking the truth in love." We are not to keep back the truth for fear of displeasing men, but to speak it. "He that hath my Word, let him speak it faithfully." But we are not to speak it in an irritating and combative spirit, for that will arouse the same spirit in others, and when we get men intoxicated with will, argument does them about as little good as it does the drunkard who is reeling under the influence of strong drink; but we should always speak the truth "in love." God's theory, when proclaimed in God's spirit, is never a detriment to true religion. Keep the heart baptized with love, then proclaim the truth. W. S.

WHAT PART OF MAN SINS?

This question is important, from the fact that only the part that sins can be saved from sin, for those who have committed no sins cannot receive the pardon of sins; and if the spirit-man is the only part capable of sinning, it is the only part entitled to salvation, or exposed to damnation. But if the material man is recognized as the man who commits sin, the material man needs pardon, and can be saved. The Bible charges sin upon the material man, and not upon spirit man. "Better is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay. Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin." Eccl. 5: 5. Here is a recognition of fleshly sinners, agreeing with Saul's statement—"God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh." Rom. 8: 3. Theologians talk about the sinful spirit of man, while Paul talks about "sinful flesh," and "sin in the flesh." Paul and theologians are not in harmony. Is Paul wrong?

Again, Paul speaks of a class who "walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit" (v. 4), recognizing the fact that the carnal mind originates in the flesh, or in the material man, and not in the human spirit, as many suppose. There are many references to the "lusts of the flesh," instead of the lusts of the human spirit; and Paul speaks about the "fleshly mind" (Col. 2: 18), and also about "fleshly wisdom" (2 Cor. 1: 12); thus showing that the human mind, the seat of desires and wisdom, is of fleshly origin, instead of being a spirit-entity existing independent of the flesh. This "fleshly mind," when not controlled by the Holy Spirit, is a "carnal mind," constantly leading its possessor to indulge in sin. The fleshly sinner, by being pardoned, can be saved from sin, and at last be physically saved. W. S.

NOTES ON PROPHECY.—No. 5.
JEREMIAH'S PROPHECY.

Jeremiah lived in the days when the throne of David was occupied by David's royal descendants; but as they became corrupt, Jeremiah was sent with this message to the king then occupying the throne: "Thus saith the Lord: Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor; and do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place. For if ye do this thing indeed, then shall there enter in by the gates of this house kings sitting upon the throne of David. . . . But if ye will not hear these words, I swear by myself, saith the Lord, that this house shall become a desolation." Jer. 22: 3–5.

Despite these timely admonitions, these rulers on David's throne relaxed into apostasy, and incurred the threatened overthrow. But before the execution of this prediction, Jeremiah was sent with a cheering message concerning a glorious time to succeed this desolation of the throne of David: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS." Jer. 23: 5, 6.

1. No such King has yet risen; hence, this reign is still future.

2. When this divine King comes to raise the dead saints, Judah and Israel, who are of faith, will be immortalized, together with the engrafted Gentiles; while all who are not of faith will be destroyed; for "he shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation" to one class, while "taking vengeance" on another class. W. S.

NECROMANCY.

The Lord said through Moses—"There shall not be found among you . . . . a necromancer. For all that do these things are an abomination to the Lord." Deut. 18: 10, 11. The Douay version gives this rendering—"Neither let there be found among you any one . . . that seeketh the truth from the dead. For the Lord abhorreth all these things." Dr. Malcom affirms that a necromancer "pretends to reveal secrets by intercourse with the dead." Or, as expressed in the Union Bible Dictionary, "One who pretends to divine future events by questioning the dead." This system, which originated in the pretended inspiration received from the lifeless dead, by which the practitioner was enabled to unfold the future, as a fortune-teller does by his cups or cards, soon assumed the form of consulting with the shades of the dead, supposed to live in the centre of the earth. Doubtless it culminated in demonology. God forbade it. W. S.

"IMPOSSIBLE TO RENEW THEM AGAIN"?—A brother desires to know if Paul meant to teach that there is no renewal for backsliders? We answer no, except for one class. "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift . . . and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them." Heb. 6: 4, 6. Those who had been endowed with "the heavenly gift"—the gift of working miracles, and the "powers of the world to come"—supernatural endowments, are the class here referred to. But there are not many thus falling away in our day, as this miraculous "heavenly gift" is not extensively possessed.

This statement is in harmony with John's testimony—"There is a sin unto death; I do not say that he shall pray for it. All unrighteousness is sin; and there is a sin not unto death." John 5: 16, 17. Backsliders of the ordinary stamp are often importuned to return, and encouraged with the thought, "We have an advocate with the Father." But the sin against the Holy Spirit consists in knowingly attributing the miraculous work and power of the Spirit to the devil. W. S.

PURGATORY.—In a Catholic "table of references," bound up in a Catholic Bible, we find the following definition and statement—"Purgatory, or a middle state of souls, suffering for a time, on account of their sins, is proved by those many texts of Scripture which affirm that God will render to every man according to his works; so that such as die in lesser sins shall not escape without punishment."

So I suppose purgatory is the middle strata of ghostland, hell being the lower strata, and heaven the upper strata. Would it not be well to prove the existence of ghostland, and the existence of personal ghosts to inhabit it, before drawing boundary lines? While it is true that men are to be punished according to their works, this to take place after the resurrection and judgment (Rev. 20: 13); hence no need of purgatory now, if ever. W. S.

DELAYED.—To save disappointment, it becomes my duty to state through the Crisis that my forthcoming work—"Life Beyond Death"—will not be ready for circulation till the latter part of August, owing to its being larger than first supposed. W. S.

OUR GENERAL CAMPMEETING.
T. L. WAUGH.

I wish to say a few words to those who intend to go to our Springfield campmeeting, that they may have a profitable season there.

If you would have a soul-refreshing time, seek earnestly for the gift of the Holy Ghost before you start, and get so melted down with the love of God that you will be in working order when you get on the ground; then you will feel so much of God and of glory in your soul, you cannot help but enjoy the meeting. Let every one go with this preparation and determination with, "Holiness to the Lord" inscribed upon their banners; then there will be such a pentecostal baptism of "fire from heaven," that the whole encampment will be filled with the glory of God, and victorious shouts of praise ascend from every heart. The Lord willing, I hope to go to the meeting, and desire to go for no other purpose but to do the will of God. My prayer shall be, day by day, that this meeting may be the means of great good to all who attend, and also to those who would like to go, but cannot.

Let us, then, brethren and sisters, come up to worship God with one accord, in one place, and see if he will not pour us out a blessing there shall be hardly room to receive. I expect it, and believe we shall not be disappointed. God help us to realize the nearness of the judgment and the need of a preparation to meet the "King in his beauty." And may this meeting help us to get ready for that solemn event. Oh! we are living in solemn times. The faith of God's children is being tried, but, beloved, we are abundantly able, by God's help, to go up and possess the goodly land.

"We'll be there, we'll be there;
Palms of victory, crowns of glory,
We shall wear,
In that beautiful world to come."

BRANCH CHAPEL.

The work of the Lord is prospering at Branch Chapel, in this city. On Sabbath, July 23d, four persons were baptized by Eld. Hook. Two of them, a young physician and wife, have been recently converted. The wife, a lovely young woman, was educated a Roman Catholic, but gladly exchanged the cold, dead formalities of that faith for a religion which gives peace and rest to the burdened soul. A few weeks since, three others were baptized by the same Elder. One of them was a Congregationalist sister, who was sprinkled in infancy, but having become convinced by her study of the Scriptures that immersion is a divine requirement, sought and obtained permission from her church to have the rite administered. The prayer-meetings, on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, are sustained with interest. A sister's prayer-meeting, held Thursday afternoons, at four o'clock, promises to be productive of much good in strengthening the weak ones.
